Chapter four of the Home Economics portion of the book will be a definite favorite of the feminists on campus. This is the chapter of the book that has all sorts of cooking instructions. The first section of chapter four is for men. This section is much shorter than the section for women. In fact the entire section on cooking for men consists of the following. " If you are a man you should not ever have to cook. You should not have even begun reading this chapter. When you are young your mother should cook for you, and when you are older your wife should take over the responsibility. All you have to do is tell the woman in your life (whether it be your mother or your mate) what food you desire, then sit at the table with knife and fork prepared. The only occasion on which you, as a man, should ever cook is during the summertime over an open-flamed grill for barbecues."

This is asinine. I find it hard to believe that the National Organization for Women hasn't caught wind of this book yet. Don't get me wrong I would love to have all of my meals cooked for me by a woman who loves me, but this chapter makes men seem incapable and women seem like servants. How much longer must we be subjected to such sexist and outdated material? Wake up people! We are only about 13 weeks from the beginning of a new millennium.

There was one other chapter that was particularly sexist and offensive. This was the chapter on sleeping arrangements and bed size. First of all the book demands that the husband and wife sleep in seperate beds like the Wilsons on "Dennis The Menace." Next it demands that the husband's bed be about two to three times bigger than the wife's bed. Then it states that any male child should have a bed much bigger than any female child, slightly bigger than the mother's and rather smaller than the father's. The last part is the part that really kills me. This is the part that deals with the sleeping arrangements for any dogs in the home. If there is a dog in the house, it must have some sort of a bed that is larger than any female child's in the house; the reasoning behind this is that the dog is man's best friend and deserves more than some of the man's offspring. The dog does not need blankets because dogs are naturally warmer than humans, but if the dog does take sick then the youngest daughter must give up her covers for the K-9.

This book, entitled A Young Person's Introduction To Life is absolutely horrific. I find it hard to believe that anyone would ever seriously compose such a work. I find it harder to believe that Markloff Publishing of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania would ever print this book. I find it even harder to believe that any school system would include this inexcusable book in its curriculum. As I said before, being 13 is confusing enough as it is. The last thing we need are buffoons and ingrates infiltrating and polluting the minds of our children any more than television already does.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

I want to be L.L.

Ryan Benharris

The world works in mysterious ways. This cliché describes my everyday life so perfectly that if I lived in the day it was written, I would swear that it was about me. I don't think I can last five minutes without being completely mesmerized by the wonder that is my world. Now, don't get me wrong, I'm not in the least bit spiritual, nor do I constantly feel like someone is always watching over me. However, if everything that happened was strictly based on coincidence, I think I could be in the Guinness Book of World Records. Of course my life's not really that interesting, so the lovely people at Guinness wouldn't sell that many books. There are some coincidental things that simply make me go completely nuts though.

I've already explained this to some people, but for those of you out there who don't know me, I want to tell you something. It took me 20 years, but I finally know what I want to be when I grow up: L.L. Cool J! Some people dream of being firemen, some dream of being doctors, some even dream of being the king of pimps, but those lifestyles are simply too boring for me. I want to be L.L.! Did anyone see Deep Blue Sea? This summer I wasted my $7.50, and went to see the worst movie of the year. Deep Blue Sea stars Samuel L. Jackson (who I didn't even know was in the film until I saw it), a bunch of no-name actors, and yes, the great L.L. Cool J (or Ladies Love Cool James for you non-"Mama Said Knock You Out" fans). The movie is an extremely expensive rip-off of Jaws, which plays like any plotless action film. The acting is terrible, and the story is even worse, but there is one bright point.

L.L. Cool J stole the show, simply by being his god-like self. During the course of the film, L.L. out swam a shark three times, survived two explosions, and fell off the top of a bridge, only to walk away with no scratches. The icing on the cake was that he drank an entire bottle of wine before all of these antics, and was drunk the entire time. It's funny, most drunks that I've seen spend their time staggering around looking for things they've lost before they fell down, but not L.L. Cool J. He outswims sharks when he's drunk. It did make me wonder about something. Do you think it was shear luck that L.L. could do all those things and not die, or is he just plain perfect? I don't know about you, but I'll take the latter explanation. So to my parents, grandparents, brother, sister, teachers and crack dealers, I have an official announcement to make. Today, I continue my quest to become what it is my destiny to be: L.L. Cool J. I hope you're proud of me.

Before I start my explosion avoidance training, as well as my master rapping/acting career, I think it's necessary to point out the other coincidences that I have encountered that are much like L.L. Cool J's, just last week. I was driving on the wrong side of the road, and I almost plowed into an oncoming 18-wheeler. However, at the last second, something (probably my hand) jerked the steering wheel to the right, and I was quickly moved to safety. Also, early this morning, I almost overslept for my 9:30 a.m. class, but to my luck, someone (probably me) set the alarm clock for 8:30 a.m. so I would have plenty of time to get to class. Freaky, isn't it?

I think my quest actually started about two years ago, when I was supposed to get on a plane and travel to Florida. It was the middle of January, and it was snowing pretty badly, and my flight was canceled. I went home to do absolutely nothing, which is pretty much all there was to do. I fired up my computer and signed on to AOL. I have this thing against talking to people I don't know on Instant Messenger chat, but that night I was incredibly bored, and no one was online. I decided not to venture too far from my "don't talk to anyone you don't know rule," and searched the member directory for people who go to UMass. I think I sent out about ten IM's, and only one responded.

We started talking about UMass, and everything else, and it turned out that she lived in the exact same building as I did. She lived one town next to me. Her roommate's name was Stephanie, and mine was Stephen. What's more amazing is that we have the exact same birthday. It's probably the only coincidence that I still to this day cannot figure out. With both of our birthdays on Monday (Happy Birthday, Marcie), we constantly remind each other of the scary similarities that we both admitted we thought the other was lying about at first. It definitely reminds me that there is something out there weirder than fact, and gave the phrase "what a coincidence" a whole new meaning.

So for all of you people in the registrar's office, get ready, because I'm coming in on Monday. I'm changing my Communication major to "L.L. Cool J Studies," and even if you send out the sharks, throw me off a bridge, or try to blow me up, there's nothing you can do to stop me!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian staff member.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombord Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Daily Collegian

Is now looking for people to write for all departments, as well as editors for Diversity Pages

If you are interested in being a part of the largest New England college daily then visit us in the Campus Center in room 117, and fill out an application.

It's g[illegible] or [illegible]egume b[illegible] and you also get the per[illegible] ing i[illegible]rge[illegible]dia outlet.

The only haven you can trust- on tour

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

Gothic rock has come quite a long way since its birth- rising out of the ashes of early '80s post-punk. Among the ruins- few of the early goth bands have had staying power. Joy Division was cut down in their prime, Bauhaus disbanded at the height of their career, even Siouxsie and the Banshees broke up only four years ago. One of the few bands that are still in existence from the golden age of goth stick out prominently in one's mind as the prototype goth rock band. And no, it's not The Cure.

The Sisters of Mercy, in yet another unexpected tour, are coming to New York tonight and Boston on Monday. The "Green tour," as it has been labeled, would mark the first time the Sisters stepped foot in the Bay State for quite some time.

Formed in Leeds, England in 1980, The Sisters of Mercy consisted of Andrew Eldritch on vocals and Gary Marx on guitars. Recording with minimal equipment and no budget, they cut a single to "hear ourselves on the radio." After tacking a few more songs onto the recording, an LP titled "The Damage Done/Watch/Home of the Hitmen," was pressed and distributed by the independently founded Merciful Release label.

Picking up bassist Craig Adams, second guitarist Ben Gunn, and working with a drum machine dubbed Doktor Avalanche, the Sisters recorded a number of singles and LP's under the Merciful Release label. Most notably among them, "Alice," The Reptile House and "The Temple of Love." All of the A and B sides of these early recordings are included in a compilation album entitled Some Girls Wander By Mistake (Elektra, 1992).

Ben Gunn was replaced by Wayne Hussey, and the band signed to WEA to record their first LP, First Last and Always (distributed in the States by Elektra). Shortly thereafter, Gunn and Hussey left the band to form The Mission. After a bitter split-up between Marx and Eldritch and disputes over the names "The Sisters of Mercy" and "The Sisterhood," Eldritch decided to take The Sisters of Mercy in an entirely new direction.

The next album Floodland, was inspired by the '80s trend towards dance/electronic music, while staying true to the band's dark, jaded sound. The album produced many popular singles including "Dominion/Mother Russia" and "This Corrosion." Eldritch, the only member of the band present for every album (save for Doktor Avalanche), recorded and released the

Turn to SISTERS page 7

COURTESY DISNEY ENTERPRISES, PIXAR STUDIOS

TOY STORY 2
Buzz Lightyear eagerly awaits the upcoming movie Toy Story 2.

Survey says...not a lot

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

CampusCruiser.com, in an effort to waste all of our time, has published a survey in which college freshmen were polled on various aspects of adjusting to college life. Here are the earth-shattering results, with some editorial commentary on my part:

51% of students admitted to crying at least once the first week.
This statistic becomes easier to understand when you realize that 28% were being accosted by the campus pond waterfowl, and the remaining 5% were standing in line at the textbook annex.

58% of students would approve of their college football players using steroids if it would make the team better.
In related news, 58% of college students consider binge drinking a valid pastime.

Girls were three times more likely than boys to consider carrying a gun if they thought violence on campus was an issue.
And the whole campus would be 10 times less likely to carry a gun if the administration would light the rape trail.

58% of students would approve of their college football players using steroids if it would make the team better.
In related news, 58% of college students consider binge drinking a valid pastime.

Men were 5 times more likely to fear "fitting in" than girls.
That is not a typo. According to this poll, men are actually afraid of positive social contact. In fact, they're scared to death of it. (Maybe they only polled Orchard Hill computer science majors...)

78% of freshman surveyed said they would be more concerned if their best friend was doing cocaine versus if a candidate for President of the United States did.
(Insert oral sex joke here.) (And then play spot-the-grammar-mistake.)

Men were three times more likely to call their mom the first week of school than women.
Take a look at the vague wording in this statistic. Are they saying that mothers aren't women? Are men calling their mothers as a substitute for calling women their own age? (Refer to above Orchard Hill compsci joke.)

Biggest Fear:
1. Freshman English
2. Nuclear War
3. Victim of terrorism
4. Not making any friends at school
5. Parent death

* AIDS ranked 12th

Maybe we should start dropping English 112 assignments instead of A-bombs when we go to war.

Biggest Achievement:
1. Losing virginity
2. Make parents proud
3. Get into college
4. Pass driving test
5. Independence

What if my parents are proud of me for losing my virginity? What if I slept with someone to get into college, or get my license? I'm all confused.

Take a visit to CampusCruiser.com if you want to read the rest of the poll results. For additional excitement, try watching gelatin de-solidify.

Could the Gameboy's days be numbered?

By Aaron Curtiss
Los Angeles Times

Talking on Nintendo- whose hearty Game Boy has dominated the portable video game market for the better part of a decade- may seem downright foolish. But SNK Corp., which last month launched its Neo Geo Pocket Color, believes there's plenty of room for a competing hand-held game system.

After selling the Pocket Color on the Internet during the summer, Japan based SNK rolled out the $70 unit to retail stores last month. Although the privately held company won't release sales figures, SNK Marketing Director Stacey Sujishi said demand has been high.

And she doesn't see anything foolish about challenging Nintendo, which has sold more than 80 million Game Boys since 1989. "Why did Sony put out PlayStation?" Sujishi asked. After all, the video game console market was owned by Nintendo and Sega before PlayStation's launch in 1995. Since then, Sony has sold more than 50 million PlayStations.

If performance is any measure of a system's success- and that's the big question- Pocket Color should be a hit. It boasts a 16-bit processor, compared with Game Boy's 8-bit innards. While Game Boy can display only 56 simultaneous colors, Pocket Color can show 146 at a time. And the 40 hours Pocket Color can squeeze from a pair of AA batteries is twice the play afforded by Game Boy Color.

All of this is housed in a sleek case that comes in six colors. The screen, with 160 by 152 pixels, is clear and easy to see. The thumbstick control makes Pocket Color feel more like a grown-up console than a hand-held. As Sujishi accurately points out, Pocket Color is "the next level for hand-helds."

It may represent the next level in convergence as well. SNK plans an adapter that will allow Pocket Color to hook up to Sega's new Dreamcast machine. Because Sega is no longer in the portable market, Pocket Color would give the company a hand-held outlet for games starring icons such as Sonic the Hedgehog.

But hardware alone does not drive a game system. Remember 3DO? Pocket Color's launch lineup of eight titles showcases the best of SNK, which has been making arcade games for 20 years and has had moderate success with home systems designed for hard-core gamers. Unlike past machines, Pocket Color is aimed right at mainstream video game players.

The launch titles reflect that. Included are three sports titles- including golf and tennis- as well as a couple of fighters, a puzzler and a side-scrolling shooter.

My hands-down favorite was "Pocket Tennis Color," a snazzy little

Turn to GAME BOY page 7

■ game boy

continued from page 6

tennis game that's as addictive as they come. Pocket Color's screen does a great job of tracking the ball, making it easy to see and respond. The thumb stick makes quick work of running around the court.

Some of the players were easy to beat, but the idea behind a portable game system is that you can play it anywhere whenever you have a few extra minutes. Who wants to spend hours hunched over a game just to win a couple of sets? Diversion is the goal and "Pocket Tennis Color" delivers.

For players who like to see things blow up, "Metal Slug: First Mission" offers a nice variation on traditional side-scrolling shooters. Sure, players start out as a shoot-first-ask-questions-later paratrooper, but the game quickly evolves into a shoot-first-ask-questions-later test of flying jets and commanding tanks.

Variety distinguishes "Metal Slug" from its cousins on other platforms. There's the usual jump-and-shoot routine, but "Metal Slug" packs all sorts of extra action into the game – making it more than just another side scroller.

Just as Pocket Color picks up steam in the United States, Nintendo is giving a sneak peek at its next-generation Game Boy, dubbed Game Boy Advance. Scheduled for a Christmas 2000 release in the United States, Game Boy Advance will feature a 32-bit CPU- now the guts of consoles such as Sony PlayStation- as well as a screen capable of displaying 65,000 colors at a time. In addition, the system will be able to hook up to the Internet through a cellular phone.

Whether Nintendo will make its scheduled release dates remains to be seen. For those who can't wait, Pocket Color offers a very nice intermediate step between yesterday's technology and tomorrow's.

The Daily Collegian...
...you thought it was rain.

COURTESY DANNY CLINCH

Jock rockers 311 will play at Radio 104's Big Day Off today at the Meadows Music Theatre. Also appearing will be Everclear, Guster, The Push Stars, Mighty Purple, Rane, and others. The raging concert begins at 3pm, doors open an hour earlier.

■ sisters

continued from page 6

Sisters third LP, Vision Thing in 1990. No new material has come from the band since.

Eldritch has since been trying to move away from, and even ostracize his gothic following. Eldritch dropped opening bands the New Creatures and Sunshine Blind from a 1997 show in Philadelphia, because the bands were "too goth" (mysteriously, Switchblade Symphony was kept on the bill). Eldritch has been quoted online as saying "I hate g*th, g*ths, and everything having to do with the scene." Though I doubt that will stop hordes of morbid, black-clad eyeliner fiends from coming to the Sisters' shows.

The Sisters of Mercy will be playing at Roseland Ballroom in New York City tonight, and at the Avalon Ballroom in Boston on Monday. Call either (212) 777-6800 (Roseland) or (617) 262-2424 (Avalon) for more information.

UM water polo to reign at Kings Point

By Matty Bencal
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's water polo team travels to Kings Point, New York to take part in this weekend's Collegiate Water Polo Association League Tournament. Opposing the Minutemen this weekend are Lehman University, Fordham University and host United States Merchant Marine Academy. UM had success with all three of these teams last season.

Last weekend, the Minutemen won two out of three games at the Princeton Invitational and they have won seven out of their last eight contests.

The 17th-ranked Princeton Tigers upset the No. 12 Minutemen in the first game of the weekend by a score of 11-9. The Maroon and White got off to a fast start, leading at the end of the first quarter by a score of 4-3, but that lead wouldn't last. At the half, the score was knotted at six until the Tigers lashed out, netting a pair of goals to open up the scoring in the second half. Offensively, Pat Kain fired three shots to the back of the net and Rich Slingluff added two of his own but it was not enough as the Minutemen came up short in the end and lost by a deuce.

Rich Slingluff

On the bright side, UM was able to avenge an earlier loss this season from 11th-ranked St. Francis (10-8). Mike Foley, Kain and Slingluff came up big with two goals each, and Richard Huntley led a strong defense with ten stops in the net. St. Francis' victory in the Navy Invitational was the Terriers' only win over the Minutemen in 12 tries.

Rich Slingluff

UMass finished the weekend with a victory over Johns Hopkins University by a score of 9-5. The offense was led by sophomores Foley and Evan Lutz, who scored two goal- each. Freshman backup goalie Rafael Santana racked up six saves in the second half against the Blue Jays.

Head coach Russ Yarworth is again looking for strong performances from Huntley (21 saves last weekend) and Santana to lead the defense and control the net. On the offensive front, Kain, Slingluff, Foley are looked to continue their individual onslaughts against opposing goalies. The trio totaled five goals apiece last weekend.

Richard Huntley, the team's all-everything goalie who should challenge for All-America honors, was replaced by freshman Rafael Santana in the team's 9-5 victory over the Blue Jays of IHU. Santana registered six saves, giving Yarworth another option on defense.

Last season, UM did not have any problem with any of the teams they are facing this weekend. The Maroon and White defeated Fordham on September 12th by a score of 16-4. On October 11th, the Minutemen whipped the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy 18-6, and Lehman University, 12-4.

Yarworth has directed the Minutemen to a perfect all-time record against their upcoming foes. Since 1990, UM has owned Fordham with eight victories against a clean slate of losses. Since 1995, the Minutemen have also dominated the U.S. Merchant Marine Academy and Lehman University with 8 wins and zero defeats against U.S.M.M.A and three wins and no losses against I.U.

The Minutemen's trip to Kings Point should provide a great warmup for next month's Princeton Invitational in Princeton, NJ, which will pit Yarworth and Co. against some of collegiate water polo's top squads on the East coast. This weekend's action starts with a pair of games on Saturday against Lehman and U.S.M.M.A before closing out the two-day tournament with a date with the Rams of Fordham.

Arts and Living-
It's Your World!

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

Thor loves reading arts..you should too!

Limp Bizkit. DMX. FILTER. Stained. Crystal Method
Worcester 9/28
Hartford 10/1
HOUSE OF TICKETS
(413) 736-8499

FREE BOWLING
ARI GOLDEN HONEY
FOR EVERYONE IN YOUR PARTY WITH THIS AD
NORTHAMPTON BOWL
584-4830

MICHAEL'S BILLARDS & SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Located near the Colonial Village bus stop at the corner of rte. 9 and S. East St.
8
Friday Night @ 10:00
"Derek Gumuchian"
One Man, One guitar
~~1,000,000 good times~~
Saturday Night @ 9:45
"Joint Custody"
9
"Everyday from 3-7pm
$4.00 hour pool"
UMass' Best! ★ 1997 ★
15 - 9 Tables • Big Screen TV
Live Music Every Thurs. Fri & Sat

Welcome, students!
Miss your family? Come and join ours!
XLBC offers:
• A warm, friendly atmosphere
• Expository teaching from scripture
• Praise and worship through music
• Opportunities for involvement
Sunday Schedule:
9:30 am - Coffee Fellowship
9:45 am - Sunday School
11:00 am - Worship Service
Visit our Web page: www.crocker.com/~nlbc/
North Leverett Baptist Church, 70 North Leverett Road, Leverett
"Your home away from home."

WWW.WINREPORTS.COM
presents
WinReports Handicapping Service check out our site for professional plays that will BANG YOUR BOOK!
"You don't hear much about guys that take their shots and miss, they end up humping jobs on graveyard shifts trying to figure out how they came up short."

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

GRIEF SUPPORT GROUPS
REFLECT, The Five College Bereavement Support Program offers grief support services free of charge to undergraduate and graduate students who have experienced the death of someone they love. Groups are small, confidential, and meet weekly for a period of 8 weeks. Enrollment happening now. Please call soon if you are interested. Pre-registration is required.
* TUESDAY GROUP 6:00–7:30pm
* THURSDAY GROUP 6:00–7:30pm
for more information call: 577–5316
REFLECT is sponsored by the UMASS Dean of Students Office.

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
STARTS Fri. Daily - 7:00 and 9:20 - IT'S GREAT
Capturing a Cuban Sound Before It Could Die
BUENA VISTA SOCIAL CLUB
directed by wim wenders
ry cooder · ibrahim ferrer · ruben gonzalez · eliades ochoa · omara portuondo · compay segundo
"EXHILARATING" -Stephen Holden, THE NEW YORK TIMES
The documentary, features two concerts the group performed, one in Amsterdam, the other last July at Carnegie Hall. The music, in its acoustic beauty and power, jumps off the screen. Mr. Wenders also interviews the musicians in Havana and roams the destroyed elegance of the city.
ACADEMY MUSIC Cinema House NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

you look Mavi-lous.
Mavi Jeans at Zanna
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Small 3 Room Apartment good location near Rte 91. $435 including utilities. Holyoke 538-7943

AUTO FOR SALE

'86 VW Vanagon 4-speed excellent condition. Please call Teresa at 256-0953

5 Spd. GLI, grey, high milage - runs good $2000 call 256-6235 evenings.

Just Inspected 9/99 '83 Mecury Zephyr GS good for Valley Area commuting. Snow tires included $500 Call 548-9767

Toyota Tercel 1986 Hatchback 5-speed 127,000 miles very good condition new sound system just passed inspection $1500 call 584-4313

85 VW Golf Auto 220kmiles runs & drives well $399 253-1303

88 Mercury Tracer 86k 4DR hatchbk, new tires, exhaust, radiator $1600 - or B/O 665-3630

1988 Honda Accord LXI 5 Speed, loaded, sunroof, snowtires, ski rack, runs great, 130,000 miles $2800. Call Mark 413-774-6895

85 Cavalier very good condition $450 Firm! Call 665-0241

CHILDCARE

MUST LOVE BABIES. References needed. Tuesday and Thursday - 12:30 to 3:00. Call Michelle at 256-8632

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

Alpine Commons

Bedroom, 2 bath, Fully applianced kitchen. Private balconies. All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 2 miles to Umass.

Move-in Special!

Call 256-0741 for more information

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Evenings. $9.50 per hr. Call 546-0666

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

EMPLOYMENT

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Personal Care Attendent for a women in Amherst 8-10 hours/week Saturday or Sunday plus 1-2 weekdays. Car needed Call Helen 545-1908 or 253-9462

Mullins Center Hiring for post event cleanup apply in person. 2nd floor Mullins Center

Rao's Coffee is hiring minimum 20 hrs/wk food service experience preferred apply in person

Bussiness Minded student wanted. 10-15 hrs/wk for light bookkeeping and accounting. Good math skills and computer skills required. Call Scott (413) 537-0967

Scera is now hiring staff. $6hour workstudy preferred. To apply, submit resume to Brenda Fitzpatrick, 420 Student Union. Deadline Sept 29. Fml: call 5-5411

Recreational Leaders Wanted for multicultural afterschool program. $7/hr workstudy only. Persons of color incouraged to apply. Call Capacidad. 253-5659

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers, Part Time

We are looking for certified teachers to join our team at Sylvan Learning Center in Hadley. Hourly positions are available for talented, motivated, child centered educators who believe in positive reinforcement and mastery learning. Must be comfortable working with students of all ages. Some of our programs include: reading, math, study skills and SAT prep. After school, evening and weekend hours available. Hourly rate $8-$10 per hour, depending on experience. Sylvan is recognized as the nation's leader in supplemental education, and our proven approach to learning helps thousands of students to catch up, keep up and get ahead in school.

Please stop in and pick up an application or forward you resume to

SYLVAN LEARNING CENTER
104 RUSSELL STREET - ROUTE 9
HADLEY, MA 01035

Attn: Christina Buehrle, Center Director

Equal Opportunity Employer

DISHWASHERS Dining Services at Amherst College has part-time evening positions working 4:30p.m. -8:30p.m. Rate:$ 7.25 per hour plus pre-work meal included. Interested applicants should apply at:
Office of Human Resources
201 Converse Hall
Amherst College
Amherst, MA 01002-5000
Amherst College is an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer and Encourages women, minorities and disabled persons to apply

EMPLOYMENT

ROADRUNNERS DRIVERS WANTED Earn up to $15/hr Call Mike Mon + Tue 549-0266 Wed - Sun 253-3345

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

Part Time Warehouse and deliver for furniture store in Amherst. Regular drivers license needed. $7.00 an hour. 256-6184

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

PCA Wanted. Amherst Center. Short shifts. Female applicants only $9.50/hr. Call 256-8824

DRIVERS WANTED Apply at Pinocchio's make up to $15.00 hr Apply with in Jaime

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS Pays 60 to 120 per Shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

EMPLOYMENT

Get the #%$! out of the water Earth Activists @ Clean Water Action get the best experience, great pay, training and benefits working to stop pollution & save the planet. $7.30 - $9.00/hr. Eve/wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

Relief Staff for apartment program serving adults with mental illness living in the community. Enthusiasm, patience & attention to detail a must. Get training & experience needed to work in human service field. Wages $7.50/hr. Send resume & cover letter to: Service Net att. David Mastroianni 129 King St. Northampton, MA 01060

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: DJ Fooz is now booking for fall semester. Spinning the best music for any occasion. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wednesdays + Thursdays. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Celine Dion 4 Tix 9/24 @ Fleet Ctr Call 545-0215

Need a Couch? 5 to choose from. $25-$100 Free Delivery 586-2221

Stick it in your ear! Free stud earrings with piercing at Silverscape Designs. Amherst, 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-3324 Northampton, 1 King Street 584-3324

MUSICIANS

PRS Guitar, flamed top, new condition, $1200. Also Avitar full susp. mountain bike needs headset $300 call Eric 247-4813

MUSICIANS WANTED

Singer Forming "Music to Mosh to " Band do you kick *ss? Call Scott for more info 546-1576

RESUMES

Resume Problems? We can solve them! Aaron 253-6783

SERVICES

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Kai Chi Chinese Restaurant Delivering to campus Mon - Thurs, 4:30pm - 11:00pm; Fri-Sat, noon-midnight; and Sun, noon-11:00pm. Call 586-2774

TRAVEL

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

Someone to Take My Dog. Landlord prob. Need someone to house 3 yr Black Lab for 8 months Call Greg 256-8257

allstudents.com

Earn $400 per class each semester by simply Taking Notes

Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses

ACCTG 221	MGT 301
ANTH 100	NUTR 130
BIOL 100	PHIL 100
CHEM 110	PHYSIC 131
CHEM 111	PHYSIC 132
CMPSCI 105	POLSCI 101
ECON 103	PSYCH 100
ECON 104	SOCIOL 103
GEO 101	SOCIOL 106
HIST 100	SOM 210
HIST 101	STATIS 111
LEGAL 250	STATIS 140
LEGAL 252	STATIS 141
MKTG 301	THEATR 100
MGT 260	SPORST 202

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors: Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Still looking for a job?

Check out Today's Collegian Classifieds and find the job of a LIFE TIME!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, SEPT. 27

Meeting – The UMass French Club will be having its first meeting at 8 p.m. at the Black Sheep Cafe in downtown Amherst. Coffee and beverages will be provided. All are invited. Contact Lisa at 546-7019 for more information.

Reading – Writer Dean Albarelli will read from his work in the Babbott Room of the Octagon at Amherst College. The reading will begin at 8 p.m.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 28

Coffee House – There will be a coffee house with an open mic from 8-9:30 p.m. in the Hillel House. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting – The Ballroom Dance Club will meet from 6:45-8 p.m. in room 101 of Totman. Call 549-4070 for more information.

PYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an PYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Send in your announcements today!! Yippee!

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks," you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — SEPTEMBER 24, 1999

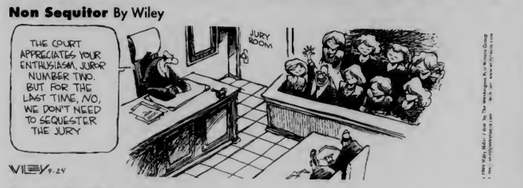
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Performance at White House		P.O.V. (In Stereo)		Dude Ranch Days
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Now and Again "Pilot"		Nash Bridges		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Candid C.	Now and Again "Pilot"		Nash Bridges		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Hughleys	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Odd Man Out	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Jamie Foxx	Jamie Foxx	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "The Third Thing"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Cold Feet "Pilot"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	9	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (N)	"Alien Cargo" (1999, Science Fiction)		Jason London, (In Stereo)		News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Providence "The Third Thing"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Cold Feet "Pilot"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	★★½ "Speed" (1994, Suspense)	Keanu Reeves, Dennis Hopper, (In Stereo)			News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Providence "The Third Thing"		Dateline (In Stereo)		Cold Feet "Pilot"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	1	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Chef!	Red Dwarf	Charis Rose	In Stereo
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Hughleys	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Odd Man Out	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	"Alien Cargo" (1999, Science Fiction)		Jason London, (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	49	Roseanne	Roseanne	Major League Baseball: Atlanta		Braves at Montreal Expos (Live)				★ "Mystique" (1992, Comedy)		Rodney Dangerfield: Jackie...
AAE	43	Simon & Simon "Shadows"		Law & Order "Indifference"		Biography: Kathie Lee Gifford		L.A. Detectives (R)		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)		Law & Order "I.D."
CNN	27	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	78	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "Sliding Always" (1990, Comedy)	Kirstie Alley, Bill Pullman			Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live
DISC	52	New House	Fix-It-Line (R)	Wild Discovery	"Brother Wolf"	On the Inside "Big Brother" (R)		News		Discover Mag.	Storm Warnings "Spring" (R)	On the Inside "Big Brother" (R)
ESPN	51	Sportscenter		Bikes, Blades and Boards (R)		Sumo		Auto Racing: NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series – Las Vegas 250		50 Greatest		Sportscenter
LIFE	107	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	★★ "My Son, Johnny" (1991, Drama)		Michele Lee, Corin Nemec		★★½ "For the Love of Nancy" (1994, Drama)		Tracey Gold.		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Global Groove	Countdown	Real Soldiers	News (R)	Britney		TRL (R) (In Stereo)		Music Videos	Making-Video	Undressed (R)	Loveline
NICK	46	All That	Catdog	Spongeb	Spongeb	Spongeb	Spongeb	Brady Bunch	Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Taxi (In Stereo)	M.T. Moore	Happy Days
SCIFI	45	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Poltergeist: The Legacy		Farscape "DNA Mad Scientist"		Sliders "A Thousand Deaths"		First Wave "Deluge" (In Stereo)		Poltergeist: The Legacy (R)
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Out of Mind" (R)		Evel Knievel: The True Story		Rock N' Roll Moments (R)		Next to Nothing (R)		Evel Knievel: The True Story
TNT	29	Due South "The Ladies Man"		ER (In Stereo)		"A Stay! Case of Murder" (1999, Drama)	William H. Macy			★★ "Cyborg Cop" (1991, Drama)	Dolph Lundgren, Jerry Orbach
USA	30	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG "Washington Holiday"		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★★ "Death Becomes Her" (1992, Comedy)	Meryl Streep,			★★★ "Shampoo" (1975)
HBO	33	Worst Witch	Dear America	Inside the NFL (In Stereo)		★ "The Avengers" (1998)	Ralph Fiennes. "PG-13"	★★ "Sniper" (1993, Drama)	Tom Berenger, (In Stereo) "R"			Chris Rock
MAX	43	(4:40) ★★★ "Titanic" (1997, Drama)	Leonardo DiCaprio, "PG-13"			★★½ "A Soldier's Daughter Never Cries" (1998, Drama)		★★ "Dogtor Dolittle" (1998)	Eddie Murphy.			Pleasure Zone
SHOW	50	"Trayler Wayner Stan" (1999, Drama)	Bethany Richards.			Boxing. William Joppy vs. Julio Cesar Green. (In Stereo Live)						Outer Limits	Total Recall

HSCN — Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Govel to Govel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WGCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	W8/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

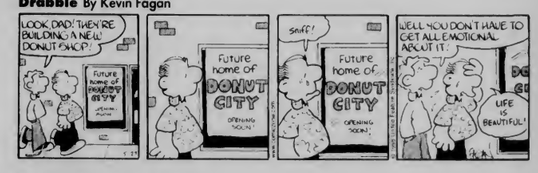


Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Foxtrot By Bill Amend



Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Though you are known for your honesty and candid talk, you are likely to encounter one today who has you beaten in his willingness to "tell all."

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Try to keep disagreements and personal conflicts to a minimum today. Your duties are many and the time available to you must be used well.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You know what you're doing, and you can demonstrate your expertise with style throughout the day. You'll attract numerous supporters.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may be in a position which requires you to "lay down the law" despite your usually tolerant and forgiving attitude. Don' hedge!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You may have to connect with someone today who is more willing and able to deal with harsh financial realities. With guidance, you can prevail.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may not be as adept at expressing yourself today as you had expected. You may have to rely on someone else to get the more difficult ideas across.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Environmental influences may steer you in a surprising direction today, despite any plans you may have that are "set in stone." Be flexible!

Aries (March 20-April 19) – If you have the chance to get a little ahead of the game today, do so. Later, you may find that time is ticking away and you're running behind.

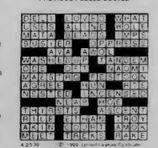
Taurus (April 20-May 20) – A question of commitment and integrity is likely to arise today, and you have what it takes to come through any personal trial successfully.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Someone is likely to inform you that you have recently made, at least in his or her eyes, the wrong decisions. Is an about-face necessary?

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Someone you know and love is likely to need your help today in big way, and you must be prepared to set aside your own desires temporarily.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – There is no reason for you to be hasty today, nor must you hesitate. Risks are few, and the chances of success at this time are increasing.

Quote of the Day



"I believe in making the world safe for our children, but not our children's children, because I don't think children should be having sex"

–Jack Handey

ACROSS
1 Cross a creek
5 Himalayan country
10 Shed
14 Film director Ferrara
15 Mexican friend
16 Melville novel
17 Noticeability
20 Irving division
21 Pub beverages
22 Temporary homes
23 Go on the lam
24 Rowboat
26 Diverse
29 Capital of Peru
30 Cold weather malady
33 Sacred picture
34 Red Sea peninsula
35 Chaney of film
36 Lift the spirits
40 Sounds of hesitation
41 Guffaw
42 Hesse
43 Toronto's prov
44 Cut into small cubes
45 More laden with pepper
47 Bandleader Lawrence
48 Tree fluids
49 Teams
52 Neutral color
53 Timetable info
56 Defensive actions
60 Struck silent
61 Cuts of meat
62 — monster (lizard)
63 Deep voice
64 Hat materials
65 Beatles movie

DOWN
1 Texas town
2 — Ben Athern
3 Nick
4 Loop rising
5 Fastened shut
6 Saute or Trainer
7 Papal name
8 Pool
9 Baseballer Gehrig
10 Buyer's sine qua non 11 Ambient
12 Misplaced
13 Throw
18 Bleached
19 Narrow waterway
23 Heisman native
24 Singer Shore
25 Shard of wine
28 Home movie
27 Squirrel's munch
28 Perch
29 Feudal subject
30 Fisherman's cork
31 Set free
32 Below
34 Hook of John's
37 Firstborn
38 GQ yachting
39 Oldser's
45 Bother
46 Musical composition
47 — one's way (procedes)
48 Fragrance
49 Shakespeare
50 Dee Moines locale
51 Membership fee
52 Runner Zatopek
53 Pennsylvania city
54 Tahoe
55 Immediately after
57 Keebler toon
58 Pain drugs
59 Expression of disgust

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A 2-15-16 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Hoagie Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Grilled Cheese on Whole Wheat Bread

DINNER
Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce
Beef & Shrimp Lo Mein
Vegetable Lo Mein

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Hoagie Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Grilled Cheese on Whole Wheat Bread
Curried Chick Peas

DINNER
Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce
Beef & Shrimp Lo Mein
Vegetable Lo Mein
Black Eyed Peas Jambalaya

Hampshire
LUNCH
Chicken Hoagie Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Grilled Cheese on Whole Wheat Bread

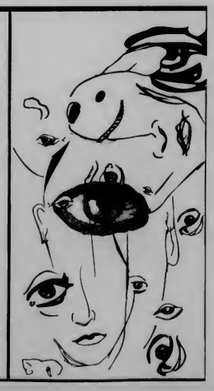
DINNER
Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce
Beef & Shrimp Lo Mein
Vegetable Lo Mein
Black Eyed Peas Jambalaya

Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Hoagie Sandwich
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Grilled Cheese on Whole Wheat Bread
Curried Chick Peas

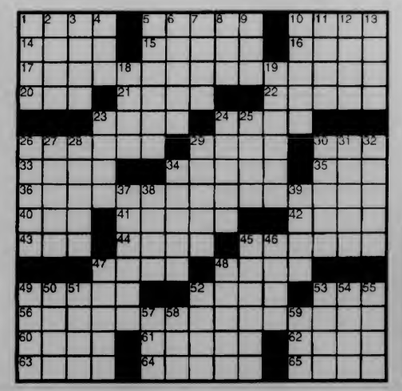
DINNER
Chicken with Pecan Dijon Sauce
Beef & Shrimp Lo Mein
Vegetable Lo Mein
Black Eyed Peas Jambalaya

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technician	Becky Reddick
Copy Editor	Kevin Monahan
Production Supervisor	Katie Ross
Production Staff	Alan Basque, James Gilbert, Vlad Zakashansky



Leold www.leold.com
by Roger and Salem Salioom© 1997



My last girlfriend showed me some cool stuff about my body. She showed me how to cross my eyes so that when I look at someone, it seems as if they have only one large eye in the middle of their forehead...like a cyclops.

That cyclops stuff was the coolest. I'll always be indebted to her. She showed me other stuff about my body too. I'll never forget her.

I'm going to try that cross-eyed stuff on my next girl.

I also learned how to feel terribly sad and cry for no apparent reason at unexpected moments in public. I learn a little bit more every year.

Sports

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — September 24, 1999

UMass football out for redemption

Minutemen look to bounce back against Div. I-A Toledo Rockets

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The last time the Massachusetts football team played Division I-A Toledo, the Minutemen got on the scoreboard first.

That's about the only thing that went UMass' way in the September 10, 1983 showdown. The final score in the inter-divisional game was 45-13, with the hosting Rockets racking up 397 total yards and 22 first downs in a dominating effort.

Roughly sixteen years later, the Minutemen will give it another shot, this time on the heels of an NCAA Division I-AA National Championship. Massachusetts (1-1, 1-1 Atlantic 10) will travel to Ohio to participate in their first I-A game since 1988 to try to avoid dropping to 1-2 on the season.

Toledo will welcome UMass having an identical record, but against stiffer competition. The Rockets lost their season opener to Syracuse University, getting shellacked 55-12, while subsequently blasting through Mid-American Conference opponent Ball State, 23-10.

The Minutemen will have their eyes on the Toledo tailback tandem of Chester Taylor and William Bratton, with 156 and 93 yards, respectively, on the ground this year.

Preseason A-10 Defensive Player of the Year Kole Ayi will head the UMass linebacking core that will be responsible for containing the aforementioned duo. Ayi registered 25 tackles over the first two games of the season, while partner Dan Healey is fresh off a 10 tackle, two sack game in last Saturday's 26-21 loss to Villanova.

Overall, the defense will have to bring their best to give the explosive but often inconsistent Minuteman offense a chance to keep up with the Rocket attack.

That, in itself, might be enough to keep UMass focused.

"Let me put it this way: no matter what happens in the game, we're going to be a lot better football team after Saturday night," Massachusetts Coach Mark Whipple said. "We're hurting a little bit mentally. We need something to get us pumped up. Toledo has a great tradition. I think they are eighth in the country over the last six years in terms of winning percentage. They play Marshall, they've played Syracuse already, and they play everyone else in their league. They've got great speed. It's going to be a real test of us. They'll certainly be the toughest team we play this year. We may not come out of it with a win, but you don't schedule a game like this for a win. We don't feel we have to, especially with where our program is headed. Certainly by 10:30 Saturday night we'll no where we are and where we're going to be."

Aside from a win or a loss, the game will give UMass supporters a chance to see how close or how far away their team is from the long-term goal of joining the ranks of Division I-A football. The gridiron is currently the only place where Massachusetts does not play the highest level of competition available.

"I think we get a lot out of it," Whipple said. "I don't think you get just a guarantee or a contract out of it. I think Villanova is a lot better because they went out and played Air Force, Troy State beat Cincinnati, Northern Arizona is a heck of a club, Georgia Southern went out and almost beat Oregon State. We'd like to think we're in that company. Certainly everybody else thinks we are. Now we'd like to play like we are. I think that we'll come out of it and see what the game's supposed to be about. I think every I-AA player believes he could be a I-A player. This is a chance to prove it at that next level."

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/COLLEGIAN

Quarterback Scott Bankhead will look to put his name back up in lights against Division I-A Toledo this weekend

Among Minutemen who would like that chance to prove their worth are running back Marcel Shipp and quarterback Todd Bankhead. Shipp is currently working to extend a 14-game 100-yard rushing streak. The run includes most of last season, during which the All-American racked up over 2,500 yards and 18 touchdowns.

Bankhead, on the other hand, has vaulted to the top of the all-time school charts in nearly every statistical passing category in just over one season of play.

"Todd's a great, great kid," Whipple said. "He's a better kid than he is a player, and everyone knows how good a player he is. You can talk about all the great quarterbacks in this league, but not one of them has a national championship. You don't win championships without a quarterback, who's a real leader and a winner. And I think he's proven that he is both. He showed it a little on Saturday. With less than one minute on the clock, he showed that he was going to play to the end. I think he played pretty well. He's making good decisions, learning to step up a little bit. He's moving a little bit quicker. He's a little more mature, and I think he's going to continue to play well. He's one reason why I think we might have a shot at hanging in there with Toledo. He can step up and make the big plays, and hopefully he'll do that on Saturday for us."

FOOTBALL
UMASS VS. TOLEDO
TODAY 7:30
91.1 FM-WMUA
BRET MAUSER-PLAY
JUSTIN RUDD-COLOR
PREVIEW

Field hockey heads south for ACC showdowns

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

The North Carolina Tarheels. The Duke Blue Devils. Hearing these names brings to mind countless images of athletic majesty, images of players and coaches that transcended the very sports at which they excelled.

But the Massachusetts field hockey team would like to ask: What's in a name?

If names won games, UMass would have nary a hint of competition this year. From their hallowed skipper all the way down their roster to their rawest recruits, the Minutewomen boast some of the biggest and best names in the collegiate field hockey universe.

And the players behind those names will have to truly rise to the occasion this weekend, as UMass takes on the No. 3 Heels and No. 16 Devils in its first two road games of this young campaign.

But make no mistake: UMass can play the name game too.

Heading the charge for UM are Anke "Boom-Boom" Bruemmer and Kristen "Takes No" Schmidt, the team's true offensive sparkplugs. Schmidt has earned her keep on the squad by slashing relentlessly to the goal, shunning defenders with her brash stickwork. The towering Bruemmer has been a double-edged sword for the Minutewomen, as both their primary penalty-corner threat and their dominating defensive presence in the middle.

Speaking of the middle, Coach Patty Shea enjoys the luxury of three legitimate midfield superstars, each of whom is making a household name for herself with consistently fine play. Chrissy "Hot Wheels" Millbauer has been making the most of her senior season, tearing through opposing traps with her jaw-dropping quickness and keying countless UM breakaways.

Co-captain Lucy "Sweet Music" Koch has spoiled countless opponents' transitions with her incredible vision and knack for positioning, while midfield mate Jill "the Wizard" Fantasia has worked her own brand of magic through steals and near-perfect outlet passes.

Those foolish enough to venture into the UMass backfield will find a trio of turf monsters waiting to gobble them up. Along with Bruemmer, UM looks to Patty "Clamps" Robinson and Kerry Ann "the Terminator" Iaggassar to dismantle attacking teams with their speed and power. Goalie Zuwie "the Welsh Wall" Tucker provides the last line of defense for the Maroon and White.

North Carolina Coach Karen Shelton, who has compiled one of the more impressive coaching records on the planet at 301-73-9, will try to offset UM's formidable roster with a few big names of her own. At the top of that list is forward Kristen McCann. McCann has a tendency to take over games, as she did this past weekend when her lone goal toppled the previously undefeated Cavaliers of Virginia.

"Kristen is the fastest player we've ever had," said Shelton, who has coached the Heels through 18 seasons and a 6-1 start this year. "[The game winner] was a superb field goal, absolutely brilliant."

Another Tarheel who came up huge against Virginia was goalkeeper Amy Tran. A redshirt freshman from Pennsylvania, Tran's performance earned her ACC Co-Player of the Week honors, an award she shared with the top scorer from you guessed it- Duke.

That player was forward Corey Cercelini, who helped the Blue Devils to a 3-0 record last week by racking up seven goals and sixteen points. Her hat trick provided all of the Duke offense in the team's 5-2 upset of No. 2 ODU, then added four scores against a bewildered Appalachian State squad in a 9-0 rout.

The Minutewomen are 1-0 all-time versus Duke, 2-6-1 against the Tarheels. This trip will be followed by a home date with Harvard on September 30th.

Minutewomen to play 2; set to host UConn, URI

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

They don't get much bigger than this.

This afternoon at Totman Field, the Massachusetts and Connecticut women's soccer teams will do battle once again in one of the most heated rivalries in collegiate athletics. Gametime is slated for 4:30 p.m. (WMUA, 91.1 FM).

"They're a dangerous team, but like usual, I expect it to be another frantic UMass/UConn struggle like in years past," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said.

While the Minutewomen [2-1-1] come into today's game following an unplanned 12-day layoff, the Huskies [3-4] are fresh off a 4-0 shutout of Ohio University on Sunday afternoon. UMass was scheduled to play in a tournament at the College of William and Mary last weekend, but Hurricane Floyd forced the Maroon and White to stay home.

"We hope that the layoff won't be disruptive. It allowed some people to get healthy, and we used the time well," Rudy said. "We've gone at it hard in practice, but the thing that concerns me is that the two teams that we are playing this weekend [UMass also plays Rhode Island on Sunday] have three or four games on us."

UConn won the meeting between the two schools last year, a 4-1 decision in Storrs. However, that setback was just one loss in an uncharacteristic season for the Minutewomen, who suffered their first losing season in the history of the program.

This time around, though, it's the Huskies who are having an off-year. UConn was ranked in the top five of various national polls to begin the season, but an 0-4 start quickly dropped the Nutmeggers out of the Top 25. All of those losses came to teams in the Top 20, however.

"So far they've played some of the top schools in the country. They're young and new, sort of like us, and right now they're trying to find out what they have," Rudy said.

The Huskies will be led by sophomore All-American Mary Francis Monroe. Other top threats for Connecticut include forward Jen Carlson and Lauren Molinaro.

On the UMass side of the ball, senior forward Emma Kurowski, who enters the weekend only two points shy of breaking the career scoring mark, is the team's leading scorer. Junior forward Kara Green and sophomore midfielder Sarah Cook should also provide offensive punch for the Minutewomen.

Sunday afternoon the Minutewomen will then take on URI to open up the Atlantic-10 portion of their schedule. The Rams are off to a 6-2 start and are making a claim as one of the up-and-coming teams in the conference.

"I felt fortunate to come out of there [URI] with a win last year [a 3-1 UMass decision]. They're off to probably their best start ever and they'll be well-rested since Tuesday for us," Rudy said.

Last year's A-10 Rookie of the Year, Shannon Kittleson, will lead the way for URI.

Minutewomen Notes: The first 500 people in the door at today's game will get a free slice of Papa John's pizza. Everyone in attendance will pick up a gift certificate and stadium cup. More prizes will be given if UMass breaks its own and the Northeast attendance records.

WOMEN'S SOCCER
UMASS VS. UCONN
TODAY 4:30 PM
91.1 FM-WMUA
MIKE KOBYLANSKI-PLAY
DAN SANTELLA-COLOR
PREVIEW

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Emma Kurowski will look to become Minutewomen soccer's all-time leading scorer as they take on UConn today at Totman Field at 4:30 p.m.

Men's soccer to kick off A-10 action against rival Rhode Island Rams

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Correspondent

As any eatery employee will tell you, the noon rush is one of the busiest times of the day. Well, it is lunchtime for the Massachusetts men's soccer team, and business is about to pick up as the Minutemen kick off their Atlantic-10 Conference schedule in at the University of Rhode Island in Kingston this Saturday.

UMass is currently on a two-game winning streak after emerging victorious in both of their games in the UMass Men's Soccer Classic last weekend. After dominating Siena College on Saturday with a 3-0 shutout, they squeaked out a win against the 16th-ranked University of Washington 3-2 in an overtime victory on Sunday. The Minutemen now stand at 5-3 with only conference games ahead of them.

"We've had great play all over the field. From the goalkeeping to the forwards, to the defense, to our midfielders, to our bench," said UMass men's soccer coach Sam Koch.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Jonathan Bibb

Rhode Island is the first obstacle in UMass' journey to the A-10 tourney. The Rams just recently secured the Wakefield Cup after defeating Providence College 4-1 on Wednesday night and will await the Minutemen's arrival with a 4-1-1 record as they also prepare for their first A-10 game. After dropping their first two contests against a pair of Florida schools, the Rams hold fort with a four-game win streak on the line, a string which includes a 1-0 shutout of Boston University in their home opener and a 3-1 win at Hartford.

"This is definitely a big game for us," according to Koch. "They're a talented team. Their team speed is very good. They seem to blend well together. If they have a weakness, I haven't been able to find it."

Yet, as intimidating as URI may be perceived, UMass is not without its strengths. Senior Adam Black has now totaled five goals and an assist, and was deadly in last weekend's tournament win over Washington. Scoring two goals, including the game-winner in overtime, Black has now beat enough goalkeepers to be ranked second on the Atlantic-10 scoring list.

Keeping players off the A-10 scoring list are Minutemen goalies senior Todd Fowler and sophomore Bryan O'Quinn. Fowler made a diving penalty kick save late in the second half against Washington last weekend. The save allowed UMass to hold the tie and reach overtime, where they were later able to put the Huskies away.

O'Quinn has also been key in some of the Minutemen's closer matches. He has accumulated two shutouts in as many starts for the Maroon and White.

"The goalkeeping has been very good," said Koch. "Todd Fowler and Bryan O'Quinn have both done an excellent job for us. Sometimes it's tough to decide who's going to get the opportunity to play each game. But it's a nice problem to have, too."

Regardless of who guards the net this Saturday, it will not change the importance of this weekend's first A-10 game. Before last season, the last nine times that UMass has faced off against URI, the Minutemen have left the field with the win. However, last season was a different scenario as the two teams played to a 1-1 tie at Totman Field. This year the Minutemen will attempt to extend their winning streak to three games and dispel the bad air in Kingston R.I. left over from their 1998 1-0 loss to the Rams, which prevented them from playing in the Atlantic 10 Tournament.

Sports Schedule

Today:

WOMEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Columbia — 9 p.m.

WOMEN'S SOCCER (Totman Field):
vs. Connecticut — 3:30 p.m.

Saturday:

Men's Water Polo
CWPA League Tournament
at UMMA — noon
at Lehman — 4 p.m.

Field Hockey:
at North Carolina — 1 p.m.

Volleyball:
at Rhode Island — 6 p.m.

Football:
at Toledo — 7 p.m.

Sunday:

Men's Water Polo:
CWPA League Tournament
at Fordham — 10 a.m.

WOMEN'S SOCCER (Totman Field):
vs. Rhode Island — 1 p.m.

Field Hockey:
at Duke — 3 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 11 — September 27, 1999

UM student gets meningitis

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

A 19 year-old University of Massachusetts student has been diagnosed with meningitis. UMass has not released the name of the female student from Rockland, Massachusetts.

Meningitis is an inflammation of the lining of the brain and spinal cord, and can be caused by either a virus or bacteria. The UMass student has bacterial meningitis.

Last Wednesday, the woman reported to University Health Services complaining of flu-like symptoms. On Thursday, her parents moved her to South Shore Hospital in South Weymouth. She is listed in fair condition.

According to the UMass Public Health Nurse, A.J. Lardner, meningitis is spread through shared saliva.

"Maybe smoking from the same cigarette, drinking from the same glass, using the same toothbrush, or kissing," Lardner said.

Lardner said that common symptoms include headaches, a stiff neck, and a high temperature. Students may also be hard to wake up, confused, or extremely tired.

"Students will get ill very quickly," Lardner said. "And if something like that happens, students should contact us immediately."

In the time since the student first reported to UHS, Lardner has been trying to track down those who have been in contact with the student.

"We need to identify those people so we can try to vaccinate them," Lardner said. "We are very busy trying to do that, but we have a staff of people helping out. Right now, we are fairly sure that we have identified all of the close contacts of the student."

Students who may have been exposed have been given 500 milligrams of the antibiotic Ciprofloxacin.

"It's one dose, it's at Health Services, and there are no side effects. If a student is allergic to the Cipro, there are other antibiotics available," Lardner said.

This is not the first time that a UMass student has been diagnosed with meningitis. Last May, a student was diagnosed and then hospitalized until June. In 1997, Todd Hendsbee, 21, a former UMass student who was taking a semester off, died from of a strain of meningitis that infects the blood.

According to Lardner, cases of meningitis, while they can come at any time, are seen more often in the winter and early spring.

She recommends students with any questions contact the UHS Triage nurse at 577-5000.

Two hit by car, Tina Haafke dies

NORTHAMPTON – One Smith College student was killed, and another injured, in an accident early Friday morning, according to police.

Tina Haafke, 24, and Frauke "Johanna" Wolter, 24, were struck by a car driven by Mary McAleer, 38, of Laurel Park.

Haafke was critically injured, and died after being moved to Baystate Medical Center in Springfield. She suffered head and internal injuries. Wolter broke her leg and is listed in satisfactory condition.

They were struck before 7:30 a.m. as they were heading toward a pool.

McAleer was driving at 25 miles per hour towards the rising sun when she hit the two exchange students.

The speed limit is 35 miles per hour. McAleer has not been cited in the accident.

-Sam Wilkinson

More SGA seats due to commuters

Due to more students living off campus, and a number of students still living in temporary housing, the Student Government Association has seen an increase in its commuter seats.

According to Jeremy Rouille, chancellor of elections for the SGA, the commuter spots this year have increased to a total of 38 seats. One of the reasons for the increase is that students living in lounges are considered, for purposes of representation, to be extra-residents on campus. Rouille explained that students in temporary housing are similar to students living in Hillel House, or those living in fraternities, therefore they are considered to be commuters.

The SGA has had problems in the past filling the commuter seats, and the increase in seats of this type should present challenges similar to those seen in previous years. Rouille explained that as of the Sept. 22 deadline, only seven commuters had turned in their papers for the 38 available seats.

Prior to the election, students interested in getting involved in student government can fill one of the positions without being on the ballot by running either a write-in or a sticker campaign. Candidates running a write-in campaign need only one signature to be a contender for a particular position. In a sticker campaign, any candidate interested in running for a position needs to hand out stickers bearing his or her name for voters to place on the ballot. Rouille explained that, following the election, anyone interested in being a representative for SGA must get 25 signatures, and then be appointed to the position by the Senate.

According to Rouille, empty commuter seats are often filled up by "friends of friends in the SGA," or by members of the area fraternities. Although there will be no deadline extension for nomination papers for the commuter spots, Rouille remains optimistic that many students interested in being representatives did not fill out papers due to the excessive amount of commuter seats.

-Melissa Hammel

BARBARA BRADBURY/COLLEGIAN

Student speak-out

Juliet Okafor, a junior at UMass, discusses her views on affirmative action at the Student Speak Out in the Campus Center on Friday.

NICOLE GOTTWALT/COLLEGIAN

Chillin' in the sun

Jessica Chesnes, a junior biology major, relaxes in the Durfee Conservatory gardens.

Hamp. Mall theaters delayed till fall 2000

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

HADLEY – The Hampshire Mall movie theater complex will not re-open until fall 2000, now that the mall has refused to financially support a 16-screen complex with AMC Movie Company. The new lease that has been signed with Cinemark will only offer a 12-screen complex, twice the screens of the former AMC Hampshire Six Theater.

AMC recently asked to be released from the lease obligation with Pyramid Corporation, owners of the Hampshire Mall, because Pyramid Corp. was unable to financially support theater renovations.

Nadine Salem, general manager of the Hampshire Mall, said a lawsuit was filed against AMC Movie Co. after they had signed a lease with Pyramid to upgrade the theater to 16 screens. The lawsuit was filed by a disability advocacy group, which Salem would not identify, stating that AMC's new stadium theaters wouldn't be suitably built for disabled patrons. In fact, the stadium-seating plan only allowed for handicap accessibility in the front of the theaters.

The 16-screen theater AMC was planning to build would have had stadium seating. Salem said that instead of upgrading the theater to accommodate handicapped seating, AMC decided to pull out of the New England area. Hampshire Mall released the theater to Cinemark under a new lease.

"From what I know, it is the only AMC in all of New England," Salem said. "Cost-wise, it wouldn't make sense for them to upgrade only one theater."

However, David Modugno, manager of AMC Mountain Farms Theater, agrees that there was some kind of lawsuit against AMC, but that the lawsuit was not the reason AMC decided to drop the lease.

Modugno said AMC signed a lease with the Hampshire Mall stating that the mall would financially support the decision to upgrade the theater complex, originally to 16 screens.

When the lawsuit was filed, Modugno said, AMC didn't have a problem with upgrading the theater. According to their lease, Pyramid Co. would pay for everything.

"When Pyramid couldn't come up with the money, the deal was off," Modugno said. "AMC knew that they didn't have the money, so the mall decided to wait for another source of income."

He said Hampshire Mall representatives were not being honest with AMC representatives. According to Modugno, AMC thought that the Hampshire Mall was supporting the project the entire way. But when Cinemark gave the mall an offer, it was one they just couldn't refuse, Modugno said.

"If it wasn't a money issue, why wasn't it [the 16-screen complex] built a few months ago?" Modugno said. "They [Pyramid Co.] are trying to find a reason why it wasn't built. They just didn't have enough money to begin with. AMC signed a lease presuming they would get re-opened, but got cheated out of it."

Modugno is uncertain as to the future of AMC Mountain Farms Four, but said he is almost certain AMC will shut it down as opposed to trying to compete with an advanced, state-of-the-art movie complex.

Salem said the new Cinemark theater will have increased handicap accessibility, and will most likely not offer student discount rates.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH:78 LOW:42	HIGH:73 LOW:53	HIGH:66 LOW:47

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Big E, Big Fun

The Eastern States Exposition features entertainment, exhibits and eats. Get a taste of what it's all about inside.

2

Out of Focus

This weekend's biggest opener, Double Jeopardy, topped the box office, but failed to impress. Read our review in Arts. Plus, check out CD releases from Sting, Marc Antony, and Paula Cole.

6

Amazing Emma

Senior Emma Kurowski shattered the UMass women's soccer career scoring record with her two-goal performance against UConn on Friday.

12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

~A DAY AT THE BIG E!~

In all its glory

A panorama of Springfield's Annual Fall Festival, the Big E, displays the many attractions and games offered to fairgoers. The Big E started September 17th and runs through October 3rd.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

A side attraction

A young fairgoer plays with a clown display set up alongside a walkway at the Big E on Saturday.

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Sometimes it's fun to fall

Children at the Big E partake in a potato sack race, one of many contests for the younger crowd.

PREREQUISITE: ADRENALINE

Drive. Intensity. Those aren't words you're likely to see in many course requirements. Then again Army ROTC is unlike any other elective. It's hands-on excitement. ROTC will challenge you mentally and physically through intense leadership training. Training that builds your character, confidence and decision-making skills. Again, words other courses seldom use. But they're the credits you need to succeed in life. ROTC is open to freshmen and sophomores without obligation and requires about five hours per week. Register this term for Army ROTC.

LEADERSHIP EXCELLENCE

ARMY ROTC

THE SMARTEST COLLEGE COURSE YOU CAN TAKE

For details, visit the Army ROTC Building or call 545-2321/2322

WE'RE BACK!!

THE STUDENTS HAVE ARRIVED!!

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN WANTS YOU TO HELP WELCOME THEM BACK!!

...WORKING TOGETHER WE CAN CREATE A SPECIAL ISSUE THAT WILL INFORM INCOMING AND RETURNING STUDENTS ABOUT YOUR STUDENT ORGANIZATION.

DON'T MISS OUT ON YOUR CHANCE TO GET KNOWN!!!

ADVERTISE: SEPTEMBER 29TH, special RSO issue....

THROUGH A SPECIAL ISSUE YOU WILL INFORM INCOMING AND RETURNING STUDENTS ABOUT UPCOMING EVENTS AND MEETINGS!!!

DEADLINE FOR AD COPY AND PAYMENT WILL BE SEPTEMBER 27TH!!!

FOR MORE INFO CALL THE "COLLEGIAN" AT 545-3500 AND ASK FOR FRANTZ...

REMEMBER THIS ISSUE IS ESPECIALLY FOR YOU!!

BUILD UP YOUR SUPPORT!!

UM ROTC hosts challenge

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Training as a University of Massachusetts Army cadet requires hands-on leadership skills and self-confidence. Over the weekend, a group of students took part in the "Minuteman Challenge" to prove their titles.

The University of Massachusetts "Minuteman Challenge," sponsored by the UMass Army Reserve Officer Training Corps (ROTC), was conducted on Saturday and included air-mobile operations, rappelling, and hands-on leadership training for combat purposes.

The UMass Army ROTC program is comprised of students enrolled in colleges and universities in the Western Massachusetts area. The program's goal is to train cadets with the necessary skills, leadership, and knowledge to be lieutenants in the United States Army. During the challenge, the cadets learn how to execute proper battle skills, as well as lead small units in combat.

The cadets were transported to Knightville Dam in Huntington to go through the first challenge of the day. Airlifted via 6 UH-1 Huey helicopters, the cadets conducted rappels of 30 feet, 60 feet, and 90 feet off the dam. According to Cadet Major Tim Sawyer, a senior history major, the act of rappelling builds training confidence as well as military skills needed in the U.S. Army.

"It went wonderful," Sawyer said. "It's something used to build their [the new cadets] confidence. They may need these skills someday when they're in the Army."

The act of rappelling involves maneuvering over the edge of a bridge and lowering oneself with a rope, sometimes from distances of more than 90 feet. Sawyer said the procedure is not always easy.

"The most difficult part is getting over the edge of the bridge because once you get over you see nothing below you, and all that's holding you up is the rope," Sawyer said.

In his fourth year in ROTC, Sawyer said everything the cadets do during training is in an organized and rehearsed manner for the purpose of safety. In fact, before the cadets can board a helicopter, they must learn the correct formation and pattern for boarding aircrafts. They must then rehearse it numerous times to execute the procedure correctly. Sawyer said it can be very tedious at points but is necessary to ensure safety.

"Safety is very important in the Army," Sawyer said. "That's one thing they [cadets] always do – rehearse things for safety."

For the final event of the "Minuteman Challenge," the cadets conducted several series of hands-on training sessions in small units, using the same techniques that would be used during duty.

"It promotes team-building," Sawyer said. "You learn how to develop smart leadership skills for everyday life; something that I'll have for the rest of my life."

After he graduates this spring, Sawyer hopes to enter the U.S. Army. As for the UMass ROTC, they will continue to provide the same kind of training necessary to impart the skills and knowledge that Sawyer has acquired.

U.N. must defend actions in East Timor

By Steven Mufson and Colum Lynch
Washington Post

The failure of the United Nations to prevent bloodshed in East Timor, despite clear warnings from officials inside and outside the organization, is reigniting a debate about whether the world body is equipped to deal with urgent humanitarian crises, particularly inside the borders of sovereign states.

At the U.N. General Assembly last week, Secretary General Kofi Annan called for even greater U.N. involvement in conflicts within national borders, saying that state sovereignty "is being redefined." President Clinton reaffirmed his own interventionist impulse. "When we are faced with deliberate, organized campaigns to murder whole peoples or expel them from their land, the care of victims is important, but not enough," he said.

Yet many doubt whether the United Nations can adapt, or whether key member countries such as the United States want it to adapt, to meet these new demands and expectations. In responding to the crisis in East Timor – just as in Rwanda, Sierra Leone, and Kosovo – the world body was hamstrung by the absence of a standing U.N. military force, schisms in a Security Council where five nations have veto power, a shortage of funds, and the plodding, insulated and overly deferential dynamics of the 185-member organization.

The disaster in East Timor is a case study of the organization's problems, and it raises tough questions for the Clinton doctrine of humanitarian-driven interventionism.

On the eve of signing an agreement with Indonesia in early May to allow an independence referendum in the territory of East Timor, several senior U.N. officials were full of apprehension rather than joy.

"I cannot hide my apprehensions regarding the course on which we are about to embark," one senior U.N. official wrote in an internal memorandum just before the signing. Citing the possibility of intimidation, vote rigging and violence, he wrote: "Apart from the moral opprobrium that would be heaped on the U.N. were we to follow such a course, the consequences for the long-term stability of East Timor would be disastrous. Will any of our 'friends' come to redeem our reputation? I somewhat doubt it."

Four months later, those words seem prophetic. East Timor's capital, Dili, lies in ruins, and the United Nations' reputation is badly bruised. Early this month, as militias rampaged in Dili, Nobel Peace Prize co-winner and East Timor independence leader Jose Ramos-Horta said, "I don't see how people around the world can trust the United Nations again."

Immediately after the May 5 agreement, the militias stepped up their campaign of intimidation. The United States and Australia persuaded Indonesia to let the civilian police and U.N. liaison officers carry light sidearms.

Even as violence increased, Indonesia, the world's largest Islamic country and former head of the movement of non-aligned nations, got diplomatic support. U.N. Security Council supporters included the tiny African nations of Gambia and Gabon; Bahrain, a leader in the non-aligned movement; Malaysia; and Russia. Japan, one diplomat said, "would look for the silver lining in any cloud."

Floods in NC still causing pain

By J.R. Moehringer
Los Angeles Times

ROCKY MOUNT, N.C. – Bedroom slippers, arthritis cream, scented candles, tape cassettes, canceled checks, kitchen utensils, medicine bottles – and one Mother Goose book, for when her granddaughter came to visit.

Ann Turner, 74, looked down at all her worldly belongings, hundreds of items scattered on the wet floor around her feet, and tried to keep herself together.

I'm just going to start my life over," she said, standing in the middle of her two-bedroom apartment near the Tar River, a normally sleepy stream that woke up and threw a fit last week, leaping its banks and leaving Turner and thousands like her with nowhere to go.

"I'm doing all right," she said. "Then all of a sudden it hits me, and I go down again."

Yesterday, eight days after flooding was spawned by Hurricane Floyd, the water was finally starting to recede. But it could be months, even years, before the darkness in residents' lives starts to lift.

At least 46 North Carolinians are dead, along with 2.5 million chickens and turkeys, 100,000 hogs, and 750 head of cattle –numbers everyone expects to go up as the water goes down. Though the sky has turned clear and the first taste of autumn wood-smoke hangs on the cool night air, the state's eastern third remains a fetid, tropical swamp.

Thousands of square miles are still underwater. Land not water-covered is water-logged. Farmers, most without flood insurance because they didn't think they lived on a flood plain, face total ruin. Insects, infectious diseases and environmental catastrophes loom as ominous threats in the drying-out days to come, as do scam artists, con men and looters, already preying on some victims, and the inevitable pollution of fragile coastal fisheries.

As state officials try to gauge the economic impact of the storm, they can say only this: It will far exceed the $6 billion damage done by Hurricane Fran three years ago.

Many of the 40,000 residents who are still without water, or the 6,000 without phone service, or the 3,000 without homes, can be found wandering, pacing, nuttering, outside hospitals, shelters and temporary trailers. Pale, dazed, they eat Red Cross chicken, sip warm soda, suck on cigarettes, and ask each other, "How?" People were told it would rain, but few expected such a killing downpour.

"They say '500-year flood' and all that," said Candy Madrid, executive director of the Rocky Mount Children's Museum, which lost most of its animals, except a couple of snakes and an alligator named Samantha. "Uh-uh. Last time it rained like this, Noah was alive."

One reason for the flood's magnitude was the quickly forgotten Hurricane Dennis, which prepared the ground last month, soaking the state with 10 inches of rain. Then came Floyd. An even bigger and uglier storm, it dropped 20 inches on the state, engorging the already swollen creeks, streams and at least four major rivers. The Cape Fear, the Lumber, the Tar and the Neuse reached levels no living person – in fact, no living person's great-great grandfather – had ever seen.

Friday, for the first time since the rain stopped, Turner and hundreds of other riverside residents returned to their houses in this old railroad and tobacco town of 50,000, perched on the falls of the Tar. And tar was what they found. Smeared on cherished photographs, antique furniture and family Bibles was a thick film of black goo, the residue of a river running high with death and decay, with the carcasses of hogs, horses and cows, mixed together with human sewage and thousands of gallons of fossil fuels from submerged gas stations and airports and power plants.

In rooms that had marinated in such foul water for more than a week, Turner found nothing she could take away with her but a nose-stinging stench. Carpets were muck. Memories were caked over with mud.

Several men from Turner's church helped move her heaviest furniture outside. The Federal Emergency Management Agency, she said, won't bulldoze a house and mail a check to its occupants unless the inside is emptied. So, from behind dark sunglasses, Turner watched her fellow Methodists take hatchets and shovels and wheelbarrows to her things, her delicate belongings. She watched them heft her handmade four-poster bed, her lovely chest of drawers, her red Queen Anne chair, and heap them onto the soggy lawn like so much driftwood.

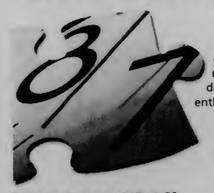
Up and down her street, neighbors were doing the same.

"This looks like junk," she said, glancing around, a hand to her cheek, "ut it wasn't."

About 30 minutes downriver, in Greenville, police intent on preventing looting and injuries threatened to arrest people trying to enter their homes without first getting the all-clear. So, hundreds of refugees continued to bide their time in one of the 22 shelters operating in the region.

Pearly Mae Dixon was among them. She sat heavily on one of the Army cots crammed into Ayden Middle School, heaving sighs, fretting aloud about when she might be able to go home, back to the housing project where she's lived for 16 years, the low-income apartment that suddenly seemed grander to her than any mansion.

"I know they say it's just material things," she said quietly, "But I want my materials."



She laughed at herself, a defeated laugh, and peered down the hallway. Children in donated pajamas ate donated doughnuts and played with donated toys. Tired retirees, like Dixon herself, took exhausted naps, sprawled out across cots the size of surfboards.

It's YOU that makes me smile!

~The Daily Collegian~

delivering 17,000 smiles daily

Warehouse Selectors Needed!

If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion.

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS

Thursday, September 30th
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

What you're thinking. Think again.

Think insurance is boring? Uh, uh. Think it's a dead end? No way. Think you'll never make the big bucks? Wrong again. The fact is, every new day at Travelers brings new ideas. We treat our people like people, so we're a very cool place to work. And, as far as the money goes, we're thoroughly into pay for performance, bonuses and stock programs. In other words, you control how your earnings skyrocket...not us. Starting to have second thoughts? We thought so.

FINANCE & ACTUARIAL STUDENTS for our Leadership Development Program

ON-CAMPUS INTERVIEWS:
10/15/99

RESUME DROP DATE IS 10/1/99

Please fax or e-mail your resume indicating your career preferences to:

Travelers College Relations,
One Tower Square, 1 PB, Hartford, CT 06183-7060.
Fax: 860-277-1970,
E-mail: college@travelers.com
Visit our Web site: www.travelers.com

TravelersInsurance
A member of citigroup

We are an Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action employer, committed to workforce diversity. We actively promote a drug-free workplace.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Popcorn Anyone?

Bob Downs

Imagine you go outside this evening, bound to see a flick at the local megaplex theater. Now we know from the start that this column must be all wrong. The first piece of evidence points out that the AMC Mountain Farms 4 Theater is hardly a megaplex at all. You'd probably be able to see more diverse films at the local theaters in the Amherst-Northampton area anyway. And heaven forbid anyone goes out on Fridays and does something that will leave him or her half naked and mentally stripped. However, I digress, and I'll get back to my story.

In the aforementioned story, you buy your ticket, often an expensive venture in itself. The first thing you see upon entering the theater is the concession stand, filled with all kinds of popcorn, sweets and confections that delight the senses. So dazzled by the smells and sights of a well-marketed system, you sometimes overlook the prices, many of which end up being more expensive than the tickets. As you feel the shock when the register rings up a price that could send you through Harvard, you finally realize that you have become victim of Movie Munchies.

What are Movie Munchies? Movie Munchies are the words that describe the automatic association of eating heart-killing food during your favorite flick. The traditions ingrained in our culture seem to make eating food a requirement for enjoying a movie. So, as you are watching someone being torn apart on the big screen, you are contently tearing apart a hot dog or some Sour Patch Kids.

I stress heart-killing because these days there is a new generation of tasty treats that are guaranteed to shorten your life. The "traditional" movie concession used to be popcorn, soda, and some candy. These days, you can go as far as pizza, nachos, pretzels, 16 million varieties of candies, and cappuccinos. You know, a movie would just not be a movie without cappuccinos. The same force that is driving you to buy popcorn is now making you buy totally random foods at outrageous prices.

Oh, did I mention prices? I happened to work at a movie theater this past summer. Now I know that all of you know the notorious prices, although in general you seem to forget the folly of paying for movie food. Working behind the stand at a large, mainstream, megaplex theater, I came across all the gimmicks and gizmos behind movie food.

Did you ever wonder why movie prices are so high? The first reason, speaking in defense of the theaters, is a devil's advocate way of looking at things. Did you know that all the money you spend on movie tickets does not even go to the theater? That's right. The eight dollars you spend to see Kevin Costner play baseball in For Love of the Game go to Kevin Costner, Universal, and everyone else in between. Nothing goes to the movie theater. Now given the airport-terminal sized, state-of-the-art movie theaters, oodles of money are required for the upkeep and maintenance of these buildings. Enter simple, relatively cheap foods such as popcorn and soda (both extremely cheap in large quantities). The movie people come up with this wonderful idea that selling cheap popcorn and soda with a huge profit margin can pay for theater costs.

Now who would be stupid enough to spend $4.50 on popcorn with a volume equivalent to a large paper lunch bag, and $3.50 on a 44-ounce coke? After all, a 2-liter bottle of coke at the local grocery store costs $1.20, and popcorn is one of the cheapest snack foods around. There are four choices for who's guilty. The first is your friendly columnist, the second is you. The third is the American population at large. The fourth is all the above. The answer nine out of ten times is, all of the above. For the most part, spending large amounts of money on food is a pastime for many of us.

Now being a movie connectionist, I heard many comments made by people buying food. These people conveniently forgot the prices of food, and last week were rediscovering that movie food is a rip-off. Here is a smattering of comments made by people having the revelation:

"This is highway robbery!"

"How do you sleep at night?"

"THAT'S the large? I remember when the popcorn was large."

"Well I guess I'm paying for your college education."

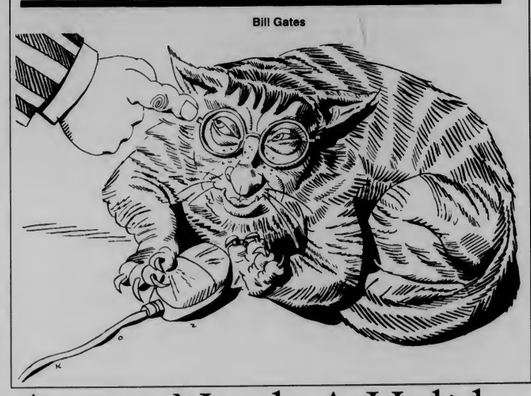
"I was going to get something at CVS, but I forgot."

The most interesting thing about the people commenting on prices is that, no matter how much they fussed and complained, they always bought the food. Are you catching my drift?

Now for all you who do not fit into (d), there are some exceptions to the rule. First and foremost, you may not ever eat anything at the movies. My hat's off to you for that. That shows your immunity to Movie Munchies. However, if you sneak food into movies, you are not immune to Movie Munchies. Some people are not willing to pay the price of outrageous foods, so they take their own. While economically sound, one may again raise the question - why do people need to be eating at movies?

This entire column is leading to a point, trust me. It is written in the Book of Boo that "Society hath the power to turn nonsensical values into common sense." It's this power that gives diamonds their symbolic value, that makes cigarettes so appealing, and makes movie food so damn expensive. Traditions are special to us, rituals that give us definition and purpose. However, some traditions are so unproductive and expensive.

If you feel the need to eat while watching your movie, go for it. I don't mind the extra money.



2000 PRESIDENTIAL FRONT RUNNER :

GEORGE "W."

THE MACHINE: MATT DAMES '2000

inx

August Needs A Holiday

Jason Czernich

"No New Year's Day to celebrate,
No chocolate covered candy hearts to give away,
No first of spring, no song to sing..."

The above lyrics are from the Stevie Wonder song I Just Called to Say I Love You. The song goes on and on about how there is nothing to celebrate, so that's way he declares his love, to make something special out of a boring day. It's a great tune that always gets me thinking. "Did he write this song in August?" or "Is this song about August?" It would seem to make sense to me if it was.

If Mr. Wonder (doesn't that make him sound like a wrestler or a porn star?) was writing about the month of August being desolate and empty then he certainly has a point. August is even more boring than March. There is nothing in August to celebrate. There is no excuse to take a day off at all! August needs a holiday and it has to be something fresh and memorable, perhaps something timeless. Keeping that in mind, here are my suggestions for holidays we could celebrate in August.

"Greeting card companies invented Valentine's Day, so they can do just about anything, even promote National Profanity Day."

Suggestion #1 National Profanity Day

This would be the one-day of the year when if somebody swears at you it can be considered a compliment:

Mother: Have fun at the beach son, oh I almost forgot: Go * yourself!

Son: Happy Profanity Day to you too Mom, You *eating ****!

On this festive occasion, swearing, middle fingers, and even rear nudity would be signs of affection. It would be perfectly legal. No authority would be able arrest or censor you on this most wonderful day of the year. Not only could people exchange swears aloud, but greeting card companies could cash in on this holiday as well. Imagine the delight you would get receiving a card in the mail from a loved one with a cute cartoon animal mooning you. What a unique experience! Greeting card companies invented Valentine's Day, so they can do just about anything, even promote National Profanity Day. Also on this day, network television would not have to edit the swearing and nudity in the R-rated movies they broadcast. This would be a fine opportunity for the censors to take a day off, not like they deserve one anyway. Remember friends, on National Profanity Day if somebody flips you the bird, then flip them a courteous smile and warmly reply, "Thanks, *head!"

If you're still reading this after my first suggestion, another holiday that August could use is...

Suggestion #2 Be-Unusually-Kind-To-Animals Day

On this day, no matter how nice you were to your pets before, you would be nicer to your pets then you usually are. You would pamper these creatures that doctors claim make us happier and extend our lifetimes. Here are a few ways to make your pet feel you're smothering them with attention:

-Give your cat a sponge bath.

-Take you hamster to the local bar.

-Give your chihuahua a tranquilizer. They really like them.

-Knit your shih tzu a diaper. Remember, extra thick on the bottom.

-Let your boa constrictor steer while you drive.

The opportunities to make your pet feel like royalty are endless. After the day is done, your pet will never think of you the same way again.

Other potential holidays I've thought of, but can only briefly mention due to space restrictions, are:

Lock-Grandma-in-the-Cellar Day

The best thing about this holiday is that it doesn't even have to be your grandmother!

Worship-John-Lennon Day

Why not?! No really I want to know, why not?!

Praise-the-Impotent Day.

Make some old man or Republican feel he's still sexy.

Praise-a-Teacher Day

On this day students would call up and/or write all their past teachers and mentors, and tell them how much they appreciate what they did for them, and that they found what they learned under their tutelage very useful. So naturally they wouldn't have to contact any teacher who teaches only general education courses.

Please consider all these options and more, because I think it would be really superb if you could make something special out of a boring day. That, and I think it would be really funny to see a hamster downing a pint of Guiness at the neighborhood bar.Profanity Day.

Support Your Right to Arm Bears

Paul Kitchin

Patriots unite! Oppression and tyranny will be crushed under our righteous stamp of approval. No longer will our Constitutional right to supply our ursine allies militarily be suppressed by the fascist oppression of The Man.

I apologize for myself. Welcome to my world, little boys and girls. This is where I lay claim to my forum for being an idiot and spouting my mouth off, so without further adieu...

Affirmative action. It seems that last semester's objet de discussion is back in spades. I am pleased. This is the topic that first kindled my interest in writing for Ed/Op. Let me share my views and try to persuade:

I'm not entirely comfortable with affirmative action. I can clearly see why people would support it, though. American society has many informal benefits for white men; I don't think that anyone can easily dispute this. How else can the distribution of power be explained? Nevertheless, such advantages are propagated not necessarily by the law (although they are in some cases), but by the individual prejudices of legions of Americans, and by society's failure to level the playing field in terms of education.

The flaw with affirmative action is that it creates formal, codified criteria for discrimination against one racial category in favor of another. That seems dangerous to me. If we accept in principle that the state is authorized to formally grant or deny people a right or claim on the basis of race (which is a very subjective categorization), then under what circumstances is it not acceptable? What prevents the possibility that such laws could be reversed and used against minorities rather than for them?

The appropriate way to end racial inequality is to fix the dismal state of public schooling in impoverished districts. Public school funding is often based on property values in a district. A wealthy district has much more money to lavish on schools. Federal funds are often distributed as matching funds equal to the level supplied locally.

Let's say one school system is given $3000 annually by a local government. Federal funding brings this to $3000. Another district can only raise $1000, and is given another federal $1000 for a $2000 total. The poorer district has less than half the funding, and if it is an urban area then the density of the population means that this smaller sum of money must be used to educate even more children. If the federal money were distributed evenly and the average of the 2 districts was $2000 each, then the more affluent schools would get $5000, and the poorer $3000. There is still a difference, but it is much less severe.

Here at UMass we speak of affirmative action with regard to university admissions. But, if minority students, more likely to hail from poorer urban areas, received stronger primary and secondary educations, then they would not need a preference system to compete for admission. With higher education they can access better employment and hopefully make strident gains toward racial equality within a generation.

Admittedly, this approach is of no use to today's young adults, but it doesn't raise any legal concerns about violation of the constitutional principle of equal protection of the law.

Damn, I've been too wordy. I meant to be a bit more diverse and less serious in my subject matter.

How about Twister®, eh? What a silly-fun game that is. Oh, the innocent joys of bodily entanglement that underless frolicsome circumstances would seem rather risqué.

I like French. I wish I could find more opportunities to flavor this article with pretentious French phrases. I think that would add a certain quelquechose. At least it would demonstrate that I know 2 or 3 things, n'est-ce pas?

I like French, but now I'm in college and no longer required to pursue it academically. I really lack the discipline necessary to master it. I want to have some sort of international career, which means that in a few years people will expect me to be fluent in a foreign language. After all, lorsqu'en France faisez ce que font les Francais.

That was liberating. I wonder if I'm even spelling this crap right.

What happened to CTN? Our last stand in rockin' music television has gone hip-hop. They used to have great videos from second tier rock bands like Big Wreck, Fountains of Wayne, and the Cranberries. That was stuff you can never find on MTV (except during the glory of 120 minutes).

On the flipside we now get the History channel on 37. Rock on, Housing Service Cable Network!!

Mmmm....bacon and eggs...Brunch time folks. Hasta.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Jolyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Mensched Treasurer Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Jolyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Daily Collegian

Is now looking for people to write for all departments, as well as editors for Diversity Pages

If you are interested in being a part of the largest New England college daily, then visit us in the Campus Center in room 117, and fill out an application.

It's great for a resume-builder and you also get the perks of working in a large media outlet.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

September 27, 1999

Double Trouble

Judd can't save Jeopardy

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

Double Jeopardy
Directed by Bruce Beresford
With Ashley Judd, Tommy Lee Jones
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield

Double Jeopardy had a lot going for it, in theory. Ashley Judd and Tommy Lee Jones are both talented and uniquely charismatic actors; screenwriters David Weisberg and Douglas Cook are responsible for The Rock, a movie ripe with action and intensity. Weisberg and Cook, however, were entirely unable to replicate that sense of immediacy and momentum here.

Judd plays Libby Parsons, a woman who awakes one night to find herself covered in blood, with everything indicating that she stabbed her husband to death and dumped him in the ocean. She is convicted of murder and sent off to jail, leaving her young son in the care of her best friend. While in prison, Libby discovers that her husband may still be alive. After six years she is released, and immediately jumps parole to track him down and reclaim her son. Tommy Lee Jones plays her parole officer, a man struggling with his own demons while trying to catch up with Libby to stop her from killing her husband.

Double Jeopardy takes its incredibly lame-sounding name from the legal institution by which someone cannot be tried for the same crime twice. Libby, therefore, figures that since she has already been convicted of murdering her husband, she can now kill him for real and face no consequences. Well, that's not quite how it works; and even if it were, the movie makes such little use of that fictional arrangement that it really doesn't matter.

Double Jeopardy's plot feels contrived and unnecessarily complicated; it rushes through the whole crime/trial/prison matter in a series of laughably unrealistic scenes, only to enter into a meandering and unexciting account of Libby's efforts to track down her husband, Nick. The motivation behind Nick's effort to frame his wife and fake his own death is never explained, and the movie eventually degenerates into a series of semi-interesting encounters that take us toward an ending we could see coming a mile away.

To call Double Jeopardy derivative would be putting it nicely; to call it a poorly executed and utterly shameless rip-off of The Fugitive would be more accurate. What made The Fugitive so interesting, however, was the steady process of realization that audience and main character undergo simultaneously as the story of what really happened is pieced together. In Double Jeopardy there is no story of what really happened, except to say that Libby was framed. This is clearly a case of a film's trailers giving away the entire plot. I was hoping to find a movie bursting with hidden motives and startling revelations, but all this film offers is the hollow shell of a thriller, with nothing of real substance to grab the audience's attention.

Ashley Judd herself is Double Jeopardy's biggest asset; she manages to give Libby a decent degree of credibility, and her emotional intensity helps keep the audience interested in the floundering plot line. Her character, unfortunately, is trapped in an action-flick cartoon world, where motive and realism are afterthoughts, and Judd's efforts ultimately go to waste.

Except for a few instances of humor and a handful of scenes that approached being suspenseful, this movie is barely worth the $3.50 for a Blockbuster rental. Instead, stare at an Ashley Judd poster for a while, and then watch U.S. Marshalls.

Grade: C-

COURTESY WARNER.COM

Despite Ashley Judd's alluring looks, Double Jeopardy still comes off like The Fugitive Part III.

Rane highlights otherwise-gloomy Day Off

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Staff

The Meadows Music Theatre in Hartford, CT. concluded its season with Radio 104's Big Day Off this past Friday. Featuring seventeen bands on three different stages, the show had great potential, but poor production cast a gloomy spell on the sunny day.

Boston's Guster, gearing up for the release of their magnificent major label debut Lost and Gone Forever on Tuesday captivated a small and musically conscious crowd. Rolling through old tunes like the "Airport Song" to their new single "Barrel Of A Gun," Guster was able to get their fans from out of their seats and to dancing on the floor.

Another Boston band, the Push Stars, who recently released their major label debut on Capitol Records titled After The Party, rolled through their lively performance with "Everything Shines" from the movie, There's Something About Mary, and their present radio single "Drunk is Better Than Dead." The Push Stars recently completed a national club and theater tour with Julian Lennon and Better Than Ezra and will be touring with Guster this fall.

Amidst the performances by the many national bands on hand, two fascinating surprises emerged and both were based out of Connecticut. The first, making a third appearance at the Meadows this summer, was three-time Hartford Advocate Award Winner, Rane. Their distinct, progressive jam-rock sound and high-energy performance wooed the numerous industry

Turn to MIGHTY, page 7

Box office totals

Audiences seeing Double

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Double Jeopardy stormed the box office this weekend, collecting an impressive $23.7 million dollars on 2547 screens. Double Jeopardy, the second Fugitive ripoff in as many years, bested last year's U.S. Marshalls ($16.86) by about $7 million dollars. The film, which features Ashley Judd as a woman falsely accused of murdering her still-living husband, collected a per screen average of $9305.

Last week's number one, Blue Streak, fell to second, collecting $13.2 million. On approximately the same number of screens, that's a fairly impressive 31 percent drop for the Martin Lawerence fiasco. Unfortunately, that means that this film is going to remain in theaters a lot longer than most people expected or hoped.

And after two months, The Sixth Sense remains in the top three at the box office. Add another $8.5 million for the Bruce Willis scare flick.

For Love of the Game felt the brute force of many bad reviews, falling a horrendous 53 percent from last week's $14 million to a meager $6.6 million. When Kevin Costner can't make a baseball movie work, you know his career is in absolute shambles.

The story continues to be American Beauty though. In less than 500 theaters, the Kevin Spacey drama pulled in $6 million, a per screen average of $13,986. That was good enough for fourth. Still, that's a 77 percent drop in per screen average from last week's amazing $52,500. When The Blair Witch Project expanded from 31 screens to 1100+ (much bigger expansion than AB), it's per screen average only decreased 43 percent ($14,700 to $8,429). In other words, Blair Witch was special and the buzz on American Beauty isn't as big.

Stigmata fell to fifth with $4.8 million. That's another bad fall for the religious-thriller (47 percent). Meanwhile, Stir of Echoes continues to be semi-underappreciated. It collected $4.8 million, a 41 percent drop from last weekend. If this had had more screens to work with, it might have made some noise. As it is, it will likely fade from everyone's memory by next week.

This weekend's two other new openers finished seventh and eight respectively. Robin William's World War II drama, Jakob The Liar, finished eighth with $2.2 million dollars. Basically, people realized this was Life is Beautiful all over again, leading to the extremely low 1200 screen count and disappointing $1833 per screen average. The relatively obscure Mumford managed ninth, despite having no big stars and basically no publicity. Oh, 1452 screens, the "slight" comedy collected only $2 million dollars for a putrid 1377 screen average. In other words, this will be available to rent by next Monday.

Runaway Bride rounds out this week's top ten with $1.6 million dollars, which should conclude its two-month long run in the top ten.

Two other openers, Dog Park with Ganeane Gorrofolo and Simon Sez with, ugh, Dennis Rodman, barely even made blips; both opened on approximately 500 screens.

Next week, look for American Beauty to finally go wide, as in nationwide, with a projected 1400 screens and also keep an eye on George Clooney's new film, Three Kings, making its debut.

Looking for something to do?
Go outside to play & relax...

■ mighty

continued from page 6

personnel on hand. With songs coming off the band's 1998 ingenious debut At War with the Moon, the Hartford six-piece proved why their irresistible sound was so easily consumed by close to three-thousand spectators when they performed at UMass' Fill the Hill last spring. Experimenting with new material and reliming old songs like "Niagara" and "The Long Road," the band provided a refreshing harmony among the similarly-sounding mainstream bands.

Voted New Haven's #1 Pop Artist by the New Haven Advocate for five years in a row and recently highlighted in Jam Bands, Mighty Purple is well overdue for a major label break. Another band with a distinct sound, Mighty Purple's infectious rich electric guitar-driven folk-rock offers an airy tight sound that brings hoards of people to their unpredictable shows. The band ripped through songs like "Brother" and "Gratitude" off their label debut, a live album, "Para Mejor O Peor" (Spanish for "for better or worse"), which captures the essence of a Mighty Purple show.

The Verve Pipe played "Hero" off their newly released self-titled follow-up to Villains that featured the hit single "The Freshmen," which the band also performed. Public Enemy was originally scheduled to see action on the main stage, but was axed when they failed to show. Everclear then came out early, opening with music from their punk roots, while 311 closed the show.

Connie Imboden exhibits new work

Glenn McNatt
Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE – The dream was always the same. She was trapped below the surface of a vast, watery darkness, drowning. She could hear a steady pounding, like a drum or heartbeat, growing louder and nearer. She couldn't breathe, couldn't cry out, couldn't do anything except feel. And what she felt was fear.

Eventually, the dream of drowning stopped. Little Connie Imboden grew up in Ruxton, MD, went to art school and studied photography. Twenty years later, her work is admired and exhibited all over the world. Her first book of photographs, "Out of Darkness," was published in 1992. Her second book is "The Beauty of Darkness."

But her success wouldn't have happened, she never would have been called a poet with a camera, if she had not returned to the dark, brooding waters of her childhood nightmare. If she had not learned, painstakingly and with a signature clarity that some find exhilarating and others find unnerving, even monstrous, to see the beauty of darkness.

One day in the early 1980s she shot a reflection in a puddle. She decided she liked reflections and photographed a friend floating face up in a pond that reflected the trees along its bank. She photographed her again with light dancing off the surface of the water like St. Elmo's fire.

These pictures made people take notice. No one had seen anything like them before. Soon, Imboden began to experiment with different ways of photographing reflections and started working with her model in a shallow, plastic kiddie pool whose bottom she lined with black cloth.

One day she put a mirror on the bottom of the pool and photographed the model from above. The result was a haunting triple image, in which the model's face was reflected off both the mirror and the underside of the water's surface. Imboden called the picture "Mother and Child," because the image of the model's reflection reminded her of a fetus floating in the amniotic fluid. However, there was something disturbing about the picture, even though she didn't immediately know what it was.

Imboden eventually came to see water, both in her dreams and in her pictures, as a symbol for birth and transformation and as a metaphor for the different levels of human consciousness. Now she has spent nearly a third of her life exploring a single, sharply delineated subject, the naked body enveloped in water and its reflections.

COURTESY: RITA BADALAMENTI

Mighty Purple is the only band we haven't featured that played Friday's Big Day Off.

Sting, Cole surprise

All reviews appear courtesy of The Los Angeles Times

The millennium is a perilous topic for songwriters, because it's so easy to embarrass yourself with grandiose or overly-sentimental statements. So it's clear that Sting is in top form when he opens his latest album with a millennium-minded love song that doesn't come close to making you wince.

From its graceful melody to its delicate arrangement, the devotional "A Thousand Years" recalls the intimacy and individuality of the veteran singer-songwriter's most winning works. And things get even better with "Desert Rose," a tale of almost-mystical longing filled with exotic images and highlighted by Sting's hookup with Algerian singer Cheb Mami.

Over the next eight numbers, Sting explores various facets of romance in a wide range of musical styles that move between bossa nova ("Big Lie, Small World"), down-home country ("Fill Her Up"), and his trademark mix of jazz, pop-rock and world music.

Brand New Day (due in stores Tuesday) doesn't have the captivating focus of his best album The Soul Cages, his 1991 reflection on the death of his father. The wry "Fill Her Up" and the moody "Tomorrow We'll See" (another story of a prostitute's plight) should work well in concert, but their overtly dramatic structures undermine the innocence and introspection of the album. Mostly, however, Brand New Day, featuring such guest artists as Stevie Wonder and James Taylor, over flows with the imagination and ambition that have characterized Sting's solo career.

Robert Hilburn

The much anticipated English-language album (due Tuesday) from the biggest seller in the salsa field makes you think of a child who changes schools and finds a true, lifelong friend there.

In this case, Anthony's best friend is the lucrative field of mainstream corporate pop, a genre that fits him like a comfortable pair of shoes. So much so, indeed, that you wonder why he spent so many years releasing the superficial gloss salsa records that made him famous.

This new direction has nothing to do with the English-language home music he sang at the start of his career and even less to do with Latin music, a little timbales here and some congas there are hardly enough to qualify as salsa or Latin pop. A funky tune such as "I Need to Know" sounds more like something Prince could compose if he woke up in a Latin mood.

But it's the little details that compensate for the overall weakness of the material, most of which was co-written by Anthony and producer Cory Rooney. A lot of thought went into the arrangements, from the serene keyboards of "You Sang to Me" and the seductive female vocals of "No One" to the crystal-clear Spanish guitar of "How Could I." At the center of it all is Anthony's voice, pleasant and potent, tickled to death by its owner's new role as the thinking-woman's Ricky Martin.

After this perfectly engineered career move, this is one Latin singer who will probably never look back.

Ernesto Lechner

In a world where callous disregard for the lives and hopes of others is increasingly the norm, it's admirable that a successful pop artist sincerely wants to "make a difference," as Cole croons on "Be Somebody," the most fervent of her pleas for peace and understanding on this her third album. But good intentions don't necessarily make for good art, and the Berklee-trained musician's attempt to provide an uplifting collection for the millennium proves painfully pretentious.

The swirling melodrama in these nine self-produced tracks recalls the eccentric work of Kate Bush and Tori Amos. But while Cole's florid vocals display similarly impressive abilities, her compositions don't convey as unique a personality. She employs a variety of pop styles, from Bee Gees-esque disco-funk to spooky blues to hip-hop (complete with anemic rapping), but lofty arrangements obscure the songs' humanity.

Any compassionate person might rightly be distressed by drive-by, homelessness and brutal military coups. But Cole's vague hand-wringing is simply hysterical. Even such first-person character portraits as "La Ronsa" which laments poverty and its attendant problems through the cliched tale of a promiscuous girl, lack the imagination and perception that elevate such trials affecting protests as Steve Earle's "Ellis Unit One," which imparts an anti-death-penalty message via a death row guard.

Natalie Nichols

RESUME BUILDER!

ATTENTION ALL JUNIOR SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT MAJORS:

The Collegian
is now accepting applications for the following positions:

* Assistant Finance Manager
*Assistant Business Manager

Applicants should possess computer and inter-personal skills.

Deadline for Applications: Tuesday, Sept. 28, 1999

Come down and fill out an application in Room 113, Campus Center. Contact Christine Carroll @ 545-3500 or e-mail at hrcollegian@yahoo.com with inquires.

BRUISED BODY?

Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

Attention: STATE KAISER MEMBERS!

RELAX!

We've taken the worry out of choosing a health plan. In addition to our already extensive network of local providers like Franklin Medical Center, Health New England has added:

COOLEY DICKINSON HOSPITAL
Northampton

PERMANENTE MEDICAL GROUP
Amherst, Greenfield & Florence

And that's only the beginning! We anticipate adding even more providers in the coming months. Let's chat some more about the area's only local health plan and what we can do for you. Stop by our booth at these health fairs and talk with us in person:

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS (UMASS)
September 28 from 11 am - 4 pm

GREENFIELD COMMUNITY COLLEGE
October 5 from 11 am - 4 pm

If you are not a State employee or retiree, have your employer or broker call Health New England at

1-800-842-4464

and ask for the Sales Department.

Health New England
An affiliate of Harvard Pilgrim Health Care

■ Football

continued from page 12

Soon enough, as the gun for the second half sounded, the Rockets would have their time under the lights, tipping off 17 unanswered points in the second frame, as the UMass offense lay unresponsive to the adversity at hand.

With 3:27 remaining in the third quarter and down just 10-3, Toledo went for it on 4th and 8 at the UMass 28. Willie Hemmer intercepted a Dan Cole pass deep in his own territory that gave the Minutemen possession at their own 1 1/2, after Hemmer was hit for an unsportsmanlike conduct penalty in response to the key play. The Minutemen could not dig out of their own end zone, punting the ball away, giving the Rockets great field position at the UMass 39.

Seven plays later, Toledo found the end zone, lengthening its lead to 17-3 when Chester Taylor found room up the middle for an 18-yard touchdown run.

The UMass defense stood on the field for over ten minutes in the decisive third quarter, the Rocket defense allowing just one Minuteman first down.

"In the third quarter, we just could not get the ball out of their end of the field and sooner or later it was going to break," head coach Mark Whipple said. "We were holding it together and it broke.

"We had to make it a long field for them and this is two games in a row that we've had really, really poor field position on offense and haven't been able to get it out."

Grinding away with the ground game, Toledo finally put the game out of reach, ending UMass' hopes of an upset. Driving 75 yards on nine plays, the Rockets used up over four minutes on the block before Cole found Carl Ford from 11 yards out midway through the fourth quarter.

With the score 7-3, quarterback Todd Bankhead, who played with a fractured wrist on his non-throwing hand, had his pass intercepted by Dan Kavanaugh at the UMass 33-yard line on the team's opening drive of the second half. The Rockets drove to the UMass 5 before a holding penalty took Toledo out of the red zone. The defense capitalized, stalling the Rocket drive and forcing them into a 39-yard field goal by kicker Todd France.

Bankhead struggled for the second consecutive week, completing 13 of 30 passes for 97 yards and two interceptions. After getting sacked eight times against Villanova, Bankhead got the necessary protection but the quickness of the Toledo defense proved to be the difference.

Jason Lamar, a Butkus Award candidate and Toledo's leader in tackles coming in, teamed up with Kevin Rollins and redshirt freshman David Gardiner to wreak havoc on the UMass offense.

"[The linebackers are] athletic and they're fast and they're big, it's like having three Khari Samuels in there in a sense," Whipple said. "They made a lot of plays and it allowed them to play their secondary deeper."

Tailback Marcel Shipp ran for 111 yards on 29 carries, making it seem as though UMass would be able to run on the Rockets. Shipp gained 84 yards in the first half, but the Rocket defense buckled down, allowing him just 27 yards after intermission.

"Marcel stepped his game up and he ran hard, but you don't see him get knocked back very often and tonight he got knocked back on a few. And their quickness, we just flat out missed them on our blocking scheme."

"I don't think we played good as a team, offensively anyway," Shipp said. "We just got to get it together come next week and build on this game."

The Minutemen return home to take on 3-0 Holstra this Saturday at McGuirk Alumni Stadium. The Flying Dutchmen will be looking to exact revenge a year after the Minutemen traveled to Hempstead and came out with a come-from-behind 40-33 victory.

"We got our butts kicked and that can happen when you play up. Only time will tell whether we're better," Whipple said. "We just got to take it and look at it and make corrections and get ready for Hofstra."

The step up to Division I-A was the first time for the Minutemen since losing 44-17 at Ball State in 1988.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Best feet forward

Fred Kinateder and the rest of the men's soccer team wrangled with the Rams of Rhode Island on Saturday.

NHL looks to bolster interest through rules

BOSTON- As the post-Gretzky era begins for the NHL Friday, the league will be searching for ways to spark interest.

Commissioner Gary Bettman had the fans in mind when he pushed for rule changes this summer. Bettman told owners and general managers that fans were receptive to change, so he lobbied hard.

The results:

Open-ice overtime: When a regular-season game ends in a tie, each team will be awarded one point. What follows could be the most entertaining highlights of the season. The teams will engage in a five-minute, four-on-four overtime. The winner will earn another point.

This system was tested in the American Hockey League, and feedback was positive. The setup is designed to give the most talented teams an opportunity to earn an extra point.

It certainly doesn't favor teams with the deepest rosters-think of the Mighty Ducks, who could leave Paul Kariya and Teemu Selanne on the ice for all five minutes. With so much skating room, they will always be threats.

Kill your TV: Rather than using video replays to decide if a player had a skate in a crease while a goal was scored, on-ice officials will make the call. Last year, 289 goals required video replay and 137 were disallowed. That's a lot of waiting around for players and fans. Under a new crease rule, goals will be disallowed if the goaltender's ability to move within the crease is impaired by an offensive player. Under the old rule- designed to protect the goaltender- a goal could be disallowed if a player was in any part of the crease.

Invasion of the refs: The league will continue to increase the number of referees by adding more two-referee games.

Last year, each team played 20 games with two referees. This year, each team will play 50 games with two refs. With another set of eyes, on-ice officials will have an easier time making judgment calls, reducing the need for video replays.

While attending GM meetings in Toronto, Bettman bristled at the suggestion teams are colluding to cut salaries. The fact that Dmitri Khristich and Joe Juneau are looking for work while Bill Guerin, Ed Jovanovski, Keith Primeau and Byron Dafoe are holding out is, according to Bettman, a coincidence.

Sosa focussed despite media storm

By Joe Gergen
Washington Post

CHICAGO- Twice upon a time ...

That would be the only proper introduction if the story of Sammy Sosa were a fable. Certainly, the details of his rise from poverty in the Dominican Republic, to an exalted place in the annals of American baseball strain the bounds of credibility. As an elite performer, his second act has been, in many ways, more satisfying than his first.

Billy Loes, a Brooklyn Dodgers pitcher of superior skills but modest goals, decided it would be a mistake to win 20 games because people would expect it every year. Sosa, in the company of Mark McGwire, raised the bar for hitting home runs to dizzying heights a year ago, then had the temerity to repeat himself in 1999. McGwire acknowledged Sosa's feat of amassing 60 home runs in consecutive seasons as "awesome," even as he followed his lead.

What differentiated this season from the last was the fact that Sosa was the man out front. The perception in 1998 was that he was McGwire's happy-go-lucky sidekick. He received some attention and a lot of good lines but also second billing in the Great Home Run Race.

He was Chester to McGwire's Marshall Dillon, Ed McMahon to McGwire's Johnny Carson, Bernie Lincicome, the Chicago Tribune columnist, likened Sosa's role to that of Buzz Aldrin peering out the window of lunar module as Neil Armstrong descended to the surface. In 1999, however, Sosa took the first steps and that made all the difference in the world.

"My main concern (about 60) was to be the first," said Sosa, ever mindful of McGwire. "I'm not keeping it to myself."

The man succeeded, despite carrying the burden of expectations, and despite playing for a team that is challenging for the worst record in baseball as the season enters the final week. His story remains so compelling and his personality so captivating that the Chicago Cubs are expected to lead both leagues in road attendance after the concluding series in St. Louis next weekend. They already have set a club record for home attendance.

Sosa is no less than Mr. Beisbol, not only to residents of Latin America and to those who crowd the right-field bleachers at Wrigley Field, but to countless millions around the world. Among the endorsements that virtually double his $9 million salary with the Cubs are two viewed only in Japan.

He has gone from a youngster whose inability to converse in English led him to eat regularly at McDonald's, to a smooth spokesman for the fast-food chain. He has a cereal in his name, and next year he will have his own restaurant. He has a contract with Telemundo, the Spanish-language network, and his promotional spots on behalf of tourism in his homeland are shown during Cubs' telecasts on WGN.

Whereas McGwire retreated from the spotlight after his 70-home run binge in 1998, Sosa embraced the status of ambassador. He toured the Dominican after it was struck by Hurricane Georges and raised money for victims of the disaster. He threw out the ceremonial first pitch of the first game of the World Series in New York, which honored him with a parade. He earned MVP honors for a major-league team that toured Japan. He joined President Clinton at the White House for the lighting of the national Christmas tree, and returned to Washington a month later as a guest at the State of the Union Address. He was everywhere, leading skeptics to conclude that Sosa was headed for a fall this season.

"The thing that was never talked about is the way he hits in the winter," said Jim Riggleman, the Cubs' embattled manager. "When you have long-term goals as well as short-term goals, you never let up. He's not trying to have a good year, but a good career."

Sosa said he was aware of the nagging doubts as he began preparations for a new season at home in Santo Domingo. "I have a gym in my house," he said recently. "I might be in the gym at 1 a.m., 2 a.m. No one sees that, only myself. There were a lot of rumors, that I was going to be tired, that I was going to be out of shape. But I work hard."

It has paid off with a season that compares with 1998 when he slugged 66 home runs, the second-highest total ever, drove in 158 runs and was almost a unanimous choice for National League MVP. One major difference is that the Cubs were contending for a playoff berth in 1998 and motivation was as apparent as the standings.

"He had the team to play for last year," said Jim Lefebvre, the interim manager of the Milwaukee Brewers against whom Sosa hit home runs 60 and 61 a week ago. "When you're in the cellar, on the bottom, it's hard to do. But he continues to do his thing."

The Cubs' history of failure is unparalleled in the National League.

Vendors continue to sell t-shirts celebrating the franchise's last World Series victory, in 1908. One of the more popular items at the team gift shop is a garment that proclaims: "Cubs 2000: The Next Millenium is Ours." Conceded Mark Grace, the Cubs' outstanding first baseman, recently.

"We've had a bad century."

COME WRITE FOR SPORTS !

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Vegetarian Potato Skins 7.99 4.00
Sweet Potato Fries 5.99 3.00
Shrimp Tempura 6.99 3.50
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

Bring it.

Where it matters most.

As one of the world's leading diversified technology companies, we're breaking new ground in everything from defense and commercial electronics, to aviation, to engineering and construction. As a Raytheon employee, you'll contribute to the development of exciting, revolutionary technology designed to make life better, easier, and safer throughout the world. Such as our STARS air traffic control system. And our award-winning NightSight™ technology.

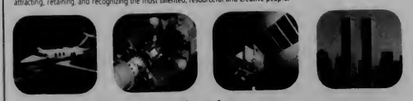
But it all starts with you. Your creativity. Your knowledge. And enthusiasm about the future. In return, we offer exceptional training and professional development opportunities. A supportive, down-to-earth work environment. And incredible benefits including flexible schedules designed to respect your quality of life.



So you can still show off all those great qualities of yours outside of work, too.

We have a lot to tell you about Raytheon and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair, please e-mail your resume to: resume@rayjobs.com (ASCII text only; no attachments), or mail to: Raytheon Company, Attn: National Staffing Data Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266. U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer

Opportunities are available for exceptional students with the following majors:

- Aeronautical Engineering
- Chemical Engineering
- Civil Engineering and Construction Management
- Computer Engineering
- Computer Science
- Electrical Engineering
- Finance/Accounting
- Human Resources
- Industrial and Labor Relations
- Management
- Marketing/Communications
- Math
- Mechanical Engineering
- Physics

Check out our Website at www.rayjobs.com/campus for further information including a calendar of recruiting events. At Raytheon, we strive to be the employer of choice for a diverse workforce by attracting, retaining, and recognizing the most talented, resourceful and creative people.

Bringing technology to the edge

Raytheon

安城中國餃店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
• MANDARIN & SZECHUAN CUISINE
• HOME STYLE COOKING
• FRESH ORGANIC GROWN VEGETABLES FROM OUR OWN FARM
• NATURAL GROWN SANDPEBERRY JUICE
• EAT IN OR TAKE OUT
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
253-7835 = 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

UMass volleyball stymied by A-10 rival Rhode Island

By Seth Szilagyi & James Piehl
Collegian Staff

Once again, offensive woes for the Massachusetts volleyball team resulted in a loss, as the Minutewomen were not able to slay Atlantic-10 giant Rhode Island in Kingston this weekend.

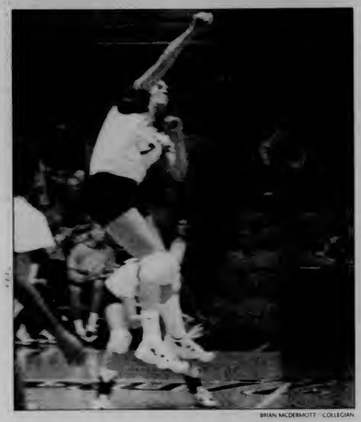
With the loss, UMass dropped their record down to 5-6 on the season and 1-2 in the conference, while Rhode Island upped their record to 7-3 overall with an impressive 3-0 conference record.

The Minutewomen struggled in the first match, smacking an inefficient .196, with the Rams striking .313 in the 15-12 squeaker that downed UMass. In game two, UM banged out a promising .260 while URI's offense sputtered, hitting a weary .116. Massachusetts closed out the game, taking the score to 20-18 before putting it away.

Game three saw the Maroon and White offense slide to a .208, but it was enough for the girls to capture a 15-11 victory amidst the Rams' .120 hitting percentage.

UMass looked to put it away in the fourth game of the match, but URI proved to be too much, winning with an identical score from the first game, 15-12. UM's offensive hitting percentage increased from the third game to .244, but Rhode Island more than doubled their third game hitting percentage to a .292.

The Rams caught fire in the fifth and deciding game, smashing a dominating .538 with no errors as they torched the Minutewomen, 15-3. UMass hit a sad -.585 and were held to zero kills on a meager twelve attacks, with seven errors.



Senior Jill Meyers was the spark for the Minutewomen, as she tallied 26 kills and 13 digs, with a .383 hitting percentage in the match. With her performance, Meyers grabbed her sixth double double of the season. Junior Rebecca Hasson made herself a factor in the 3-2 decision, registering 17 kills and tying her career high of 8 blocks. Sophomore Heather Holtsberg led the team in assists with 45, as she split time at setter with junior teammate Jennifer Drennan, who put in 25 assists of her own.

Outside hitting sophomores, Janeen Demarte and Lymarie Llovet both turned in disappointing performances hitting a combined 19 kills on a whopping 67 attacks. Demarte had 5 errors along with a .188 hitting percentage, while Llovet amassed a team-high of 9 errors and swatted a paltry .029 on the evening.

Co-captain Kari Hogancamp put forth another well-rounded performance at outside hitter, posting 17 kills and 25 digs. Hogancamp is leading the conference in digs with an impressive 5.75 per game and is averaging 4.97 overall.

With the 17 kills Hogancamp jumped to fourth place on the school's all-time kills list, hurdling former standout Giza Rivera. Hogancamp now stands at 1,037, boating on Rivera's old record of 1,042. With the double-double over the weekend, Hogancamp captured her fifth straight, and eighth of the season.

UMass is currently 1-4 on the road, their only win coming at Fairfield last week. They will be returning to the Cage against Harvard University on Tuesday the 28th, where their record standing at 4-2. They will be looking to improve their record back up to .500, during their short home stand, before heading back out on the road visiting conference foes Fordham on October 1st and Duquesne on October 2nd.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

Senior Jill Myers notched her sixth double-double of the season on Saturday against Rhode Island.

■ Toledo

continued from page 12

do with Toledo, they were bigger and faster up front and they were pushing the pocket."

Much of the reasoning for the poor passing can be accredited to the two defenses. The Rockets intercepted two Bankhead attempts, while UMass forced four total turnovers – two in the air. Massachusetts registered 10 tackles in the opposing backfield, while Toledo benefited from 12. "What (the UMass) defense does, is it can cause problems because they bring people from all over the place," Pinkel said.

"Like Coach Pinkel said, they bring a lot of people to the quarterback and put a lot of pressure on the quarterback, so he doesn't have much time to look down the field," said freshman Rocket wideout Carl Ford, who grabbed the only touchdown pass of the day. "We were open and we had our guys beat, but you can't do much about that if they're bringing so many people."

Still, the Toledo quarterback combo of Cole and backup Tavares-Bolden, who sees respectable time for a number two, put together a team average of 128.5 yards a game over the first two weeks, and couldn't manage more than 65 against UMass.

Bankhead, who already holds the school record for career touchdown passes after less than a season and a half of play, could only rack up 97 yards passing Saturday.

In a nutshell, the Rockets' halftime fireworks display in recognition of area high school bands was almost the only thing that went successfully into the air.

■ Soccer

continued from page 12

"The UConn game [Friday] was a confidence builder for us. We know that we can play with anybody now," Kurowski said. "Today was a good way to start the A-10 season, and now we've got to carry it through."

The one-goal final wasn't truly indicative of the pace of the game. UMass dominated in pretty much all aspects of the contest before the Rams scored twice in the final 15 minutes to make it interesting.

UMass struck first on a goal by Kurowski late in the first half. After entering the game on 20 seconds earlier, the Sutton product found a deflected shot carom right onto her foot before firing it past URI keeper Mary Hunter.

The Minutewomen then padded their lead to two goals just before the intermission on another Kurowski goal. Anna Morozuk found Kurowski in the box and deposited her second goal of the game home. The tally was also Kurowski's eighth of the young season.

"I just couldn't wait to go in, and then I ended up in the right place at the right time," she said. "I was just trying to capitalize on those chances."

Added Rudy: "Taco [Morozuk] did a nice job for us. That goal was the key one, getting it right before the half."

As Rudy continued to wear down the Rams by substituting fresh bodies throughout the second half, Green put the game away for all intents and purposes eight minutes into the stanza. Senior captain Robin Smith lobbed a ball into the box and Green ran it down, finally tipping it over Hunter for a three-goal cushion.

The Rams would finally find the scoreboard on goals by Shannon Kittleson and Heather Kasparek, but it turned out to be too little, too late.

UMass will now hit the road this weekend for two A-10 showdowns. The Minutewomen will travel to Philadelphia to face Temple and St. Joseph's on Friday and Sunday.

MY NOSE IS BURNT. THE DAILY COLLEGIAN - NUTHIN' BUT RAW...

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
✔ Complete Bartending Course
✔ Near Campus
✔ For a Fraction of the Cost of other Schools
✔ National Certification Available
✔ Hands on Pouring Labs
✔ Tips to get a Fun, High Paying Job
Free Info Session
Wednesday, October 6th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffries Inn, Amherst
Act Now, Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

Limp Bizkit, DMX, Fl[illegible]
Staind, Crystal Mi[illegible]
Worcester 9/28
Hartford 10/1

M&M's are the spokes people for the millenium..
Are they people though?
-find out at the Collegian

5 Barbers $9
Off Campus--Next to Newbury Comics
Amherst Barbers Unisex Hair Styling
40 Main Street, Amherst, MA
253-1722

brain earn money
for taking notes in your class also seeking marketing reps
apply online:
www.versity.com
versity.com
Study Smarter

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Advertise in the Collegian!

Hey! Need a Job!?
Why not be a bartender?
• Only professional school in Western MA
• Hands-on training in real bar/club setting
• National certification in alcohol awareness
• Lifetime refresher • ID Card • Resume
• Special UMass student discount
• Conveniently located in West Springfield
Call TODAY! (413) 747-9888

Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pasta Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 585-4756

For Fast Eary Delivery Call 256-4110
La Cucina di PINOCCHIO of Amherst
#1 Delivery in Town
30 Boltwood
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL SPECIALS!!
(MONDAY – THURSDAY SPECIAL)
Get 10 Free wings with the purchase of a large cheese pizza only $8.25
Any 2 Calzones $8.40
Delivery only
Must Mention Ad When Ordering
Offer Expires 12/31/99
Monday - Thursday 11:00 - 2:00 am
Friday + Saturday 11:00 - 3:00 am
Sunday 11:00 - 1:00 am

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Small 3 Room Apartment good location near Rte 91. $435 including utilities. Holyoke 538-7943

AUTO FOR SALE

SAAB 900 for sale 1991. 135k miles. Good condition. $4500 586-1688

'86 VW Vanagon 4-speed excellent condition. Please call Teresa at 256-0953

VW Jetta 87 5 Spd. GLI, grey, high milage runs good $2000 call 256-6235 evenings.

CHILDCARE

MUST LOVE BABIES. References needed. Tuesday and Thursday - 12:30 to 3:00. Call Michelle at 256-8632

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

FREE BABY BOOM BOX + EARN $1200! Fundraiser for student groups & organizations. Earn up to $4 per MasterCard app. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box 1-800-932-0528 ext. 119 or ext. 125 www.ocmconcepts.com

Earn $500 Weekly. Distriubuting phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Personal Care Attendant for a women in Amherst 8-10 hours/week Saturday or Sunday plus 1-2 weekdays. Car needed Call Helen 545-1908 or 253-9462

EMPLOYMENT

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evennigs, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Mullins Center Hiring for post event cleanup apply in person. 2nd floor Mullins Center

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Evenings. $9.50 per hr. Call 546-0666

Scera is now hiring staff. $6hour work-study preferred. To apply, submit resume to Brenda Fitzpatrick, 420 Student Union. Deadline Sept 29. Fml: call 5-5411

FOR SALE

Rao's Coffee is hiring minimum 20 hrs/wk food service experience preferred apply in person

Bussiness Minded student wanted. 10-15 hrs/wk for light bookkeeping and accounting. Good math skills and computer skills required. Call Scott (413) 537-0967

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

PCA Wanted. Amherst Center. Short shifts. Female applicants only $9.50/hr. Call 256-8824

EMPLOYMENT

Get the #%$! out of the water Earth Activists @ Clean Water Action get the best experience, great pay, training and benefits working to stop pollution & save the planet. $7.30 - $9.00/hr. Eve/wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

allstudents.com

Earn $400 per class each semester by simply Taking Notes

Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses

ACCTG 221	MGT 301
ANTH 100	NUTR 130
BIOL 100	PHIL 100
CHEM 110	PHYSC 131
CHEM 111	PHYSC 132
CMPSCI 105	POLSCI 101
ECON 103	PSYCH 100
ECON 104	SOCIOL 103
GEO 101	SOCIOL 106
HIST 100	SOM 210
HIST 101	STATIS 111
LEGAL 250	STATIS 140
LEGAL 252	STATIS 141
MKTG 301	THEATR 100
MGT 260	SPORST 202

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors: Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Relief Staff for apartment program serving adults with mental illness living in the community. Enthusiasm, patience & attention to detail a must. Get training & experience needed to work in human service field. Wages $7.50/hr. Send resume & cover letter to: Service Net att. David Mastroianni 129 King St. Northampton, MA 01060

EMPLOYMENT

Alpine Commons

[illegible]-room, 2 bath, [illegible] kitchen. Private balconies. All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to Umass.

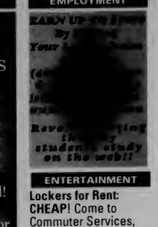
Move-in Special!

Call 256-0741 for info

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS Pays 60 to 120 per Shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

Teachers, Part Time

We are looking for certified teachers to join our team at Sylvan Learning Center in Hadley. Hourly positions are available for talented, motivated, child centered educators who believe in positive reinforcement and mastery learning. Must be comfortable working with students of all ages. Some of our programs include: reading, math, study skills and SAT prep. After school, evening and weekend hours available. Hourly rate $8-$10 per hour, depending on experience. Sylvan is recognized as the nation's leader in supplemental education, and our proven approach to learning helps thousands of students to catch up, keep up and get ahead in school.



Please stop in and pick up an application or forward you resume to

Sylvan Learning Center
104 Russell Street - Route 9
Hadley, MA 01035

Attn: Christina Buehrle, Center Director

Equal Opportunity Employer

EMPLOYMENT

ENTERTAINMENT

Lockers for Rent: CHEAP! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

WATERBED double, individual tubes, like new. $1500.00 or B/O

Stick it in your ear! Free stud earrings with piercing at Silverscape Designs. Amherst, 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-3324 Northampton, 1 King Street 584-3324

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On UMass bus route Call 256-0364

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

WANTED

Singer Forming "Music to Mosh to " Band do you kick *ss? Call Scott for more info 546-1576

RESUMES

Resume Problems? We can solve them! Aaron 253-6783

SERVICES

Know your rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Aerial Photos of UMass Campus now available! On the web. www.airphoto collegeca

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

Kai Chi Chinese Restaurant Delivering to campus Mon - Thurs, 4:30pm - 11:00pm; Fri-Sat, noon-midnight; and Sun, noon-11:00pm. Call 586-2774

TRAVEL

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

STOP

Are you still looking for that opportunity of a life time?

Don't let it pass you by!

Check out The Collegian Classifieds and see what is out there!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, SEPT. 27

Meeting – The UMass French Club will be having its first meeting at 8 p.m. at the Black Sheep Cafe in downtown Amherst. Coffee and beverages will be provided. All are invited. Contact Lisa at 546-7019 for more information.

Reading – Writer Dean Albarelli will read from his work in the Babbott Room of the Octagon at Amherst College. The reading will begin at 8 p.m.

TUESDAY, SEPT. 28

Coffee House – There will be a coffee house with an open mic from 8-9:30 p.m. in the Hillel House. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting – The Ballroom Dance Club will meet from 6:45-8 p.m. in room 101 of Totman. Call 549-4070 for more information.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SEND THE COLLEGIAN YOUR FYI ANNOUCEMENTS...
LET THE CAMPUS COMMUNITY KNOW WHAT'S HAPPENING!!!

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — SEPTEMBER 27, 1999

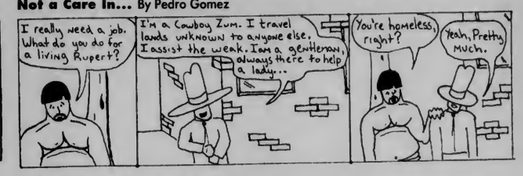
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ☆		Going Places "New York City"		Red Files ☆		Hostage (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)		Warrior Report ☆
WFSB	3	News ☆	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man ☆	Raymond	Becker ☆	Family Law "Damages" ☆		News ☆	Late Show ☆
WBZ	4	News ☆	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man ☆	Raymond	Becker ☆	Family Law "Damages" ☆		News	Late Show ☆
WCVB	5	News ☆	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ☆	20/20 ☆		NFL Football: San Francisco 49ers at Arizona Cardinals. (In Stereo Live) ☆
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ☆	Nanny ☆	7th Heaven (In Stereo) ☆		Safe Harbor "Can't Touch That"	News ☆			Friends ☆	Nanny ☆
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy! ☆	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo) ☆		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ☆	Real TV ☆	Moesha (R) ☆	Parkers ☆	Grown Ups ☆	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra ☆	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo) ☆		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons ☆	Frasier ☆	Seinfeld ☆	Friends ☆	The Show	The Show	Ally McBeal "Love's Humors"				News ☆	Frasier ☆
WWLP	22	News ☆	NBC News	Wheel Fortune	Jeopardy! ☆	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo) ☆		News ☆	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ☆		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Red Files ☆		Hostage (In Stereo) (Part 1 of 3)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ☆
WGGB	40	News ☆	ABC News	Seinfeld ☆	Frasier ☆	20/20 ☆		NFL Football: San Francisco 49ers at Arizona Cardinals. (In Stereo Live) ☆
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ☆	Judge Judy ☆	Seinfeld ☆	Frasier ☆	Moesha (R) ☆	Parkers ☆	Grown Ups ☆	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager "Deadlock"		Blind Date	Ricki Lake ☆
WTBS	15	Rosanna ☆	Rosanna ☆	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	ee's "Dolores Claiborne" (1995, Suspense) ☆		Kathy Bates, Jennifer Jason Leigh.				"Perry Mason: Notorious Nun"
A&E	17	Simon & Simon "Second Sweet"		Law & Order "Rose" ☆		Biography: Tim Conway		L.A. Detectives (R) ☆		Pound ☆		Law & Order "Kids" ☆
CNN	29	Wordview ☆	Moneyline Newshour ☆		Crossfire ☆	World Today ☆		Larry King Live ☆		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline ☆
COM	26	Saturday Night Live ☆		Daily Show (R)	Stein a Money	ee "Weird Science" (1985, Comedy)		Anthony Michael Hall.		Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein a Money
DISC	69	Your New House		Wild Discovery: Wolves		America's Military Acad.		How Did Dinosaurs Fly?		Body Story: "Breaking Down"		America's Military Acad.
ESPN	63	(5:45) Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Jump Rope Championship		Cheerleading (R)		Baseball Tonight
LIFE	24	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Unsolved Mysteries (In Stereo)		Beyond Chance "Pilot" (R) ☆		"Silent Cradle" (1997) Lorraine Bracco, Margot Kidder.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	35	Globai Groove	Countdown	Beat Suite	Making-Video	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Head Trip	Real Rules	Making-Video	Say What K/ss	Undressed (R)
NICK	36	All That (R)	Caldog	Hey Arnold! ☆	Rugrats ☆	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons ☆	Taxi (In Stereo) ☆	M.T. Moore	Happy Days
SCIFI	64	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) ☆		Star Trek (In Stereo) ☆		Sliders "The Dream Masters" ☆		ee's/s "Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home" (1986, Science Fiction)				William Shatner...	"Star Trek IV"
TLC	39	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Cheating Death" (R)		Paramedics "Force Five"		Oklahoma Fury		Greatest Relief Organization		Paramedics "Force Five" (R)
TNT	65	Due South "Mop Rising" (R) ☆		ER "Double Bind" (In Stereo) ☆		Wrestling: WCW Monday Nitro (In Stereo Live) ☆				Wrestling ☆		a/s "Fistful Land" (1995)
USA	59	Xena: Warrior Princess (R) ☆		LAW "Tonia Recon" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger ☆		Wrestling ☆		Wrestling ☆		Gyst: "Buried" (R) (In Stereo) ☆
HBO	43	ee's "Heaven Can Wait" (1978, Fantasy) Warren Beatty. PG/ R				ee's "City of Angels" (1998, Romance) Nicolas Cage. PG-13/ R						ee's/s "Subway Stories" (1997)
MAX	45	ee's "The Newton Boys" (1998) Matthew McConaughey. PG-13/ R				ee's "Beverly Hills Cop" (1984) Eddie Murphy. R		ee's "Event Horizon" (1997) Laurence Fishburne. R				Erotic
SHOW	46	ee "A Home of Our Own" (1993, Drama) Kathy Bates. PG/ R				ee's "I Could Never Be Your Woman" (1994) Michelle Pfeiffer. PG/ R				ee's "Snake Eyes" (1998) Nicolas Cage. R		Hoop Life ☆

HSCN 2 Hearing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	16	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	17	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	18	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	19	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	20	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	33	Syndicast
8	UPN/20 Hartford	34	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	35	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	37	ESPN
11	Fox/61 Hartford	38	TV Land
12	PBS/24 Hartford	39	Univision
13	AOCH & HSCN	40	Comedy Central
14	International	41	Cartoon
15	UMass Academic TV	42	Much Music
16	WB/New Haven
17	HSCN Programming

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere



Penthouse Blues By Mike Braidman

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Not a Care In... By Pedro Gomez

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – It's a good day to let go and see where your instincts take you. Someone may try to hold you back, but your natural skills will see you through.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Something well done is worth doing again and again! There's no reason to move on to something else before you're ready.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may find yourself wishing you were in someone else's shoes as the day wears on, but an encounter after dark will make you forget all that.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – Someone may try to lay down the law for you today, but something you've recently experienced will have you yearning for a little danger.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – It's a good idea to relive something that has inspired you in the past. Don't forget all the good things that have been a part of who you are.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Take time today to figure certain things out before jumping into situations with complete abandon. Success right now depends on a combination of intellect and instinct.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You'll find yourself wishing you were in someone else's shoes before the day is out. If you play your cards right, you can enjoy a new success.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – The truth is the best thing for you at this time. Rely on it exclusively in times of doubt, and you'll come through with flying colors.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – You mustn't pretend to be something you're not today. Someone will discover that you're engaged in some kind of deception. Stick to the facts.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Once again you will enjoy the notion that life is a gift, and today you can prove that it's possible for anyone to play whatever hand is dealt.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Take care that you don't congratulate yourself for a job well done before it is truly complete. Don't assume the outcome will be favorable.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You'll spend a great deal of time trying to figure something out in your head today, but you must really try to judge it with your heart.

Quote of the Day

"Stop thinking and dance."

–Esmeralda Santiago, 'Almost A Woman'

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

My ex-girlfriend Sheila is hossling me about who owns this special gold edition Batman comic book.

She says it's hers. I think it's mine.

Really I don't care. I'd just like to totally end this thing with her.

I wish she'd go off and die somewhere. No, I don't mean that. But maybe she could develop a limp. No, no, I don't mean that either.

You know what would be nice? A very slight facial twitch.... something to remember me by.

ACROSS

1 Not quite closed
5 Montana's neighbor
10 Lickety-split
14 Created
15 Harshness
16 Where Japan is
17 Tel —
18 Ellagere item
20 Loathed
22 Large deer
23 Expire, as a membership
24 Wake up
26 Fetch
27 Choice
30 Cargo
34 Grooms' attendants
35 Actress West
36 Scratch
37 The lady
38 Greeted an officer
41 Malt beverage
42 Canvas cover
44 Short-lived fashion
45 Chicken — soup
47 Turned sharply
49 First-born
50 Above, to Keats
51 Seeded
53 Danish money unit
56 Comrade
57 Tiny
61 In a funny way
64 Writer Wiesel
65 — Ben Adhem
66 Bandleader Shaw
67 Al or Bill
68 Electric sign
69 Fix the clock
70 Gratuities

DOWN

1 Indian nurse
2 Starbucks' order
3 Mine entrance
4 Daydream
5 Annoy
6 Has supper
7 Nimble
8 Pawn
9 Fictional planet
10 Nut
11 PDQ
12 Incites a dog
13 Seize
19 Swiss abstract painter
21 Entrances
25 More risky
26 Leaflet
27 Deposes
28 "Bah!"
29 Neither here nor —
30 Chubby
31 Forest clearing
32 Corndors
33 Bird sound
35 Type of pie
39 Young boy
40 Washington power couple
43 Her or them
46 Leftover piece
48 Turn aside
51 Acting groups
52 Kukla's friend
53 Genghis —
54 Cartoonist Goldberg
55 Melville novel
58 Chaste
59 Jai —
60 Droopy
62 Descendants of Robert E.
63 Rower's need
63 Up to now

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

V	A	L	E		E	M	I	L	E		A	G	E	D
O	R	A	N		N	I	V	E	N		L	U	N	A
L	E	G	S		E	V	E	N	T		A	R	I	D
E	A	S	T	E	R		S	O	A	P	S	U	D	S
			O	A	G	E		I	S	K
F	R	A	N	T	I	C		A	L	I	A	S	E	S
I	O	N	S		E	O	N	S		G	N	A	I	L
R	U	G		S	N	I	P	E		H	A	I	R
		E	G	I	S		E	P	I	C		O	I	S	E
S	H	Y	N	E	S	S		G	L	A	B	E	R
		F	L	O			S	I	D	E
R	E	B	O	U	N	D		P	A	L	A	C	E
O	R	I	E	L		N	O	S	E	S		I	D	O	L
S	L	E	D		D	I	A	N	E		S	E	M	I
H	E	M	S		S	L	U	G	S		K	N	E	E

9-27-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry
Vegetarian Moussaka

DINNER
Sesame Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Mixed Bean Creole

Worcester

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry
Vegetarian Moussaka

DINNER
Sesame Chicken
Southern Stir Fried Steak
Mixed Bean Creole
Pasta Bean Casserole

Hampshire

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry

DINNER
Sesame Chicken
Southern Fried Steak
Mixed Bean Creole

Berkshire

LUNCH
Italian Sausage Grinder
Inson Stir Fry
Vegetarian Moussaka

DINNER
Sesame Chicken
Southern Stir Fried Steak
Mixed Bean Creole
Pasta Bean Casserole

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Vanessa 'Y2K' Walker
Photo Technitian	Barbara '1999' Bradbury
Copy Editor	Samantha 'Election' Poulten
Production Supervisor	John 'Millenium' Burt
Production Staff	Ben '12/31/99' Alomiel Teresa '2000' Rodrigues

Sports

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — September 27, 1999

Defense dandy, but UMass can't ground I-A Rockets

Minutemen hang in for three quarters at Toledo

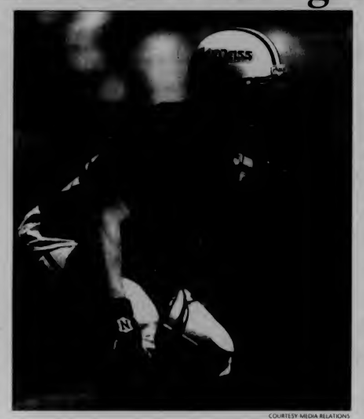
By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

TOLEDO, OH – This weekend the Massachusetts football team left on a jet plane and no one is absolutely sure when their defending champions will be back again, not even the Minutemen.

Toledo	24
UMass	3

Taking on the Division I-A Toledo Rockets on Saturday at the Glass Bowl, the Minuteman offense's ineffectiveness kept the defense on the field. Slowly the Rocket offense began to overpower the exhausted defense, eventually pulling away for a 24-3 victory in a non-conference battle.

The Minutemen played valiantly, battling like defending champions for three quarters before bowing to the Rockets. It was a tale of two defenses, the offenses combining for just 531 total yards. Only when the UMass defense began to tire did the game swap in favor of the Rockets.



As has been the case in the two games past, the defense was like a pesky mosquito, yielding ground but packing a vicious punch. It would give, but then take away, allowing just seven points in the first half despite five Toledo visits to UMass territory. The Rockets were forced into three first half turnovers and misfired on a 42-yard field goal.

"I was proud of the way our defense played throughout. They played hard and fought," head coach Mark Whipple said. "I don't think that our offense played very well and that really put our defense in a bind. They were us down a little bit at the end."

The gap between divisions was noticeable but hardly convincing. Toledo, winners of the Mid-American Conference West division the past two seasons, played with 20 more scholarship players, but were outplayed in the first half, playing sloppily before taking the lead in its final drive thanks to a UMass turnover on downs.

"We figured that we had to take some chances to make some big plays," Whipple said, "and we never could make a big play against them because of their speed and physicalness up front."

Turn to FOOTBALL, page 9

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

UM cornerback Willie Hemmer came up with a big third-quarter interception against Toledo to halt a Rocket scoring drive.

Offensive rhythm not in cards for either team

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

TOLEDO, OH – An old adage says that people who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones.

Perhaps that is why, while playing in The Glass Bowl in Toledo, neither the Massachusetts football team nor the hosting Rockets threw much of anything very effectively.

After one half of play, the competing starting quarterbacks, UMass' Todd Bankhead and Toledo's Dan Cole, had tallied only 34 and 30 yards, respectively, through the air.

When the final gun sounded in the 24-3 Rocket win, the two teams totaled 177 yards passing, with five different players registering attempts and four interceptions between them. Out of the 57 passes put up by the squads, only 24 of them reached their target, resulting in very one-dimensional offensive performances.

"In our passing game, we've got to protect better, we've got to throw better, we've got to run better routes and we've got to catch better," said Toledo coach Gary Pinkel. "I think I've covered everybody in the passing game."

"(Bankhead) didn't have a very good night, and a lot of that had to do with Toledo," UMass skipper Mark Whipple said. "Nothing seemed to be going on that end, (he) didn't make any big plays in the passing game."

He didn't play well. He played his worst game here since Rhode Island."

Against the Rams on November 7th of last season, Bankhead completed 21 of 34 passes for 210 yards, but his four interceptions tipped the scales against not a single touchdown. In Toledo, though, the Minuteman signal-caller was playing with a broken left wrist, suffered early in week two's loss to Villanova, 26-21.

According to Whipple, though, that is no excuse.

"I don't think (the injured wrist) had anything to do with it," Whipple said. "We didn't go to shotgun some, because of that, but he just didn't play well. He had the chance to make some plays, and when you're playing a team as good as Toledo, you're not going to get four or five chances to score touchdowns... (Tight end Sean) Higgins we had in the end zone, and he overthrew him... A lot of it had to

Turn to TOLEDO, page 9

Field hockey falls at UNC

Tarheels too fierce for Massachusetts

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

The billboard alongside Route 86 in Chapel Hill says it all:

"IF GOD ISN'T A TARHEEL FAN, WHY IS THE SKY BLUE AND WHITE?"

How can any visiting team venture onto North Carolina's hallowed ground without feeling at least a little intimidated by the legacies that have been written there? Better yet, how would the unranked Massachusetts field hockey team handle the task of venturing into hostile Francis E. Henry Stadium and challenging the No. 3 program in the nation?

The answer: Much better than expected. The Minutewomen showed courage, enthusiasm, and perseverance in a 4-1 loss to the 'Heels on Saturday.

"It's all about seeing where we stand," said UM co-captain Lucy Koch. "That's the mark of a good team. Doing it in practice is one thing, doing it against an opponent is another."

The Tarheels (7-1) were fresh off a rousing upset of previously undefeated Virginia, and seemed intently focused on bringing Coach Karen Shelton her 302nd win at the NC helm. UMass had opened the '99 campaign with a 2-3 homestand, downing Colgate and Boston College while showing tremendous fight in losses to ranked Maryland (No.4), Virginia (No.6), and James Madison (No.8).

Saturday's matchup provided a barometer for UM Coach Patty Shea, whereby she could measure her team's resilience against one of field hockey's hottest teams. The Tarheels brought an impressive four-game winning streak into the contest, having disposed of No. 7 Old Dominion, No. 11 Michigan State, and the unranked Temple Owls over the prior two weeks.

UMass showed little hesitation at the onset of the game, going hard at the Tarheels and forcing them to use the entire field in evading the Maroon and White. UNC immediately went to its most potent offensive weapon, junior forward Kristen McGann, in an effort to break the Minutewomen's web of defense and get some looks at goal. And once she found her rhythm, the Pennsylvania native left no question as to why she was named to the All-Atlantic Coast Conference team last season.

Less than three minutes into the game, McCann beat UM back Kerry Ann Jaggassar for positioning off to the right of the UMass goal, where she was able to get enough stick on teammate Abbey Woolley's shot to re-direct it in. It was McCann's fifth goal of this young season.

"Kristen has been our most consistent player all year," said UNC Coach Shelton. "I'm delighted to see her experiencing the success she is."

The Minutewomen weren't about to roll over to the Tarheels as they battled back and essentially prevented any kind of momentum by UNC. Neither team could capitalize on the other's miscues over the next 14 minutes, and the third-ranked 'Heels' couldn't help thinking about a possible David and Goliath situation.

The suspense wouldn't last, however, as UNC junior midfielder Holly Huff scored on a 'Heel put-back at the 7:31 mark. The St. Louis native had recently moved from the forward position to the midfield, making her goal and level of play Saturday all the more remarkable.

"I was really pleased with Holly Huff," said Shelton. "We put her in the midfield, and she hustled and scored a goal."

UMass again refused to lose its composure, using the two-goal deficit as a motivating force behind more aggressive defense. But the dynamic McCann could simply not be contained, as she crashed through a Maroon and White trap and wristed in her second goal with a mere 1:39 to play in the first half.

The Minutewomen would fight back valiantly in the second half, allowing a goal by Woolley before UM freshman Krysta Johnson (E. Setanket, NY) broke up the UNC shutout bid with a goal at the 8:28 mark. Johnson snapped up a rebound off the foot of UNC backup keeper Nicole Frey and buried it for UM's only score of the contest.

The Maroon and White return to action Wednesday, when they host Harvard at 3:30 pm at Richard F. Garber Field.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Junior back Patty Robinson added solid defense to UM's four-star effort against No. 3 UNC on Saturday.

Soccer loses war with Uconn

Kurowski breaks record in double-overtime thriller

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

When two of the most storied women's soccer programs in the nation took to the field on Friday afternoon at Totman Field, it would have been absurd to think that the contest wasn't going to be a hard-fought affair.

Not only did the Massachusetts and Connecticut contingents fight tooth and nail down to the game-winning goal, but this affair turned out to be just another classic chapter in the already-rich rivalry between the border rivals.

In the end, however, it was the visiting Huskies who were able to pack the knockout punch. Sophomore Lacey Toups tapped home a shot past Angie Napoli with 7:17 remaining in double-overtime to propel UConn to a 4-3 double-overtime victory over the Minutewomen.

"I'm very proud of them. We gave up two weeks of training and about three games fitness wise, and all of our people came out and contributed in a positive way," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "I'm very impressed with the way that we overcame not playing in two weeks."

UMass had trailed by deficits of 2-1 and 3-2 in the second half, but senior forward Emma Kurowski netted the equalizer on both occasions to send the game to the extra-session. With those two goals, Kurowski also became the new career-scoring leader for the Minutewomen, breaking the mark of 101 points that was held by Rebecca Myers.

"It was a back and forth game. Both teams had chances to win," Kurowski said. "But I wasn't thinking about the record, I score goals to help the team win, not to break records."

After the two teams traded goals in the first half, UConn grabbed a 2-1 lead early in the second stanza on a tally by All-American forward Mary-Frances Monroe. However, no sooner had the Huskies bench started to quiet down then the UMass bench was in an uproar, as Brooke Bartlett served a ball into the box that Kurowski knocked in to knot the game at 2-2.

UConn freshman defender Leena Kovanen then appeared to score the game-winner off a corner kick with just over 11 minutes to play, but the Minutewomen struck right back again.

About a minute and a half later, junior forward Kara Green knocked a corner kick into the box which landed right on the head of Kurowski, who deposited the ball into the back of the net to create a 3-3 deadlock.

That goal set the stage for overtime, a session that saw both teams have chances to win. Late in the first overtime UMass had a corner kick and a free kick, but failed to convert on both opportunities.

The Huskies would then get the game-winning goal off a give-away in the midfield. UConn freshman Naima Montacer worked her way along the right flank before booting a shot on net. Napoli tried to tip the ball over the crossbar, but instead it hit the bar and ricocheted right to Toups, who tucked the ball into the goal.

"That [goal] was tough because Angie had a nice game," Rudy said. "It just seems that whenever we lose to UConn, it's because of a bizarre goal."

UMass got on the scoreboard first, midway through the first half on a goal by Green. The Poughkeepsie, NY native received a perfect pass from Bartlett and walked in all alone against UConn keeper Shanna Caldwell. Green buried the left-footed shot and gave her squad a 1-0 lead. UConn then evened the game just before halftime when sophomore defender Alexa Borrisjuk ripped a 35-yard blast past Napoli to make it 1-1.

The visitors would then take one-goal leads on two different occasions in the second half, but in each instance the Minutewomen fought back.

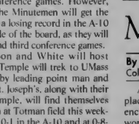
"One thing about UMass is that we don't quit. Even last year when we were down 4-1 against them we played hard until the end," Rudy said. "Unfortunately they got a goal before the end of the half, then went ahead, but we powered back."

The Minutewomen then opened the Atlantic 10 portion of their schedule against Rhode Island on Sunday. For a complete wrap-up of that game, see the related story.

JORMA KANSANEN / SPECIAL TO THE COLLEGIAN

Sophomore midfielder Brooke Bartlett tallied two assists in UMass' thrilling 4-3 double-overtime defeat at the hands of UConn.

Men's soccer sunk by Rams, 4-0



By Matt Crocker
Collegian Correspondent

It is a documented nautical fact that many vessels have encountered difficulty sailing across the Atlantic, and the H.M.S. Massachusetts men's soccer team is no exception.

Although only at the beginning of their Atlantic 10 journey to the end of season tournament, the Minutemen encountered a large iceberg in the form of the University of Rhode Island this weekend.

UMass' hopes of a successful Atlantic 10 opener, along with their two-game winning streak, sunk after being struck by a powerful Rams offense as they fell to U.R.I in a 4-0 shutout.

Attacking time and time again, U.R.I. peppered the UMass goalkeepers with shots, tallying twenty-two attempts over the course of the two halves. The University of Rhode Island drove two goals into the back of the UMass net in the first half, only to return from the halftime break and get themselves on the scoreboard two more times. The Maroon and White were not able to gather the same offensive momentum, only testing the Ram's goalkeepers four times during the entire match.

Todd Fowler

The Minutemen goalkeepers who fell victim to the charging Ram offense this weekend were senior captain Todd Fowler and sophomore Byran O'Quinn.

Fowler, who last weekend received the Florence Savings Bank "Classic Save of the Tournament" in the UMass Men's Soccer Classic, posted eight saves in the losing effort for the University of Massachusetts.

UMass now falls to 5-4 on the season and stands at 0-1 with respect to their conference games. However, this upcoming weekend the Minutemen will get the opportunity to move from a losing record in the A-10 all the way to the other side of the board, as they will compete in their second and third conference games.

On Friday the Maroon and White will host Temple at Totman Field. Temple will trek to UMass with a 3-3-1 record, led by leading point man and goal scorer Kevin Kelly. St. Joseph's, along with their most recent opponent Temple, will find themselves sitting on the visitor bench at Totman field this weekend. St. Joseph's stands at 0-1 in the A-10 and at 0-8-1 on the season after losing to Temple

This weekend will hopefully be a chance for the University of Massachusetts to rebound from their defeat at the hands of U.R.I., and attempt to climb to the top of the long ladder in the A-10.

Minutewomen open A-10 action with win

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

After an uncharacteristic fourth place finish in the Atlantic 10 conference last season, the Massachusetts women's soccer team had something to prove yesterday afternoon at Totman Field.

With an up-and-coming Rhode Island squad visiting Amherst, the Minutewomen weren't about to let the new kid on the block leave their home field with a win.

The end result was a 3-2 win over the Rams that helped UMass improve to 3-2-1 on the season, 1-0 in the A-10. URI drops to 6-3, 0-1 with the loss.

"They're a top quality team, one of the best in the A-10," said Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy of the Rams. "They are a much-improved team who is going to be one of the five, six, or seven teams who are going to be pushing for one of the four [A-10 tournament] spots."

Senior forward Emma Kurowski scored two goals for the second consecutive game to lead the offensive attack for UMass. Kara Green also added a goal for UMass, her second in as many games.

Turn to SOCCER, page 9

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

Volume CVB Issue XIX — September 28, 1999

Service at Smith

Haafke remembered in gathering

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

NORTHAMPTON – A weekend memorial service at Smith College remembered Tina Haafke, 24, of Hamburg Germany who died over the weekend in a car accident.

According to Smith College's Chief of Public Affairs Ann Shanahan, there was a service in the college's chapel on Saturday remembering Haafke.

"It was a gathering of students and faculty. There were prayers and memories," Shanahan said. "About 100 people showed up, some, including the Smith College President, friends and two chaplains, offering their remembrances of Haafke."

Haafke and Wolter were German exchange students. Haafke was enrolled in the Smith's Diploma in the American Studies Program. She was born in 1975 in Kiel, Germany and is the daughter of Elke and Hartmut Haafke. Both parents flew into the United States on Saturday.

Haafke, and a companion, Frauke "Johanna" Wolter, were walking to a pool Friday morning when a car driven by Mary McAleer struck them in a crosswalk at Elm Street and Henshaw Avenue in Northampton.

Slowed to 25 miles per hour in a 35 mph zone, McAleer was blinded by the rising sun and hit the two exhange students. Police have agreed that visibility was a factor in the accident and McAleer, 38 and of Laurel Park, has not been cited in the accident.

"The accident is still under investigation," Michael Wall, a Captain in the Northampton Police Department, said. "Our department will consult with the district attorneys office about what might be filed."

Highway Safety Officer Robert Powers, a member of the NPD, is continuing his investigation of the accident, and results are expected by the end of the week.

Wolter is recovering at The Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton after surgery on her broken right leg.

Shanahan expects Wolter to return to Smith by the end of the week. Any further plans for remembering Haafke are currently unclear.

We are going to wait to see what

Fairs promote global outreach

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

Five College students interested in bringing an international perspective to their academic research explored their opportunities at Study Abroad Fairs, held at both Amherst and Mount Holyoke Colleges yesterday.

Representatives from over 30 international programs encouraged students to attend universities in more than 60 foreign nations. A third Study Abroad Fair, open to all Five College students and featuring most of the same programs, will be held tomorrow at Smith College's Davis Ballroom from 12:00 to 3:00.

"These days, everyone is talking about living in a global economy," said Joanne Picard, associate dean of international affairs at Mount Holyoke College, and an organizer of Mount Holyoke's fair. "It's important for students to see how other countries view the world, and how they view the United States. By studying abroad, students are able to understand how countries interact with one another, and they better understand their own identities as Americans.

"For students who are learning a second language, or are focusing on area studies, such as Latin American studies, there really isn't any substitute for being that part of the world," she added.

While most students attending showed interest in typical destinations such as the United Kingdom, Spain, and France, others opted for more exotic locations ranging from Bolivia to Hong Kong. Nations in six continents were represented, each with their own individual appeal.

Turn to GLOBAL page 3

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

Riding high

Paul Sheahan, a senior Microbiology and Chemistry major, skateboards on campus yesterday.

U-Va. Board Seeks to End Using Race in Admissions

By Jay Mathews and Kenneth J. Cooper
Washington Post

Members of the University of Virginia's governing board say the school needs to stop using race as a factor in student admissions, a warning that has drawn criticism from some U-Va. faculty and educators at other colleges.

The Board of Visitors has reached a consensus that the school's affirmative-action program must be changed in light of recent federal court rulings, said Terence P. Ross, a board member who heads a special committee that has been studying the U-Va. Policy since January. "The problem is we have used what some people describe as racial preferences," said Ross, a lawyer.

Although the board has not voted on the issue, the trustees have told the admissions office that the school's policy probably could not survive a legal challenge. The trustees also have urged university officials to take steps to attract more low-income applicants of all races.

Ross said Sunday that Friday's 4th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals ruling against race-based admissions at the Arlington Traditional School fortifies the U-Va. board's view and will force other Virginia colleges to follow suit. "It says we cannot have racial preferences," he said. "But it also says that legal forms of affirmative action still exist."

U-Va. administrators acknowledged hearing the board's concerns but stopped short of saying that the school no longer will consider an applicant's race. "Race has been a factor [in admissions] here ... With the precedents we've been seeing in these recent court cases, we're being urged to find other ways to do it," said Dean of Admissions John A. Blackburn, who referred other questions to U-Va. President John T. Casteen.

Turn to RACE page 3

Quayle Drops Out of Race for GOP Nomination

By Mark Z. Barabak
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON
Former Vice President Dan Quayle formally abandoned his quest for the Republican presidential nomination yesterday, but even after his poor showing he explicitly declined to rule out a future run for political office.

"There's a time to stay and there's a time to fold," Quayle told reporters gathered in Phoenix, Ariz., where his campaign was headquartered. "There's a time to know when to leave the stage."

With his exit, the Republican field shrinks to eight candidates, seven of them struggling to gain traction against Texas Gov. George W. Bush, who continues to enjoy a commanding lead in opinion polls and fund raising.

Throwing out one of the higher estimates, Quayle said, "I was facing a campaign where the front-runner would have up to $100 million to spend, and an unprecedented front-loading of the primary system made the task for me winning the nomination of my party virtually impossible." So far, Bush has raised around $50 million.

Quayle's campaign ended just over five months after it was formally launched in his old hometown of Huntington, Ind. Although widely admired in conservatives circles, the former vice president was never able to overcome a reputation for bumbling and questions about the possibility of his election, even among those sympathetic to his calls for dramatic tax cuts and policies promoting "traditional family values."

But it was the money – or rather a lack of it – that did him in, Quayle insisted. "You can have a strong message," he said, "but you also have to have the resources to get it out."

Although Quayle has arguably been the most pilloried and parodied politician of the past generation, he indicated he is not ready to walk away from public life.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

A view from the bus

The meeting house next to Belchertown common as seen from the driver's seat of a forty foot bus.

Students baffled by meal plans

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

A lack of communication between students and Auxiliary Services is causing a discrepancy in how Meal Plans are being dealt with this semester.

Students returned to the dining halls this year, they discovered a new technique for keeping track of the meals they were entitled to for the semester. The meals were being counted per week, meaning that the number shown on the scanner was starting fresh each Saturday regardless of the number of times a student went to the dining commons.

Although Dining Services produced brochures explaining that meals would not be lost until the end of the semester to inform first-time students, no returning students were formally told what was being changed. The sentiment on campus was that students were losing their meals at the end of each week.

"I have 14 meals a week and I'm losing them per week. Once a day is all I'm even able to go to the DC. I never make breakfast and I'm usually too busy for lunch, so the only meal I eat is dinner. It seems like a rip-off," said Maggie Riden, a first-year student.

"At the moment I'm not even going to the dining hall 10 times a week, but in the future I might be able to get there more often, but with the way I understand this policy I've already lost my meals and my money," said Amy Rivers, a sophomore.

While some students said that they were worried about losing money each week for not frequenting the dining halls enough, other students had the opposite complaint. They were concerned that they would run out of meals for a particular week. One student said that her roommate didn't go to dinner at the end of last week because she had already eaten her 10 meals for the week and was under the impression that she didn't have any more meals.

Another student had a similar complaint.

"I went to the dining hall last week and because I had already eaten 10 meals for the week was unable to have dinner. I was told that I had to talk to someone else, there was nothing that they [dining service staff] could do," said Erich Druskat, a sophomore, who also had concerns of what would happen to those meals that he might not eat while away for a weekend or over Thanksgiving break.

When asked about this incident, the director of food services, Ken Toong said it should never have happened. It was an isolated occurrence and he was unaware of any such event. According to Toong, if a student came to the dining hall and was already over the suggested number of meals a week, the student could write his or her name down in order to use another meal.

After a meeting held by Auxiliary Services the policy has been once again changed, effective Wednesday. The policy change was spurred by the constant confusion and student questions.

"The students are not ready for this type of system," said Toong. For the rest of the semester, meals will be visually taken away from the grand total. Therefore, a student will no longer know how many meals he or she has eaten for the week, only what he or she has remaining for the semester.

The motive behind changing the system was to prepare the University for more advanced technology and options in the future of Dining Services.

"I am trying to bring dining services to a new level. I thought it would be a better way for students to manage their meals, a way for students, especially first-year students, to budget the meals they are eating and to ultimately be able to choose the best meal plan for them in the future," Toong said.

He also said that many universities have plans in which the students are told of their meals per week and felt that UMass could benefit from a similar system. He still wishes to look into this idea for the upcoming fall, but more communication with students needs to occur first.

Tripp Files Suit Against White House, Defense

By Bill Miller
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Linda R. Tripp Monday filed a civil lawsuit accusing the White House, Defense Department and 99 "John and Jane Does" of orchestrating a campaign to leak embarrassing and confidential information about her in retaliation for her cooperation last year with independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr.

Tripp's 27-page lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court, portrays her as a whistle-blowing government employee who had a public duty to aid Starr's office in the Monica S. Lewinsky investigation. The suit maintains that officials at the Defense Department, where Tripp worked, conspired with White House operatives to undermine her credibility with the American public.

According to the suit, Tripp has been subjected to "extreme public embarrassment, humiliation, anxiety, ridicule" and other abuses, including a loss of income. She seeks an unspecified amount of damages.

The lawsuit comes at a time when Tripp is facing her own legal problems. She was indicted last summer in Maryland on charges of illegal wiretapping stemming from her taped telephone conversations with Lewinsky. Her supporters con-

Turn to DEFENSE page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 76 LOW: 51	HIGH: 66 LOW: 47	HIGH: 61 LOW: 40

SOURCE CNN.COM

Am-Bush-ed!

George W. Bush's popularity may have had an effect on why former vice president Dan Quale couldn't raise the funds to stay in the presidential hunt. Learn more about Quale's exit from the race inside...

NEWS 3

Tori's back from Venus

Is her new release traveling where no man or woman has traveled before or is she lost in space? Check out the review in Arts.

ARTS 6

All the Way Back

Tiger Woods and the US Ryder Cup Team showed poor sportsmanship at the 17th green after Justin Leonard drained a difficult 45- foot put to sink the Europeans.

Zowie Tucker and the field hockey team are hoping they can shoot down cross-state rival Boston College tonight at Garber Field.

SPORTS 9

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Animal Complaints

Sept. 26

Environmental Health and Safety removed an injured woodchuck from roadway at the North Village Apartments.

Sept. 25

Housing was notified to check for an animal in a room at Kennedy Dorm.

Sept. 22

Environmental Health and Safety was dispatched to deal with a hamster in a sink at John Quincy Adams Dorm.

Arrests

Sept. 25

Corey Son, 18, of 37 Cynthia Rd., Dedham, of was arrested at 251 University Drive and charged with for liquor law violations.

Sept. 25

Paul Barros, 22, of 32 Brook Ave., Roxbury, was arrested at the Presidential Apartments on an outstanding warrant.

Sept. 25

Kevin White, 19, of 60 Northeast St., Holyoke, was arrested on Commonwealth Avenue and charged with speeding, operating under the influence and resisting arrest.

Sept. 24

Jeffrey Cotter, 19, of 196 Pond St., Natick, was arrested on Fearing Street and charged with indecent exposure.

Sept. 22

Kevin Remy, 19, of 27 Cornerstone Dr., Northeaston, and Gerry Carr, 20, of 63 Quintard Terrace, Stamford, Conn., were arrested at Washington Residence Hall and charged with possession of a class D drug.

Breaking and Entering/Burglary

Sept. 26

A hotel room was broken into at the Campus Center Hotel. Nothing was reported stolen.

Sept. 2

A third floor door was damaged in the Fine Arts Center after an attempted break-in.

Health and Safety Hazard

Sept. 26

A steam pipe burst at the Lederle Research Tower at 710 North Pleasant Street.

Larceny

Sept. 25

A flashlight was reported missing or stolen in Dickinson Hall.

Sept. 25

A laptop, valued at $1600, was stolen from Grayson Residence Hall.

Sept. 24

Laundry was stolen from a clothesline at the North Village Apartments.

Sept. 24

A wallet was reported stolen from Gorman Residence Hall.

Sept. 24

A wallet was reported stolen from Moore Residence Hall.

Sept. 24

A display phone, valued at $100, was stolen from Bartlett Hall.

Sept. 23

A display phone, valued at $100, was stolen from an office in the Student Union.

Sept. 23

An individual attempted to steal a table at Cashin Residence Hall.

Sept. 22

A Mobil decal was stolen from a vehicle in Lot 34.

Vandalism

Sept. 26

Graffiti was reported written on a door in Baker Residential Hall.

Sept. 26

An antenna was reported broken on a vehicle in Lot 11.

Sept. 26

There was an unfounded report of vandalism in the Campus Center Parking Garage.

Sept 25

Graffiti was reported written on a message board in Johnson Residence Hall.

Sept 25

Graffiti was reported written on a message board in Grayson Residence Hall.

Sept. 25

Graffiti was reported written on a door in Dickinson Residence Hall.

Sept. 24

A motorcycle was reported damaged in Southwest Circle.

Sept. 22

Old graffiti was discovered on an elevator panel in Field Residence Hall.

■ defense

continued from page 1

tend the criminal charges are baseless and politically motivated.

The lawsuit alleges that a host of unidentified people working in the executive office of the president undertook a search for damaging information about Tripp once she emerged as a potential witness against Clinton. These "John and Jane Does" allegedly violated her civil rights by coming up with ways to leak confidential materials kept in FBI and personnel files.

The suit cites an unflattering profile about Tripp that appeared in the New Yorker magazine soon after the Lewinsky scandal became public. The article, "Portrait of a Whistleblower," reported that Tripp was arrested as a teen-ager on a felony charge of grand larceny and pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of loitering. It reported that Tripp did not disclose the arrest, as required, in response to a question on her 1987 security clearance form.

The Pentagon's chief spokesman, Kenneth Bacon, later acknowledged that he had provided the magazine's reporter with information gleaned from the security clearance form. Bacon has said he acted along with Clifford Bernath, one of his deputies, and that the White House wasn't involved. Tripp accused Bacon, Bernath and others of violating her privacy rights.

Bacon was out of town Monday and Bernath did not return a telephone message. W. Neil Eggleston, an attorney who represents the White House, declined comment. The Defense Department had no immediate response. Tripp, who continues to work for the Defense Department, declined comment through her attorneys.

The lawsuit does not say who at the White House allegedly sought to discredit Tripp. But one section maintains that numerous current and former officials engaged in discussions about her, including first lady Hillary Clinton.

Stephen M. Kohn, one of Tripp's attorneys, said he hopes to take depositions from numerous White House officials to further develop the case.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Guard dog

Rosie the dog guards CVS while her owner is inside.

www.dailycollegian.com

HAVE YOUR COFFEE WITH MILK SUGAR AND
"THE COLLEGIAN"

MILLITECH HAS PART-TIME & WEEKEND WORK

2ND SHIFT 4:00PM - 12:30AM
3RD SHIFT 12:00AM - 7:30AM
SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ALL SHIFTS AVAILABLE

Millitech is a high tech company making millimeter wave broad band wireless equipment for major telecommunication companies throughout the world.

Our location is convenient to the University -- on Route 116 in S. Deerfield just one mile past Sunderland Center.

Our work environment: the environment is clean and quiet.

We are looking for people who are an interest in learning, a willingness to work hard, and reliability to work in the U.S.

We have openings for Assemblers. There is a shift differential of 10% for 2nd Shift and 15% for 3rd

ELECTRONIC TECHNICIAN

This work requires good communication and an interest in learning hand-eye coordination and an interest in learning microassembly procedures using small hand tools and microassembly equipment. Previous experience in microassembly process would be an advantage but training will be provided.

ENGINEERING INTERNS

Electrical/Microwave Engineering Students, Manufacturing or Mechanical Engineering students, at the Junior, Senior or graduate level, with good GPAs and an interest in practical applications of their classroom experience, may be considered for part-time internships. Interested applicants must be available to work a minimum of 15 hours a week.

To apply for these positions fill out an application at our facility or send resume and cover letter to Human Resources, 20 Industrial Drive East, S. Deerfield, MA 01373
e-mail: hr@millitech.com FAX: 413.665.0089

Amherst is Now Smoke Fr

but downtown is

SMOKIN' HOT!!!

Family, friends, food and fun is what Amherst is all about.

Smoke

Lots of entertainment and breathable air....
and we're not just blowin' smoke!

Sponsored by the Amherst

■ global

continued from page 1

"Some students don't want to go to London or Paris like everyone else," said Helle Gjerlufsen, a field director for Denmark's International Studies [DIS] Program. "[The University of Copenhagen] has a very strong, demanding academic program," she added. "Students studying international business, or those who want to study the European Union from the inside, have a special opportunity there."

Janis Coulter, a representative of the Rothberg International School at the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, boasted the merits of studying in Israel.

"If you are interested in religion, the politics of the Middle East, or international relations, [the Rothberg School] is an excellent place to study," she said. She added that students with grade point averages of 3.8 or above have a good chance of being fully funded for their studies, a unique opportunity for American students accustomed to $30,000 tuition bills for elite schools.

One of the most popular booths at the Mount Holyoke fair was the Institute for Study Abroad [ISA] at Butler University. Butler, a private institution, gives students the opportunity to attend 68 universities in the United Kingdom, Ireland, Australia and New Zealand, as well as Latin American nations like Costa Rica, Argentina and Chile. The ISA is one of the few study abroad programs that allows qualified students to study at elite British universities like Oxford and Cambridge.

■ race

continued from page 1

Casteen did not respond to a reporter's request for an interview. He told the Charlottesville Daily Progress this month that "the board has made it pretty clear that they don't want us to consider race" in admissions.

State universities in California, Texas and Washington have barred affirmative action on behalf of ethnic minorities, but most U.S. colleges continue to admit minority applicants instead of similarly qualified whites in some circumstances.

Julian Bond, chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and a U-Va. history professor, said shifting the focus of the university's affirmative-action program from race to income is wrong.

"Blacks do not face disadvantage solely because they are poor, although many are," he said. "Rather, blacks of all income levels share disadvantage because we are black and living in a society that gives privileges and favored positions to whites."

Rafael S. Figueroa, associate dean of admission at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn., said schools that remove race from their admissions process without having been sued "are giving up the prize without a fight."

He said he believes Wesleyan will continue to consider race in admissions "not only for the opportunity we can provide to students who might otherwise not have access to an education of the caliber we can provide, but also because the educational experience of all students is made richer, more relevant to today's world and more valuable" when a campus is ethnically diverse.

But Ross said U-Va.'s lawyers have told the Board of Visitors that "certain types of affirmative action cannot be used in an educational context without there being a past history of racial discrimination" at the school.

Ross said his committee suggested several actions to ensure that the university continues to enroll a diverse student body, and he said some of those steps already are being taken.

The admissions office is seeking two new staff members to reach more minority students and urge them to apply to U-Va. And Ross and board Chairman John P. Ackerly III said the university may add a question to its application form asking students whether they have overcome obstacles in their lives.

The university also is considering a $1 million appropriation for a summer institute on campus that would be open to 200 students each year from high schools in low-income Virginia neighborhoods, although Ross said that idea is not connected to the admissions changes.

Advocates of the current admissions system say the board's concerns are premature. "The threat of a lawsuit is not a lawsuit, and one does not generate public policy based upon threats," said Maurice Cox, an assistant professor of architecture at U-Va. who also serves on the Charlottesville City Council.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Time warp!

These UMass transit passengers share a ride to class yesterday.

Indonesian Military Leaves E. Timor

By Doug Struck
Washington Post

DILI, East Timor – The commander of the Indonesian military in East Timor departed yesterday, leaving security in the hands of a U.N.-authorized peacekeeping force that controls only a small part of the province.

Maj. Gen. Kiki Syahnakri left behind a token force of 1,500 Indonesian soldiers who will guard army facilities until East Timor's Aug. 30 vote for independence is ratified by the Indonesian parliament, which meets in November.

The commander of the peacekeeping force, Australian Maj. Gen. Peter Cosgrove, welcomed the departure of the Indonesian troops – who are accused of aiding anti-independence militias in their campaign of terror in the province. But Cosgrove expressed concern that their departure leaves a security "vacuum" that the 3,700 peacekeepers here will not immediately be able to fill.

The peacekeeping force has yet to deploy in the vast majority of East Timor, and officials worry that militia gangs may continue to harass those areas.

Cosgrove yesterday sent a force of 150 soldiers, Australian Blackhawk helicopters and armored vehicles to the town of Liquica, about 20 miles west of the capital Dili, on reports that a band of 30 armed militiamen were in the town. The Australian Broadcasting Corp. said the militiamen fled into the hills.

It was the second town outside Dili to feel the presence of the international peacekeeping force. Australian Lt. Col. Mick Slater, commander of the operation, said his troops "would not be staying long" in Liquica, but he described the action as a demonstration of the peacekeeper's intent to restore order in the countryside.

"The people of Liquica now have some security forces on the ground," Slater said. But he acknowledged that "the people of Liquica are a little worried, and at this point they are keeping their distance" from the peacekeepers.

Militia members have threatened anyone who cooperates with foreigners. The militias were recruited by the Indonesian army, and the army was involved in the burning and looting of towns throughout the province after the East Timorese voted overwhelmingly for independence.

Cosgrove said about 15,000 Indonesian troops have withdrawn in the last week. He said relations between the multinational force, which began arriving a week ago, and the Indonesian army were delicate, but "we avoided any serious incidents that could have occurred between the troops."

"There were always going to be some tensions and difficulties associated with having large numbers of forces jostling in the same place," he said.

At the Dili port, many of the Indonesian troops who left in the past few days appeared to be glad to get out of the province that Indonesia has occupied since 1975. East Timorese gathered at the fence of the port to watch them depart.

Attention:
STATE KAISER
MEMBERS!

RELAX!

We've taken the worry out of choosing a health plan. In addition to our already extensive network of local providers like, Franklin Medical Center, Health New England has added:

COOLEY DICKINSON HOSPITAL
Northampton

PERMANENTE MEDICAL GROUP
Amherst, Greenfield & Florence

And that's only the beginning! We anticipate adding even more providers in the coming months. Let's chat some more about the areas only local health plan and what we can do for you. Stop by our booth at these health fairs and talk with us in person!

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS (UMASS)
September 28 from 11 am - 4 pm

GREENFIELD COMMUNITY COLLEGE
October 5 from 11 am - 4 pm

If you are not a State employee or retiree, leave your employer or broker call Health New England at

1-800-842-4464

and ask for the Sale Department

Health New England

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Hail to the chief

I'm not the sort to drop names, but last week I was asked by a very prestigious person, Shaun Kelleher (I'll tell you who he is in a second), to attend a very prestigious forum with the very prestigious Bill Bradley, who, if you don't know already, was player for the New Jersey Nets a long, long time ago in the Paleolithic period. He's also running for president.

This brings up an important issue in politics today: how did the referees regulate ball control if there was no shot clock in the Paleolithic period?

Anyway, Shaun Kelleher is one of his college campaign coordinators. Now you know who he is, although it doesn't matter in the slightest as this column goes on.

Seth Koenig

Moving on, I was deeply inspired during this forum. Not to vote for Bradley in the next presidential election, held long after the world ends, sometime next fall, but rather to do something else; go to sleep.

In all seriousness, though (if you believe I'm about to be serious, you are medically classified as a stupid idiot), I was inspired to run for president. You laugh, but I think it's about time somebody with a solid platform gets into public office – otherwise, I figure, that somebody would fall right through (pun very much intended).

As a public official, I will quickly put an end to blinking red traffic lights, such as that useless one down on the corner of Massachusetts and University Drives. Driving into campus from the direction of Southwest in the morning takes six hours – and yes, I counted. Roughly nine trillion commuters breeze in from Route 116, confidently flying through their privileged blinking yellow light. Holding those of us at the red light waiting there forever (literally).

That's the first order of business. Next of all, I want the Teletubbies to have their show cancelled. I learned the other day that these "cuddly" television characters are actually each 12 feet tall. The cute, furry bunnies that the Teletubbies interact with weigh in access of 50 pounds apiece, biologically altered to look good next to the stars of the show. You think I'm kidding (and you're right to, because I've never been serious in a column before), but, in fact, I'm not. It's all true. Those little bunnies are the size of medium dogs, in all actuality. You should be outraged, of course, and so am I. No more 12-foot plush characters corrupting the minds of our youth.

I realize that, since I spend the entirety of my columns every week being a wiseass, you probably don't believe the whole Teletubby thing. I forgive you. But you're wrong.

In my effort to take over the nation by brute political force, I will go on a rigorous campaign that will include important stops such as in Ohio, Michigan, Maine, Delaware and Virginia. Each state is extremely significant for the simple reason that there are American people there (and the UMass football team will be visiting near there, so I'll be in the area anyway).

If elected, I would promise the nation all sorts of things that I would have no real control over, such as that I would prevent both James Van Der Beek and Macaulay Culkin from starring as Anakin Skywalker in Episode II of the Star Wars movies. To make sure of this, I would have them both executed by the CIA. Instead, I would play Anakin in a completely selfish realization of a boyhood dream.

Now, I know what you're thinking. How, you keep asking yourself, did the referees regulate ball control if there was no shot clock in the Paleolithic?

I have no idea, but I do know that I need a running mate. You, the intelligent and aware reader, are now thinking that I actually need to make it past the party primary and get on the ballot before I start worrying about such things.

Ha! Shows what you know! I don't have a party!

With that in mind, my running mate will be Alexis Pushkar, the co-editor of the Editorial/Opinion page of the Collegian. My simple reasoning is that she and her co-editor Gary Mendese make all of my astute political banter possible, and Gary is off trying to be a doctor by taking ridiculously hard tests and seminars. The last thing this country needs is a politician that is concerned about the well-being of others, so I'll take Alexis (not that Alexis isn't concerned about the well-being of others – in fact, she cares very much about every American, especially you, so vote for Koenig and Pushkar in 2000).

Now that I have all of that figured out, I'm going to discuss important issues with political action committees who are willing to dump several jillion dollars into my Swiss bank accounts so that I can make the most educated decisions possible when voting on the upcoming issues – like the shot clock thing.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Cut it up

As a fellow UMass student, I am very aware of the multitude of credit card companies that badger students on campus to sign up. You know the story; an organization wants/needs money, so they either stand outside of the D.C.s or in the Campus Center and try to get anyone to sign up for a credit card. I was told that these organizations get one dollar for each application that the credit card company receives.

Back to the point – with all of these credit cards, college students are going into millions of dollars of debt. There are students who owe as much as $50,000. Some of these students are paying up to 24-percent interest. So the question is, what do we, as college students, do? I won't lie and say that there's an easy way out. If you are anything like me, you like money and you like spending it. I keep myself under control by holding a job. I make a relatively decent amount of money per week (more than $50, but less than $100), which really adds up by the end of the month; I also limit myself to $20 of spending money per week. That includes all of my weekend activities (not expensive, less than $10). But it does not include gas or groceries. I pay for those by a credit card that my parents gave me for gas, groceries, textbooks and emergencies. Now this weekly allowance of $20 will have to grow due to me turning 21 on Saturday (yes, for drinking occasionally).

Emily Vacanti

But one thing that I will stay away from is convenience checks. In short, they screw you over. These checks are generally used to transfer a balance from one credit card to another. In addition, they can almost always be tapped for use toward any purchases. And convenience checks are even more enticing because they have a very low interest rate, like AT&T (4.9-percent). This interest rate is comparied to AT&T's credit card interest rate of 16.7-percent. It's a little over _ of the interest rate.

The reason is clear why people want to use these low interest rates. But as a user, you have to be aware of what you are getting yourself into. Many think that these are good ideas because you can use smaller payments and take more time. Seemingly, you save money. But when you start to pay it off, you have to: 1. Read the fine print on everything, including the check, the credit-card contract, etc. 2. Idiot-proof the check that you are paying with so the credit-card company does not split the money up in a way different than you deem. For instance, the fine print on AT&T's credit-card contract says, "We may allocate payments to amounts owed on your accounts in the manner we deem appropriate, including but not limited to, applying payments to promotional balances, such as balance transfers, before applying them to purchases and cash advances." In other words, whatever you want done with your payment, AT&T can change if they want it to go into the bank and do it another way. They can decide how much payment you make to your different balances. In this way, you get screwed.

Geoffrey B. Rosenberg, a man who I believe is very savvy when it comes to money, was taken financial advantage of by AT&T. He made the first payment of $379 to AT&T and clearly showed that he wanted $75 to go to the convenience-check balance, and for the rest to go the higher-interest-rate balance. The opposite happened. Because of the fine print, he ended up paying much more on the low-interest-rate convenience check than he wanted. Only the minimum was paid on his high-interest-rate account. And so, in order to take care of this problem, he ended up using a home-equity line (don't ask me what it is or anything about it. I told you that convenience checks are not for college students, and probably not for anyone else either) to pay off both balances. Even though he is very money savvy, he got screwed! And it was because he wanted to save money and make it go as far as possible.

Now, I know that since not many of us will make purchases that are as large and costly as the one by Rosenberg (a set of bookcases for $2,800), our problems are to a much lesser degree, but we still have credit problems. And I'm sorry to say that they, for the most part, do originate in college. You know what I mean. Your first credit card is exciting. Suddenly you are buying stuff that it seems like you don't have to pay for. You sign up for one card, it leads to another. You sign up for two, oh brother, you're in up to your ears. (I know, bad poem from the eighties. But it gets the message across.) It all quickly adds up.

But we can avoid the credit-card syndrome. There are a few ways.

The biggest is (no surprise): DON'T SIGN UP FOR CREDIT CARDS! This obviously begins the ugly, dreaded cycle of credit-card debt. But everyone should have one for emergences and possibly gas and textbooks. As long as you limit yourself to one, you will be in better shape.

Limit yourself to only what you can afford/pay for. With the exception of textbooks, if you can't pay it off in one month, you probably don't need it. And if you decide that you must have it, then ask yourself "is it really worth what I will end up paying for it after interest has accumulated?" If you think so, then go for it. But in the end, you will probably regret it.

Carry cash and checks. It's much more difficult to go into cash debt. You can get cash loans from friends and parents, but ten dollars is a lot easier to pay off than $1,000. And friends and parents don't generally charge you interest, or at least not an obscene amount like credit-card companies. You really can't spend more cash than you have. Checks do bounce, and that can get expensive ($10-20 per returned check), but if you keep your checkbook balanced, then that should not be a problem. Also banks don't have a tendency to screw their clients over. Banks are successful because of us. Credit-card companies are successful because the consumers in our society generally aren't that money savvy. They spend and later realize what they've done (I've seen it happen).

In my opinion, credit cards are a bad idea for college students. Convenience checks are just a bad idea. I've learned to manage my money with a checkbook, a job and a wallet. One credit card is okay, but more would only be asking for trouble. So just stay away for multiple cards. That's my advice.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

Caulk

So you think you have seen it all at UMass? But do you really know how to prepare for the disasters that are sure to occur here before the year is out? It only seems fitting that we will follow in the ranks of Taiwan and Turkey to have an earthquake or a flood or some other "Act of God" that isn't covered by our insurance.

Do you know how to prepare yourself for disaster at UMass? Speaking as a veteran of last year's winter when we had .01 inches of snow, I have no clue either, but I have compiled a list of what we could do.

First off run, don't walk, to the nearest home center and super duper supermarket. Purchase enough batteries to run your whole house for about five years, buy about two miles of wire and rewire all your appliances to run off AA battery power. Next, purchase flashlights. Surprisingly enough, in the span of one day, flashlight prices will have skyrocketed about 600%- because of the impending darkness and doom. Your next purchase should be plywood and lots of it! Buy enough to cover all your windows to protect yourself from flying black squirrels, or in the case of Southwest, small flying imported cars. After you have successfully boarded yourself in, it is not time to relax. You need to make the most important purchase next. Sterno is your key to surviving storms in this day and age.

Brian Lohnes

For all you storm virgins out there, Sterno is the stuff that Chinese restaurants set on fire in the middle of pu-pu platters. It comes in cans and is a very handly tool for heating those storm delicacies like pickled salmon. Actually, Sterno may not be legal for purchase in this country anymore because I don't even think the guys who invented it know what it was made of. Okay, ditch the Sterno for health reasons and buy 50 Bic lighters. These can be used to heat food and in the event of a high stress situation, light a cigarette. Food is the next piece of the disaster survival puzzle. If you are a bit chubby and not as fleet of foot as the rest of the populous you will not be able to get any of the "good" canned food in the supermarket (if there is such a thing). This will leave you with a limited number of options, but a diverse eater is a happy eater! Go straight for the Brussels sprouts, these are not popular and they double as small projectiles to heave at the looters when they try to steal your stuff during the height of the storm.

Next, beat feet for the pickled Herring. Pickled Herring is surprisingly similar to Sterno. Take your tofu, Brussels sprouts and pickled Herring and steal it. This is a storm, people, there won't be any security there, and when they see what you are taking, they will be happy to see it go.

Finally, as most of you have found out, your room may leak. If your room does leak you will need caulk. Caulk is the putty-like substance, which seals up cracks and windows and a multitude of other things. My last experience with the caulk also serves a double purpose, it can serve as a tasty treat but it can also serve as hours of entertainment. Simply place your trash bucket under your leaky window and when you catch enough water in there, throw some of the herring in and drop your line! Your friends and family will marvel at your fishing prowess when you catch some pre-pickled fish! Finally, the last food you will need is Tofu. Tofu may have a bad rap… well okay; it deserves a bad rap – the stuff tastes like garbage. The only thing good about tofu is its ability to take the taste of any food known to man as long as it sits within, like, six inches of it. I don't know how it works, but it is strikingly similar to Sterno. Take your tofu, Brussels sprouts and pickled Herring and steal it. This is a storm, people, there won't be any security there, and when they see what you are taking, they will be happy to see it go.

Finally, as most of you have found out, your room may leak. If your room does leak you will need caulk. Caulk is the putty-like substance, which seals up cracks and windows and a multitude of other things. My last experience with the caulk involved my parents. After the remnants of hurricane Floyd, the undersigned, his cat and his mattress, many people were left with soggy rooms. One of this unfortunate group was my girlfriend, Kerri. Her room was leaking like a sieve during the storm and the next day my parents were coming up to visit so I called them and asked for the caulk. The conversation went completely awry at the point when I remembered I was asking my mother for the caulk. "Hey mom, could you and dad bring up the caulk tomorrow?" I innocently asked. "You want the caulk?" my mother asked, it was about this time I became drastically sick, but the conversation forged on. "Hold on" she says to me. Then I hear her yelling. "Bob, where's your caulk, Brian needs the caulk at school!" Needless to say, after this faithful conversation I showered for about three hours before I lost that "dirty" feeling.

So there it is, a complete list of things to have before a disaster hits, I should have mentioned a few other things, like clean underwear, and in case all your friends die, a pet rock to keep you company in the rubble. The rest of the stuff is up to you, and if the last storm is any indication… you're all screwed!

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

Computer age

Why do I have a computer? The obvious reason is that Big Brother finally succumbed to old age and passed on. Big Brother was my previous steed of typing prowess, a Brother brand word processor. My parents bought it for me when I was in the sixth grade and Mrs. Correa called them in to bitch about my handwriting, and they decided that it would be better to spend money on a machine than trying fruitlessly to make me improve myself. This was also the logic behind deodorant and the AssWipe-O-Matic.

Rob Schulze

I loved Big Brother like, well, a brother, but even I can admit that he was woefully outdated even at the time he was purchased. There were toasters with more highly developed technology than this machine. It had a font. It did not do italics or underlining. It did boldfacing by having the Daisy Wheel-style printer hit the letter twice. It did not have Tetris capabilities. I was never quite sure that it did not actually operate on steam power.

All the same, I rode that beast of burden for every paper, musing and dirty story that came to the front of my diseased and pockmarked mind from the sixth grade through this September. It wasn't always easy, though, especially not when my roommate had this supermegaultrasinfulydelicious new computer last year, and I would have to sit over in the corner with my "word processor" and weep, weep for my own inadequacy. If he'd had a really nice toaster, too, I probably would have killed myself.

That all came to an end when I moved back, plugged in Big Brother and discovered, to my outward dismay and inner glee, that the letters 'h' and 'y' were no longer functioning. I don't know about you, but I consider all letters to be fairly essential in the production of a column as deep and meaningful as this one. Could I cheat the world of the depth of meaning that those two letters could provide to these words of wisdom? In good conscience, no, I could not. (You can thank me later. I accept cash and check.)

So, I now had to get a computer. Now, I knew that computer cost quite a large sum of money and that research on a large scale is required to select just the right module, not to mention comparison shopping, tax questions, issues of compatibility and other such complications that were an unavoidable part of this ordeal, and that much effort and hard work would need to be put into this decision. So I called my Mommy.

"Ma," I said. "I need a computer." When she finished laughing like a cartoon villain we hashed out a mutual agreement whereby she and my father would do all the work and I would play video games. They drive a hard bargain, let me tell you, but some while later, when they arrived sweaty, emaciated, and withdrawn from lack of sleep, and they dropped off the new machine, I sincerely felt it was worth all the trouble I didn't go through.

So now I have this fantastic new machine. It has all kinds of gizmos and doodads on it; where exactly these things are I have no real idea. I think they may be in the wires somewhere, depending, of course, on whether or not computers even have wires. So, yeah, I basically know jack about this stylish new beast of burden upon which I am typing.

You want to know what I do with my computer? I listen to CDs on it, which I will admit was not a pressing concern of mine, considering that I already had a CD player. I also type masterpieces such as this column. I use only one font. I don't underline anything. I, uh, have cool "The Punisher" wallpaper.

Oh, but now I have Internet access! Ethernet access, I should say, since all the dorms here on Orchard Hill have this mega-net thing installed. If they ever took it away, I seriously believe that there would be full-scale riots, and that the Hill would burn. Nothing, and I mean nothing, gets in the way of an honors student and his hard-core pornography. Trust me on this one.

So, yes, the net is a great educational resource tool for me, in the sense of providing me with useless information about the World Wrestling Federation. If a professor ever asks me on an exam what is going to happen on an upcoming WWF television program, I am all over that. Of course, just because I know what's going to happen doesn't mean I don't go watch the show religiously anyways. I just really like to know this stuff – somebody on these wrestling websites could post what Rocky Maivia had for breakfast and I would read this without thinking at all about just how ridiculous it is, because to me that is key information. I've discovered things about rock bands that nobody, not even their wives, should know. And did I mention hard-core pornography? Damn.

I haven't even begun to scratch the surface of the possibilities presented to me by the vast realm of video solitaire.

So I guess what I'm trying to say is that there is no real need for me to have a computer. When I use a computer it's like I'm just licking frosting off of those little cakes at the DC. Sure, what I get is good, but it's hardly all the goodness that is available to me. I know there's so much more under there, but I've gorged on the limp Pastabilities of complacency and swallowed whole the rancid fish puck of ignorance, leaving no room for the wholesome goodness and fulfillment that the cake of knowledge could provide me. Or something like that. Man, I really wish that they'd bring Stone Willy back. That crap was legendary!

See you online.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Mentschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lomberd Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Voice your opinion.

Write for Ed/Op.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Jewish Affairs

Tuesday, Septebmner 28, 1999

Hillel Offers Free Trip To Israel

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

Paul Entis, the new interim director of the Hillel House at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, wants to send 40 students on a free trip.

"Birthright 2000", an initiative sponsored by the International Hillel Foundation, is gearing to send every interested Jewish student to Israel for free this year.

Under the plan, Entis is hoping to roughly double the number of students participating in next years' January trip to Israel.

The Birthright 2000 Initiative kicked off Hillel's Activities this year, and the infusion of new blood within Hillel's staff is sure to bring on new ideas and programs for the coming year.

Other activities will concentrate on the integration of the arts into Jewish life on campus.

"We'd like to have an art gallery at Hillel. We'd like to have a theatre group, and increase connection with the Greek System," Entis said.

Entis, who completed a master's degree in Social Justice Education in 1996 at the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, is returning here to be closer to family and friends.

Entis served as the Hillel director of the University of Southern California for 3 years.

The Summer Trojan, a newspaper of the University of Southern California, commended Entis for his major role in the Jewish Community during his time there. Entis also became deeply involved with Gay, Lesbian and Bisexual issues in the Jewish community at USC, according to the Trojan. He served as a counselor and a spiritual leader to students.

The Hillel Center at USC, under Entis, also won the Ellie Wiesel Award for Jewish Art and Culture in 1997.

While studying at UMass, Entis was also active in campus life. He served as Resident Director at James Emerson Residence Hall in Southwest, and also worked at the Campus Activities Office.

But Entis isn't the only new face. Also new to Hillel are Deborah Braunstein, the Program Director, and Cheryl Gordon, the Jewish Campus Service Corps Fellow.

Braunstein has a Masters' degree in Theater Education. She worked with Second City Comedy Troop in Chicago, and also produced the Diary of Anne Frank.

Gordon, a recent graduate from Ohio State University, just returned from a year in Israel, where she completed project "Otsma", volunteering in various communities.

Richard Joel, President of International Hillel, kicking off the "Birthright 2000" Initiatve at the International Hillel Student Conference this summer.

ArafatOptimistic About Final Peace Agreement

By Jay Hancock
Baltimore Sun

ARLINGTON, Va.-Yasser Arafat expressed optimism last Friday about reaching a final peace agreement with Israel within a year, but the Palestinian leader also warned of "difficulties" ahead, calling the volatile problem of Jerusalem's political status critical to a lasting accord in the region.

"Jerusalem is not only a Palestinian place," Arafat said in a meeting here with diplomats, analysts and reporters. "It's Palestinian, Arab, Christian, Muslim. And we should remember also in Jerusalem that there is the holy wall, the holiest place for the Jews."

"The fate of Jerusalem," he added, "will be the key to all issues of how we want the Middle East to be."

Arafat spoke at an Arlington hotel at a meeting arranged by the Center for Strategic and International Studies, a Washington-based think tank. He was in the Washington area to meet with President Clinton to discuss negotiations that are supposed to establish a permanent peace between Israel and the Palestinians.

In an agreement signed in Egypt earlier this month, the two sides set February as the deadline for drawing the outlines of a final accord and next September as the goal for concluding it.

Most analysts believe it is an extremely ambitious schedule. Though Arafat called it "a realistic time frame," he seemed to imply that it could take longer when he noted that six years have passed since the so-called "Oslo Accord" set the stage for the current talks between the Israelis and the Palestinians.

Speaking softly through an interpreter, staring straight ahead most of the time, Arafat said he was hopeful for Israel's satisfactory implementation of a land-for-security swap that was agreed to in Maryland last year and was revived three weeks ago.

But, he added, "having said this, I am telling you, we are heading towards difficulties. That's what we should expect from the permanent status negotiations."

Arafat envisions Jerusalem as the capital of a future Palestinian state, which clashes with the Israeli position. Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak has consistently demanded "one unified Jerusalem, eternal capital of Israel."

Aside from Jerusalem, Arafat said the thorniest issues in the talks ahead are the fate of Palestinians who left their land after the creation of Israel in 1947 and the ensuing Arab-Israeli war, along with the future of Jewish settlements on the West Bank. "We are approaching the moment of truth," he said.

He dismissed suggestions that refugees could be compensated financially or settled in another Arabic country. "It's time for them to come home."

Moving closer to observance

By Chanel E. Dubofsky
Collegian Staff

Morning. I struggle out from sleep, which feels like a wet sweater over my face, and decide that I cannot push the snooze button anymore. Trying not to awaken my roommate, who is buried under eight feet of quilt and can sleep for two more hours, I opt for the closet.

Three and a half months ago, I would not have awoken at the crack of dawn to do anything. And I can't say it is easy to get up for prayers at the beginning of the semester when I've just surrendered my life savings in exchange for a pile of textbooks.

My decision to do it is part of a conscious one to bring Judaism into my life a little more each day. Now, before you stop reading, this article is not about why you too should start your morning routine with a trip to the closet and a prayer book. On the contrary, it will probably remind you of why you don't do it in the first place.

I spent the summer interning at the International Research Institute on Jewish Women at Brandeis University, where I lived and worked closely with two very committed young Jewish women. Ali and Michelle were both shomrei shabbos (Shabbat observant), came from homes where the food laws of kashrut were observed, and both had comprehensive Jewish education.

Everything from the simple act of getting dressed in the morning to leaving a message for a co-worker was clearly grounded into some aspect of Judaism. Intimidated at first, I decided I would avoid asking questions and simply observe, afraid to admit how much I didn't know.

Allana E. Todman

Throughout the summer, I began to immerse myself privately in the business of learning whatever I could. I overheard new words and facts and wrote them down on slips of paper, which I collected in the back of my notebook. My internship not only provided me with a great opportunity to explore research and academia, but I was also beginning to bear a striking resemblance to Harriet the Spy.

I soon realized that it was not only knowledge that I craved, but also devotion and self-discipline. I simply could not become more observant because those around me were. Guilt would only take me so far. I had to understand why I was doing everything, and until I did, becoming observant had to be on a continuum, rather than something I jumped into.

So how did I go from this realization to praying every morning? Well, it may seem too simple, but the truth is that it made sense to me. I feel I should praise G-d for allowing me to wake up in the morning. I've also made other changes in my life according to Halacha (Jewish law) that resound my personal beliefs. I've definitely become more conscious of my appearance, in concordance with the laws of modesty.

I've begun to study Jewish texts, as well as to encourage people to ask me questions. I enjoy teaching others, even if I myself have limited knowledge. As I learned this summer, it's a mitzvah to teach someone anything about Judaism, no matter how small or insignificant it may seem. I find a lot of meaning in this idea, since it certainly has rung true in my own experience.

I'm a long way from being considered a "frum," or an Orthodox Jewish woman. I'm not sure I will ever be able to keep a kosher home or wear only skirts. Keeping Shabbat remains a struggle for me. I have been firmly grounded in the secular world for twenty years, and even the idea of pulling away from it is intimidating.

Engaging in new rituals and integrating Jewish observance into my everyday life is both comforting and enriching. I believe it will bring me closer to G-d, as well as to the person I want to be.

Sukkot offers chance to evaluate

By Hayyim Rothman
Collegian Staff

L'shana tova! I hope everyone had a magnificent Rosh HaShana and Yom Kippur. We are approaching the last holidays of the season, and my personal favorite holiday, Sukkot (The Feast of Tabernacles), which began last Friday night at 6:24. It will end Sunday night Oct. 3 at 7:12.

The first two and last two days of this festival are like the Sabbath in that we celebrate in an even greater way and also avoid driving or lighting fires or other forms of work. I write in hope that through deeper understanding we can appreciate the festival all the more so, increasing our simcha (joy) and becoming vessels for truth and G-d and all the good things in life.

To begin, it is important to know that among many articles, it is a custom to recite Sefer Kohelet (Ecclesiastes) on the holiday of Sukkot. This book is mainly concerned with finding meaning in life through discerning the nature of truth: is it the "sensual life" or the "contemplative life," or is it a combination of both?

In our understanding of the holiday, these two aspects will play an important role. These paths can be respectively classified as a life focused on selfhood/the individual, and a life focused on the community/universal concerns.

In a Jewish context, "individual life (sensual)" is by nature an entirely self focused activity, the main concern is one's self. Thus even in a crowd of thousands man stands alone, cut off because his concern is only with himself and so he can never truly become part of a community. On the other hand, this type of life is very real: it deals in the material and is therefore in theory easy to interact with.

Conversely, in Jewish tradition, the "contemplative life" is one of concern for all, for the community, because concern for G-d who is completely One, eventually translates into concern for all creation, which is a part of this Oneness. Again, on the other hand, by nature of contemplation, the thinker lives an etherial life of thought; it is difficult to interact in this world of action with a man who deals in thought.

Thus we have a paradox. The "sensual man (individual concerned with his own needs)" is by nature inaccessible due to narcissism, yet his very self-involvement, because it is physical, makes interaction possible.

Regarding the "contemplative/universal man," he is by nature accessible, in that he is concerned with the needs of others, yet by nature of this concern, which is derived from an ethereal state of being, he is incapable of true interaction with the community in which he works.

Sefer Kohelet relates, "It is best to take hold of one, and also from the other, withdraw not your hand; for he who fears G-d will discharge his duty to both." And this is the key to Sukkot.

There are two main mitzvot (Jewish laws) connected to Sukkot, one, "lulav and etrog" (a bundle of willow, palm, and myrtle branches held to a etrog), and the other, "residing in a sukka (small covered booth)."

The first, "lulav and etrog", involves an individual taking these species in his/her hands, reciting a blessing, and waving it in all directions. This represents "the contemplative/universal man," in that one is alone performing the ritual (not directly involved in society), yet it is waved in all directions, implying an abstract concern and interaction between the actor and all the rest of the world.

"Residing in the sukka"…on the other hand, involves using the booth as if it were one's home for the week. This usually involves communal gatherings celebrating the holidays, and especially eating (which we try to do only in the sukka during the holiday). This booth actually recalls G-d's protective presence; the "clouds of glory" mentioned during the exodus from Egypt, which surrounded the people of Israel on all sides. This represents "the sensual man/individual concerns" in that the man obligation is eating in the sukka, an exclusive involvement in self pleasure yet this action takes place in a setting which recalls G-d's presence, and thus the possibility of interaction beyond the self.

How are these paradoxes resolved? Here is my answer: "lulav and etrog" involves drawing energy to oneself with a physical object. This essentially means that the natural inclination to ascend to the heavens, live the contemplative life of ethereal thought, is brought back down to interaction with this world in that the mitzvah cannot be observed without the physical object, without interaction with the world of objects and actions.

Similarly, the natural desire to become completely involved in selfhood and sensuality…the physical world is countered and sanctified by the inclusion of material objects in the performance of a divine command.

Both aspects share their strengths and become capable of completeness, uniting the individual (selfhood/material reality), and G-d (and thus the world as a whole with that individual). The same holds true in the relationship between eating in the sukka and the "sukka as G-d's presence" concept.

As humans we stand with our heads in heaven and our feet on the ground; the simultaneous presence of seeming dianetric opposites within us is part of our very essence, in a way, specifically what makes us human. The key is not to take the easy road and simply choose one good or evil, heaven or earth, love or hate.

In this we deny our very humanity and our true purpose. There is an infinitely fine line, which marks the balance between these opposites and allows each its full constructive expression; it is like "a razors edge", and sometimes we get cut.

This goes with the territory, and it is okay so long as we get up again, learn and keep on moving. This is part of what Sukkot is all about, taking the energy from Rosh HaShana and Yom Kippur.

We regard our personal attributes/ relationship with G-d, and also that of the community of Israel. We establish the points of balance through which each of these attributes is brought to a state of completion and can thereafter truly be utilized in our spiritual/material devotions throughout the year. I give all of us a bracha (blessing): We should find ourselves in Eretz Yisrael for Sukkot, and if not, then it should be our last holiday outside of our homeland.

Drummin' Along
Participants at the International Hillel Conference practice their drumming skills.

Hillel Calendar of Events

Tuesday, September 28
COFFEHOUSE
8:00-9:30pm Hillel House

Friday, October 1
KESHER SHABBAT SERVICE
6pm Hillel House
6:12pm Candlelighting
7:15pm FREE DINNER
Hillel House

Saturday, October 2
SHEMINI ATZERET
6:11pm Candlelighting
$ COLLEGE SIMCHAT TORAH CELEBRATION
7:30pm Hillel House
TORAH READING
Deut. 14:22-16:17.
Numbers 29:35-30
HAFTARAH 1 Kings 8:54-66

Sunday, October 3
SIMCHAT TORAH

Tuesday, Oct. 5
JEWISH STUDENT UNION GENERAL MEETING
6pm Hillel House

Friday, Oct. 8
SHABBAT SERVICE
6pm Hillel House
6:01pm Candlelighting
DINNER
7:15 Hillel House Free

Saturday, Oct. 9
TORAH READING
BERESHIT Gen. 1:1-6:8
HAFTARAH 1 Sam. 20:18-42

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

September 28,1999

Tori walks a tight rope to Venus

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

TORI AMOS
To Venus and Back
Atlantic

Upon listening to Tori's latest, a sudden fear overwhelms me. It disturbs me. It plagues me. The fear I speak of is well known by fans of bands such as U2, and the fear stems from the possibility that sometime in the not-so-distant future we will listen to a new release by Tori Amos and ask each other, "Wow, remember when Tori was good?"

Thankfully, that day hasn't come yet. Hopefully it won't come anytime soon. But To Venus and Back, Tori's most recent release, leaves much to be desired when held up to its predecessors. 1992's Little Earthquakes is already a classic. With Under the Pink (1994), she got funky. With Boys for Pele (1996), she got angry. To Venus and Back doesn't offer anything new that From the Choirgirl Hotel (1998) didn't offer or do better.

The album consists of two discs, one of new material entitled Venus: Orbiting, and a live disc entitled Venus Live: Still Orbiting. The live disc was recorded on the "Plugged '98" tour, and the new material was recorded hastily this summer before embarking on the "Five and a Half weeks" tour with Alanis Morissette. As a result, the new songs sound disjointed and thrown together.

The opening track, "Bliss," sounds a bit too much like "Sugar," with a catchy, poppy chorus thrown in. And when an album opens with lyrics like "Father, I killed my monkey," we know it can only be Tori. Venus: Orbiting has a few gems. Songs like "The Glory of the '80s" and "Josephine" are brilliant. "Concertina," Tori's ode to intoxication is beautiful and poppy at the same time — you can't have fine wine without some cheese.

"Riot Proof" is a funky track, and "Datura," a laundry list of different types of flowers provides some pretty eccentricities that have become one of Tori's trademarks.

Tori Amos' latest release goes to Venus, but it may not come back.

But other songs don't fare so well. On "Lust" and "Suede" Tori seems perfectly content with stagnation. "Suede" in particular is annoying because of the fact that it goes absolutely nowhere. The second single, "1,000 Oceans", closes the disc with lyrics like, "I've cried a thousand oceans..." Come on, Tori. We know you can write better lyrics than that. All in all, the new material is like sugary kids' cereals: they taste good and fill you up, but you're hungry five minutes later.

The live disc, Venus Live: Still Orbiting, is nothing short of excellence. Its only shortcoming is that there isn't more of it. Tracks like "Sugar," and "Cloud on My Tongue" hold just as much punch on the silverdisc as they do in concert. "Precious Things," opening the disc, sounds great plugged in. I would say that "Cornflake Girl" and "The Waitress" are the standouts of the disc, but it's hard to think of a track that tops another — especially "Cooling," which has never appeared on an album before.

Maybe Tori should have released a double live album, because as it is this live disc is long overdue. The studio stuff could have used a bit of retooling in the studio, and the absence of notable singles on the live album ("Crucify," "Winter," "Spark," "Raspberry Swirl," etc., etc.) gives it a sense of incompleteness. But then again, excess can be a bad thing.

Venus: Orbiting B- Venus Live: Still Orbiting A

One Man Triumphs As Writer and Actor Fuse

Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

THE TEXAS TRINITY
Directed by Steve Bailey
The Curtain Theatre
September 24-25

It may seem like a rather self-indulgent endeavor for anyone to write and then perform a three-part, possibly autobiographical, one-man show. But this theatrical trend, still unrecognized enough to be considered novel, is one more step towards expanding our methods of story-telling and an audiences' exposure to new ideas. So it should be no surprise that the New World Theatre, in their endless support of up and coming styles, brought Paul Bonin-Rodriguez to UMass this past weekend. He very energetically showed us his trilogy of solo-performances collectively called The Texas Trinity, a perfect example of this unconventional and surprisingly effective use of a stage.

It would have been difficult to leave any installment of this series without something good to say about Bonin-Rodriguez (yes, that's him you remember from last year's Quinceniera), because he's all the entertainment you've had and he's all over the place. As he recounts the coming of age adventures of Johnnie Roy Hobson, Bonin-Rodriguez consistently portrays not only a young homosexual hero, but also everyone our narrator encounters along the way. His character work was outstanding as he introduced us to John's mother, her corrupt boyfriend/preacher, the Domingo family (who operate the Dairy Queen where Johnnie is employed), a drama queen, a lesbian singer, and The Judds (Johnnie's absolute favorites!) — to name a few.

Johnnie's tale is not unlike many others anyone familiar with the gay community has seen: it has its share of exploitation, unchallenged abuse, destruction of self-esteem, theological imposition, inspiration, education, and hope for a progressive future. But The Texas Trinity's commonalities with other, recently popularized growing-up-gay stories, doesn't discount its significance. The struggle for gay-rights, even in this most happiest of Valley's, is ever-present and any pride/awareness promoted is worthwhile (particularly for those that have no experience with alternative lifestyles). Also, just how well Bonin-Rodriguez relayed the more important details of Johnnie's high school life—making it impossible for us to not be at least a little endeared to our protagonist—helped to make this particular lesson on the trials of being queer a special one.

Undoubtedly Bonin-Rodriguez knows how to take care of himself in front of an audience (as doubly implied by his ability to hold our attention on a bare stage, alone) with the grace and poignancy of a secure and entertaining man. But, as also seen with this production, he's a fantastic scriptwriter. All three shows maintained a wonderful continuity, believability, and the perfect balance of emotional and intellectual impact. Although all of the dialogue was delivered by just one actor, the skill behind its written architecture was apparent.

Oh yeah, Bonin-Rodriguez's stuff wasn't just relevant, realistic and well-structured, it was also funny as hell. Some of the finer moments of this production included Johnnie modeling his award winning Dairy Queen uniform to Dolly Pardon's "9 to 5," Lady Bird Johnson's visit to the Cedar Springs DQ, and John's impromptu percussion work at a gay and lesbian music festival. And here's the place to pay homage to director Steve Bailey and lighting designer Max Parilla, for it was their collective input that created the well tuned comedy of these scenes.

Needless to say then, three separate trips to the Fine Arts Center were worth it this weekend. Although catching only a fraction of Bonin-Rodriguez's work could leave its own substantial impression, there will be a lack of completion. And in spite of myself, I felt the need to attend all three shows. With particular attention paid to the unwarranted and unsettling restraints of Protestant traditions on homosexuality, The Texas Trinity was a constant source of entertainment. Well written, making one think, laugh; finely acted; a clean production: Bonin-Rodriguez has taken another step towards a firmly founded and deserved respect in the theatre.

Harper's Latest Burns to Glory

Brooke Werley
Collegian Correspondent

BEN HARPER AND THE INNOCENT CRIMINALS
Burn to Shine
Virgin Records

It is impossible to dislike Ben Harper. His range of music can go from calypso grooves to hard rock in zero to 54-37, the length of the musical king of eclecticism's new release Burn to Shine. The new album, available in stores now, takes yet another leap forward in the development of his soulful vocals and mind-bending guitar slides, and also features backing by The Innocent Criminals, with whom Harper has been touring on his most recent North American travels. The group consists of Juan Nelson on bass, Dean Butterworth on drums and David Leach working additional percussion into the songs.

Harper has been solo-heading his work since signing with Virgin Records in '93, beginning with the self-production of his debut album Welcome to the Cruel World, which came out in February of 1994. He has gone through incredible musical and lyrical transitions since then with Fight for Your Mind and The Will to Live, but is literally breaking through and redeveloping into still more musical styles in Burn to Shine.

Though the word eclectic has been as much associated with Harper in the past as his trademark acoustic Weissenborn playing, the new album creates an entirely new meaning for this word. Harper guides the listener on a diverse world tour of music during the course of the full-length CD. Within the limits of the album he invites the ear down south where he plays "Suzie Blue" in a form of jazz that sends the listener well below the Mason-Dixon line. We don't get a chance to return home before Harper is handing us a one-way plane ticket out of the Dixieland to a Caribbean Island street corner where he soothes "Steal My Kisses" into our ears. Early in the CD he rocks out with a sound comparable to Jimi Hendrix in "Less" while he manages to create an almost ambient twenty-second beginning to the opening track "Alone".

All of the twelve tracks on the disk follow a similarly arbitrary course of play, but are pulled together beautifully by Harper's soul-centered vocals and the equally ambitious lyrics which they wind themselves around, barely giving any critic a chance to question the effect of such a wide range of musicals genres on the album's impact. The title, Burn to Shine, very effectively categorizes the intended message of the album's lyrics and spellbinding music; it expresses that, seeing the light at the end of the tunnel takes walking through the inferno. The first track is entitled "Alone" and begins the CD's progression on a musical path to enlightenment until reaching the final song, "In the Lord's Arms".

This latest of Ben Harper's creations seems to justify loyal fan's praises of his live performances who swear up and down that seeing him on stage is a 'religious experience'. If you can't make it to church this Sunday — maybe it will make you feel better with Burn to Shine sitting in your room, but it will definitely take the soul captive while it drags your senses out if hed for a joyride they will not soon forget.

Ben Harper will be performing with The Innocent Criminals at the Avalon Ballroom in Boston on November 2. Specific ticket information is not yet available. For more information visit Ben Harper on the World Wide Web at www.benharper.com.

Ben Harper continues to glimmer in his most recent effort, Burn To Shine.

COURTESY ANNA/DA

An Updated Net Worth

Internet Site of the Week:
http://www.sportspages.com

Moving from the entertainment realm to sports, we have every die-hard sports fan's dream. Move over ESPN and CNNSI. Sportspages.com is a comprehensive sports site built around a bevy of great links. In order to cover every sport, sportspages has links to every major newspaper's sports page, in every region of the country, all for free. Plus, all your favorite columnists are organized and linked to their various sites, so you never have to look for Peter Gammons' articles ever again. In addition to that, there are links to every major media news outlet, various radio stations, a host of magazines on-line, and tools useful to journalists everywhere. The brilliance of the site though, is that they generate absolutely no content of their own. It's entirely based on links and selling caps, posters, and books on the site.

After a successful first week of programming, finishing number one overall and making a significant move in the key 18-49 demographic, CBS announced that it will promote its fall TV season debut through America Online's Entertainment Channel. Last season's CBS/AOL partnership was a key element in the network's premiere week's success, which gave CBS its first week one win in five years. Part of the promotion will include a contest. CBS viewers will be asked to log on to AOL and share their opinions about that night's schedule. Then, they will be entered into a sweepstakes. CBS hopes to use the viewer information to help shape programming for the future.

The BMI music company has inked an agreement with Emusic.com, the on-line company that sells downloadable music. In a continuing effort to end digital music piracy, BMI has issued a license covering performances of BMI music on the company's Web sites. BMI will then distribute the royalties to performers whose work is Webcast via Emusic.

There's a new study, which suggests that not all on-line companies lose money by operating. Over 42-percent of business-to-business e-commerce Web sites, online three years or more say their site is profitable, according to ActivMedia. Of sites online less than one year, 27-percent said they were making money. ActivMedia also reported the average first-year income for a business-to-business e-commerce site was $84,000, while those operating three years or more took in nearly $30 million on average. That's big bucks.

FairMarket Inc., Microsoft Corp., Excite At Home and Ticketmaster Online-CitySearch Inc. are all combining their online auction sites to compete with section leader, Ebay. The companies said their relationships, through which they will pool items offered for sale, creates a network that can reach more than 46 million unduplicated visitors, or 75.3 percent of all Internet users. Additional participants include Lycos, Tripod and even public broadcaster, PBS Online.

Adam Martignetti

The online toy market, estimated at $43 million in 1998, will to grow to $1.6 billion within three years, say analysts at Gomez Advisors. "Online toys in 1999 will be what online books were in 1997," said Gomez's Liz Leonard. "We expect the market to take off this holiday season. Companies such as Etoys.com, Amazon.com and KBKids.com are hoping that consumers will be a lot more likely to buy toys on line than fight long holiday lines at department stores.

Sony Music Entertainment and Time Warner named Scott N. Flanders to lead the integration of e-commerce into their retailer, CDNow and Columbia House. Flanders is the former president of computer and reference publisher Macmillan Publishing USA. Most recently, he was chairman of Telstreet.com, an online vendor of wireless products and services.

In another online job announcement, former astronaut Sally Ride has been named president of ex-CNN anchor Lou Dobbs' Web venture, Space.com. The first American woman into space told the New York Post, "I have a fair amount of management experience. I understand what it takes to build a Web site."

If you're looking to get a stamp really quick and you happen to be in Germany, head on over to I-Stamp.com. The German company, Deutsche Post, and I-Venture a wholly owned subsidiary of Deutsche Telekom, have invested $3 million in the Internet postage company. I-Stamp said that it will use these funds to begin expanding into international markets. No word on when they'll hit the U.S.

The numbers are in, and the champion has fallen. Yahoo.com Web site drew more visitors in August than the long-time champion AOL.com, according to a report Monday from Web traffic measurement company Media Metrix. Yahoo! had 33.4 million visitors during the month, while AOL welcomed 29.3 million. In third place was Microsoft's MSN.com with 22.1 million, followed by the home page host site Geocities.com with 21.1 million and popular web browser Netscape.com with 19.8 million.

In a related story, XCNet Corp. and Web auditing company NetRatings said Wednesday that they will launch a worldwide service to track audiences on the Internet. The companies expect advertisers to use their service in making decisions about marketing spending. Last week the two companies launched a U.S. and Canadian Internet ratings service. Their new venture, XCNetRatings.com, says that (all one word), will cover Europe, the Asia Pacific region, Latin America, the Middle East and Africa and is set to begin tracking Internet audiences and advertising by next year.

Almost 1,400 authors have signed up to have their works distributed through On-line services provider FatBrain.com's Matrix online distribution system. Matrix participants will receive up to 100 percent of the fees paid by users to down[illegible]. Unlike most authors' material, the company said that the on-line author's payments will be available for purchase at www.fatbrain.com. Quoted in Advocate

Dance from France

Lyon Ballet Hits FAC

By Krish Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

Beginning their North American tour at the Fine Arts Center, the Lyon Opera Ballet will perform this evening at 7:30 in the Concert Hall.

The company, which is summarized as a classical group dancing a contemporary reparatory, is presenting two works by choreographer Mats Ek: Solo For Two (music by Arvo Part) and Carmen (music by Georges Bizet and Rodion Shchedrin).

Solo for Two is a duet taken from the movie Smoke, an abstract work largely framed in psychological suggestions. And if that isn't incentive enough, this piece features brief nudity.

Ek's interpretation of Carmen employs the popularized cinematic tool known as the "flashback."

The Lyon Opera Ballet has traveled a long way from its roots in France to here they are celebrated as a national treasure.

Although the company has been trained in the deeper traditions of dance they have served as an inspiration to modern choreography. They're quite proud of [illegible] ability to adapt to the styles of choreographers ranging from Bill T. Jones to William Forsythe.

Tickets are [illegible] the Lyon Opera Ballet. Seats are [illegible] and $20, ages [illegible] $10, and Five College Students are $8, $7, and $5.

To purchase tickets or for more information [illegible] Arts Center Box Office at [illegible] 2511. Hours are Monday-Friday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. This performance is presented with the generous support of the Valley Advocate.

RESUME BUILDER!

ATTENTION ALL JUNIOR SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT MAJORS:

The Collegian is now accepting applications for the following positions:

* Assistant Finance Manager
*Assistant Business Manager

Applicants should possess computer and inter-personal skills.

Deadline for Applications: Tuesday, Sept. 28, 1999

Come down and fill out an application in Room 113, Campus Center. Contact Christine Carroll @ 545-3500 or e-mail at hrcollegian@yahoo.com with inquires.

Get Cultured

Read The Arts!!

Your Story Could Be Here Instead of This Space

COME WRITE FOR ARTS!!!!!!

CONGRATULATIONS!

The Department of Biochemistry & Molecular Biology wishes to acknowledge the following students who were named to the Deans List - Spring, 1999. There were 333 honorees in Arts and Sciences - Natural Sciences and Mathematics - 47 from Biochemistry and Molecular Biology!

ABERNETHY, Abraham D.	02	*GLIDDEN, Emily J.	02	*QUYSNER, Annie G.	00
ANDREWS, Paul S.	00	GOROSPE, Cecilia F.	99	REIBOLD, Rebecca E.	00
BARDON, Kevin M.	00	HALEY, Benjamin J.	00	*SANDHU, Kulmeet K.	01
*BURKI, Laura C.	02	*HORAK, Helena M.	02	SHANEHSAZ, Pam	00
*BURKE, Lara A.	00	JENSEN, Curtis W.	99	SHERRITT, Laura J.	99
DA VEIGA, Pericles J.	01	KALET, Brian T.	02	SHUMWAY, Laurence A.	01
DANIELS, Robert D.	00	KELLOGG, Adam R.	00	*SMELKINSON, Margery G.	01
DERUYTER, Benjamin W.	99	*KUROWSKI, Brad G.	99	STROTHERS, Shana L.	99
DUTU, Kolina N.	01	LEVERENCE, Rachael C.	01	*SUSKI, Henry R.	01
EICHENLAUB, Seth S.	00	LIBFELD, Robert	02	*TERRY, Marie A.	00
EISEN, Audrey I.	99	*LING, Hui-Chung T.	02	WARD, Joy E.	02
EISENHAURE, Thomas M.	01	MARRERO, Gabriel J.	99	WIFFIN, Anthony R.	01
ESTAVILLO, Athena C.	00	*MCCULLY, Ryan R.	01	WONG, Eric I.	99
FALCETTI, Donna R.	99	*MOSSACK, Karin E.	00	*YEUNG, Hang leng	01
FRIEMAN, Michael F.	01	PAUL, Benjamin A.	00	*YU, Wenshu	99
GABRIEL, Luke R.	02	*PONG, Winnie W.	02

* Indicates Honors

Band Day!

Show your support, come to band day Saturday OCTOBER 9th

McGuirk Alumni Stadium
UMASS vs. Northeastern

Check out the FREE PROGRAM featuring articles and team rosters compliments of the Collegian

The Campus Career Network,
UMass Alumni Association and
the Sports Management Program present

The Annual Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum's

Sport Management CAREER DAY PANEL

Wednesday, September 29, 1999
3:00-5:00pm
Campus Center, Room 163C

[illegible] MS '93
[illegible] '92
[illegible]ractor

Pillaging the single files

By David Katzoff
Collegian Staff

Continuing to excavate through the obdurate caves of hip-hop's foggy landscape, I have compiled another small sack of jewels.

This brief catalogue contains an array of tantalizing twelve-inch ear candy that will inflate the auditory cavities endlessly. Also a new column feature will include the dancehall riddim record of the month for all you brickyard ally cats and bad men. Vinyl vultures take notes.

Leading off the list is Del, who has re-established himself as a soloist. His latest, "Phoney Phranchise" b/w "Press Rewind" and "Masterminds" are true form Homospian abstractions. "Press Rewind", an eerie, momentous number produced by Del himself, is the standout song.

From the heat chambers of the Alchemist comes three slamming sensations: Severe's "If Words Could Kill" featuring O.C. is a haunting, staccato rhythm adjoined by sharp lyrics from both emcees. Appreciators of cinematic sampling will find a gem in Buc Fifty's "Metal's Advocate", a fabulous synthesis of rhymes and Al Pacino exerts from the film with a similar title.

The Alchemist steps into the background on this one and lets the appropriated intermingling steal the show, but returns on the flip side with "Permanent Scars." Both sides are blazing.

Diversifying his production style, he lays down "99 Live" a melodic, thugged-out anthem from the Terror Squad fan. Although the lyrical concept is rather marginal, the beat resonates and incites repeated rotations.

Sticking with thematic thuggedness, I had to include Mobb Deep's "Thug Music". Despite mediocre lyrics, this song has the ability to both raise blood pressure and emotional levels, inciting upward thrusts of your volume control unit.

"Connection" by O.C., off the Organized Rhymes compilation, is a symphonic masterpiece (in spite of its brief length.) The into lyrics are stunningly definitive of O's concrete milieu: "I'm coming from Brooklyn, New York where the sneak thieves hawk/ and the dreads sell coke and the skunk that makes you cough..." Do not sleep on this track.

Afu-Ra has released two 12" records in preparation for his LP Body of the Life Force. The initial single, "Whirlwind Through Cities" caught fire last spring encouraging Gee Street Records to bless us again. "Defeat" b/w "Mortal Kombat" which picks up where Ra left off, features an addicting Primo beat and his patented scratch phrasing.

From the realms of political rap, comes a tribute track to Mumia Abu-Jamal entitled, "Mumia 911".

Granted the concept is a bit grim for parties and clubs, however this 20+ collaboration (from Afu-Ra, Aceyalone, Last Emperor and Pharaoh Monch to Diamond D, Black Thought, Poor Righteous Teachers, Zach De La Rocha and Chuck D) undoubtedly deserves proper attention. The cause is worthy, the lyrics are poignant and the beat is riveting!

Lastly, from the domain of the altitudinous anticipation, blasts Dr. Dre's first single, "Still Dre", guest starring Snoop and featuring lyrics written by the one and only Shawn Carter. If expectations for The Chronic 2001 are stratospheric, this first track will begin satisfaction process. Simply put, it is hot ta def!! In retrospect the single files read like so:

1. Del tha Funky Homosepian – "Press Rewind"
2. Severe feat. O.C. – "If Words Could Kill"
3. Buc Fifty – "Metal's Advocate"
4. Terror Squad – "99 Live"
5. Mobb Deep – "Thug Music"
6. O.C. – "Connection"
7. Afu-Ra – "Defeat"
8. Mumia 911 – "Mumia 911"
9. Dre, Dre feat. Snoop – "Still Dre"
10. Reggae Riddim of the month: Headache on VP Records, produced by rookie sensation Louis "Flabba" Malcolm with songs from Spragga Benz, Mr. Vegas, Sean Paul, Tanya Stevens, Cobra and others...

Well that's a rap. Catch y'all on the flip side. Stay tuned...

COURTESY UMASS GALLERY

Weybourne: Sunlight on Wood is just one of many pieces currently on display by Roger Ackling. Through October 22, the University Gallery at the FAC is featuring the artist's latest experiments with natural exposure.

Sam Mendes Serves a Simmering Direction

By Stephen Hunter
The Washington Post

Everybody hates him. He deserves to be hated. He is the future. He is the replacement. He's what's next. It's over for us, it's just beginning for him.

Sam Mendes: so tender, so charming, so young, so gifted, so modest, so British, so Cambridge. What's not to hate?

He's only one of the world's hottest theatrical directors, with his stage-busting "Cabaret" still on the boards, the big new Stephen Sondheim musical in development for the spring, and the legendary backside of one N. Kidman in "The Blue Room" burned into the erotic consciousness of Western man forever. Now the little weasel has had the affronters to make what will probably be regarded as the year's best movie.

"American Beauty," with Kevin Spacey and Annette Bening, has got everybody talking. Attention, "Blair Witch Project": You are now officially over, butted off the cocktail circuit by young Mr. Mendes, who will certainly earn an Oscar nom and very probably the Oscar itself. Not bad for a washed-up hall player.

OK, the game wasn't baseball but that horrid Brit garbage called cricket, but that's one of the influences that created Sam. He's a new thing: an Orson Welles who can hit a googly.

It is said he was hired for his first theatrical job, at the Chichester Festival Theater in 1987 out of Cambridge, because he was such a googly blaster two-hop trapper or rebound-snarfer or wicket-slider or whatever the hell it is in cricket, because the festival director wanted to field cricketeers who could hand the Royal Shakespeare Company its head on a platter. Agincourt, and all that. But when queried, Mendes modestly eschews a direct answer, modestly avers that cricketing had only a little to do with it, he was just lucky and such and so forth.

Of course he's a decent chap! See, it's all part of the pattern! See how easy it would be if he were an arrogant snot, a Tory fop, a royal pain in the Antipodes like some of them, but here he is, absolutely super pleasant and engaging. Makes us mad! I hate it when they're so damned... well behaved!

"I learned the principles of leadership from sports teams," he says. "When you're the captain of a team" — he also played football, as the English mistakenly call soccer —"your first responsibility is to exercise authority without arrogance, to get people to work together for a common goal. And that of course is what you're doing as a director.

"I'm not a teacher or a coach. I'm a captain. I find a way to bring out of people what is latent, what's there, rather than teaching them something new."

He applies this principle to the current movie and his most famous previous project.

"When I met Kevin Spacey, I felt that there was something in him far more vulnerable than those quick-talking, assertive, slick parts that had made him famous. I wanted to get that into the film.

"When I met Nicole Kidman, I found a woman who was very bright, funny and energetic. I wanted to get that on the stage. That's my instinctive philosophy."

He is great working with performers, no doubt about it. Almost certainly, Spacey will get another Academy Award nomination, and so, too, will Annette Bening. Others in the cast may well be celebrated, like Chris Cooper as an abusive yet weirdly loving father, Wes Bentley as his strangely detached son and Thora Birch as the daughter of the Bening-Spacey marriage next door.

What a strange movie it is. Spacey plays Lester Burnham, an archetypal suburbanite with a nice house and family, but his life is headed downhill. His job performance is skidding; his wife hates him; his teenage daughter won't speak to him; and he hates himself. Worse, a field grade officer — "Col. Frank Fitts, United States Marines!" — has moved in next door with a peeping-Tom son who videotapes everything and a wife numbed toward catatonia by Frank's bluster.

The movie is hateful, hostile, aggressive, finally violent, and funny as hell—as well as heartbreaking, strangely beautiful, infinitely sad and wholly unforgettable. It watches as Lester's life unravels in stately magnificence, like a star exploding in a different cosmos as viewed through a light-year-spanning telescope.

Lester's wife begins an affair with a crass real estate mogul, his daughter begins one with the peeping Tom while Lester himself quits his job and begins to conjure ways to seduce his daughter's best friend. For a movie so merry with rancor, it heads inevitably toward violence. He's come up, all the smart boys say, with a thing that's particularly American, somehow, this... this... cricketer!

He'd shot up the theatrical ladder, becoming a star director at 24 when his production of "London Assurance," at Chichester, went to the Theatre Royal in London; next his production of "The Cherry Orchard," with Dame Judi Dench, opened in London. Soon he was rethinking "Cabaret," "The Glass Menagerie" and "Company," bringing a new edge to London, then World Theater.

Films, as with many another young hotshot, were the next step.

"I was taking meetings with people, and I went to DreamWorks, and I met Steven" — as in Spielberg — "and he said, 'I think this would make a damned good movie.' He handed me the script. Of course he'd also handed it to seven or eight others. I read it on the flight back to London, and the first thing I did when I was done was read it again. I saw it in my mind right away, filmically, if you will. I called my agent and said, 'I really want to get this.'"

The script was by former playwright and sitcom writer Alan Ball, a blisteringly corrosive examination of suburban angst, betrayal, loneliness.

"When I met with them again, I told them what it would look like, who would be in it. I actually pitched myself to them. It's very un-English, but I did what I had to do. I wanted to put the story front and center, before the look of the film."

That's the chief gift of a director: to tell stories. "And it's difficult to bring off, because you wake up one day and you're working with an army. It's a very bizarre thing."

For that reason, Mendes hates certain affectations of hotshot directors.

"I don't like to see 'A film by' in the credits, followed by a name," he says contemptuously. "No one man could do a film. I couldn't possibly do a film on my own. Without the actors, the writer, the brilliant cinematographer, I'd be utterly lost."

And he almost was. The 1 1/2 days on the set were a complete loss.

"You think you're doing so well, and everybody's patting you on the back and telling you it's so fabulous, and then, the next day you look at the rushes, and you think, 'It doesn't look anything like I wanted!' It wasn't real. It felt too cartoony. It was somehow not alive. We had to throw it all out. But at least in that way, I defined what I didn't want."

He says of his early struggle, "I kept telling myself I can get through anything because nothing is as difficult as when I was a kid. I have a crutch. I draw. I storyboard. Not very well, you know, just stick figures, but if I can work out a representation of what I saw in my head when I first read the script, then I know it'll be all right. I think I see things first. I don't feel them until I do them, but I see them first of all. That's how I stay close to my instinctive reaction to the story. I am drawn to certain meanings. That's where my raw material comes from."

Decoded, this is a reference to his own youth as an only child in a marriage that broke up when he was five; he is the son of a lecturer in English literature and an author of children's books.

"At a certain point in my life I was desperate for structure. Then I stumbled on it. I went as a schoolboy to Stratford and I saw three plays — Antony and Cleopatra, The Merchant of Venice and The Tempest — and I can still remember every detail and can recite from them exactly. I knew: That's it. When I got to Cambridge, I got into a rehearsal room, and I just wanted to have a go at it. I got hooked. That was it. That was my life."

Now the filmmaker is rumored to be on the verge of signing an exclusive contract with DreamWorks for three more films, and appears to be on the verge of one of those important careers.

"In theater," he says, "the trick is to bring the world into a room. In film, the film is the world! I'm ready for the world. I want sand! I want camels! I want muskets!"

Steve Allen Talks Vulgarity = Comedy?

By Mary K. Feeney
The Hartford Courant

HARTFORD, CT – By now, Steve Allen must be at least a little weary of the "Renaissance man" label, but the description fits.

Allen – comedian, actor, composer, writer and musician – was in Hartford last week as part of the 1999 Rogow Distinguished Visiting Lecturers Program at the University of Hartford and to receive an honorary doctorate. Allen, 77, spoke to theater students and took some time afterward to talk about comedy. As creator and first host of the "Tonight Show" in 1933 and the wildly funny "The Steve Allen Show" in the late '50s, Allen knows how to make people laugh.

Question: What is the state of humor and stand-up comedy today?

Answer: The first thought that occurs to me is that, in the late '50s, I was asked by The Atlantic Monthly to write an essay on stand-up comedy. So I did. And probably the least interesting thing I said in the article was that there were then only about 50 comedians in show business... And that fact, in itself, isn't terribly important except when you relate it to a newer fact, which is that there are now about 5,000 comedians in the business.

There's been obviously an extrapolation/explosion of the comic abilities.

And when anything that unusual takes place, the immediate question is how, why? And the answer, I think, is that the generation of the last 40 years or so is the first in history that has been brainwashed with comedy from the cradle. These days, most Americans are born in hospitals, and even in secondrate hospitals, they have those TV sets on the walls. So one of the first things the little ones hear is people laughing at "Honeymooners" reruns or "Lucy" reruns, whatever. So they become accustomed to the laughter; I wish they heard more of it in some of their tragic childhoods. But anyway, I think it's that, and the dominance of television, which is clear and away the No. 1 influence on American living generally...

The negative factor is that American comedy is now inexcusably vulgar. You can hardly any longer sit down with the family and watch an evening's television. What happens when you try to do that is, "Whoops, sorry, honey, you can't watch that," and you switch to another channel where something even filthier is likely to pop up.

There is a national movement now to counter this, as you know; it's come to the attention of the White House and Congress. And there is the risk of censorship.

Q: Who do you think is funny?

A: Probably the same people you and everybody else thinks are funny. The Billy Crystals, Robin Williams... It's possible, as I mentioned earlier today, to be a successful actor without being phenomenally gifted. You may just look marvelous or have a cute voice or whatever. Just so it's possible to have a good career in the comedy field without being magically funny yourself. But there are those who are so funny, they're almost too funny... Jonathan Winters is certainly in that category...

I still laugh at our old comedy gang, Louis Nye and Don Knotts, Tom Poston. They were a great comedy gang. They're still all funny, still all in the business.

Q: Is stand-up comedy dead? It seems that you don't see stand-up much on television.

A: When you see the guys on television, it's usually because they did so well at stand-up that they were hired to work on their own situation comedies. A lot of the guys that we do now like because of their funny shows – Jerry Seinfeld, Paul Reiser – they really came out of the stand-up field. There isn't much in the way anymore of two-man teams, the straight man and a comic. In the old days, there used to be a lot: Abbott and Costello, Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy, Dean Martin and Jerry Lewis. There isn't much of that going on anymore, which is a pity because those were funny acts.

Women's Ice Hockey
First Practice
October 4th

YOU AREN'T LIVING UNLESS YOU'RE WITH ARTS AND LIVING!!!!!

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar

Women's Tennis falls to Columbia

Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

The UMass women's tennis team couldn't have asked for a more perfect day to host their first match of the season. Bad weather, which had plagued the Minutewomen in their last two matches, moved on and left nothing but a great day for tennis. In a season whose start has been hampered by the rains, the sunshine had to have been a welcome visitor, more welcome then the lions of Columbia.

Columbia came in as a new look team. Already 3-0 this year they were looking for their fourth win against a UMass club that just wanted to play its first meaningful match.

Although the Lions had lost to the Minutewomen last year, coach Judy Dixon predicted that this was going to be tough match to pull out; and one that everyone needed to play up to their ability. A tough match it was, but it was one that was made even tougher with an injury to sophomore Helena Horak, causing the number two singles player to retire, down 2-3 in the first set.

Horak was questionable a day before the match but Dixon was hopeful that at least she would play doubles. Feeling better Horak showed true grit and tried to make a go of at singles as well. Horak's forearm injury was described as analogous to shin splints.

The squad fell 4-3 in a very hard fought match, but the injury to Horak seemed almost too overwhelming for a squad whose strength is not in their numbers. The Minutewomen are, by comparison to most, a small team and one that can definitely not afford an injury to any member of the team, especially the number two singles player.

"Having to compete without Helena made a big difference. Since we do have a small team, we need to make sure that everybody is staying healthy for us," Dixon said after the match.

First singles featured a dominating performance by the senior Ola Gerasimova. The native Russian really had her game working against Columbia's Joyce Chang. Gerasimova steam-rolled her was to a convincing 6-1, 6-3 victory. At no point in the match was there really any questioning Gerasimova's dominance as she chalked up an easy victory.

Annie Hamilton played an inspiring match for the Maroon and White in the third singles slot. She defeated Freshman Andrea Sanders in a hard fought first set 7-5, and really took control by winning 6-2 in the second.

The first doubles team of Gerasimova/Hamilton defeated the duo of Weintraub and Krishnaswamy, 8-3. Meaning that the match would come down to the play of the second and third doubles squads.

The number two squad of Lebovitz and Stammen were overmatched by the young freshman pair of Sanders and Shetty and lost by a count of 8-2.

Jets in tailspin at 0-3 with loss

By Richard Oliver
Newsday

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. – The New York Jets' opening loss to the New England Patriots hurt, last week's defeat at Buffalo stung and Sunday's 27-20 setback to the Redskins? Crushing.

After a fourth-quarter collapse reminiscent of the club's nightmarish 1996 campaign, the Jets are 0-3 for the third time this decade, badly damaging their hopes of returning to the postseason. In league history, only five teams have rebounded from such a deficit to qualify for the playoffs, and none reached the Super Bowl.

"It's disappointing," center Kevin Mawae said afterward, sitting on his stool in a stricken locker room. "It's sickening, actually. Every loss, but the situation we're in, 0-3, is not where we wanted to be, and that's sickening."

There's no immediate cure available. The Jets, who have lost four in a row over two seasons, now head to Denver for a rematch of last January's AFC title game against a Broncos team also staggering at 0-3. After that, the Jets come home to face the revenge-minded Jacksonville Jaguars (2-1) in a replay of last year's divisional playoff.

"I'm going to go home, hug my kid, turn some jazz music on, stay in my house, turn my phone off and forget about it," linebacker Bryan Cox said of the season's downturn. "I'll come back tomorrow, watch some tape, and get back to it."

The Jets already have two home losses, one more than all of last season, and are one shy of matching their loss total in last year's 12-4 campaign.

"You don't want it to be miserable," offensive tackle Jumbo Elliott said, "and the alternative to that is winning some games."

The Jets, up 17-13 with 8:10 remaining Sunday, believed they were in great position to do just that. But in a span of less than two minutes over the final 4:11, touchdown runs of 4 and 7 yards by Washington's Stephen Davis – one set up by a pair of pass-interference calls against cornerback Ray Mickens and the other by quarterback Rick Mirer's fumble – erased that confidence and sent the Jets reeling.

The Washington offense, the most prolific in the league through the first two weeks, finished with 333 yards, 137 in the second half. As part of a 24-carry, 93-yard performance, Davis finished with three short scoring runs, giving him eight TDs on the year.

Quarterback Brad Johnson, the league's top-rated passer, was 17 of 28 for 241 yards, with no TDs or interceptions.

The Jets, after rushing the ball only 18 times for 74 yards last week, collected 142 yards on 31 attempts Sunday. Curtis Martin had 85 on 20 carries, including a 3-yard scoring run with 1:46 left in the third quarter for a 14-13 Jets lead. Mirer, with his second consecutive start for the first time since 1996, completed 17 of 31 throws for 227 yards, with a touchdown, an interception and the crucial fumble. The touchdown toss was his first since 1996.

The final low blow in a miserable afternoon in which the Jets lost despite outdistancing the Redskins in overall yardage (337-333), rushing yards (142-96) and time of possession (31:38-28:22) was delivered with 1:53 remaining when an apparent 16-yard touchdown throw from Mirer to Keyshawn Johnson was reversed by replay. Officials, who called for the review, ruled that Johnson did not have possession of the ball before tumbling out of the back of the end zone.

The Redskins, in running out the clock, also caught a break when officials ruled that Davis was down when the ball popped loose at the end of his third-down run to the Jets' 32-yard line, with cornerback Aaron Glenn sprinting away with the fumble for what would have been the game-tying score.

This is the first time in many years where I have to bite my lip at what went on out there," Jets coach Bill Parcells said of the officiating.

He was less restrained in addressing some of the other woes afflicting the Jets, including six sacks of Mirer and Mickens' alarming struggles, which he referred to as "some non-competitive coverage."

Mickens would not comment about his play after the game.

In the fourth quarter, on an 80-yard Washington drive, Mickens was called for interference twice against former Texas A&M teammate Albert Connell, the second setting the Redskins up at the 4-yard line. After the resulting Davis score, which gave Washington a 20-17 lead with 4:11 left, defensive end Kenard Lang posted two of his three sacks on the game, the second forcing a fumble by Mirer that Dan Wilkinson recovered at the Jets 21.

Four snaps later, Davis rumbled in from 7 yards out for a 27-17 lead.

The result left Parcells unsure of what to do. "I don't know," he said, "but it doesn't look good right now to me."

US lacks class in celebration

By Leonard Shapiro
The Washington Post

BROOKLINE, Mass. – European players were quietly seething Sunday night about what they considered to be a lack of sportsmanship from the U.S. Ryder Cup team and some of their fans Sunday at The Country Club.

They were particularly upset by the celebration that erupted on the 17th green after Justin Leonard made a 45-foot birdie putt that ultimately provided the winning half-point to win the Cup for the U.S.

Although Jose Maria Olazabal still had a 30-foot putt that could have tied the hole and kept Europe alive, Leonard was mobbed by many of his teammates and other members of the U.S. delegation in a spontaneous reaction that delayed Olazabal's preparations. He then missed the putt.

"It was an ugly picture to see," Olazabal said. "You just look at that picture and make your decision. I don't want to make a whole thing about this. The thing is it shouldn't have happened. We're playing a match. We're trying to show respect for each other, and I don't think it was the right thing to do.

"I understand there was a lot of emotions going on, but at the same time you have to have your feet on the ground and realize what the situation is."

Teammate Colin Montgomerie, who was in the fairway waiting to hit to the 17th when Leonard made the putt, also did not like what he saw.

"I couldn't believe what I was seeing on that 17th green," he said. "Jose still had a putt to halve. I couldn't believe that. I thought they'd all just walk off onto the 18th green. It was cleared, and he was left on his own to have a putt. I don't think it affected the results of the match, Jose just had a very difficult putt to make."

Both U.S. captain Ben Crenshaw and Leonard apologized during the team's post-match news conference, and Tom Lehman said that while the incident was unfortunate, "there never was any ill will intended."

"In the excitement of the moment, Justin making a 50-foot putt to probably clinch the Ryder Cup, we all got excited," Lehman said. "...In retrospect, we probably wish we all would have jumped up and down in place instead of running down the side of the green."

There was more heckling during the final round, and lots more cheering from the highly partisan American crowd for botched European shots and missed putts.

"From time to time, you get some clever people that do certain things that we all know is not right," said Olazabal. "I don't think it's needed, to be honest. I don't think these things have any place at a golf tournament, on a golf course. You can cheer your own team as much as you want, but just show some respect, it's as simple as that."

Even Payne Stewart, who lost to Montgomerie Sunday, was upset by the crowd.

"I was disgusted with some of the actions and some of the name-calling and the heckling that goes on with Colin," he said.

Doug's first movie

Former UMass football and baseball standout Doug Clark completed his first full season in the minors batting .326 with 11 home runs and 58 RBI with Single A Bakersfield Blaze. He was then moved up to Double A with the Shreveport Captains.

Mets drop from WC lead

By Marty Noble
Newsday

PHILADELPHIA – The New York Mets may find it comforting, though probably not, to know that the best team in franchise history came to this city in September, 1986 and endured a weekend of three consecutive losses. Disappointed, but hardly distressed, it returned home to clinching merely delayed.

The best Mets team since 1988 returned home Sunday from this city, disappointed and distressed, has suffered a torturous weekend of losing that significantly raised the specter of a clinching soon to be denied.

Because of a collapse as spectacular as any the franchise has experienced in its 38 seasons, the concept of no championship exists where hope had existed a week ago.

The Mets enter the final seven days of their season with a terrible case of emotional whiplash, the kind that happens only in the gut lap of a Major League baseball season. In six days, they have gone from entertaining thoughts of winning a division title to denying fears of an empty October, from moving at warp speed to the playoffs to moving at the speed of plight in the other direction.

So much has gone awry for the Mets in that brief period that only one championship still remains available to them. And now they trail in that race, too. The process of elimination, as it applies to the division race, ended Sunday when they lost, 5-2, to the Phillies and the Braves overwhelmed the Expos. The wild-card race remains undecided, though six successive losses and no signs of a renaissance have made the Mets decided underdogs.

Even after they lost a game Sunday, they lost ground. The Reds' stirring, 12-inning victory over Cardinals that pushed Cincinnati game ahead of the Mets buoyed after the Mets' bases had loaded Queens. "I'm hoping we don't ha ground tomorrow," Mike Piazza referring to the Reds game Cardinals Monday.

But after what happ Sunday, the Mets can't be sure won't bring more than a bit calamity. "Everything that wrong did go wrong," Rick Reed You wonder how long that on."

The losing pitcher bring himself to review the scene relive the line drive Phillies Desi Relaford essentially caught in the fourth inning as the ground third baseman Kevin Jordan stabbed in the seventh when the eventually produced their m ment of runs on a two-run double Rey Ordonez. On the game-end double play that came with the loaded, Reed's source said he replayed them in his head.

Those unfortunate events had as much to do with the Mets' the two-run home run Reed threw off Reed in the fourth inning, a run-scoring single by Doug Glan an inning later.

The Mets saved the lot last. Wayne Gomes, the Phillies third pitcher, had walked the loaded after one out in the seventh. Rickey Henderson pinch-ran for ball against Steve Montgomery, the score. But a round 2 p.m. only a difficult exchange between the pitcher at the right of the mound and baseman Dave Dozier proved a 4-6-3 rebuff of the Mets' ninth-inning thrust.

He hit it to Dozier, who threw to where they could not forget manager Bobby Valentine is ...

My back hurts. I should excercise like the athletes that I read about in the Collegian Sports section.

Rah Rah Rah! Collegian Sports is the best!

$10.00 HAIR CUT
Rights of Passage
9
586-6166

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
✔ Complete Bartending Course
✔ Near Campus
✔ For a Fraction of the Cost of other Schools
✔ National Certification Available
✔ Hands on Pouring Labs
✔ Tips to get a Fun, High Paying Job
Free Info Session
Wednesday, October 6th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Act Now, Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

Bucci
HAIRCUTS always $10.
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256 0733
145 main st. northampton 586 0155

Multiband
25th Annual MUSICAL EXTRAVAGANZA in the Fine Arts Center
Presented by: Department of
Music &
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST 545-2227
Jazz, Percussion, Wind Music & Modern Dance
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1ST
8 PM · FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
Featuring:
Jazz, Wind, Percussion & Marimba Ensembles, Dancers, Vocal Jazz and African-American Music Ensemble & Minuteman Marching Band
Tickets:
$25 Priority Reserve Seats · $18 General Public · $12 UMass & Other College Students, elders & children under 18
Order tickets early. Last year's performance was sold out!!
Tickets available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office
(413) 545-2511
Multiband Pops is Co-sponsored by:
Advocate Alumni Association WTTT AM 1430 WWLP

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

94 Mazda Protege All highway miles very clean 4-door NEW Shox+Struts standard, power everything! A/C 3,000 ODO Caroline 397-0922

SAAB 900 for sale 1991. 135k miles. Good condition. $4500 586-1688

'86 VW Vanagon 4-speed excellent condition. Please call Teresa at 256-0953

VW Jetta 87 5 Spd. GLI, grey, high milage - runs good $2000 call 256-6235 evenings.

CHILDCARE

MUST LOVE BABIES. References needed. Tuesday and Thursday - 12:30 to 3:00. Call Michelle at 256-8632

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

EMPLOYMENT

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Mullins Center Hiring for post event cleanup apply in person. 2nd floor Mullins Center

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Evenings. $9.50 per hr. Call 546-0666

Rao's Coffee is hiring minimum 20 hrs/wk food service experience preferred apply in person

Bussiness Minded student wanted. 10-15 hrs/wk for light bookkeeping and accounting. Good math skills and computer skills required. Call Scott (413) 537-0967

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Earn $400 per class each semester by simply Taking Notes

Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses

ACCTG 221	MGT 301
ANTH 100	NUTR 130
BIOL 100	PHIL 100
CHEM 110	PHYSIC 131
CHEM 111	PHYSIC 132
CMPSCI 105	POLSCI 101
ECON 103	PSYCH 100
ECON 104	SOCIOL 103
GEO 101	SOCIOL 106
HIST 100	SOM 210
HIST 101	STATIS 111
LEGAL 250	STATIS 140
LEGAL 252	STATIS 141
MKTG 301	THEATR 100
MGT 260	SPORST 202

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors: Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS Pays 60 to 120 per Shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

EMPLOYMENT

Get the #%$! out of the water Earth Activists @ Clean Water Action get the best experience, great pay, training and benefits working to stop pollution & save the planet. $7.30 - $9.00/hr. Eve/wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

Relief Staff for apartment program serving adults with mental illness living in the community. Enthusiasm, patience & attention to detail a must. Get training & experience needed to work in human service field. Wages $7.50/hr. Send resume & cover letter to: Service Net att. David Mastroianni 129 King St. Northampton, MA 01060

EARN UP TO $1000 By Posting Your Lecture Notes Online

(408) [illegible] or C[illegible] : lebst[illegible].com www.e[illegible].com

Revolutionizing the way students study on the web!!

FOR RENT

Lockers for Rent: CHEAP! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

Bollinger Free Weights. Cast iron plates. Assorted sizes. 30c/lb. Call Bill, 253-3294 or 545-0442

FOR SALE

DP Gympac 1500 Fitness system. 50kg of weight. Padded bench and accessories. Many, many exercises. $75. Call Bill, 545-0442 or 253-3294

Stick it in your ear! Free stud earrings with piercing at Silverscape Designs. Amherst, 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-3324 Northampton, 1 King Street 584-3324

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending classes start soon Student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On UMass bus route Call 256-0364

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

RESUMES

Resume Problems? We can solve them! Aaron 253-6783

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs, you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined you favorite suit; are dept collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

SERVICES

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to commuter services, RM 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

What are you waiting for??

Your Ad could fill this space... Don't delay, Call TODAY!!

545-3500

STOP!!

Where are you going?

You can find what you are looking for in The Daily Collegian Classifieds!!

Check it out TODAY!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, SEPT. 28

Coffee House – There will be a coffee house with an open mic from 8:30-9:30 p.m. in the Hillel House. Anyone is welcome.

Meeting – The Ballroom Dance Club will meet from 6:45-8 p.m. in room 101 of Totman. Call 549-4070 for more information.

FRIDAY, OCT. 1

Service – There will be a Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome to attend the Kesher (reform) style service. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SEND THE COLLEGIAN YOUR FYI ANNOUNCEMENTS...

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	18 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	19 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Gavel to Gavel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	23 Sundance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	25 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International Springfield	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — SEPTEMBER 28, 1999

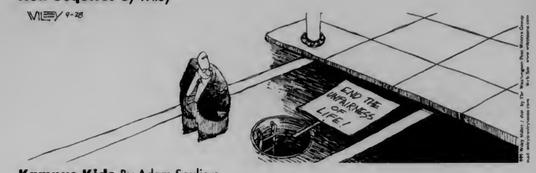
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Life of Birds		Frontline "John Paul II: The Millennial Pope" (Season Premiere) (In Stereo)				Independent
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "Rules of Engagement"		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "Rules of Engagement"		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	It's Like, You	Dharma-Greg	Dharma-Greg	Once and Again		News	Nightline
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Buffy the Vampire Slayer		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Mike O'Malley	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	6	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Dilbert (R)	Redhanded	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News Caroline		Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WWIT	66	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Mike O'Malley	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Ally	70s Show	Truth-Sitcom Scandals		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Just Shoot Me	3rd Rock-Sun	Will & Grace	Mike O'Malley	Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Life of Birds		Frontline "John Paul II: The Millennial Pope" (Season Premiere) (In Stereo)				News	Charlie Rose
WGGB	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	It's Like, You	Dharma-Greg	Dharma-Greg	Once and Again		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Dilbert (R)	Redhanded	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Hunters"		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at New York Mets. (Live)						★★★ "Alien 3" (1992, Science Fiction) Sigourney Weaver.
A&E	51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Born Bad"		Biography: Heidi Fleiss-Madam		L.A. Detectives (R)		City Confidential (R)		Law & Order "Homesick"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	36	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "Rattler Of Dead" (1985, Comedy) John Quade				Pulp-ifi	Com.-Presents	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	49	Your New House		Wild Discovery: Meanest		America's Military Acad.		New Detectives (R)		FBI Files "A Model Killer"		America's Military Acad.
ESPN	43	Sportscenter		Up Close	Bikes, Blades and Boards (R)	Wonderful World of Golf				Baseball Tonight		Sportscenter
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	★★ "Night Walk" (1989, Drama) Robert Urich, Lesley-Anne Down.						Real World: Downtown (R)		Say What Kike	Undressed (R)
MTV	53	Global Groove	Countdown	Beat Suite	Making-Video	Real World	Real World	Real World	Head Trip	Jeffersons	Test (In Stereo)	M.T. Moore	Happy Days
NICK	46	All That (R)	Cetdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	★★★ "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" (1991)
SCIFI	44	Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Star Trek "Mark of Gideon"		Sliders "This Side of Paradise"		★★★ "Star Trek VI: The Undiscovered Country" (1991)
TLC	29	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Perfect Specimen"		Trauma: Life in the ER		Mystery Virus		★★★ "High Plains Drifter" (1973) Clint Eastwood.		Trauma: Life in the ER
TNT	48	Dve South (R) (In Stereo)		ER "Choosing Joi" (In Stereo)		★★½ "Sudden Impact" (1983, Drama) Clint Eastwood, Sondra Locke				★★ "Desperado" (1995, Drama) Antonio Banderas. (In Stereo)		Baywatch "Money Honey"
USA	47	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG "The Guardian" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★ "Sorcerer" (1996) Kurt Russell.			Three Kings	Sex-and-City	Reverb (R)
HBO	39	(5:30) ★★★ "Anzio" (1998)		★★★ "Gattaca" (1997, Science Fiction) Ethan Hawke.				★½ "Stand Soor" (1993) Rutger Hauer.		Express Aisle	★★ "Blown Away" (1993) Corey Haim.		Emmanuelle
MAX	40	(4:15)	★★½ "How Guys" (1995) Danny DeVito.			★★½ "Blind Side" (1993) Rutger Hauer.		★★ "Dead Man On Campus" (1998, Comedy)				"Four Friends & Neighbors"
SHOW	35	(4:45)	★★½ "Bebe's Kids" (1992, Comedy)			★★ "Phantoms" (1998, Horror) Peter O'Toole.

Spunk By Mike LeRiccia

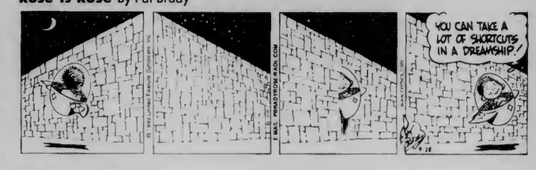
Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Non Sequitor By Wiley

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Doonesbury By Garry Trudeau

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Your behavior is likely to defy explanation or comprehension today, especially when you are fueled purely by the irrational later in the day.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – A misunderstanding is likely to occur today. You can put an end to it quickly simply by telling your side of the story. Don't hold back.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Don't try to take the credit today for something that is actually the result of someone else's efforts. Others are sure to know the truth.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You'll have to take the time to get things done the "old-fashioned" way today. Try not to take any unnecessary shortcuts at this time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You'll have a chance to surprise a friend or loved one by doing something that will be long remembered.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may notice today that someone is acting quite differently around you than yesterday, and the reason should be clear to you by day's end.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You will have some difficulty making a fast start today. No matter when you actually get going, however, you must maintain an even pace.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Avoid any activities today that could put you or someone you love at risk. A long-term decision may have to be made prematurely.

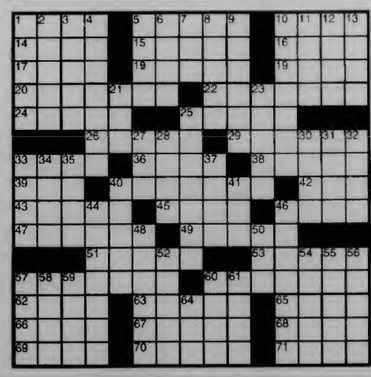
Gemini (May 21-June 20) – You'll have few important questions to ask yourself about how you are expressing your feelings today. Someone may misunderstand your actions.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Give yourself a little more credit today. There are certain things that are out of your reach, but you're capable of accomplishing something grand in scope.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You will be tempted to turn down the help you've been offered recently, but before the day is over, you will see the wisdom of saying "yes."

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Avoid conflicts today by being open with people around you. It's not a good day for trusting indirect means of communication.

Quote of the Day

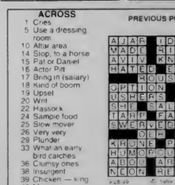


"As soon as you're born you start dying, so you might as well have a good time."

–Cake

Close to Home By John McPherson

"To help you pass the time during your root canal, see if you can find 25 dental terms in the word-search above your head."



ACROSS

1 Cries
5 Use a dressing room
10 Altar area
14 Slogs, to a horse
15 Pal of Daniel
16 Amor Rui
17 Bring in (salary)
18 Kind of boom
19 Upset
20 Writ
22 Hassock
24 Sample food
25 Slow mover
26 Very wary
29 Plunder
33 What an early bird catches
36 Clumsy ones
38 Insurgent
39 Chicken — king
40 Mansion feature
42 Jackie's second
43 Type
45 Toledo's lake
46 On the briny
47 — on urging 49 Things
51 — and whey
53 Made a decision
57 Purplish red
60 African language
62 Skin-cream additive
63 Cat-o'-nine-tails
65 Foxes and Burrows
66 Lodges
67 Penalized monetarily
68 — one's chops anticipate
69 Endure
70 Washes
71 Makes lace

DOWN

1 Used a broom
2 "Butterfield 8" author
3 Dull people
4 Private place
5 Recipe amt.
6 Act like a fan
7 Over there
8 Put it on a budget
9 Drink of the gods
10 Pronounce clear of blame
11 Dance
12 Post Teasdale
13 Eve's garden
21 Slippery one
23 Jeweled headdress
25 Hunting trips
27 Place kicker's pride
28 Steak order
30 Loose-fitting garments
31 Runaway Bndc. star
32 Lamb's alias
33 Minimum
34 Mr. Cassini
35 Poured
37 Tizzy
40 Second planet
41 Poor mark
44 Paying the most money
46 Road surface
48 Troubles
50 Extinct bird
52 Pep's crane
54 Herbivore
55 Choose
56 Computer users' needs
57 Go kaput
58 Rabbit's companion
59 Bikes
60 Oaxaca
61 Tries the knot
64 Lennon's love

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
Vegetarian Bean Taco

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
Thai Seitan

Worcester

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
Vegetarian Bean Taco

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
Thai Seitan

Hampshire

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
Vegetarian Bean Taco

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
Thai Seitan

Berkshire

LUNCH
Chicken Cutlet Sandwich
Taco Bar
Vegetarian Bean Taco

DINNER
Roast Top Round of Beef
Cheese Lasagna
Meat Lasagna
Thai Seitan

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Seth Koenig
Photo Technician	Dan Santello
Copy Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santoro
Production Staff	Janine Tangney, Lovee Garg

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of Sports

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

September 28, 1999

UM Water Polo wins CWPA

Shana Orczyk
Collegian Correspondent

The No. 13 Massachusetts Men's Water Polo team proved to be a force to reckon with when they swept the Collegiate Water Polo Association (CWPA) tournament this weekend at the US merchant Marine Academy in Kings Point, NY this past weekend.

The Minutemen improved their record to a strong 12-2 after defeating the US Merchant Marine Academy 20-11, Lehman 10-3, and Fordham 17-3. The Maroon and White outscored their opponents by an amazing 47-17. Sophomore stand out Mike Foles led the offensive with an amazing seven goals over the tournament.

In the first game of the tournament the Minutemen faced the home town favorite US Merchant Marine Academy. Foles led the way with a team-high six goals, while senior Pat Kain and sophomore Evan Lutz each added four of their own to contribute to the UMass win.

Also scoring for the Minutemen where Chad Arnold who reached the back of the net twice, while Dan Anderson, Ryan Gray, Brady Hahn, and Antonio Maldonado each added one for the Minutemen's 20 overall points.

Freshman back up goalie led Rafael Santana the UMass defense with a career high 11 saves. The Maroon and White continued their domination of the US Merchant Marine Academy by improving their all time record against the Mariners to 7-0.

On Saturday afternoon the UMass squad faced Lehman. The match against was highlighted with nine different members of the UMass squad denting the twine.

The offensive drive was lead by senior Gray, who scored twice. The rest of the UMass goals were scored by Anderson, Arnold, Foley, Brady Hahn, Lutz, Antonio Maldonado, Ricardo Puig, and Cody Weidauer, each with one apiece.

Santana was given the start in goal again and had three saves to help the Minutemen defense. Again the Minutemen continued their undefeated romp over Lehman improving their overall record against the school to 4-0.

UMass continued their dominance of the tournament with their 17-3 win over Fordham University on Sunday morning. The squad witnessed some strong leadership from its youngest members when freshmen Puig, Hahn and Weidauer each netted a pair.

Kain also had two, while Anderson, Arnold, Foley, Gray, and Lutz all added another in the "g" column.

Santana finished off the weekend in the net adding a solid 10 save outing to his already excellent performance over the weekend. The UMass squad remains undefeated against the Rams with a 9-0 all time record.

The Massachusetts men's water polo team returns to the water next weekend traveling again to Princeton, NJ for the North/South Challenge.

They will face Salem-Teikyo and Bucknell on Saturday the 2nd and George Washington, and Navy on the 3rd. The Minutemen hope to add four more "W"s to their record while they remain strongly in the race for its sixth Eastern Championship title in the last seven years.

Field Hockey loses heartbreaker, 2-1

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

They opened '99 by taking on five ranked teams in seven games. five of the top ten programs in the country, in fact. And on Sunday. they found themselves truly caught between the devil and the deep blue sea.

The Massachusetts field hockey team weathered both a tempestuous crowd at Williams Field and a Blue Devil team ranked 16th in the country in dropping a tight 2-1 contest at Duke. UMass (2-5) overcame a 13-4 Duke penalty-corner advantage and a 15-6 shot deficit to stay within striking distance for the entire contest.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Kristen Schmidt

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS
Zowie Tucker

The Blue Devils (7-3) were seeking their fifth-straight victory coming into the weekend war, having beaten down Radford, Old Dominion, Temple, and Appalachian State by a combined score of 20-4. The Minutewomen, meanwhile, were beginning a steep climb back toward .500 after losses to ranked Maryland, Virginia, James Madison, and North Carolina.

The Maroon and White offense caught fire early, pushing the Blue Devil defense back on their heels with crisp passing. UM forward Kristen Schmidt, who has steadily established herself as Coach Patty Shea's most lethal offensive weapon, ripped off an unassisted goal at the 20:57 mark to put UMass out in front 1-0.

Schmidt moved into the team's scoring lead on the goal. The Greenfield native has notched five points on two goals and an assist thus far in '99.

The next 12 minutes saw a dogfight around midfield, with both teams battling to get some rhythm going offensively. Duke finally discovered the equalizer, when senior Keri Dunn took a pass from sophomore Melissa Yuppa and beat UM keeper Zowie Tucker for the tying score with 8:54 to play in the half.

Dunn, who happens to hail from Scituate, Mass, doesn't just pay dividends for Duke's field hockey program. She is also a member of the Blue Devil lacrosse team.

The first half ended in a 1-1 stalemate, but UMass had to like their first 35 minutes of hockey against the highly touted Blue Devils. The deadlock would stand up until the 14:05 mark of the second half when Duke freshman Chrissy Ashley, a two-time high school All-American from Plains, Pennsylvania, launched a shot toward the UM net. Sophomore midfielder Robin Merritt, who attended a high school called Sweet Home in a New York town called Amherst, deflected in what would prove to be the game winner.

Tucker racked up eight saves in the loss, including a stop on a Duke penalty stroke. The Blue Devils came up empty on 13 penalty-corners, allowing the Umass defense to continue its incredible run of 42 penalty-corners without a goal allowed. Duke goalie Jenn Robb notched three saves in the Blue Devil net.

UMass continues its brutal early season schedule with two more ranked opponents in the next five days. The Minutewomen will host the No.19 Harvard Crimson at 3:30 on Wednesday, then travel to Connecticut on Sunday to battle the top-ranked Huskies.

KARA STORES/ COLLEGIAN
The UMass field hockey team fell by a score of 2-1 to the Blue Devils of Duke.

UM men's tennis dominates Northeast

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

Question of the day for the Massachusetts men's tennis team: Will its performance at the Northeast Intercollegiate Tournament at Providence, RI foreshadow a season-yet-to-come?

The squad could wish for nothing better. This past weekend, the Minutemen displayed tenacity and determination throughout the tournament, which featured some solid teams of the Northeast, including Boston University, Boston College Providence, Rutgers, and Army.

On Friday, sophomore Steve Prisco and senior Parsa Samii both notched Flight A singles victories. Prisco defeated Marist's Roberto Maver, 7-6, 6-7, 6-4 before falling in the second round. Samii bettered John Koetzle of BU by a score of 6-1, 6-2. Unfortunately, he too was also defeated in the next round.

For Flight B singles, freshman Will Shaw seized his first collegiate victory by defeating Casey Johnston of Hartford, 6-4, 6-1, before falling in the second round. Meanwhile, junior Fabien Rabanal lost to Fairleigh Dickinson's Boris Bogdanov, 3-6, 7-6, 4-6, but went on to win his first round consolation match. On Saturday, Rabanal lost his second round consolation match to Kenny Leung of Lehigh, 4-6, 4-6.

In Flight C singles action, sophomore Todd Champeau surpassed Craig Roslund of Providence with a 6-0, 7-6 victory. Senior newcomer Marco Caseia was a straight-set victim in the first round, but redeemed himself on Saturday by advancing to his second round consolation match before bowing to Kivanc Cubukcu of Fairleigh Dickinson by a deficit of 1-6, 2-6.

Freshman Justin Simpson and senior Josh Bainton each won their first round Flight D singles matches before facing each other in the second round. Bainton emerged as the victor, 6-2, 2-6, 7-6 victor, but lost his third round Saturday match to Kurtis Hon of Rutgers, 7-6, 7-6.

In Flight A doubles action, Rabanal and Samii paired to defeat Duane Williams and James Isaiah Holstra, 8-4, before losing in the second round. Meanwhile, the duo of Prisco and Shaw did not advance past the first round.

For Flight B, Caseia and Champeau defeated Dmitry Rozanovsky and Seger Milkeladze of Hofstra before losing in the second round to Andy Burdett and Lowell Goldman of Army, 3-8. The Bainton-Simpson tandem did not meet such success, bowing out in the first round to Marc Lucero and Brad Hughes of BC.

Assistant Coach Scott Wilkins is pleased with the results.

"Everyone won a match at some point during the tournament," Wilkins said. "The quality of play surpassed my expectations. [The team] experienced both winning and the losing, which should bode well for the future."

Downhill biking loses to a tough Vermont team

Catherine Turner
Collegian Correspondent

Another Sunday evening and another weekend draws to a close. Homework may finally be attempted. The Simpsons are watched, and students all over the UMass campus are growing weary for the impending Monday morning.

This was just like any other Sunday evening except that some of the school's finest and least known athletes were on their way back to campus from Bolton Valley, VT. Who were these phenomenal players and what were they doing in Vermont, you ask? These were the few, the proud, the members of the Minutemen Cycling Team, and even more specific, the Downhill Bikers, making their way home from another collegiate bike race, this time hosted by the University of Vermont.

When most students think about sports at UMass, mountain biking is not usually what comes to mind. Downhill biking, along with slalom and cross-country, is a fast growing sport driven by hard core men and women who love challenges, and most importantly, love biking.

This is not your regular ride through campus, these courses are technically difficult, fast paced, hi-adrenaline and often- risky trails down mountain slopes. These courses range from relatively easy, such as the course in Northfield, to mentally frustrating runs like this weekend's race in VT. Courses are built with speed and agility in mind and the racers must have keen bike handling ability to complete them fast.

This weekend's course in Bolton was one of the craziest in the Northeast. The sea of the roped off trail from the chairlift gives a false sense of the difficulty involved. Only climbing down the mountain are the rocks, tight bumps, jumps, streams and mudbanks really seen.

For the average spectator, this trail would take 10 to 15 minutes to hike, so just imagine trying to run it in less than five minutes on a mountain bike. Riders flip over handlebars on jumps, fall on bumps, slide in mud and turn their legs to jells with furious pedaling.

For those of you interested in observing such an amazing display of pure strength and biking performance, you'll be glad to hear that this is not just an off-campus event. Indeed, UMass will be hosting its own dual slalom and cross-country race on Sunday October 10th. It has already begun in the creation of a dual slalom course on the hill behind the observatory.

Downhill captain Ken Avery along with riders Marty Walsh, Sean Boland and Clayton Harper, set a goal to design and run a trail with high berms, double jumps and tight turns to make the rival teams shake on their Cannondales.

The competition between riders is stiff when one bike will come in hundredths of seconds behind another; when first and second place are determined by the flick of a hand- held stopwatch. These riders are fast and resolute to take each obstacle with ferocity, striving for a better time after each run.

As of right now, the UMass team holds solid in second place in the Collegiate Biking Conference, right behind UVM, who have a talented and very well funded team. This weekend in Vermont Boland took first place in the class B downhill race, while Walsh and Avery took third and fourth behind UVM in class A. The lone female rider on the UMass squad, Jen Conlon- Kardian, took second in the women's class A race.

As the sun set over the mountainous Vermont horizon, the glint of a shining third place medal was blinding as it hung from the rearview mirror of Marty Walsh's truck. The bikes were in the back, and the race was over, but the downhill battle is just beginning. Thoughts of next week's race in Plattekill, NY were on the mind.

CATHERINE TURNER/ COLLEGIAN
The Minuteman downhill biking team competed at UVM this past weekend.

Volleyball will host Crimson

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team will be hosting "Fair Harvard" tonight at 7pm in the Curry Hicks Cage, as UM will be playing for intra-state bragging rights against the Ivy Leaguers.

The Minutewomen are coming off a disappointing loss at Rhode Island this past weekend, leaving them at 5-6 for the season.

"Rhode Island was a very disappointing loss," assistant coach Cindy Gregory said in a press release. "But we are ahead of where we usually are this time of year. We have been working on improving our offensive system, and it is time for everybody on the team to step up. We need to be deeper and we need to have everybody contributing."

Along with UMass, Harvard is currently 5-6 on the season and most recently defeated New Hampshire University on September 25, 3-2. The Minutewomen will have to keep up their solid defense to contain sophomore Erin Denniston, who leads the team with 3.77 kills per game, while Angela Lutich has the team high in digs with 3.92 per game. The Crimson also have a solid performer in junior setter Julie Yick, who is averaging 12.60 assists per game.

"The win over New Hampshire was a really good win for them," Gregory said. "They have a very good ball controlling team...they have three outside hitters who are hitting very well this year."

The Minutewomen's strongest players have been senior co-captains Jill Meyers and Kari Hogancamp. Meyers is averaging a team leading 4.43 kills per game and is second with 3.00 digs per game. The other half of the tandem, Hogancamp leads the squad in digs per game with 4.97 and is posting 3.25 kills per game.

The dynamic duo can't seem to take the court without placing themselves higher in the record books. Meyers became UMass' all-time block assists leader with four against Fairfield, while counter part Hogancamp tied Giza Rivera for fourth in matches with double-figure kills with 55.

Capitals GM under investigation

By Jason La Confora
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Washington Capitals General Manager George McPhee is awaiting disciplinary action from the NHL for an incident involving him and several members of the Chicago Blackhawks following a preseason game Saturday night in Columbus, Ohio.

The league is investigating reports by several Blackhawks who said McPhee punched their coach, Lorne Molleken, after the Capitals' fight-marred 3-1 victory at Value City Arena. The altercation apparently stemmed from the Capitals' belief that the Blackhawks dressed a lineup loaded with enforcers and were attempting to injure Washington players.

McPhee went to the Blackhawks' dressing room to confront the coaching staff immediately after the game, and several Blackhawks alleged McPhee hit Molleken in the left eye before being surrounded by about a dozen Chicago players and staff. Punches were exchanged, McPhee's suit was ripped and police pulled him from the scuffle, sources said.

No charges were filed, police said, and the NHL will not comment until the investigation is complete. McPhee, who likely will face at least a fine, declined to comment, and the team is withholding formal comment until the league concludes its investigation.

The Blackhawks have been involved in several melees during the preseason, including a brawl-filled game last weekend, and sources said the league already was watching them closely. Mike Murphy, a league vice president, was at Saturday's game and, sources said, he told the Capitals after the game that he found Chicago's tactics inappropriate.

Blackhawks owner Bill Wirtz voiced his displeasure Sunday about McPhee's postgame actions through spokesman Jim DeMaria: "He said he's quite shocked by the turn of events (Saturday) night, because we've always had a very amicable relationship with Washington. He said he's even more appalled because Lorne Molleken left his dad's deathbed ... to coach in the game (Saturday) night."

McPhee's actions apparently are well supported within the Capitals organization.

"I'm upset that George didn't tell us he was doing that, because I think you would have seen the whole staff march down there (with him)," Coach Ron Wilson said. "I'm 100 percent for what George did. There will be people out there saying you're not supposed to do things like that, but George went in there and stood up for the whole team. That's an amazing act of courage. The way Chicago played just isn't right."

McPhee had phoned Chicago General Manager Bob Murray on Wednesday in hopes of preempting an ugly game, sources said. McPhee had asked Murray to avoid using players who tend to rely solely on physical play, since the Capitals intended to dress Peter Bondra, Adam Oates and Sergei Gonchar in order to give fans a quality performance (the Columbus Blue Jackets enter the NHL next season).

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue xx

September 29, 1999

SGA senate elections held tomorrow

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The Student Government Association will be holding elections for all senate seats tomorrow.

Voting for the election will be held for on-campus students in the Dining Halls, and in the Newman Center and the Campus Center for off-campus students. Students voting in the election by absentee ballot may vote at any location on campus. The election polls will be open from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 4 p.m. to 7 p.m.

Students will first be voting for the area senators who will represent them in the SGA and voice the ideas and opinions of the student body. In addition to voting for area senators, students will also be asked to vote on two referendum questions.

According to Student Trustee Seth Avakian, the first referendum question is in regards to university policies about informing parents of student alcohol violations. Avakian explained that the policy began with federal legislation and was in response to a number of alcohol-related deaths that occurred on college campuses. The policy then filtered down to the Board of Higher Education and to the Board of Trustees. It was decided that each chancellor must amend each university's policies for any students under 21 years of age that are found violating the existing alcohol policy.

According to Avakian, the main purpose of the referendum question is to "gauge the opinions of the student body as a whole." The SGA is planning, in part, to deal with the new alcohol policy by "looking at the way that other universities have gone about dealing with this."

The second referendum question regards campus cable television. The referendum question states that students have the option to pay additional housing fees between $10 and $15 a semester, with an increase due to inflation rates of three percent each year starting in the fall of 2000. If students agree to pay this fee and the referendum is passed, UMass will add stations such as HBO, ESPN, ESPN2, MTV, E!, USA, TNT, Sci-Fi, and TBS to the existing cable option. Avakian said this proposal came about because "students are dissatisfied with their cable choices." He also went on to say that this issue has been an "ongoing campaign promise" in past years. These particular channels were proposed because of their high demand among the student body. Avakian explained the question was added to the ballot because "we don't want to give housing the go-ahead to raise fees without first gauging the reactions of the student body." A 'yes' vote to this question will add stations to the already existing campus cable system inaction, while a 'no' vote will not increase housing fees.

The SGA encourages all students to vote in the Thursday election, Avakian said.

Employees must find new health care provider

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Approximately 3,000 University of Massachusetts employees and their families are currently looking for a health provider to replace the Kaiser Permanente/Community Health Plan, which recently announced it would withdraw its service from the New England area at the end of 1999.

One possible option is University Health Services, which is now a medical-care provider for Health New England. It will offer all three plans under the Group Insurance Commission, which include the Indemnity Plan, the Indemnity Plan with catastrophic illness coverage, and the Indemnity Plan Plus.

A Health Fair was held yesterday from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. to provide information about health plans and to assist employees in choosing the right plan for particular needs.

In the past, more than 2,000 employees had used UMass Health Services for their Kaiser site and Health Services encourages others to consider them as an option as they look to replace Kaiser.

"We will continue to serve faculty and staff. Even though Kaiser is going away, Health Services will still be there for them," Robert Morgan of Health Services said.

The special enrollment period on campus for Kaiser/CHP subscribers began Sept. 27 and will run through Oct. 15, at which time all former Kaiser subscribers must choose another health plan.

Health Services is working to prevent potential problems with their services.

"We worked hard to make this happen. We feel it is important to make sure there is no interruption of service for the thousands of clients who have been using Health Services as their provider site," said Bernette A. Melby, director of University Health Services.

"We are delighted to be able to offer University Health Services as a choice for the many employees who want to continue their care with us," Melby said.

Two killed in grenade attack; hate crimes wrack Yugoslavia

By R. Jeffrey Smith
Washington Post

KOSOVO POLJE, Yugoslavia — Two grenades exploded in a Serb marketplace yesterday, spewing hot metal fragments into the crowd of shoppers and transforming stalls of fresh produce into a bloody tableau of mounting victims. Two people were killed instantly and nearly 40 others were injured, six seriously with head injuries and internal wounds.

Two ethnic Albanians and two others whose ethnic identity was not immediately determined were arrested in connection with the attack, the NATO-led peacekeeping force in Kosovo said.

The attack, the worst on a marketplace in Kosovo since two ethnic Albanians died in a bombing last June, was the latest in a mounting trend of ethnically-motivated hate crimes here that has taken on new dimensions since the end of the NATO air campaign against Yugoslavia and the arrival of tens of thousands of allied peacekeepers three months ago. Yesterday's murders were the 14th and 15th to occur in Kosovo in the past 10 days alone.

Within hours of the marketplace attack in this suburb of Pristina, the Kosovo capital, crowds of angry Serbs erected a roadblock on one of the province's main highways, backing up hundreds of vehicles for miles on the road from Pristina to Pec in western Kosovo. It was the third roadblock erected by Serbs in the area in the past three days to express their anger at ethnic Albanian attacks and frustration with the inability of NATO to protect Serbs.

Since NATO peacekeeping troops arrived here in mid-June, more than 330 civilians have been murdered, mostly by members of another ethnic group. House burnings, a

Turn to KOSOVO, page 2

NICOLE GOTTWALD / COLLEGIAN
A work of art
Channa Wijesinghe, a senior visual thought major admires the graffiti art near the student union.

LEAH LANCZ / COLLEGIAN
Serenading Umass
Dave Pascucci, a junior English major, shows off his talent outside the campus center.

Communism in China celebrates a milestone

50th birthday drawing mixed reactions

By John Pomfret
Washington Post

SHANGHAI, China – China has begun a week of festivities marking 50 years of Communist rule by hosting some of the world's wealthiest capitalists in the skyscrapers of a new Shanghai business district that evokes the space age world of George Jetson. The Fortune Global Forum was designed, in the words of Zhou Mingwei, the dapper director of Shanghai's Foreign Affairs Office, as "a beacon of China's future."

A very different celebration has been planned for Friday in Beijing. There, in China's sprawling capital 600 miles to the north, a half-million people, closely screened for their "love of the motherland," will participate in a parade with goose-stepping students and soldiers accompanied by tanks, rockets and mobile anti-aircraft weapons, a highly ideological tribute to the party's 50 years in power.

Marchers in Beijing will shout 50 slogans, all approved by the Central Committee of the Communist party. An example: "Rely on the working class wholeheartedly." The parade, with dozens of floats including oil derricks and pink apartment houses symbolizing modernization, will be closed to normal spectators. Half of Beijing will be placed under martial law for the event.

The contrasting observances in China's two main metropolises display with unusual clarity two seemingly contradictory strains of Chinese communism today: a desire for reform and openness while insisting on a continued dictatorship and Marxist ideology. With their clashing pomp, the celebrations also dramatize a fundamental problem faced by the Communist party on the eve of the 21st century. Like many of the people they command, China's leaders face a crisis of values.

Two decades of economic reforms have freed millions of Chinese to create and pursue dreams the party itself never dared to dream. But the party has had trouble keeping up, unsure of the philosophy it wants to implement at home and represent in the world.

China's Communist government pushed world revolution and total collectivism for 29 years after it was founded in 1949 with Mao Tsetung at the helm. When Deng Xiaoping came to power in 1978, however, he switched the focus to economic development. Since then, the party has careened around the ideological map, in search of a new value system to replace the doctrinaire Marxism left behind although never repudiated in the drive for economic progress.

The party leadership flirted with Westernization in the 1980s and won the backing of most Chinese. One former party chief in those days even suggested Chinese abandon chopsticks for a knife and fork. But these ideas were tossed aside in 1989, when too many people wanted democracy too quickly and the party cracked down on student-led demonstrators in Tiananmen Square.

After the crackdown, the party embraced patriotism. Students were sent for basic military training and patriotism was taught in schools. Ultra-nationalism became a fad. But after a while, these ideas ran into problems as well. China could not completely reject the West; it needed its investment, markets and technology.

Traditional Chinese culture also became a party favorite. The party encouraged Chinese to resume martial arts and study ancient sages. Last year, the party embraced a campaign for "courtesy and Confucius."

Legal Services turns 25

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The Student Legal Services Office (SLSO) is celebrating its 25th year of operation this fall.

The SLSO was created in 1973 as a joint venture between the Graduate Student Senate (GSS) and the Student Government Association (SGA). This motion was followed by legislation from the Massachusetts Legislature that enabled the Trustees to establish a trust fund for student supported legal services. According to Director Attorney Charles DiMare, although the legislative act was passed in 1973, the doors to the Legal Services Office did not open until 1974.

The main responsibility of the organization according to both the SGA and the GSS is to provide "counseling, advice, representation, and education to the student body of the University of Massachusetts Amherst concerning all legal matters." The organization has remained true to these ideals for 25 years in a number of different ways, DiMare said.

First, it provides legal assistance to fee-paying UMass students and student groups on campus. It offers advice and referrals for all types of legal problems and in rare circumstances even provide representation in court. According to DiMare, some of the typical cases that are often seen by SLSO have to do with criminal activity, those having to do with land law and some regarding the University. The organization also counsels students in cases regarding consumer law, family law, traffic citations, personal injuries and employment issues.

SLSO also assists in document preparation of wills, trusts and demand letters, and provides services involving mediation and alternative dispute resolution services. In addition, the organization provides community legal education to UMass students on a wide range of issues. The office often passes out information in the form of brochures and lectures. It also gives group presentations on issues that include sexual harassment, the University discipline system and the use of false IDs.

The SLSO employs a staff of three attorneys, a legal secretary/outreach coordinator, a law office administrator, law clerks and undergraduate students that serve as legal assistants within an internship program.

DiMare, a 20-year veteran of Legal Services, explained that he has had "many rich experiences" during his career. He said that the most rewarding aspect of his job is "representing and advising over 40,000 students." He went on to say that although no celebration was planned yet for the 25th anniversary of the organization, there was always a possibility of some type of festivities occurring in the future.

Court to decide on the future of rape victims

By Joan Biskupic
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Supreme Court said Tuesday it would use the case of a Virginia Tech student who claims she was raped by two football players to decide whether Congress overstepped its power when it allowed women to sue rapists, stalkers and other attackers.

In a dispute that has drawn national attention, Christy Brzonkala sued Antonio J. Morrison and James Landale Crawford under the Violence Against Women Act for the alleged 1994 dormitory attack. A federal appeals court ruled against her, saying Congress exceeded its authority when it passed the 1994 law permitting victims of violence based on gender to win money damages in civil litigation.

By taking up Brzonkala's appeal, and one by the Justice Department defending the law, the high court is poised to decide both the constitutionality of a law championed by women's rights advocates and a majority of state attorneys general and the extent of Congress's powers to address civil rights problems in the states.

In a series of recent rulings, the Supreme Court has curtailed congressional power in favor of the states. And the Judicial Conference, composed of the nation's top federal judges, has complained about the law in objecting to Congress's trend of turning local offenses into federal crimes.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 78 LOW: 62	HIGH: 82 LOW: 65	HIGH: 74 LOW: 58

SOURCE CNN.COM

But Can She Write?
Seventy-five percent of American schoolchildren are unable to write organized essays. What does this mean for the future? Find out inside.

Sisters go Technicolor
The Collegian caught the first American tour of Sisters of Mercy in nearly six years at the Avalon in Boston, a weekly media bits column debuts today, and jazz is back, all in another great arts section today.

Women's Volleyball
Rebecca Hasson recorded a double-double in the volleyball team's 3-0 drubbing of Harvard last night at the Curry Hicks Cage. Turn to the back page for more.

Arts & Living 8
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

prominent tactic of Serbian forces against ethnic Albanians during the war, continue at the hands of ethnic Albanians against Serbs. A total of 1,033 cases of arson have been tallied since mid-June, including six between Friday morning and Sunday night.

More than 100,000 Serbs, in addition to Roma and other minorities, have left the province in the face of reprisals by ethnic Albanians, according to the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, accounting for more than half of Kosovo's pre-war Serb population. The majority of Serbs have left since Yugoslav army and Serbian police forces withdrew from Kosovo in June.

The culture of violent revenge persists among both the ethnic Albanian majority and Serbs, although NATO and U.N. officials blame most of the crimes on a small number of extremists. Four Serbs were arrested last weekend, for example, for alleged participation in war crimes that killed dozens of ethnic Albanians in the northern city of Mitrovica last April. But the overall number of ethnic Albanian perpetrators since the end of the war substantially exceeds the number of Serbs. As a result, the climate of fear in the dozen or so areas of Kosovo where Serbs are still present is now growing particularly intense.

Stanimir Vukicevic, the Yugoslav government's top representative in Pristina, says he dares not speak Serbian in public in the capital. When two of his colleagues from the Foreign Ministry recently did so, they were kicked and chased down its main street. Vukicevic told a diplomat who telephoned to invite him for lunch last week that "we cannot go to the same place, because there was a small bomb in that restaurant," a comment he tossed off as casually as a comment about the weather.

Kosovo remains a province of Yugoslavia and its main republic, Serbia, although it is run today by NATO and the United Nations, along with representatives of the ethnic Albanian guerrilla movement that fought a 16-month war for independence.

The police blotters for the past week tell a tale of repeated, discriminate and highly lethal attacks. Last Wednesday, one Serb was injured and another was killed in a grenade attack in Lipjlan, south of Pristina. An ethnic Albanian man was found murdered near the eastern city of Kamenica, allegedly by two Serbs. On Saturday, a Serbian couple was pulled from their car in western Kosovo and beaten by an ethnic Albanian. The same day, an ambush on a tractor carrying 12 Serbs, presumably by ethnic Albanians, left one dead and four injured near Kamenica.

On average, according to U.N. Police Commissioner Sven Fredericksen, 20 to 30 murders have occurred each week in Kosovo over the past few months. "The hate is enormous," he said. "Almost all of them are ethnically-motivated."

Many of the acts of violence are astonishingly brutal, rivaling in their singularity the brutality of Serbian attacks on tens of thousands of ethnic Albanians during the war. On Sunday, for example, a 15-year-old ethnic Albanian girl in the village of Slovinje south of Pristina admitted beating to death a middle-aged Serbian man and then setting his body on fire. When U.N. police investigators arrived on the scene, they noticed her laughing in the midst of a crowd of jubilant bystanders.

"In some places, when we're removing the body, they're clapping," said Michel Lefebvre, a forensic investigator from the Ottawa police force who volunteered to work on the homicide unit at U.N. police headquarters in Pristina. "Two weeks ago, we had a case in Pristina where a 70-year-old woman was shot 17 times. Now, why would someone want to do that?"

CORRECTION

In the article "Service at Smith: Haafke remembered in gathering," which ran in yesterday's paper, the following information was accidentally omitted:

"We are going to wait to see what else, if anything, will be done in this situation," Shanahan said. "We may have another service, but we aren't sure right now."

The Collegian regrets the error.

Wheels for sale
The bike sale had great deals on used bikes.

Commander deems Timor capital safe

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

DARE, East Timor – The commander of British forces in East Timor yesterday offered reassurance to thousands of refugees hiding in these hills that it is safe to return home to the devastated capital of Dili. But he had a different message for pro-independence guerrillas, telling them to stay put for now.

Brig. David Richards commended the guerrillas, known as Falintil, for showing restraint so far and remaining mostly in their assigned camps even as Indonesia's departing troops and their militia proxies embarked on a campaign of killing and arson following the announcement of East Timor's overwhelming vote for independence 3 1/2 weeks ago.

"They've been terribly sensible," Richards said, after meeting with Falintil commanders here. "And as a result, they haven't provoked TNI (Indonesian military) aggression against them." The military and the militias want East Timor to remain part of Indonesia and vehemently oppose its independence. The job of the Australian-led multinational force, of which the British are a part, is to restore order.

Richards described his session with the independence fighters as "straight talk, soldier to soldier." The Dare area is in Britain's area of control.

But as the intervention force, known as Interfet, consolidates its hold on the capital and continues slowly fanning out into the countryside – entering the town of Liquica Monday – the future role of the Falintil guerrillas remains unclear. And there are seeds of a potential conflict, with Falintil seeing itself as the "people's army" and providing the future security force for East Timor, and the peacekeeping force preferring to see all factions disarmed and the eventual establishment of a territorial police force.

There were hints yesterday of the differences at a ceremony that offered an official welcome back to Dili to thousands of refugees who had been hiding in the hills. Asked what role the pro-independence guerrillas would play in East Timor's future security, Richards said, "It's being worked on."

He added, "They are saying as Interfet moves out, and we are able to provide the level of security required, they will lay down their arms."

But Leandro Isaac, the spokesman for the National Council of Timorese Resistance, the umbrella group that includes Falintil as its armed wing, replied to the same question: "Falintil has been the symbol of East Timorese resistance and liberation for the last 24 years" since Indonesia's invasion. "Falintil's future is ensured by the future of East Timor."

"Regarding disarmament, it will depend on future developments," Isaac said. "If we still need Falintil to be our armed wing, we will have it."

The future role of Falintil, with about 1,000 armed fighters, is one of the trickiest questions facing the United Nations as it looks toward rebuilding this shattered territory and shepherding it to independence. The world body organized last month's referendum and approved the dispatch of the multinational peacekeeping force. How the role of Falintil is resolved could determine East Timor's prospects for reconciliation, and for the new nation's relationship with Indonesia.

After the results of the referendum were announced and violence erupted, Indonesian troops repeatedly tried to lure the Falintil guerrillas from their mountain camps. But for the most part, the guerrillas remain confined to their bases, never allowing the Indonesian government to convincingly depict the fighting as a civil war between rival Timorese factions.

Hot Situations Deserve COOL Solutions

You could WIN

A Ski Trip to Vail, Colorado

Or a Casio® CASSIOPEIA™ E-100 Color Palm-size PC

Play the COOL FROM Nestea® Hot Facts Sweepstakes!

HOT FACT #4

Bennett, Colorado, located in close proximity to the University of Colorado at Denver, holds the longest standing, record high temperature in the nation. This temperature, registering XXX degrees Fahrenheit, spans an 111 year period.

A. 115° B. 118° C. 121° D. 124°

This is the FINAL Hot Fact in the COOL FROM Nestea Hot Facts Sweepstakes. If you missed one of the previous Hot Facts, don't worry. Just log onto www.coolcore.com this week and you can answer the questions you missed. Once you've completed all FOUR Hot Facts you will be automatically entered for a chance to win in the Hot Facts Sweepstakes.

Winners will be notified after November 30, 1999.

Open to U.S. residents, who, as of 9/5/99, are enrolled in a U.S. college. No purchase necessary to play. Void in Florida and where prohibited. To enter via internet: Access the "COOL FROM Nestea Hot Facts" Web site at www.coolcore.com starting 12:01 AM (ET) on 9/6/99 through 11:59 PM (ET) on 10/3/99 to see that week's Hot Fact(s) on screen. Every time you log on, you will be instructed to complete the on screen entry form, including your name, the name of the college you are attending and the letter A, B, C or D, representing the word(s) which complete(s) the Hot Fact(s) for that week. Answer(s) need not be correct to be eligible but you must submit your answer to each of the four Hot Facts (one Hot Fact published each week as described in Rule #1 of the Official Rules) to be entered into the sweepstakes. Starting 12:01am (ET) on 9/27/99 through 11:59pm (ET) on 10/31/99, all four Hot Facts(s) will appear on screen in case an Internet participant misses one or more of the Hot Fact(s) that were featured. While you can, if you wish, log on each day, only one sweepstakes entry per e-mail address that includes all four answers will be entered into the sweepstakes drawing. To enter via mail: On plain 3" x 5" paper, hand-print your complete name, address, zip code, (optional) daytime and evening telephone numbers and the words "COOL FROM Nestea Hot Facts". Mail your entry in a hand-addressed 4-1/8" x 9-1/2" (#10) envelope, with first-class postage affixed, to: COOL FROM Nestea Hot Facts Sweepstakes, P.O. Box 4941, Blair, NE 68009-4941. Limit one entry per envelope. Entries must be received by 11/15/99. IMPORTANT: On the lower left-hand corner of your mailing envelope, you must indicate the name of the college you are attending. For Official Rules, by which entrants are bound, including a list of participating colleges, send a SASE to: Hot Facts Rules Request, P.O. Box 4948, Blair, NE 68009-4948.

© 1999 Coca-Cola Nestlé Refreshments Company, USA. "Nestea" is a registered trademark licensed to Coca-Cola Nestlé Refreshments Company, USA.

© 1999 Casio is a registered trademark of Casio Computer Co., Ltd. CASSIOPEIA is a trademark of Casio Computer Co., Ltd.

Looking down
A bird's eye view of students studying hard in the student union.

Native Indian museum constructed

By Linda Wheeler and David Montgomery
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – A simple drumbeat sounded across the Mall. Spirits of fire and earth were summoned in ancient languages, while overcast skies threatened water. Then ground was broken for the National Museum of the American Indian, in a place of honor near the Capitol where a nation of newcomers once issued orders to drive these native people from their land.

The latest museum created by the Smithsonian Institution will open in 2002 at Third Street and Independence Avenue SW, filling the last open space on the Mall, offering long-overdue tribute to a sometimes forgotten population and bringing local native culture full circle. In the 17th century, this same ground was farmed and hunted by the Nacotchtank tribe, which built hamlets along the rivers still known by the Indian names Potomac and Anacostia.

An audience of several hundred, including representatives of dozens of tribes from across the hemisphere, assembled for the emotional ceremony under three tents. On the stage, white VIPs in dark suits joined Hawaiians and Inuits and Incas in colorful, traditional garb, along with Sen. Ben Nighthorse Campbell, R-Colo., clad in white beaded buckskin and a floor-length feathered headdress.

Museum director W. Richard West, a member of the Southern Cheyenne tribe, said he found it ironic that the first inhabitants of this part of the world were the last to be recognized by the Smithsonian. However, he said, it was "historical justice" for the museum to join the East Building of the National Gallery of Art as the cultural landmarks nearest the Capitol.

"For Indian America, this hemispheric institution of living cultures represents a seminal occasion to reconcile a present and future with an often troubled and tumultuous past," West said. Quoting from a noted Nez Perce chief, he continued: "From a cultural standpoint, to use Chief Joseph's words, it gives the native peoples of this hemisphere an 'even chance to live and grow.'"

The audience was like a United Nations of native peoples, with Nez Perce and Cheyenne and Arapaho and Navajo and Comanche and Oglala Lakota and Cocopah and many others rubbing shoulders and comparing notes on the meaning of the new museum.

"We're Comanches," said Yeoman Williams, 37, an ironworker who attended the ceremony with relatives. "We come from Oklahoma and now we live in Rockville" in Maryland.

He bumped into a long-lost friend he went to school with outside Oklahoma City, Henry Little Bird, 34, an Arapaho who still lives in Oklahoma.

Little Bird said he was moved to the brink of tears by the "heart-catching" ceremony, and he is proud of the prominent location of the museum.

"It's a statement in itself," Little Bird said. "You see the Capitol, and you see this place, and you'll know this was our land."

From the beginning, Indians have been in charge of the project, and they will serve as curators of the exhibits. The $110 million museum – one-third privately raised – has broad support in the Native American community, from those who work for the federal government to members of the American Indian Movement, which in the 1970s staged radical protests for Indian rights in Washington and Wounded Knee, S.D.

U.S. students lacking basic skills

By Kenneth J. Cooper
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Three-quarters of the nation's schoolchildren are unable to compose a well-organized, coherent essay, a skill frequently demanded in the modern workplace, according to results of a federally sponsored writing test released yesterday.

Most students tested last year managed to get across their main, simple points in the short essays they were asked to write, but their writing did not have the sophistication to meet the standard for proficiency set by a national board of educators, state officials and business leaders.

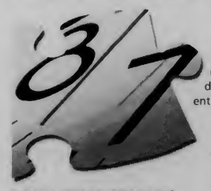
The test results from a representative sample of 60,000 students in the fourth, eighth and 12th grades provided another source of concern about the nation's schools and follows similar results showing students falling short of new academic standards in the states.

"The average, or typical, American student is not a proficient writer. Instead, students show only partial mastery of the knowledge and skills needed for a solid academic performance in writing," said Gary W. Phillips, acting commissioner of education statistics.

The testing found that girls wrote better than boys in each grade, in keeping with the outcome of earlier, less demanding versions of the test. The gender gap was large: Twice as many girls reached or exceeded the standard for proficient writing.

There was also a gap in the performance of racial and ethnic groups, with white and Asian students writing better than African Americans, Hispanics and Native Americans. That gap was narrower in schools on military bases, where African American and Hispanic students scored higher than their counterparts elsewhere. Analysts suggested minority students benefited from an equitable distribution of resources at the Defense Department schools and the financial security of their military families.

For the first time, it was possible to make comparisons of writing skill in the states. Of 35 states where 100,000 additional eighth graders were tested, Connecticut led the nation, followed by Massachusetts, Maine and Texas. The District of Columbia had the lowest score of any jurisdiction except the Virgin Islands.



Above-average income was an advantage shared by many high scorers.

Top scorer Connecticut has the highest per capita income in the nation and has tested students in four grades in writing since 1985. "What you test is what you get," said Marilyn Whirry, who teaches English at a California high school.

Whirry is a member of the board that governs the National Assessment of Educational Progress, a congressionally mandated series of tests that provide the best measure of student achievement in the country. Last year's writing test had a higher standard than a previous one administered in 1992, making comparisons between them unreliable, testing officials warned.

Students had 25 minutes to compose one of three types of essays – narrative, informative and persuasive. The expected standard of proficiency was reached by 22 percent of fourth graders, 26 percent of eighth graders and 21 percent of high school seniors.

Warehouse Selectors Needed!

If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion.

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS*

*LIMITED TIME OFFER

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA.

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS

Thursday, September 30th
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

RESUME BUILDER!

ATTENTION ALL JUNIOR SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT MAJORS:

The Collegian is now accepting applications for the following positions:

* Assistant Finance Manager
*Assistant Business Manager

Applicants should possess computer and inter-personal skills.

Deadline for Applications: Tuesday, Sept. 28, 1999

Come down and fill out an application in Room 113, Campus Center. Contact Christine Carroll @ 545-3500 or e-mail at hrcollegian@yahoo.com with inquires.

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Letters to the Editor

Racial diversity a "misguided" goal

To the editor:

On Sept. 20th the Collegian contained a page outlining the things that the Student Government Association (SGA) intended to do. I agreed wholeheartedly with all of their intentions except for one. On their list entitled "What we will do," the SGA stated that they would "Make the Commonwealth College a more diverse learning community." Although I believe this intention is good, I think it is misguided. The application process of and acceptance to the Commonwealth College has nothing to do with race. These should remain as they are.

The Commonwealth College is for those students who have met certain qualifications. These qualifications were outlined before the application process began and are completely independent of race and ethnicity. It so happens that a vast majority of those accepted are white. So what? They achieved their qualifications. This is just how it turned out. However, there are many groups that criticize the Commonwealth College admissions committee for being biased towards Caucasians and discriminatory towards minorities. They claim that because there is a certain percentage of minority students in the general population at this University, there should also be the same percentage in the Commonwealth College.

For the record, I am an American of Asian descent. Did the admissions office for the Commonwealth College give me special privileges just because I am of Asian descent and not black? Did I get where I was simply because I am Asian or because I worked hard during high school?

I know my race was not at all a factor in my induction into the Commonwealth College. I think that I speak for a great number of hard-working, dedicated minority students when I say that it would be an insult to lower the standards for us just because we are minorities. In whatever I do, I don't ever want people to say to me, "Kevin, you're good enough, too, just like everyone else," but in the back of their minds really believe I am unqualified. I don't want anyone to think that I achieved something – whether this was the acceptance to the Commonwealth College or any other accomplishments in my life – through any means other than my hard work, determination and ability. (For those who might think that I am an elitist because of my tone, I assure you that I am not. I respect people for who they are and not for their on-paper credentials. I simply believe that people should not get something that they did not achieve.)

Either you meet the outlined qualifications or you don't. What is discriminatory about that? Should we lower the bar for minority students just to make it more multicultural? If I were to try out for cross country and I couldn't run as fast as white students, should I still be allowed on the team just because I am an American of Asian descent? How about if I wanted to play Division I football as a defensive tackle, but weighted 100 pounds... should they allow me to play just because I am an American of Asian descent?

I think those groups or individuals who want to set a lower standard for minority students are doing a great disservice without realizing it. If the lowering of standards happens (just to make certain groups happy) to an institution like the Commonwealth College, there will forever be a tacit resentment of minorities for being in a place we are not qualified to be.

I speak for myself as well as for Caucasian friends of mine with similar views, who are reluctant to speak out for fear of being viewed as racists or white supremacists.

Kevin Ann
Orchard Hill

Writer's block

Boomer Pinches

I shouldn't be writing this. It's 6:13 a.m. In less than seven hours, I will have to hand in a paper on a renowned English poet who has been dead for several centuries. (I don't know how he died. They never tell you how people die unless the manner of their death is truly horrible.) In the past five hours, I have produced exactly one sentence. I have put a lot of care and thought into this sentence, writing and rewriting it several times. I'm very proud of it. The sentence reads: "Boomer Pinches." Pretty good, eh? I think I'll follow it on the next line with the name of the course.

Schoolwork has never been my forte. I've never been able to reconcile myself to its more disagreeable aspects, like the fact that it has to be turned in at a specific time on a specific day. The last homework assignment I really enjoyed was in kindergarten when we had to do a report on our favorite dinosaur. My report consisted entirely of a crude Crayola rendering of something that was probably supposed to be a tyrannosaurus but could have just as easily been a portrait of John Merrick done by Pablo Picasso while in the grip of an epileptic fit. Whatever it was, it had at least three eyes and three feet and something that looked like a Snork protruding from its spine. The teacher put a star on it. A star is the kindergarten equivalent of an A. She couldn't give out letter grades to the class because we hadn't mastered the alphabet just yet.

It's all been downhill since kindergarten. I always manage to forget about my assignments until the night before they're due. Like the presentation I had to give last week on adolescent girls coming of age in Samoa. I had a book on the subject by the noted anthropologist Margaret Mead entitled, oddly enough, Coming Of Age In Samoa. But I hadn't read it. I thought about bringing my friend Brando into class as a sort of show-and-tell. Brando is 100 percent Samoan. He did not grow up in Samoa. He grew up in New Jersey. But who knows that? Perhaps the cultures aren't all that different, and the instructor wouldn't have noticed the discrepancy. But alas, Brando claimed he was busy all afternoon. I think he was lying to me.

Somehow that presentation turned out OK. But I have no idea what to write about this dead poet guy. It's easy to get stressed out when you have to write a paper on something you know nothing about. But it is imperative that you do not panic. The best way to handle the situation is to put off doing the paper for as long as humanly possible. It is unwise to simply dive headlong into such an arduous and intellectually taxing endeavor.

Also, some booze may help. Your friends may tell you that you've been drinking too much lately. Simply explain to them that your liver needs the exercise. Otherwise it won't be adequately prepared when a truly toxic substance infiltrates your body, like a Taco Bell burrito. Then tell them that some of this country's best writing has been done under the influence. (I have it on good authority that Jefferson was completely soused when he wrote the Declaration of Independence.) If they still doubt you, tell them they'd drink a lot, too, if they had just found out that their father was gay. By the time they've figured out a compassionate and politically correct response, you'll be halfway to the bar.

So I decided to start off my paper with a trip to the Amherst Brewing Company. The ABC is a wonderful place. If you go there after midnight and sit down with some people at one of the outside tables, the wait staff will bring you drinks that you never ordered and will never be asked to pay for. But no one will complain if you drink them. I've never been able to properly explain this phenomenon. I'm fairly certain that someone somewhere ordered those drinks and that someone somewhere is paying for them. But it isn't me.

The people at my table were discussing the pros and cons of being in a serious and meaningful relationship. A serious and meaningful relationship sounds like a marvelous thing except for the serious and meaningful part. What it really means is that you and your significant other will get into stupid fights about whether or not you're self-absorbed and being insensitive to her needs (and you probably are, if you're a heterosexual male), or whether or not you're smothering him with your constant need for attention (and you probably are, if you're a heterosexual female).

I have never been good at resolving these kinds of interpersonal conflicts. Then, I realized the two fundamental rules of men and women:

1. All women are nuts. 2. All men are [insert expletive of your choice]. Perhaps you doubt me. And sure, maybe I'm generalizing a tad. But face it, men: we're bastards. And you ladies are nuts because the worse we are, the more you like us.

The arena of male-female relations becomes much easier once you've accepted these rules. For example, my friend once told her boyfriend that she didn't want anything for Valentine's Day. She made this explicitly clear to him on several occasions. So when Valentine's Day rolled around, he didn't get her anything. She was very, very upset.

"But you told him you didn't want him to get you anything," I said to her.

"Of course," she said. "But he should love me enough to get me something anyway." Oh.

aThe girl in the story above is clearly nuts. The guy is clearly a jerk for not getting her anything. They are unhappy in their relationship because they have not yet accepted the two tenets set forth above. Compare them with the example below, taken from a conversation between me and one of my (now ex-) girlfriends:

Her: "You never tell me I'm getting fat."

Me: "That's because you're not getting fat."

Her: "But maybe if you don't start telling me I'm getting fat, I won't feel pressure to stay thin and then I will get fat."

(At this point, the old, naive me would have mentioned what an unhealthy sort of statement this was for a young woman to make. But by this point I had accepted the fact that it was my role to be the jerk and her role to be the nutter.)

Me (after a suitably long pause): "You're starting to get a little fat, baby."

She was very happy with this new arrangement, and indeed, she did not get fat. Suddenly we had a very blissful and fulfilling relationship. It was a terrible thing and I decided to bail out of it at the next available opportunity. I've more or less given up on serious and meaningful relationships because of things like this.

None of this has anything to do with my paper, which incidentally, I am still not writing. I have consumed four gin and tonics, three cups of coffee, and two tins of Pringles. I have spent hours flipping through a book I purchased for $5.95 at the Jersey shore which is filled with all sorts of completely useless facts like, "Almost half the pigs in the world are kept by farmers in China." I have solved all the Pokemon puzzles on the back of my box of Cap'n Crunch and constructed a formidable squadron of paper airplanes, not to mention my revelation of why men and women don't get along, which will doubtless save many a stormy romance. Perhaps, in light of my accomplishments this evening, my professor will be understanding of my utter ineptitude regarding writing papers on dead English poets.

Boomer Pinches is a UMass student.

The buying of the presidency

Chris Collins

Don't get me wrong: I never really liked Dan Quayle. I certainly sympathized with him when he received negative publicity about his inability to spell because I have always been a bad speller. But in general I don't like him.

Yet, I consider the fact that he dropped out of the race for president to be a sad event for us all. Quayle's leaving of the campaign close to five months before the first primary says something about the problems with our current electoral system. The reasoning behind Quayle's decision to pull out was partly financial; he couldn't compete with the $50 million that George W. Bush has managed to raise. In fact, Quayle was only able to raise $5.4 million, according to Reuters (9/27/99). I, for one, have never seen a million dollars, nor have I even dreamed of what could be done with $5.4 million, let alone $50 million.

But what I now know is that even if I had $5.4 million to my name, it would be a waste of my time to try to run for president because, frankly, if a former U.S. vice president who is recognized by the public can't do it for $5.4 million, then I don't have a chance.

So far, all the candidates who are running have raised just over a $100 million for their attempts at the White House. One hundred million dollars will go to buttons, posters, smear campaigns, etc. Now, I don't know about anyone else, but given the fact that there are plenty of schools that are falling apart, people who are starving, and thousands of other causes in the world, the idea that $100 million will be spent to see who is going to be the next president of the United States sickens me.

> "They are all political insiders who have managed to raise such a ridiculous amount of money that Joe O. Public off the street would never stand a chance against them."

How many of these candidates will claim they are dedicated to helping the homeless and the hungry, as they funnel large amounts of money towards buying campaign ads or other useless material which will in the end be thrown out?

What makes this situation worse is the candidates' backgrounds. None of them are "common" people. Some are members of political legacies (Gore, Dole, Bush) and some are trying to start their own legacies, but let's be honest. They are all political insiders who have managed to raise such a ridiculous amount of money that Joe O. Public off the street would never stand a chance against them.

So what are the voters' options? We have no better alternatives than political insiders. We certainly can't win the presidency ourselves. Chances are we couldn't get our name on the ballots without a lot of effort that would go to waste because we don't have corporations ready to line up and willingly donate large sums of money to our cause.

So do we live with this situation? Do we just listen to the debates, and end up choosing the best of all the evils presented on the off chance that he or she might be able to enact changes in the current system?

Yeah, that's pretty much what we have to do, unless a lot of us are willing to make a stand. Write letters to Congress asking for further reforms of the system so that it is easier for the common man to enter and win the presidential race. Reform has to begin somewhere, and I doubt that whoever ends up winning on election day a year from this November will be all that ready to bring about any great changes in the "business as usual" attitudes of Washington, because re-election is always right down the road.

So, people of America, when we go to the polls next year, I urge you all to cut through the smoke that is created by the large amounts of money in the system and listen to the issues, because if we stop watching the $100 million show and start paying attention to the issues, the candidates will become less focused on putting on the $100 million show and much more focused on what needs to be done for our country to ensure that we can take pride in the idea of America as a country of thinkers, doers, and movers, and not as a country where the presidency is purchased by the person who can raise the most money.

Chris Collins is a Collegian Columnist.

Doonesbury

BY GARRY TRUDEAU

Mo rap, mo problems

Matt Frascella

About a year ago I picked up a bad habit. No, Mom, it isn't crack or gambling. I've kicked those for good; it's called rap music. It invaded my humble dorm room straight out of the beautiful Garden State when my freshman roommate moved in last year. The first time I talked to him I was expecting to see a white ghetto wannabe version of the Puff Daddy walk into my room complete with gold chains and a huge flashy jacket. I had this master plan where my big friend was going to sleep over drunk and naked on the floor for the first few nights until he moved out and I got a single. But the kid turned out to be OK except for his jersey handicap, and it fortunately never came to that.

I had never liked rap before – in fact I thought it was garbage and lacked any redeeming musical value. After all, what kind of genius does it take to come up with, "F the police." I was more into the classical style of Pearl Jam. But like a slow moving fungus, rap gradually overcame me as my roommate played it more and more often. Pretty soon I was singing along to "Mo' money, mo' problems." (Rest in peace Biggie, you're the greatest). And, a wise elder told me my freshman year that women need to hear some music that they can dance to. These words came back to me a year later and I found myself buying rap CDs.

After awhile, like all good addictions, it took control of my life. Pretty soon I was idolizing Snoop Dog. I started drinking 40 oz. bottles of malt liquor and singing along to the classics like "Gin and juice," "Dre Day," and "What's my name?" Worse yet, I started corrupting the girls on my floor with my newfound appreciation for the "ghettofabulous" lifestyle. No, I didn't start pimping them out or start calling them "biatches." Instead I got them into my festering addiction.

Soon the innocent freshmen girls knew all the words to "F you tonight" by the Notorious B.I.G. featuring R. Kelly. I didn't care that B.I.G. was dead or that his music was completely offensive and degrading to women. The funny thing about rap music is that no one seems to care that women are constantly referred to as hoes, simply out for male conquest. I think the worst one is "Ain't no fun (if the homies can't have none)," which is track No. 12 on Snoop Dog's debut album Doggystyle. The stuff is a living contradiction to the entire women's rights movement, but rap stars are still cranking it out and reaping the rewards. It is kind of ironic that the more offensive you are, the more albums you sell; the more albums you sell, the more money you make, and the more women throw themselves at you.

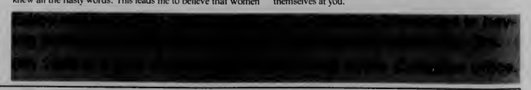
My friend who goes to school in Virginia (yeah, I even managed to spread rap to the Bible belt) said that he was hanging out with one of his female friends when he put in Snoop Dog. He was shocked to discover that her favorite song on the album was the most offensive one, the one that is the most degrading. Even more shocking than this is that she knew all the nasty words. This leads me to believe that women like raunchy stuff as much as guys, even though they would never admit that.

The obvious contradiction in this little tale is that I am as white as they come. Actually that isn't entirely true: my rap-loving roommate is way whiter than I am. We can't go out in October without sunscreen. I have never been to the ghetto. I cannot relate to any of the things they "sing" about. I am straight out of the suburbs not Compton. I have no idea what it is like to "strap" or "get my serve on" or pimp. Half the time I need translations on what rappers are even talking about. I am Italian, though, and maybe I have a subliminal affinity for gangsters.

Anyway, I was now at the point in my addiction where I found myself repeating lines I thought would never come out of my mouth. Enough is enough. I had to bust a cap in this problem before it got any worse. If I didn't watch it I might find myself getting into professional wrestling sooner or later, and we couldn't have that.

This summer, I thought I had the perfect cure. First, I would be significantly far enough away from New Jersey to not feel the ill effects. My reasoning was a little faulty though, because I underestimated how far the overpowering stench can really waft. On clear nights I could almost hear syringes washing up on the cold Jersey shore. Second, I went to Woodstock '99, the ultimate personification of rock music. You can't get much more rock than Rage Against the Machine and Metallica playing back-to-back. This was sure to get that bad rap music out of my system for good.

Once again, though, I was wrong. I almost had a fit when I missed Ice Cube for Dave Matthews. I didn't even know the Dan Mega was playing on the other stage, otherwise I would have gotten my booty over there to push some rhymes like weight with the other "biznitches." Needless to say I came back to school still infected by the rap disease.



The more I come to think about it, the more I realize that rap is a college phenomenon. I wouldn't feel at home here if I didn't hear overly loud rap music blaring every time I tried to cross the street. It makes me feel at home, like a fragrant candle or a welcome mat. The first time I came to take a tour here I was astounded by the blasting rap music coming out of Northeast. Do people actually listen to that?" I asked myself.

For me, rap music is a part of college. My friend was right when he called it party music. Every party you go to has it. It is dance music with a thumping bass you can bounce to.

I have learned to embrace my rap addiction. Rap music is a part of me. An ugly gangster pimpin apart of me, but a part of me still. God bless New Jersey. Whoever said nothing good ever came out of that state never had a Tasty cake.

Matt Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

Pull Quote: It is kind of ironic that the more offensive you are, the more albums you sell; the more albums you sell, the more money you make, and the more women throw themselves at you.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Thugh Reid Black Affairs Editor Elana Premack News Editor Marc Menschel Finance Manager Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Kara Stokes Photography Editor Position Vacant Distribution Manager Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor Joylyn Lomberd Promotions Manager Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor Position Vacant Classifieds Manager Position Vacant Systems Manager
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Woman's Affairs

Glamour girl? UM student fits the bill

Senior volleyball co-captain honored

By Christine Connare
Collegian Correspondent

Most of us go to extreme lengths to hide our family members. We attempt to erase all signs of relation in order of avoiding embarrassment from our peers. "Crazy Uncle Henry, what Uncle Henry?" But UMass senior Jill Meyers has spent her life proudly sharing the accomplishments of her relatives.

Her aunt, Ann Meyers-Drysdale, was the first woman signed to the NBA, the first athlete inducted into the Woman's Sports Hall of Fame, and was a member of the first U.S. women's Olympic basketball team in 1976.

Her uncle, Don Drysdale, was a pitcher for the LA Dodgers. He was also inducted into the Hall of Fame. Another uncle, Dave Meyers, played in the NBA for the Milwaukee Bucks.

Meyers has seen firsthand the fame her relatives have achieved. She has witnessed their everyday struggles. As she explains, "they are legends off the court, too, they are active in their communities. Watching them has helped me to appreciate stars."

So what do you do in a family so accomplished in the competitive world of sports?

Well, you carve out your own little unique path to fame.

This is exactly what student-athlete Jill Meyers has done. While most of us have spent the last week avoiding all that reading that is piling up, choosing instead to sit around the Bluewall leisurely sipping hazelnut coffee, Meyers has done one interview after another discussing her latest achievement.

Open up the October issue of Glamour and there she is – UMass's very own Jill Meyers. Meyers was chosen as one of Glamour magazine's 1999 Top Ten College Women. She is the first UMass student ever selected for this award.

So what sort of reaction does this accomplishment receive from her family and friends?

"Everyone's pretty excited and proud. I actually down played it," Meyers said.

This Southern California native has involved herself in numerous activities here at UMass over the past three years. Meyers decided to attend college on the East Coast for an interesting mixture of reasons.

"At the time I was recruited by the [volleyball] coaches the UMass basketball team was number one. I also liked the academic appeal of the East Coast," Meyers said.

Meyers has built an impressive resume on the volleyball court as well. She has played on the volleyball team since freshman year, and currently is a co-captain for a young squad. She is the only Minutewoman to have been named an All-Atlantic 10 Conference selection three times. To match that, she is a two-time AVCA All-District Selection, and recently joined an exclusive group when she tallied her 1,000 dig last week. At the start of the season, she owned the UMass record for career hitting percentage (.284) and ranks second and third on the school's all-time list of stats.

Meyers encourages other women to become involved in sports.

"There's a new image of beauty coming in with the popularity of sports – hard work does pay off," said Meyers.

She believes through participation in sports women can feel healthier, gain more confidence, and learn about leadership.

Aside from success on the court, Meyers has excelled in academics as a member of the Honors Program. Her senior thesis project is a comparison of the degrees of punishment for sinners in Dante's Inferno and an examination of the levels of detention for juvenile delinquents.

Meyers, a political science and English major with a minor in Spanish, has earned several academic honors including the David Knapp Political Science Award for outstanding academic achievement. Last summer, Meyers was an intern with the Los Angeles American Civil Liberties Union.

She has worked in the past with the Department of Youth Services and the Girls and Boys Club of Santa Monica. Meyers is currently gaining hands-on experience working on the Bill Bradley campaign and hopes to use her connections as a platform to highlight political and social issues of concern to her.

Whether it is her athletic or academic career you wish to examine, one quality stands out: leadership. Commenting on her leadership capabilities she simply says, "Some people are born with it."

Meyers recently displayed her leadership skills at the Glamour recognition ceremony in New York City. She met with the other winners and guest speakers, such as feminist author Naomi Wolf.

"It was the most amazing two days of my life. We are already planning a reunion in January," Meyers said. "Among us we developed a close support group."

Amazingly enough, Meyers does have free time to enjoy her college days. In Glamour she talks about an outrageous stunt she has done here at UMass.

"I once participated in a pudding wrestling tournament – it's like mud wrestling but edible," confesses Meyers.

Each year Meyers and her friends participate in Haigis Hoopla. They spend hours shopping at vintage clothing stores to put together extravagant costumes for the event.

"I love costumes. We try to win an award for best or worst costume," says Meyers.

For most young women, all this attention and success may seem overwhelming. But Meyers seems to have it under control, and also seems to be enjoying it.

Jill Meyers was recently honored by Glamour Magazine as one of 1999's top ten women.

Libby in trouble; in need of funds

Presidential hopes are waning

By David Von Drehle and Dan Balz
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Former Senate majority leader Bob Dole has begun an aggressive campaign to coax money from the Republican establishment to keep his wife's under funded presidential campaign going, according to GOP sources.

Despite her strong showing in last month's Iowa straw poll, and national surveys that show her running a distant second in the GOP field, top advisers told Elizabeth Dole she would have to consider quitting the race if she does not have adequate financing. The unprecedented fund-raising advantage of Texas Gov. George W. Bush was the major factor in that analysis.

Elizabeth Dole

At the end of June, Bush had raised more than $37 million, compared with Dole's $3.5 million. Since then, the gap has widened, as Bush has pushed his total past $52 million. The candidates are required to report their finances again at the end of the month.

Bob Dole's fund-raising efforts reflect the stepped-up role he is playing in his wife's campaign, which also includes participation in strategy meetings. "The senator's role has increased dramatically since the straw poll," one key Dole supporter said.

Some Dole supporters believe the former senator's activity represents "penance" for earlier comments critical of his wife's campaign, while others say he was invigorated by the results of the Iowa straw poll. But his involvement also reflects his concern that a lack of money could cripple her efforts to compete when the primary and caucus season begins next winter.

Dole is tapping his enormous range of contacts inside the party, built over a long career that culminated in his winning the Republican nomination for president in 1996.

The vast majority of his former fund-raisers support Bush. So Dole has been contacting them to argue that it is essential to keep his wife's candidacy alive because it is good for the image of the GOP and is drawing new support, especially from women. The party will benefit from her candidacy no matter who wins the nomination, Dole has argued in his sales pitches.

For example, the Doles recently asked for a meeting with former Republican party chairman Haley Barbour, a key Bush supporter who has raised large sums for the Texas governor. Bob Dole appealed to Barbour for help in turning on the GOP money spigot.

Barbour would not confirm that the meeting occurred; a source knowledgeable about the exchange said Barbour told Elizabeth Dole's candidacy is good for the party, but he offered little hope of a major influx of money.

Earlier, according to one source close to the Dole campaign, the former senator sat down with hundreds of pages of names – the list of donors filed by Bush with the Federal Election Commission. He noted the names of his past supporters who were giving to Bush and sent off letters soliciting support for his wife.

Using the Bush filing to solicit money for his wife could be a violation of FEC regulations, which say that any information copied, or otherwise obtained from FEC reports "shall not be... used by any person for the purpose of soliciting contributions."

"I do know that he sent out a number of letters to ask Dole supporters from his campaign" for money, said one Bush adviser. There may be some overlap. I don't know that he specifically went through Bush's donor list."

The Post made repeated calls seeking comment from the former senator and the Dole campaign. But there was no response.

One Bush supporter said, "Bob Dole is calling around to people and saying he talked to people near the Bush campaign and that they think it's great for Elizabeth to be in the race and stay in the race and that if they've given to Bush they should give money to Elizabeth because it's good for the party and good for Bush."

The candidate is resolved to press ahead. "This thing is full speed ahead," said Tony Fabrizio, a top Dole strategist who also said he knew of no advisers warning Dole she might have to quit the race unless the fund-raising improves dramatically.

"We do face reality from the standpoint of we're not going to have $60 million like Bush, he added. "But we have other strengths that other candidates in the race do not have to bring to bear."

So anyway, Willie McGinest...

The three of us were giddy, excited to be New England fans. While driving home late night from Foxboro Stadium after being in attendance for both the Patriots and Red Sox games on Sunday, we heard the good news. In nearby Brookline, the Americans had come from behind being against the odds to win the Ryder Cup. Normally, the only golf I will watch on television is celebrity tournaments and Happy Gilmore, but when you put Americans against any other country in any competition including shuffleboard, my attention is captured, my ethnocentrix streak shines through. As three enthusiastic fans and friends heading west on the Mass Pike, we were proud of our teams. The Red Sox did lose but the game left our spirits high because we were enraptured by Fenway's magic on a warm, bright day. Plus Tom Gordon returned to the pitching rotation after seeing entirely too much time on the disabled list, though he wasn't asked to play. Anyway, all was well with our worlds. We were not even dreading arriving in Amherst in the wee hours of the morning. We all had classes. Seth, our loyal driver for the day, even had an early morning test. It was the price we would pay: we were not phased. I blame this general great mood for what happened next. Seth was the first culprit. He decided he needed to call WFH sports talk radio to speak with Ted Sarandis on his live talk show. After numerous attempts, he got through and was set up to be the next caller. Seth was all fired up to point out how the Pats should run up the middle more. He was practically salivating as he anticipated what he would say to Boston fans everywhere.

Then it happened. His cell phone ran out of juice just as he was going on.

I was not too upset that he didn't get on the air. My experience with such shows does not leave me yearning for more. Since I was a little girl riding in my father's car I heard hosts such as Mike and the Mad Dog tear people apart in front of thousands of listeners. Sometimes it was warranted if the callers were morons, but many times loyal fans were cut into because they had a different opinion than that of the hosts. Callers are often involved in shouting matches to be heard, quickly dismissed, and even hung up on.

How did these guys get radio shows? They lack communication skills and many times need to grow up. Shooting the bull about sports, bringing very few interesting comments to the conversation and acting as they have deep understandings that other fans lack are all symptoms of former athletes trying to relive their glory days. I am not amused. My two friends pleaded with me for a while, "Aim, just call." I finally complied. Why not? I just was born on a large screen television in the parking lot as post-game tailgaters waited for the lines of cars, trucks and mobile homes to leave them a clear route to drive home. I couldn't be daunted by a guy who thinks he is an authority on sports. Plus I was no sports talk show virgin. I had been on a Rhode Island station sharing my knowledgeable opinions of Rhody hoops, when I frantically followed my hometown team.

I called and got through. They asked my name. They sounded surprised to hear my voice. The tone in the voice I heard was almost mocking. I didn't want to be subjected to any men who couldn't deal with women on the same level that they talked to their buddies in the locker room. I told them I was on a car phone in Seth's car who just got through but disconnected. I asked if he would rather talk to Seth. The voice replied they would rather speak to me. I was happy. They probably tried to put all female voices through to get guys' attention. Maybe even out the listener ratio. I was wrong. I don't know why they had me on. It definitely wouldn't be my alluring voice. But they obviously didn't even care about my opinion, much less ask me for it. I was talking about the Pats and Red Sox games I just saw. The hosts didn't cut in a million times to ask questions like they usually did. They didn't even ask me questions about sports. I was asked my position in the car in reference to where I was sitting. Was I driving? I felt like I was on a dating game. What color hair do you have? Do you like long walks on the beach or hot sex by the fire?

Please. I would not have called if I didn't have anything intelligent to say or if I wasn't sure if the quarterback's main objective was to keep the "bad guys" out of the end zone, or throw a high in the air for one of his teammates to try and catch. I played into their world and was left unsatisfied. As we continued along the nagging, nonsceptic journey that I was getting so accustomed to, I could only look forward to my next football road trip.

Amy Apicerno is a UMass student.

Women's Issues Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 4, 4:30 p.m. – Gigi Kaeser, a freelance photographer from Amherst, MA, will give a Works-in-Progress talk entitled "Family Diversity Projects: Working Toward Social Change." Kaesar, photographer of "Love makes a family: portraits of lesbian, gay, bisexual, and transgender parents and their families" and "Of many colors: portraits of multiracial families" will present a slide show of her work and discuss the internal and external challenges she has faced in representing "difference."

TUESDAY, OCT. 5, 7:30 p.m. – Amanda Mitchell, a Five College Women's Studies Research Associate from University of Central Lancashire, UK, will give a Colloquium entitled "The Myth of the 'Female Democrat': Exploring the Gendered Subject of a German Right-Wing Politics." Mitchell will discuss the definition of nationalistic extremism within a specifically German context, and will examine the recent increase in popularity of the German political right-wing. She will argue that a specifically female-centered approach is vital to understanding this movement within Germany.

TUESDAY, OCT. 12 – In the New York Room, Mary Woolley Hall, Mt. Holyoke College, Kay Redfield Iamison, professor of Psychiatry at the John Hopkins University School of Medicine, and author of An Unquiet Mind, will read from her new book, Night Falls Fast: Understanding Suicide.

OCT. 16, 2:30 p.m. – Food For Though Books at 106 N. Pleasant St. Queer Reading Series Presents: Peggy Gillespie, editor of "Love makes a family: portraits of lesbian, gay, bisexual & transgender parents & their families."

WED. OCT. 16, 8 p.m. – The Tibetan Buddhist nuns of Khachoe Ghakyil Sunnery in Kathmandu, Nepal, will present "Women's Freedom and Spiritual Liberation: An Evening of Sacred Performance." Modern Tibetan women have never taken part in the ancient rituals of formalized philosophical debate and religious practice that the Amherst audience will see.

MONDAY, OCT. 18, 4:30 p.m. – Patricia Everett, a psychologist from Amherst, will present "A History of Having A Great Many Times Not Continued To Be Friends." It will be staged reading of a play based on the correspondence between Mabel Dodge, and Getrude Stein, 1911-1934.

Great debate: Hilary's goals still uncertain

By Mary K. Feeney
The Hartford Courant

For better or worse, Hillary Rodham Clinton will be headline material for the foreseeable future. Even though she has not officially announced her Senate candidacy in New York, Hillary has courted the media in house hunting expeditions and on her upstate "listening tour."

It has been an unusual courtship, with much headlines speculation about her "real" intentions. A puff piece in the premiere issue of Talk magazine backfired when media pundits gleefully dissected the psychological implications of her husband's tortured youth.

So amid this flurry of love notes and poison pen letters comes Esquire's profile by Tom Junod. Junod, an Esquire writer at large, was the guy who first charged that was people regard Kevin Spacey in his 1997 Esquire cover story, "Kevin Spacey Has a Secret." In it, Junod intimated that even his own mother knew Spacey was gay, he referred to rumors of Spacey's homosexuality but never substantiated them. Spacey, of course, was livid and has lately been busy refurbishing the story, presumably to bolster his image as a leading man in his highly acclaimed "American Beauty."

Now Junod casts his eye on the campaigning first lady, and in "Hillary As You've Never Seen Her Before," he adds a wolf whistle. "She has a sexy mouth, I think," it begins. That slight palatial overbite – it gets to me."

Junod's premise – "that so many men absolutely hate Hillary and that their hatred is less political than it is sexual" – is, No. 1, nearly impossible to prove, and No. 2, borderline sexist. Explaining the first lady in terms of her sexual chemistry – or lack thereof – might be an interesting premise if we were talking about, say, Gwyneth Paltrow. And even though politicians are not given the respect accorded them 50 years ago, Clinton, after all, may be running for a major political office and presumably has issues that supersede her wearing of pantsuits and her physique.

REGISTERED STUDENT ORGANIZATIONS

African Student Association
Afrik-Am
AHORA
ALANA Honor Society
Alive with Dance
Alliance Christian Fellowship
Alpha Lambda Delta
Alpha Phi Omega
Alpha Zeta
Amnesty International
Animal Rights Coalition
Arnold Air Society (ROTC)
Arts Collective
Asian American Student Association
Asian American Student Coalition
Aviary Society
Beta Alpha Psi
Beta Kappa Psi
Bicycle Co-op
Bicycle Racing Team
Biracial/Multiracial Students Association
Black Mass Communications Project
Black Student Union
Boltwood Project
Boricas Unidos
Born Again Students in Christ
Boundaries: Outlet of Expression
Business Club
Cambodian Student Association
Campus Center/Student Union Commission
Campus Crusade for Christ
Campus Design & Copy
Cannabis Reform Coalition
Cape Verdeans Student Association
Casa Dominica
Center for Student Businesses
Central Area Government
Chabad Students
Chamber Choir
Cheerleaders
Chess Club
Chi Alpha
Chinese Student Club
Circle K Club
Club Communications
Club Managers Student Chapter
Club Volleyball
College Bowl Team
Communications Disorders
Commuter Area Government
Commuter Services & Housing
Resource Center
Concepto Latino
Crew Club
Daily Collegian
Dance Team
Distinguished Visitors Program
Earthfoods
Equestrian Team
Eta Sigma Delta
Fencing Team
Fire and First Aid
Friends of RAIL
Future Hoteliers of America
Game Hobbyists' League/Grenadier Society
Golden Key Honor Society
Greenough Snack Bar
Habitat for Humanity
Hatian American Student Association
Hands
Hang Gliding Club
Hillel
Hindu Student Organization
In Focus
Independent Restauranteurs
Index
Institute of Industrial Engineers
Interfraternity Council
Intervarsity Christian Fellowship
Japan American Club
Kappa Kappa Psi/Tau Beta Sigma
Kodokan Martial Arts
Korean Students
Lesbian, Bisexual, Gay Alliance
MassPIRG
Mortar Board
Motorsports Club
Muslim Students Association
Non-Academic Computing
Northeast Area Government
Office of ALANA Affairs
Orchard Hill Area Government
Outing Club
Pagan Student Organization
Pakistan Students Association
Panhellenic Council
People's Market
Phi Sigma Pi
Pi Sigma Alpha
Pioneer Valley Combat Club
Pre-Vet & Animal Science Club
Queen Fan Club
Radical Student Union
Republican Club
Resource Economics Association
Rugby Team
Sailing Team
Scabbard + Blade
SCERA
Science Conventioneers of Umass Science Fiction Society
Shotokan Club
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Ski & Board Club
Snowboarding Club
Society of Hispanic Professional Engineers
Society of Physics Students
Society of Women Engineers
Soul TV
South Asian Club
Southwest Area Government
Spectrum
Sport Parachute
Student Legal Services Offices
Student Union Art Gallery
Student Union Craft Center
Student Valley Productions
Students Advocating Finacial Aid
Sweets and More
Sylvan Snack Bar
Theatre Guild
Tix Unlimited
UMJAMS
Union Video Center TV-19
University Productions & Concerts
Upside Down
Valley Women's Voice
Vietnamese Student Association
Wildlife Society
WMUA Radio ~91.1 FM
Women's Ice Hockey
Women's Rugby

Greek Organizations
Alpha Chi Omega
Alpha Chi Rho
Alpha Delta Phi
Alpha Epsilon Phi
Alpha Epsilon Pi
Alpha Kappa Alpha
Alpha Phi Alpha
Alpha Sigma Phi
Alpha Tau Gamma Chi Omega
Delta Chi
Delta Sigma Phi
Delta Sigma Theta
Delta Upsilon
Delta Zeta
Gamma Phi Sigma
Iota Gamma Upsilon
Iota Phi Theta
Kappa Alpha Psi
Kappa Kappa Gamma
Lambda Chi Alpha
North Barracks
Omega Psi Phi
Phi Beta Sigma
Phi Kappa Sigma
Phi Mu Delta
Phi Sigma Kappa
Pi Kappa Alpha
Sigma Alpha Mu
Sigma Delta Tau
Sigma Kappa
Sigma Phi Epsilon
Sigma Sigma Sigma
Sigma Tau Gamma Zeta Phi Beta
Zeta Psi

Think you're a bad a...
Then Join the
Umass Women's Rugby Team
•no experience necessary
•if interested call Meg @ 549-9403

Umass Women's Rugby vs. Amherst College
This Saturday October 2nd, 11am
Athletic Fields behind the Mullin's Center

Do You Like to Swing?
Would You Like to Learn?
Join Us!
What: The Annual Fall into Swing Dance
When: Thursday, Sept. 30th 7-11:30 PM
Where: Student Union Ballroom
How Much: FREE!!!
UMASS BALLROOM DANCE
We'll be teaching from 7-8 and there'll be general dancing from 8-11:30, to include tons of Swing and Latin Music!
There's even a club!
We meet Tuesdays and Thursdays from 6:45-8:00 PM in Totman 101. No partner or experience necessary!!! (We do other dances too.)
Questions/Info: Call 549-4070

LABOR PARTY CLUB
Likely issues to be addressed this semester:
-privitization and contracting out of public services
-protection of jobs and the environment
-student organizing/activism
-access to quality pu blic education
-grass-roots community building among others
-also, input for possible speakers welcomed
For more information please contact Jamie at 546-6417

Alchemist's Anonymous
Chemistry Club
Meetings Monday 7:30pm
Crossmann Rm 202
Specialized Living for Pisces & Masters of Science

Join UMass
Women's Ice Hockey
Have Fun & Meet New People
First Practice October 4th
Questions? Call Elly at 546-5840

CAN YOU JUGGLE? LEARN?
WOULD YOU LIKE TO Be Part of
THE UMASS JUGGLING CLUB
FIRST MEETING THIS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1ST.
NO EXPERIENCE NECESSARY!!!
4:30 - 6:00 P.M.
CAMPUS CENTER BASEMENT
For Questions or Information
Contact: Jake @ 546-3490
jake@student.umass.edu

AASA
Asian American Students Association
A Supportive Atmosphere since 1975...
AASA aims to advocate unity and awareness along with the promotions of the views, voices and experiences of Asian and Asian American students.
A Rewarding Experience
Various ways to interact, such as parties, cultural events, sports tournaments, casino nights, etc., help build community among members. Through our numerous social, educational, and political activities, concrete foundations are created, cultural diversity is enriched and worth while friendships are formed.
AASA Membership is free. General meetings are held regularly and new members are welcome.
(414) 545-018 www-unix.oit.umass.edu/~aasa aasa@oitunix.oit.umass.edu

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian
Wednesday, September 29, 1999

Sisters go Technicolor

By Kevin Monahan
Collegian Staff

THE SISTERS OF MERCY
Avalon Ballroom
Sept. 27

BOSTON — Wow! The band that is/was as the very definition of "gothic rock" has gone Technicolor. Who would think it?

If you are not familiar with Andrew Eldritch's antics in the past few years, his new look might surprise you. To everyone else who has been eagerly anticipating the sisters' current tour, which is the first Sisters tour fans have ever had to see the band live, the front man's addition of vibrant colors into his wardrobe and into the live act may be quite amusing. It could be downright laughable if the end result weren't so damn aesthetically stunning.

The bright lights filtered through saturated, gel-mixed and matched colors beautifully in the thick smoke. Over the course of extended introduction music and sound effects Andrew Eldritch, badly dressed in a white turtleneck with black PVC pants, and company took the stage.

Flanked on both sides by one guitarist, Eldritch switched on Doktor Avalanche (the drum/bass/keyboards) machine and claimed his space on center stage. Opening up with "Detonation Boulevard," from the 1990 album, Vision Thing, the Sisters set the sound for the rest of the evening — loud. The type of guitar noise utilized by the band is not the type we have come to expect from The Sisters of Mercy. The dissonant random chords strummed in cacophonic glee have been traded in for tight, almost metal sounding riffs. Gladly though, Eldritch's baritone voice is still present.

"Ribbons," and "Come Together" were played next with equal force from the two guitarists, and a sort of nonchalant nod from Eldritch. From the moment he stepped on stage, Eldritch's "whatever" attitude was apparent, while he hid behind his dark glasses and lit another cigarette.

Eldritch did not seem to show any sign of life/emotion/ did the audience, for that matter) until "Dominion." The song, from the 1987 album Floodland, roused the audience as Eldritch coaxed them into singing along with the chorus. For the first time during the show, Eldritch managed to rouse some signs of life in a crowd that embraces death. Unfortunately, the show was half over at that point.

"Flood II" was another high point of the evening. The Sisters played a few more before closing with a streamlined version of "The Temple of Love."

Returning for the encore in a glittery black shirt (and he says he's not a goth) and a t-shirt which read "DI ERGO" Eldritch played "First Last and Always," shouted "Live on Motor City," and went on to play "Vision Thing" before departing the stage. (Their next stops in Detroit tomorrow night.)

The Sisters came back for another brief encore, this time with Eldritch in a Red Wings jersey (apparently no one told him that he was in Boston yet). "This Corrosion" was a definite crowd pleaser and, again, Eldritch invited everybody to sing along. It's surprising that Eldritch held such good spirits in a room full of goths.

As a performer Andrew Eldritch is no Peter Murphy. But he does know how to psyche up his gothic following. Maybe he should do it more often.

Sisters of Mercy front man Andrew Eldritch colorfully puffed his way through an impressive set at Boston's Avalon on Monday night.

Cole is energetic

By Charlie Apicella
Collegian Staff

Volume Four in Cole Broderick's Seasons of Saratoga Series conveys the pianist's interpretations of winter in this upstate New York resort community. The beauty and tranquility of this corner of the world is a rather inspiring backdrop for a series of concepts in the jazz idiom, and Cole's approach to the winter season is not lazy and confined, but rather energetic, open, and free. The music has a freshness and contemporary feel that really seem to depict the artist's own feelings. It sounds like Broderick is playing from the heart, rather than from conventions or traditions that the title may suggest.

The music has a fluid, introspective, and spontaneous feel. This unconfined musical base is a result of the interaction between Mr. Broderick and Ray Jung on electric bass. The electric bass adds a great deal to the music, as it allows Jung a more agile and melodic approach and the opportunity to create an important parallel voice to the piano. The occasional high-register pops from the bass are a nice contrast to the familiar acoustic tone of Broderick's Steinway piano.

Saxophonist Marcus Benoit is mixed almost into the background of the record with a good deal of reverb depth, which allows his presence to be more of a mood color, rather than a soloist. Benoit is able to create a feeling of peripheral action which is at times thematically separate from the foreground presence of the piano. Because Broderick and Benoit seem to be acting on different planes, the music is opened up a great deal to reveal a lot of space and freedom among the ensemble.

All of the tunes are composed by Broderick, except for two inclusions by Benoit, and as the notes point out, this music is the result of one long set of performance in the studio; the flow from theme to theme, and from tune to tune is evidence of that. The members of the ensemble all seem to peak and release together, which does create the overall rhythm of the set.

The record moves along with few explorations into different musical styles, and for the most part maintains a consistent concept. One highlight is "King Strut," which features a choppy, intervallic melody laid over a funk groove locked by Jung and drummer Gene Garone. The tune "Caroline Street" follows, creating an airy feel in the distant melody played by Benoit, over a propelling pattern by Garone. A nice inclusion to the set is the tune "Pompano," which has a subtle calypso feel and a very "St. Thomas-ish" melody played by piano and flute.

MILLITECH HAS PART-TIME & WEEKEND WORK

2ND SHIFT 4:00PM - 12:30AM
3RD SHIFT 12:00AM - 7:30AM
SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ALL SHIFTS AVAILABLE

Millitech is a high tech company making millimeter wave broad and wireless equipment for major telecommunication companies throughout the world.

...location is convenient to the University -- on Route 116 in S. ...field just one mile past Sunderland Center.

...work is challenging; the environment is clean and quiet.

...Applications are an interest in learning, a willingness to ...cross-train, and eligibility to work in the U.S.

...for Assemblers. There is a shift ... on 2nd Shift and 15% for 3rd ...

...to perform ...microwave ...show complex ... Experience with ...preferred.

ELECTRO-MECHANICAL ASSEMBLERS

This work requires that candidates have excellent manual dexterity/hand-eye coordination and an interest in work that involves microassembly processes using small hand tools and semiautomatic assembly equipment. Previous experience with microassembly process would be an advantage but training will be provided.

ENGINEERING INTERNS

Electrical/Microwave Engineering Students, Manufacturing or Mechanical Engineering students, at the Junior, Senior or graduate level, with good GPAs and an interest in practical applications of their classroom experience, may be considered for part-time internships. Interested applicants must be available to work a minimum of 15 hours a week.

To apply for these positions fill out an application at our facility or send resume and cover letter to Human Resources, 20 Industrial Drive East, S. Deerfield, MA 01373
e-mail: hr@millitech.com FAX: 413.665.0089

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS CLUB

Free HFC T-Shirt

The Area's Most Complete Club • 256-6446

HAMPSHIRE FITNESS club

•PVTA bus route to Rolling Green •
• Pool •
• Aerobics •
• Aqua-aerobics • •Steps •
• Nautilus Circuit • •Racquetball •
• Free weights •
• Jacuzzi •
• Yoga •
• Kickboxing •
• Saunas •
• Massage •
•Bikes •
• Indoor tennis & Basketball •
• Rowers • •Treadmills •

90 Gatehouse Road
Off Rt. 9 2 miles East of Town Center

Join now for our 15 week Semester Special ($169) & get a free HFC T-Shirt

Band Day!

Show your support, come to band day Saturday OCTOBER 9th
McGuirk Alumni Stadium
UMASS vs. Northeastern

Check out the FREE PROGRAM featuring articles and team rosters compliments of the Collegian

COURTESY OF JEFF KRUGER

Polenzani to touch Horse tonight
A fixture on the remarkably successful "Voices on the Verge" tour, Rose Polenzani teams up with fellow songwriter Beth Amsel in a 7pm show at Northampton's Iron Horse Music Hall. Recently releasing her second album, Anybody, on Indigo Girls' Amy Ray's label, Daemon Records, Rose has expanded upon her abilities.

Write For Arts

Stale kernels & no money

By Nick Pizzolato
Collegian Correspondent

Movies, or major motion pictures, call them what you will, but when it comes down to it, to see one film in a theater – plus all the extras that usually go along with the viewing – costs about as much as Al'twu Pinocchio's caliones or B1 (if you are paying for a date) a case of Keystone Light and a pint of Barcadi (so I've been told).

Despite this exorbitant amount of money, millions of people flock to the theaters per year, draining their wallets for three-day-old popcorn that tastes fresh because the high-school kid behind the counter drowns the stale kernels with magma-like, artificial butterlard. Then those same people empty their saving accounts to buy a medium soda that costs more than an extra value meal at McDonalds, even though the theater buys the soda for just pennies an ounce, to quote Austin Powers, "Yea Capitalism." So, why do we go?

Why do we go to see a great movie? According to the advertising slideshow in the Mountain Farm's Four Theaters, one poll in America shows that a majority of people go to the movies to laugh. This high percentage of people happens to be in perfect ratio with endless brigade of awful films. Usually the movies that we go see are nothing short of pathetic, even the ones you think are going to be good are just rewrites of the Chris Tucker movie you saw last year or the Arnahld movie you saw last week.

And why are there so many commercials? I expect the singing and dancing Reese's Cups, and the jazz playing Goobers, and even the large soda that keeps the heat in the back like a carbonated Max Weinberg. But why am I forced to sit through actual commercials? Does Oldsmobile really expect me to jump out of my seat and go buy one of their mini-vans because I saw Garfield lounging on their full-size bench seat (no, I am not selling out)? How would I afford the damn thing, anyway? I just wasted a down payment to see Will Smith make a clever pun while he lays the smack down upon E.T. Also, do I really want to see Ray Romano and the cast of the self proclaimed "number one comedy on Monday night"? At this point in the evening, the theater must know that by now that the crowd is getting restless; realizing they could be at home watching the Will Smith video (which is the same as the movie) and cursing CBS for its crappy programming selection (replacing Pickett Fences with "Dr Quinn," there's a great movie – because that's exactly when the lights fade and the actual movie begins.

Yet day after day, week after week, year after year, we pay and usually enjoy what we see... that is until we sober up and realize that E.T. and All could take DJ Jazzy Jeff and The Fresh Prince any day of the week.

On a more Somber Note: It was 10 short years ago, in early October, when I was forced to plead ignorance. My mother's brother and his family had come up to visit us. While we were watching the news a black and white picture appeared in the upper right-hand corner of the screen and the anchor/person declared that Bette Davis had died. My aunt said it was a shame, and I asked if she was related to Geena Davis (whom I still admired at the time). My aunt then informed me that I didn't know who Bette Davis was and she told me about all the great movies that she starred in. After learning that she had more than 60 Warchant's-shining star, I added a credit (or) attention to the list that followed. Unfortunately anything has become cruder in the course 20 years of existence it is that all the movies Bruce Springsteen "Everything in-and-out I a fact – even those who were famous – were silver screen.

The first Hell-weird and-one I remember being affected by is that of Marilyn Monroe Hemingway. I remember I was almost in an announced on the NBC [illegible] the death of Sammy Davis Jr. [illegible] convenient. I also remember [illegible] a lot like Kermit. I remember [illegible] thought because the [illegible] creature on the planet and a

The list continues with Jim Henson, Brandon Lee, River Phoenix, Bridges and of course, JFK [illegible]

Last Thursday the [illegible] was added to the list of [illegible] known for his Great [illegible] Scott also gave [illegible] Stanley Kubrick's masterpiece [illegible] Dr. Strangelove or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb. It [illegible] Ernest Hemingway [illegible] book, and as the Grateful Dead [illegible] with a young Tom Cruise, [illegible] Bridges and Sean Penn. Scott showed the genius of [illegible] characters and portrayed [illegible] for another piece I [illegible]

His talent and love for the [illegible] such allowed us the [illegible]

UMASS

DEANS LIST ~ SPRING 1999

University of Massachusetts Amherst

* Indicates Honors

BACHELOR'S DEGREE INDIVIDUAL CONCENTRATION

AHEARN, SARAH M	99	BDIC	GIRARD, DANIELLE R	00	BDIC	*PHILLIPS, ALEXANDER	99	BDIC
AJALAT, ELIZABETH	01	BDIC	GLUCKSTERN, RACHEL	01	BDIC	PORATH, OMRI	99	BDIC
ASTRELLA, DANIELLE	00	BDIC	*GUARINO, MARIE	01	BDIC	RADOVICH, LAUREN A	99	BDIC
BEHERRELL, MELANIE A	00	BDIC	HARRIS, STEVEN J	99	BDIC	ROBERTS, MICHELLE L	99	BDIC
*BIDNE, AMY B	00	BDIC	*HELFET HILLIKER, A	99	BDIC	ROYLAND, JAMES J	00	BDIC
*BRANDES, AARON D	00	BDIC	HILDRETH, DANIEL W	99	BDIC	*SCHRAM, ELYSSA A	99	BDIC
BRUNELL, AMANDA S	00	BDIC	HIRSHBERG, MATTHEW	01	BDIC	*SCHULZ, BETH A	99	BDIC
CAPOGNA, CHARLOTTE	99	BDIC	HOLMES, RIVER	99	BDIC	SCHUMAN, BENEDICT J	99	BDIC
CHELMAN, JULIE M	00	BDIC	*JELLISON, MICHAEL J	00	BDIC	SHAH, SHRIPAL H	99	BDIC
COLE, ANDREW J	00	BDIC	*JOPLIN, BENJAMIN M	00	BDIC	SHAMBERG, KIRIN E	99	BDIC
DALTON, TIMOTHY K	02	BDIC	*KAPNER, DANIEL A	01	BDIC	SIGEL, DANIEL M	00	BDIC
*DAVIDSON, TAMARA K	99	BDIC	KURTZ, JENNIFER M	00	BDIC	SMITH, PAMELA J	01	BDIC
DILLARD, SHAUNA M	99	BDIC	LAREAU, ARIEL M	99	BDIC	*STANITIS, JULIE A	99	BDIC
DONAHUE, LAURA J	00	BDIC	LARICHEVA, JULIA	01	BDIC	STEIN, AVI J	99	BDIC
DU PLESSIS, NICOLA A	00	BDIC	LEVINE, CORINNES S	01	BDIC	STEVENS, BROOK L	99	BDIC
DUCHARME, DANIELLE	01	BDIC	*LIM, CECELIA C	99	BDIC	THEROUX, ROBERT A	99	BDIC
*EBACHER, ARIELE	00	BDIC	LINNARD, PETER V	99	BDIC	TOCCI, JASON S	02	BDIC
*FATTARUSO, PAUL, II	99	BDIC	LIZOTTE, JOSHUA M	99	BDIC	*TOTH, LAURA K	01	BDIC
FLINT, NATHAN J	99	BDIC	LUCAS, MATTHEW H	01	BDIC	TRINGALI, ELIZABETH L	00	BDIC
FONGER, WESTON J	02	BDIC	MARCHETTI, JAMES D	00	BDIC	VARVARO, SARA M	00	BDIC
FOSTER, CANDICE L	99	BDIC	MARCINKEVICH, JOHN	00	BDIC	WAITKUS, DAMON J	00	BDIC
*FRENCH, AMBER L	99	BDIC	MCKEAND, LEAH M	02	BDIC	WALLGREN, REBECCA	99	BDIC
*FULHAM, SARAH B	00	BDIC	PAN, CHIA TE	99	BDIC	YOUNG, WILLIAM A	99	BDIC
GAYNOR, VIOLET	01	BDIC	PASQUALE, ANDREW A	00	BDIC

Read Arts!

Collegian Photo meeting every Monday at 7.

The Campus Career Network,
UMass Alumni Association and
the Sports Management Program present

The Annual Edwin M. Rossman Alumni Career Forum's

Sport Management
CAREER DAY PANEL

Wednesday, September 29, 1999
3:00-5:00pm
Campus Center, Room 163C

We are leaps ahead in perspective. We are patient.
We are adventurous. We can't wait.

We are ready for you.

Now that you have your hard-won education, we'd like you to consider a career that can fully tap your abilities and [illegible] exciting possibilities. We are ready for you. We are Sanders, A Lockheed Martin Company. We are a recognized leader in the design, development and manufacture of innovative advanced electronic systems for global defense, government and commercial markets. We have fast-paced, high-technology programs with opportunities for BS, MS and PhD Engineering graduates in Chemical, Computer, Electrical, Manufacturing or Mechanical Engineering and for Chemistry, Computer Science, Math and Physics graduates. Your skills will help shape our success in advanced computing, communications, digital signal processing, [illegible] sonar, electro-optics, electro-magnetics, electronic packaging, lasers and laser detection systems, microwaves, [illegible] frequencies, signal exploitation and software development. In addition to Sanders challenging and rewarding opportunities, we offer programs in Leadership and Technical Graduate Development to jump-start your career. You'll also enjoy our [illegible] day/80 hour work schedule that gives you EVERY OTHER FRIDAY OFF

Meet with a Sanders representative at the UMASS-Amherst Career Fair on Thursday, October 7, 1999. By giving us a resume at the Career Fair, you will be entered into our raffle to WIN a 366 MHZ LAP TOP COMPUTER.

If you'd like to send your resume directly, please address it to: Sanders, A Lockheed Martin Company, Attn: CR-9201, P.O. Box 2029, Nashua, NH 03061-2029; Fax (603) 885-6398; Email: david.l.hausmann@lmco.com

Applicants selected may be subject to a security investigation and must meet eligibility requirements for access to [illegible] information. US citizenship required for most positions.

www.sanders.com

SANDERS
A Lockheed Martin Company

Equal Opportunity Employer

Treat your pets like royalty with a makeover

Props to the Collegian!

-from the 2:30 am crew of Graphics staff

Experience Collegian...

Arts

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE

- Complete Bartending Course
- Near Campus
- For a Fraction of the Cost of other Schools
- National Certification Available
- Hands on Pouring Labs
- Tips to get a Fun, High Paying Job

Free Info Session
Wednesday, October 6th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Act Now, Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

Amherst is Now Smoke Free

but downtown is still SMOKIN' HOT!!!

Family, friends, food and fun is what Amherst is all about.

Smoke

Lots of entertainment and breathable air....
and we're not just blowin' smoke!

Sponsored by the Amherst

Seasonal Special

Beauty Nails

Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 253-4756

Experience A Manicure	Experience A Pedicure	Refill	Full Set w/ Acrylics	Full Set w/ Tips & Overlay
$9.00 (Reg. $10.00)	$16.00 (Reg. $18.00)	$ 13.00 (Reg. $15.00)	$23.00 (Reg. $25.00)	$28.00 (Reg. $30.00)

Live Tonight!

The Asadoorian Brothers

Acoustic

Fun food • Spirits

THE PUB amherst

20oz Miller Lite $1.99

No Cover before 10pm

15 East Pleasant St Amherst

■ football

continued from page 14

since 1967. Michigan matches the Boilermakers' unblemished mark with its own 4-0 record. Each has escaped with a victory against Notre Dame, Purdue, 28-25, Michigan, 26-22, both at home. Both head into Saturday's matchup in the Top 10, the Wolverines at No. 5 and Purdue at No. 10.

Similarities then come to a close. Michigan runs, Purdue passes. Michigan plays in Ann Arbor, a football haven. Purdue plays in West Lafayette, which is rumored to be in Indiana.

Michigan wins. Purdue doesn't.

Brees is out to change that, but the task that lies ahead may call for a miracle. It doesn't stop at Michigan. Next week, it's a trip to Columbus followed by Michigan State at home and the Nittany Lions in Happy Valley. Four weeks, potentially four losses for Brees and Co.

The Boilermakers should grab at least one, but nobody's ruling out an 0-for-October (all right, so they'll manhandle Minnesota in Minneapolis on the 30th).

Michigan doesn't like the threat of Brees coming into its place and tossing the ball around. The Wolverines haven't played Purdue since 1996, when they lost 9-3 in a defensive standoff away from the friendly confines of Michigan Stadium.

Purdue's gem will prove to be too much for the Michigan defensive backfield. J. Crabtree and Montrell Lowe might be ineffective against Michigan's front seven, but Brees is used to that, throwing an NCAA record 85 passes in Purdue's 31-24 loss to Wisconsin last season.

Brees is a year older and a lot better. So far, Brees is improving upon a 39-20 ratio from last year, throwing for 10 passes against just three picks through four games this season. The real test is now.

Getting seven on the road against Michigan, I'd love to take Purdue.

With the rest of the nation, gimme Kansas State, getting five at Texas. In addition, I'll take Ohio State, giving seven at home against Wisconsin and also Air Force, giving 2 on the road against San Diego State.

Brett Matser is a Collegian columnist.

■ tennis

continued from page 14

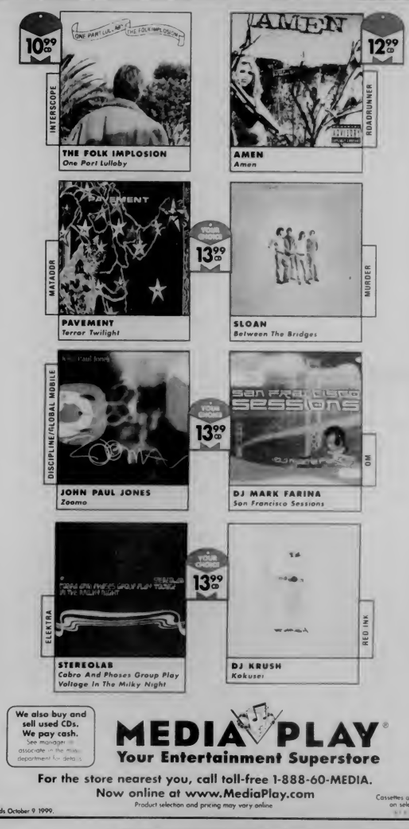
more than an understatement. But this fiery group is one that Dixon calls "tiny...but tough." And it seems that is a fair assessment given how they played through the injury to Helena Horak in their match versus Columbia.

As for Helena Horak, she will be traveling down with the team and will compete at the number two singles slot. Horak has been practicing with the team but has not a serious match in weeks now. Needless to say Dixon thinks her timing and footwork will be off in this match. However, she should be able to strike the ball well and to have her back in the lineup is an emotional lift to a team that seems to feed off the play of one another. Horak will play either second or third singles. Dixon is also moving freshman Katie Stanimen up to number four singles, and moving co-captain Robin Lebovitz down to the number five singles spot.

The Minutewomen go down to New York not only favored, but surprisingly enough they have a larger team. St. John's, as of yesterday, only had five members listed on its roster. If they do not want to forfeit their sixth singles point as well as its third doubles point, they will have to search scrounge for another body.

Transmutational Sounds
f r o m
the NYC Free Jazz Underground

Thurs. 30 Sept. 1999
8:00 PM
$5 Admission



Top of the Campus
11th Floor CC

Daniel Carter- Saxophones, Trumpet, Flute
Mark Hennen- Piano, Electronics
Toby Keshavan- Piano, Electronics

Collegian Sports
Where it's at.

We also buy and sell used CDs. We pay cash.

MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore

For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Now online at www.MediaPlay.com
Product selection and pricing may vary online.

Sale ends October 9 1999.

Cassettes available on select titles.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?

YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-

NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

BEFORE YOU GO PLACES, GO HERE!

Wednesday - Friday
9/29 - 10/1
11am to 4pm

11AM - 4PM
UNIVERSITY STORE... the Ustore
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST

Wednesday Nite is Party Nite at Mike's

Sign up for tonights raffle and at 11:30 you could WIN a $50.00 Gift Certificate to Darby's young womens clothing.

The first 25 patrons to Tuesday Nite enter after 9:30 will receive a FREE Gift Certificate for Mike's Pasta & Meatballs $4.95

Don't forget Monday Nite Football is on! FREE BUFFET every week starting at 9:00.

MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE

16 oz. Bud H, Mich H, & Bud Drafts for Only $1.50 this week. You keep the cup!
Shots of Dr. McGillicuddy's $2.25

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern

McMurphy's Welcomes back Guitar Dudes

17 North Pleasant St

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do you know you legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

88 Ford Bronco II Good condition. Standard. $1500/BO. Call Erik at 323-9062

94 Mazda Protege All highway miles very clean 4 door NEW Brake Struts standard, power everything! A/C $3,000 OBO Caroline 367-0922

SAAB 900 for sale 1991 135k miles. Good condition $4500 586-1688

'86 VW Vanagon 4 speed excellent condition. Please call Teresa at 256-0953

VW Jetta 87 5 Spd. GLI, grey, high milage runs good $2000 call 256-6235 evenings

CHILDCARE

MUST LOVE BABIES. References needed. Tuesday and Thursday 12:30 to 3:00. Call Michelle at 256-8632

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

FREE BABY BOOM BOX + EARN $1200! Fundraiser for student groups & organizations. Earn up to $4 per MasterCard app. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box. 1-800-932-0528 ext. 119 or ext. 125 www.ocmconcepts.com

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Earn $400 per class each semester by simply Taking Notes

Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses

ACCTG 221	MGT 301
ANTH 100	NUTR 130
BIOL 100	PHIL 100
CHEM 110	PHYSIC 131
CHEM 111	PHYSIC 132
CMPSCI 105	POLSCI 101
ECON 103	PSYCH 100
ECON 104	SOCIOL 103
GEO 101	SOCIOL 106
HIST 100	SOM 210
HIST 101	STATIS 111
LEGAL 250	STATIS 140
LEGAL 252	STATIS 141
MKTG 301	THEATR 100
MGT 260	SPORST 202

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list please submit an application online for review.

Attention Marketing Majors: Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers, please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Promotions Company seeks reliable meticulous, student to poster towns and colleges. 10hrs a week. Tues, Weds, Fri. $7.00 a run plus bonus. Car and excellent references. 259-1227

Preschool Teachers Wanted work study positions and substitute positions available working with children ages 18 months to 6yrs. Cushman-Scott Childrens Center Call Ellen at 549-1167

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

EMPLOYMENT

EARN UP TO $1000 By Posting Your Lecture Notes (40[illegible] or C[illegible] Revolutionizing the student study on the web!!

Earn $500 Weekly. Distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phisically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Mullins Center Hiring for post event cleanup apply in person. 2nd floor Mullins Center

Flexible Part Time Research Interviewers Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evening and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benifits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. For more information stop by our table in the Campus Center on Wednesday 9/30/99 or to arrange a personal interview, please contact: Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514

Personal Care Attendant for male quad. Evenings. $9.50 per hr. Call 546-0666

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS

Pays 60 to 120 per Shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

EMPLOYMENT

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

Get the #%$! out of the water Earth Activists @ Clean Water Action get the best experience, great pay, training and benefits working to stop pollution & save the planet. $7.30 - $9.00/hr. Eve/wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

Relief Staff for apartment program serving adults with mental illness living in the community. Enthusiasm, patience & attention to detail a must. Get training & experience needed to work in human service field. Wages $7.50/hr. Send resume & cover letter to: Service Net att. David Mastroianni 129 King St. Northampton, MA 01060

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of you new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Lockers for Rent: CHEAP! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

Bollinger Free Weights. Cast iron plates. Assorted sizes. 30¢/lb. Call Bill, 253-3294 or 545-0442

DP Gympac 1500 Fitness system. 50kg of weight. Padded bench and accessories. Many, many exercises. $75. Call Bill, 545-0442 or 253-3294

Stick it in your ear! Free stud earrings with piercing at Silverscape Designs. Amherst, 264 N. Pleasant St. 253-3324 Northampton, 1 King Street 584-3324

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending classes start soon Student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On UMass bus route 256-0364

SERVICES

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

LOST & FOUND

On Steps MORE key ring with 2 keys. If yours call 253-9462 & describe or leave name & number. Found 9/27

Lost Angel: Tall Brunette, last seen dancing at ABC Saturday night wearing long black coat, sleeveless shirt and a large metal bracelet. I was a fool, please call me. 549-4441

RESUMES

Resume Problems? We can solve them! Aaron 253-6783

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts. 350/mo +util. Female preferred Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to commuter services, RM 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AOWA NS3500 3CD Dual Tape Deck Remote 4 Speakers as is $50 or B/O

ST. JUDE

May The Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved, now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you M.M.

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce In Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, SEPT.28

Coffee Hours — There will be a coffee hour sponsored by Hillel from 8:30 p.m. to 10 p.m. at Hillel House. Activities scheduled.

Ballroom — The Ballroom Dance Club will meet from 8:45 p.m. in Totman 101. Call 367-3630 for more information.

THURSDAY, SEPT.30

Poetry — There will be a Poetry Reading at 8 p.m. in Campus Center 804-808.

FRIDAY, OCT.1

Auditions — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Celebration — There will be a Five-College Simchat Torah celebration at 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House. Everyone is welcome.

Service — There will be a Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome to attend the Kesher reformed style service. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, OCT.2

Auditions — The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Celebration — There will be a Five-College Simchat Torah celebration at 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House. Everyone is welcome.

Community Service — Massachusetts Community Water Watch will participate in a project to help clean up the Connecticut River. If you would like to participate in this event, call Christina at 545-0149.

SUNDAY, OCT.3

Class — There will be a class entitled 'Catch the Wave: Leadership for the New Millennium' in Campus Center 1009. The class is sponsored by the Residence Life Leadership Development Committee, and will offer house council officer and student leader training. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. and lunch will be served.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SEND US YOUR ANNOUNCEMENTS AND THEY COULD BE IN THIS SPACE.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — SEPTEMBER 29, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Walk Up Broadway		Yoga Serra-Doyle Vu		NY TV by the People Who Made It
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby	Work With Me	★★★ "Breakdown" (1997, Suspense) Kurt Russell. (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Cosby	Work With Me	★★★ "Breakdown" (1997, Suspense) Kurt Russell. (In Stereo)		News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20		News	Nightline
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek "Like a Virgin"		Popular		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	6	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Garth Brooks... In the Life		West Wing "Bartlet" (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Killerz"		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	7 Days "The Football"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Garth Brooks... In the Life		West Wing "Bartlet" (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Killerz"		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Beverly Hills, 90210 (In Stereo)		Get Real "Stay (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Garth Brooks... In the Life		West Wing "Bartlet" (In Stereo)		Law & Order "Killerz"		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Anyplace Wild (In Stereo)		Kennedy Center Presents: Americanos		Caught-Act		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	20	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20		News	Nightline
WSBK		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "The Football"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager "Prey"		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "Quigley Down Under" (1990, Western) Tom Selleck.				★★½ "True Grit" (1969, Western) John Wayne, Glen Campbell.
AAE		Simon & Simon		Law & Order		Biography: Charles Alias		L.A. Detectives (R)		American Justice		Law & Order "Bitter Fruit"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline	Newshour		World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	10	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★½ "The Best of Times" (1986, Comedy) Robin Williams.				South Park	Man Show	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Croc		America's Military Acad.		Survive		Bear Attack (R)		America's Military Acad.
ESPN		Sportscenter				Major League Baseball: Teams to Be Announced. (Live)						Major League Baseball: Teams TBA
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	"She Led Two Lives" (1994, Drama) Connie Sellecca, A Martinez...				"For the Love of Aaron" (1993, Drama) Meredith Baxter.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV		Global Groove	Countdown	Beat Suite	Head Trip (R)	TRL (R) (In Stereo)				Head Trip		True Life 'I'm a Pro Wrestler" (R) (In Stereo)	Undressed (R)
NICK		All That (R)	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Taxi	M.T. Moore	Happy Days
SCIFI		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Star Trek "The Lights of Zetar"		Sliders "Way Out West"		★★★ "Back to the Future Part II" (1989, Fantasy) Michael J. Fox. (In Stereo)					"Back II"
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "Rocking the Boat"		Extreme Machines		Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Medical Detect	Extreme Machines (R)
TNT		Due South (R) (In Stereo)		ER "The Storm"		★★½ "The Siege of Firebase Gloria" (1989) Wings Hauser.				★★½ "Hamburger Hill" (1987, Drama) Anthony Barrile.
USA		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG "Code Blue" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		★★½ "Losing Mother" (1998, Drama) Suzanne Somers.				Baywatch "Point of Attack"
HBO		★★★ "Saturday Night Fever" (1977, Drama) John Travolta. 'PG'				Arliss (R)		Sex and the City		★★½ "Wild Things" (1998, Drama) Kevin Bacon. (In Stereo) 'R'		Chris Rock 'R'	Oz (In Stereo)
MAX		★½ "Who Am I?" (1998, Comedy) Jackie Chan. 'PG-13'				★★★ "Little Shop of Horrors" (1986) Rick Moranis.		★★ "Predator 2" (1990, Science Fiction) Danny Glover. 'R'				Pleasure Zone
SHOW		★★★ "Strange Justice" (1999, Drama) Delroy Lindo. (In Stereo)				★ "Species II" (1998) Michael Madsen. 'R'		★½ "Hard Rain" (1997) Morgan Freeman. 'R'		Movie News		Beggars

HSCN — Hampshire Satellite Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Monge Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – You may feel as though you're surrounded by those who do not understand what is really going on, but your perspective is indeed unique.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Despite your eagerness to get ahead at this time, you'll find yourself in a position to help others, even if it means making a personal sacrifice.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You may be feeling as though things are rather "final" today, but there is always a way around those things that seem firm and unchangeable.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You will be leaving something of your younger days behind today, but if you think about it, you'll realize you're quite willing to do so.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Not very many people are likely to believe what you have to say at first, but if you are slow, deliberate, and detailed, you'll surely win them over.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – This is a good day for speaking your mind, whether or not your message is one that people want to hear. Wanting and needing are two different things!

Aries (March 20-April 19) – People around you are brimming with excitement, and though you are reluctant to do so, you must remind them of certain unalterable realities.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – You'll be sending and receiving messages of all sorts throughout the day. Put yourself in a position that allows you to use that information!

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – The rules only account for certain eventualities, and you may feel that there are certain unorthodox things that will serve you quite well today.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – A promise comes you way from someone who is eager to be a part of your life. You may not trust his or her intentions at first, but you'll come around.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – First things first today. You'll realize as the day progresses that you can fit in quite well with the rules, without rocking the boat.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – Things are likely to happen rather quickly throughout the day, so you must be ready to act whenever you are called upon to do so. Don't delay!

Quote of the Day

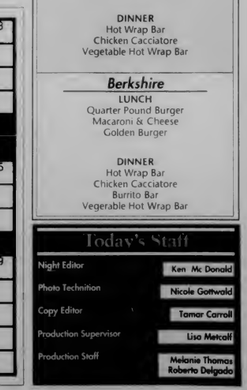
"Knockers?...They actually call you that with a straight face?"

–Hen Manapat

Close to Home By John McPherson

Fan Appreciation Night at Fernmont Raceway.

ACROSS



1 "The African Queen" scriptwriter
5 Tease
9 Angola's neighbor
14 Spoiled kid
15 They're charged
16 Ne'er-do-well
17 "Psycho" director
19 Subway fare
20 Unclose: poet.
21 Neighbor of Ark.
22 Expression
23 Backs out (of a promise)
25 Recognized
26 Blue
27 Huskier
30 1998 Winter Olympics site
33 Listens
34 San Diego has a famous one
36 Baseball family name
37 Supermarket section
38 Bo Derek film
39 Actor Gibson
40 Type of watch
41 Whiskey holc
42 Carnegie Hal event
44 Zip
45 Paris airport
46 Happens to
50 Mr. Goldwyn
53 Ship's pole
54 Ms. MacGrav
55 Reflection
56 Polaris
58 Spring blossc
59 Pitcher Hershiser
60 Summit
61 Canines, e.g.
62 Used to be
63 Comparison

DOWN

1 Loathe
2 Complain
3 Devoured
4 And so on: abbr.
5 — off: vexed
6 Winter fabrics
7 Andes native
8 "For shame!"
9 Stringed instruments
10 Decorates
11 Actress Chase
12 Female ruffs
13 Seabird
18 Goller Ben
22 Polar explore
24 Jacob's twin
25 Flies high
27 Robbery
28 Poet Pound
29 Mythical birds
30 Traffic proble
31 Actor Baldwir
32 Horseback sport
33 Like apes
35 Acorn bearer
37 Live
38 Clay pot
40 Strident cry
41 Type of wheel
43 Almond candy
44 Cuddle up
46 Less covered
47 Lock
48 Pack animal
49 Enchantress
50 River deposit
51 Jacques' gal
52 Ram or steer
53 Additional
53 Additional
56 "Immediately"
57 Rested

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	O	B	S		T	R	Y	O	N		A	P	S	E
W	H	O	A		B	O	O	N	E		B	R	A	D
E	A	R	N		S	O	N	I	C		S	O	R	E
P	R	E	C	E	P	T		O	T	T	O	M	A	N
T	A	S	T	E		S	N	A	I	L
		U	L	T	R	A		R	A	V	A	G	E
W	O	R	M		O	A	F	S		R	E	B	E	L
A	L	A		V	E	R	A	N	D	A		A	R	I
G	E	N	R	E		E	R	I	E		A	S	E	A
E	G	G	I	N	G		I	T	E	M	S
		C	U	R	D	S		O	P	T	E	D
F	U	C	H	S	I	A		S	W	A	H	I	L	I
A	L	O	E		E	V	O	K	E		A	B	E	S
I	N	N	S		F	I	N	E	D		L	I	C	K
L	A	S	T		S	T	O	W	S		T	A	T	S

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Worcester
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Hampshire
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Berkshire
LUNCH
Quarter Pound Burger
Macaroni & Cheese
Golden Burger

DINNER
Hot Wrap Bar
Chicken Cacciatore
Burrito Bar
Vegetable Hot Wrap Bar

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Ken Mc Donald
Photo Technition — Nicole Gottwald
Copy Editor — Tamar Carroll
Production Supervisor — Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff — Melanie Thomas, Roberto Delgado

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, September 8, 1999

Virginia bragging rights up for grabs in Charlottesville

Enough of the state of Florida. Enough already.

Send me a train ticket to the Old Dominion for this weekend. The guy will yell "all aboard!!" and good ol' Brett will grab a hold of his knapsack, hoist it over his shoulder and plop himself down for a glorious afternoon of watching the wayside go by, taking in "Huckleberry Finn" for the umpteenth time.

Carry me back to old Virginia simply because the state beverage is milk. Back home in New Hampshire, my family of four goes through close to a gallon a day. We'd fit in just fine.

That's not it.

Virginia can also play some football. This weekend, all eyes will be on Charlottesville when Virginia and Virginia Tech take the field to build on one of college football's budding rivalries.

Down 29-7 at the intermission, the Cavs were on the verge of being humiliated in front of their home crowd by their most loathed rivals. Coming out of the locker rooms for the third quarter, VTech fell victim to the greatest comeback in Cavalier history. Aaron Brooks threw three touchdown passes, including a 47-yarder to Ahmad Hawkins to complete the second half turnaround. Brooks has left Charlottesville, but the three recipients of his passes, Hawkins, wide receiver Kevin Coffey and tailback Thomas Jones all return to try to extend the Cavs winning streak to three, a plateau they have not been able to reach since 1989. Most don't give Virginia a chance. After all, the Hokies have what may be the nation's best defense, yielding just 21 points in three games heading into this weekend. If Jones wants to run for 210 yards like he did against Brigham Young last week, he might want to pray for a little luck, 'cause if you ask Clemson coach Tommy Bowden, Jones will be fortunate to break even. Last week, the Tigers were held to 17 yards on 26 carries. How was Alabama-Birmingham's luck against the Hokie Pokey two weeks back? 27 carries, 18 yards. Dan Ellis replaced Brooks bringing nearly no experience to the huddle, which might be enough for the Hokies to feast on. He doesn't have Brooks' mobility or his arm strength. Throw in a lack of gametime knowhow and Welsh has himself a raw quarterback who might look starry-eyed playing in his team's biggest game to date.

Brett Mauser on College Football

The Hokies have to make a decision. Stop Jones or stop Ellis. Jones would be the logical choice, but Coffey and Hawkins form a big play duo and putting a halt to Jones' road to the end zone might not be so easy. While Tech returns eight starters from the Big East's best defense, Virginia will try to punch it right down their throat with the ACC's best offensive line outside Tallahassee. In a game that would seem to be dictated by the defense, the offense that makes more big plays, more third downs, more capitalizations on turnovers will prevail. Shyrone Stith, who stands just 5'8," ran for 162 yards against Clemson and might give UVA's significantly bigger linebacking core difficulties.

While you should never underestimate the prospect of payback, I'll give the Cavs the nod. Maybe they lost to North Carolina, a very average ACC team, but I'm still not a believer in the Big East... not just yet. I was never much of a tech guy anyway. Getting four from the Hokies, I'll take the Cavs.

Last week's record: 3-2
Overall record: 10-4-1

All right, so America's fallen in love with Purdue's Drew Brees. It loves the 500 yards passing, the traditional drop-back passer that already has NFL scouts licking their chops come next season when the junior will, in all likelihood, declare for the draft and become a top three selection (Art Modell would kill for Vinny Testaverde or Jim Harbaugh back... anyone... you or me, for that matter).

Brees is to the Big 10 what the tomato is to the fruit group, what David Hasselhoff is to Baywatch, what Butterbean Esch is to the world of boxing. He's the guy who doesn't fit in. While the Ohio States and the Penn States make their livings with hard-nosed running, Brees and Boilermaker coach Joe Tiller have dropped the Mike Alstott factor from the equation altogether. The philosophy calls for three wide receivers on nearly every down, telling the rest of the mammoths of the conference that their secondary better be ready for a long afternoon.

4-0, Purdue is off to its best start

Turn to FOOTBALL page 11

UM volleyball beats Harvard; Crimson seeing red after sweep

By James Piehl & Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

The Harvad Crimson didn't pahk their cahs very long, as the Minutewomen sent them back to Cambridge with a wicked big loss.

With the rage back in the cage, the Massachusetts volleyball team dominated Harvard in a 3-0 sweep, 15-5, 15-7, 15-9. With head coach Bonnie Kenny, Kari Hogancamp, and Jill Meyers all receiving honors for their recent accomplishments they were set to live up to the praise.

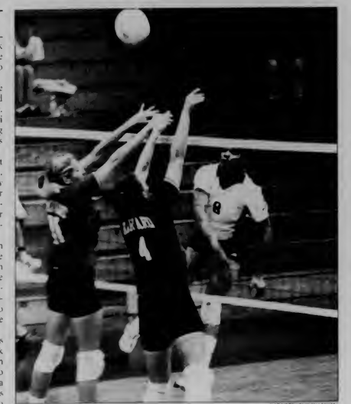
The Minutewomen opened the first game scoring easily on the opposition, jumping out to a 10-2 lead. UMass only stumbled slightly allowing three to their visitor. The women regained their composure rising 14-5, before junior Jennifer Drennan finished it off with a game winning service ace.

In game two, UM and the Crimson traded side outs before UMass broke the ice on a 4-0 run, with sophomore Janeen Demarte servicing the rally. The Minutewomen battled to a 12-4 advantage while swapping side outs and dropping minimal points. Harvard clawed to make the score respectable before the game ended on a return error.

Again in game three the two teams exchanged side outs, before Meyers took the reigns leading UM on a 5-0 run with two service aces. Harvard wasn't ready to give in, as they tied up the game 3-3 on a short offensive burst of their own. UMass recaptured the serve, but was only able to score once before giving it back to the Crimson. HU grabbed one more point to tie it again at 4-4. Again Demarte stepped up at server and led the team to a 10-4 lead on a six point run, including one service ace. Harvard scored three out of the next four points to pull within four, at 11-7 when Hogancamp charged up the offense, guiding them to a 3-0 run on several hard-fought volleys. The Crimson tacked on two more points before sophomore Lymarie Flovet put the game away with a match-ending kill.

"Tonight we were better offensively. Everyone got involved in the offensive. We had a good balanced attack," said Kenny.

Junior middle blocker Rebecca Hasson posted a double double with 14 kills and 10 digs in addition to two blocks. Freshman Jennifer Davis mad her first start of the season and had a positive contribution with 6 kills and 5 digs, along with zero errors.



"Rebecca (Hasson) played well for us," said Kenny. "Jennifer Davis played well, considering it was her first start, Jen is versatile. She did a lot of good things. Lymarie (Flovet) and Janeen (Demarte) need to fight harder for their jobs."

Sophomore Heather Holtsberg and Drennan effectively split time at setter, as they tallied 21 assists and 29 assists respectively.

"I switch them because they have a different tempo. It throws teams off, Jen has better defense and Heather runs a quicker offense."

UM's struggling offense came alive registering a .314 hitting percentage while holding the Crimson offense to a meager .102.

The Minutewomen will hit the road for two more conference matches this weekend traveling to Fordham on Friday and Duquesne on Saturday.

Middle blocker Rebecca Hasson registered 14 kills and 10 digs as the volleyball team took out Harvard in straight sets.

Garber turns red; Maroon takes on Crimson today

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

After crawling through a proverbial desert of ranked opponents this month, the Massachusetts field hockey team may finally have the cool oasis of a win in sight.

When the Minutewomen (2-5) take to the turf of Garber Field at 3:30 this afternoon, they'll face a Harvard squad with considerably more bark than bite. Despite a gaudy 5-1 record and the No. 19 ranking in the country, the Crimson has only faced two teams with winning records (Connecticut and New Hampshire) thus far in '99.

Meanwhile, UMass has contended with a somewhat masochistic schedule featuring a virtual who's-who of collegiate hockey: Four of the top-ten programs in the nation (Maryland, Virginia, James Madison, and North Carolina) all locked horns with UM over the first four weeks of the season.

And while the Maroon and White's formidable slate has kept their wins at a premium, Coach Patty Shea relishes the experience garnered by her team against such worthy adversaries.

"We need to play [ranked teams] to see how we stack up," Shea said. "We can learn so much by playing teams of this caliber; we can see where we really stand as a unit."

The Crimson has hit its stride against smaller programs from less illustrious conferences, such as UNH and Vermont from America East and Columbia and Yale from the Ivy League. Harvard's biggest test of the season came at the hands of No.1 UConn on September 22nd, when the Crimson came within a goal of toppling the undefeated Huskies but lost 2-1.

While UMass has yet to face an Atlantic 10 Conference opponent, Harvard has already bested one. The Crimson downed the Rhode Island Rams 2-1 on September 12th in Kingston in the midst of a four-game winning streak with which they opened the '99 campaign.

"We're playing with a lot of confidence right now," said Crimson head coach Sue Caples. "We've been playing good hockey since the beginning of the season."

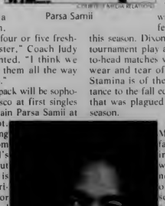
Harvard's most convincing win of this young season came against Vermont in the opener, when the Crimson rocked the Catamounts in a 9-1 final. UVM seems yet to recover, having lost six-straight since to fall to 0-7.

The common denominator for the two teams comes, ironically enough, from the Crimson coaching staff. Coach Caples not only graduated from UMass in 1982; she was an All-American and team captain for the field hockey team here. Caples' field hockey pedigree has no doubt bolstered her success throughout her ten years at the Harvard hockey helm.

Caples' job is also made easier by the plethora of talent on the Crimson roster. The Harvard captainship is split among three of its brightest stars: forward Dominique Kalil, back Katie Schoolwerth, and goalkeeper Anya Cowan.

South African native Kalil enjoyed the finest season of her career in '98, scoring 16 points in 18 starts for the Crimson off five goals and six assists. Pennsylvanian Schoolwerth was named to the All-Ivy League team last season after leading the team in points with 20. Canadian senior Cowan allowed a scant average of 1.75 goals-per-game while logging all but ten minutes of the Crimson's pipe time.

The Minutewomen will use this contest to try and jumpstart their offense, which has put home only two goals in UM's last four games. Team scoring leader Kristen Schmidt will look to continue her attacking success today, after providing all of the Maroon and White's offense in Sunday's loss at Duke.



The road ahead for UMass doesn't appear to be leveling out anytime soon. After battling the Crimson, the Minutewomen will face the top-ranked Huskies on Sunday and No 15 Boston University on October 6th, both on the road.

Big border rivalry continues as UMass tennis battles UVM

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

On the heels of a solid performance at last weekend's Northeast Intercollegiate Tournament, the Massachusetts men's tennis team heads to Vermont today for its first dual match of the season.

The depth and talent of the Minutemen should prove to be a foreboding obstacle to the inexperienced Vermont squad, who UMass defeated last season by a score of 5-2.

Parsa Samii

"[Vermont has] a young team, something like four or five freshmen on the roster," Coach Judy Dixon commented. "I think we match up with them all the way down the lineup."

Leading the pack will be sophomore Steve Prisco at first singles and senior captain Parsa Samii at the No. 2 spot. Both are nursing sore arms from last weekend's tournament, but neither injury is considered serious. Junior Fabien Rabanal occupies the No. 3 spot, followed by freshman Will Shaw. Meanwhile, junior Bill Greener will be returning from his ankle injury, making his fall debut at fifth singles. Rounding out the lineup is sophomore Todd Champeau.

Bo Navarro

The Minutemen will be most vulnerable during doubles play, since Vermont is infamous for its strength in doubles. Prisco and Shaw will pair at the No. 3 spot, followed by the duo of Samii and Rabanal. Champeau will join senior Marco Casesa at third doubles.

During practice, Dixon has emphasized the importance of finishing points with volleys and staying focused during key points.

"I think they're ready to play," she said. "They're healthy and eager. There are no excuses, no reason why we can't come back with a win."

This match-up will be one of the few dual matches this season. Dixon feels that more tournament play and fewer head-to-head matches will alleviate the wear and tear of a long season. Stamina is of the utmost importance to the fall edition of a squad that was plagued by injuries last season.

Since the Minutemen will face Vermont on indoor courts, where players will not have to face often-cumbersome hindrances such as high wind, Dixon feels especially positive about the squad's chances of staying healthy.

Assistant Coach Scott Wilkins is also extremely optimistic about the Minutemen's chances.

"The morale is upbeat and we're roaring to go," Wilkins said. "I expect a good focused effort and basically a business-like match."

Women's tennis travels to Flushing Meadows for match with Red Storm

By Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

Jack Kerouac's classic novel "On the Road" should be the official team book for the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team.

Since opening up the season in Syracuse, New York, the squad has had little time to breathe on its home turf since then. The team's home loss to Columbia on the 24th was its only home match of the month, as the Minutewomen (0-1) are set to travel back down to New York today to take on the Red Storm of St. Johns.

But there is no rest for the weary. Tomorrow, the Maroon and White will rack up some more frequent driver miles as they head back up north to take on Dartmouth College in Hanover, N.H.

The St. John's match will actually be played on a very special venue, the US Tennis Center which also plays host to the US Open. The opportunity to play on the same hallowed ground as some of tennis' greats is a experience coach Judy Dixon calls "extremely exciting."

The US Tennis Center's hardcourt will give a much quicker pace to the ball then the Minutewomen are used to playing on. To prepare for this, they have gone through drills to shorten their backswings, and receiving balls on a rise.

Last year, the squad beat up on the Red Storm 7-2, on the friendly confines of the upper Boyden courts. One of those losses came at number one singles where Ola Gerasimova lost an intense two set battle 7-6, 8-6, a match that coach Judy Dixon called "a turning point match for Ola last year." Gerasimova is more comfortable this time around as the leader in her number one singles position.

With only six members of the team heading down to New York, to say that everyone has to stay healthy is

Turn to TENNIS, page 11

KARA STONER/COLLEGIAN

The UMass women's tennis team will play at the US Open site in Flushing Meadows, N.Y. when it takes on the St. John's Red Storm today at 3 p.m.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 18

Thursday, September 30, 1999

Prentice Graffiti Surfaces again

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Posted writings regarding Adam Prentice's death were discovered two years to the day after his body was found. The writing was uncovered in the same area of campus, the Morrill Campus Greenhouse, that Prentice was discovered.

UMass police, according to a public safety alert, are looking for "anyone who may have been in the area during this time, and who may have observed any individuals or motor vehicles in the area of the Morrill Greenhouse."

"We are seeking to interview the individual who may have posted this information," Jack Luippold, UMass Chief of Police said.

This is the second time this year that information has been posted on the Morrill Greenhouse, Luippold said. Over the summer, similar signs were posted.

"Nothing like this happened last year at this time," Luippold said. "But last summer, this same kind of incident happened and like then, we are seeking the people who were responsible or anyone who maybe seen what happened."

Luippold said that one detective has been assigned to the case since Prentice died.

The UMPD is encouraging anyone with information to call 545-0893, the Detective line, or 577-TIPS (8477).

Deputy Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor would only say that the writings are part of an "on-going investigation."

Prentice died on Sept. 27, 1997, after falling through the glass of a greenhouse roof near the Morrill Science Building. He had apparently been on the roof of the greenhouse when he fell. He was found alone and taken to Cooley Dickinson Hospital in Northampton and then to Baystate Medical Center in Springfield. There, he was pronounced dead as a result of, what was described by a medical examiner to be, "massive bleeding."

He had been a computer engineering major who lived in Field Residence Hall. Prentice was born in Plymouth on Aug. 17, 1976.

Toxicology reports showed Prentice's blood alcohol content to be above the legal limit of .08 for drunk driving.

The case remains open.

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Puppy love

Sophomore, Eddie Vale, hangs out on the library lawn with his two month old dog, Abby.

Homecoming Offers Alums Good times

By Erica Mattison
Collegian Correspondent

The last UMass Homecoming Festival Weekend of the millennium is sure to be memorable. Reminiscent alumni and current students will have many options for partaking in the festivities.

Those who have gone to Homecoming events in the past had good things to say.

"I've been going to homecoming for quite a while," said Psychology Professor Susan Whitbourne. "I love to see the students coming, especially the freshmen. It's good for students to see how pleased the alumni are with their education." She encourages everyone to go to Homecoming events. "It's a lot of fun. Take advantage of it!"

"Homecoming is a special time for me as a member of a fraternity, because brothers from years past come back and share stories of when they were a student at UMass. It's easier as an undergrad to appreciate the UMass experience when I see graduates come back for the sole reason that they loved where they went to college. It truly exemplifies what UMass could mean, if you go out there and take advantage of all the UMass has to offer," senior Gregory Esoops, President of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity said.

Today from 11:30 a.m. to 2 p.m., the Big Lunch, sponsored by the Alumni Association and University Food Services, will be held on the Library Lawn. Students will be able to get lunch with their meal cards. The lunch offers free ice cream, prizes and music from WHMP.

This evening at 8 p.m., festivities will continue at the Fine Arts Center when campus musical groups display their musical talent during Multibands.

Tomorrow morning, early risers will be able to visit tents from various campus groups at UMass Homecoming Park. From 10 to 11:45 a.m., the north side of Alumni Stadium will feature games, music and food. Homecoming Park was initiated just last year. The parade will kick of at 10:30 a.m., and will travel from the Visitors Center to Alumni Stadium. At noon, the big event takes place; 1998 NCAA Division I-AA National Championship UMass Minuteman Football team will take on the Flying Dutchmen of Hofstra.

The halftime show, a highlight of the game, will be put on by the award-winning Minuteman Marching Band. Freshman Matt Dunphy, who plays the clarinet in the band, is looking forward to Saturday.

"I'm excited to be participating in Homecoming Festivities as a part of the Marching Band. We have a great halftime show lined up...lots of crowd participation."

Off Campus Pioneer

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The rite of passage, which juniors and seniors accept without question—the opportunity to move off campus—did not always exist. Twenty years ago, a University of Massachusetts student changed housing policy by suing the University for not allowing juniors to move off-campus.

John Pepi, director of Campus Recycling, challenged the university's off-campus policy, which allowed only seniors the opportunity to move off-campus, back in 1974.

Entering into his junior year, Pepi said he noticed a housing crunch similar to that which the University is now experiencing. He filed a lawsuit against the University using Student Legal Services in hopes of getting juniors exempt from the on-campus housing requirement.

"We filed through the Student Organizing Project with help from Legal Services to sue the University against their requirement to keep juniors on campus," Pepi said. "The university soon dropped it and allowed juniors to live off campus."

Robert Campbell, associate director of Housing Services, recalled the particular situation, but said he doesn't believe the exemption was declared because of the lawsuit against the University.

"I believe the decision was independent of any threatened litigation, because it just made sense," Campbell said. "The [Housing] system could not accommodate the number of people that were in it. Some relief had to be administered."

According to Campbell, at the time, the University did not use lounges and hotel rooms as "temporary housing" spaces. Instead, he said the University turned many large double rooms into triples.

"The system was stressed and in those days, the decision was made to leave the lounges available for social gatherings," Campbell said. "Back in those days, you were expected to live on campus. It was a lot more restricted as to who could live off campus."

During this time, the Sylvan residential area had just opened and Pepi said with the expansion of the dorms, the University incurred a large debt that someone had to pay for. Making it mandatory for students to live on campus was a way for the University to pay off the debt.

However, Pepi was determined to file a suit against the University for determining where he would live.

"Students need more control over their academic and social lives," Pepi said.

Pepi's argument was that the University was abiding by the principle "in loco parentis." He said the Latin term described the legal principle whereby the University can act as a student's parent and dictate living arrangements.

But even with this argument, Campbell doesn't think many students will be successful in trying to get the on-campus exemption extended to sophomores this year.

"I don't think they'd be too successful," Campbell said. "I don't think the situation is the same and I don't think the local community would tolerate it. They gave us [Housing Services] a lot of grief for letting the juniors go [off-campus]... there just isn't any place to put them."

Locals experience cult fears

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Cults, destructive religious groups, were the main focus at an open-forum discussion in the Mackimmie Residence Hall at the University of Massachusetts last night.

Robert Lenz, professor of Polymer Science, said he has become interested in exploring the practices of cults when his son, Doug, became involved with one.

"I saw him change from a very nice, open young man to a person very difficult to talk to," Lenz said. "The group opened up to him and wrapped him with affection, but it was too late, for he didn't know he was getting himself into a lot of trouble."

Students who are in transitions in their lives are the most vulnerable to cults, and his son was one of those people, Lenz said.

"When you're in a destructive cult, you never doubt or challenge anything," Lenz said. "You are told to love your friends and parents, but you can't talk to them, because you are told they are a part of the devil."

According to Lenz, his son had lost his independence and ability to make critical decisions. The group had introduced him to intense lectures and little sleep, during which they told him how to think and what to believe. Lenz said his son was asked to reveal personal secrets or fears about himself, so the group could use those against him. Lenz referred to these acts as "brainwashing."

"We had to use a deprogramming method to get him out, but before we did that we had to kidnap him," Lenz said. "In three hours, he was no longer a Moonie. He started to think on his own and start thinking critically."

Merle Ryan, Assistant Dean of Students, said she has been involved with the actions of a cult on campus. A group that identifies themselves as the Upside Down Club has been recognized as a cult, Ryan said.

"In a four or five year college career, everyone of you will be approached by a destructive leader from this group," Ryan said. "And these destructive religious groups will not usually identify themselves."

Most of the complaints she has received have been from parents complaining that they haven't heard from their child and Ryan said she's even had to call the group's leader to alarm them of their concerns. But most of the time, she said, she doesn't get any direct answers or solutions from them.

She said is it very difficult to challenge the cult against what they have been told to believe. It is for this reason that she has not had much luck in reaching out to students already too involved in the group. She recalled one instance in which a student threatened to turn to drugs as a solution to getting out of the cult.

"She told me, 'It's so awful, Merle; I'm going to go back to drugs so they'll ask me to leave, but I can't talk about it because they [Upside Down Club] told me I'll burn in hell.'"

According to Merle, the student is presumably still involved with the cult today.

Both Merle and Lenz said students should be aware of what group they are getting involved with and shouldn't feel hesitant to ask questions. More importantly, Merle said, is the right students have to just say no.

"Know where you're going, who is sponsoring it, and what it is," Ryan said. "If you're not interested and when in doubt, just say 'no'."

Prof preaches peace
Emphasizes unique histories

Anna Faktorovich
Collegian Correspondent

John Bracey, a University of Massachusetts at Amherst professor, urged African Americans and Jews to cooperate and explore affirmative action at a speech last night at the University Gallery.

The talk was about the art exhibit "Bridges and Boundaries Revisited" that has been open since September 11.

The exhibit focuses on similarities and differences between Jewish and African American traditions.

Bracey talked about the need to communicate between Jews and African Americans who share many common historical struggles.

"A dialogue does not do any good if there is only one person speaking," said Bracey.

Bracey commented that in his class about African Americans and Jews, his first goal is to "unpack all the things that students came in knowing, so that they can start learning" about the actual history of the similarities and differences of Jewish and African American experiences.

During the 1860s, there were approximately 100,000 Jews and 4,000,000 slaves who lived close to each other but had different experiences, according to Bracey.

Jews and African Americans faced different ethnic frictions at different times, and often went through different experiences in the same towns.

Jews and African Americans do not necessarily understand each other. "As Bracey said, "suffering just makes you suffer."

The fact that Jews experienced the torments of slavery in Egypt and the Holocaust does not mean that they have to understand and side with the African Americans on the slavery and civil rights issues and the affirmative action issue today, according to Bracey.

One group's freedom is another group's suppression. The same geographical place can be a different to two different groups of people.

Bracey spoke about Jewish leaders that helped the African American community.

One example cited was of Spin Gorn, a German Jewish man who helped create the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP), the organization that promoted African American rights.

Ralph Bunche is an example of an African American (National Peace Price Winner) who, as a member of the UN, helped create the State of Israel.

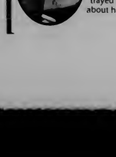
Some Jews helped African Americans and some African Americans helped Jews build mutual "bridges." However, there were always "boundaries" between the Jews and the African Americans, as their histors was so different and yet quite similar.

Today, affirmative action is the main issue that the racial debate focuses on. Jews say, in perspectives on this issue, as on all issues. In the past, some were for the Brown vs. Board of Education and some were not.

Today, integration of schools is an important fight for some, while others do not think it concerns them and ignore the debate.

Still, Bracey may have an answer for a better future for blacks and Jews. "We don't have to turn around and hug each other," he said. "We have to cover each other's backs."

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

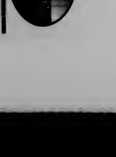


Art center project

Arielle Farina, BDIC major, spends time in the art center to create a master-piece.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
WINDY!
HIGH: 68 LOW: 64	HIGH: 66 LOW: 46	HIGH: 66 LOW: 44



UMass students' favorite prof

Sut Jhally, a professor of communications at UMass, has a philosophy on teaching which has led him to conduct nationally-recognized studies on sexuality and race as portrayed in the media. Read about him inside.

ARTS 3

Fine Fine UMass

This week's art cover looks at All the Fine Arts at UMass. Plus, we've got a new Tube Notes and a everyone's favorite calendar- The Source. So, read Arts; it's good stuff.

ARTS 5

Emma the Great

Senior forward Emma Kurowski broke the career-scoring mark at UMass over the weekend. To find out more about the Sutton native, turn to page 16.

SPORTS 16

Arts & Living 5
Comics 15
Crossword 15
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 16

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Jhally raises student awareness

By Jake Lilien
Collegian Staff

"Some people think that teaching communications is about showing someone how to point a camera," says University of Massachusetts Communications Professor Sut Jhally. If camera pointing was the extent of Jhally's expertise, it is doubtful that he would have conducted groundbreaking studies on race and sexuality in the media, nor would he have been named "Best Professor at UMass" by Collegian readers.

Jhally sees educators of all disciplines as much more than technicians.

"Our job is to train citizens, not workers," he says. "If we just taught practical skills, there would be no reason for us to exist. If you're a professor at any sort of university, your job is to educate citizens. The role of a university is to raise all those awkward questions that don't get raised elsewhere and then bring the greatest amount of intellectual attention to bear on those questions."

Jhally raises these questions in his courses on the analysis of advertising.

"I take a cultural studies approach, which highlights the role of communications in social control," he says. "I look at advertising as a spiritual medium."

Jhally is best known as the creator of Dreamworlds, a video about the image of women in music videos. He originally designed the video as a tool to use in his classes, yet it drew such high praise from fellow educators that it was requested nationwide.

Jhally founded the Media Education Foundation [MEF] to distribute the video, which led MTV, concerned with negative publicity, to sue Jhally for copyright violations. Their plan backfired, as the lawsuit brought greater national attention to the video and the MEF. Today, the MEF has created approximately 30 tapes, and by Jhally's estimation, over two million people have seen Dreamworlds.

Dreamworlds [contended] that the representation of women in music videos is connected to sexual assaults," he says. "Women are portrayed as sex-mad nymphomaniacs who have nothing to offer but their sexuality. When they say 'no' they mean 'yes.' It gives viewers the impression that any woman is available to any man."

This impression, he says, leads to the prevalence of sexual assaults, particularly "date rapes" on college campuses. According to Jhally, one in four American women has been the victim of an attempted rape, and one in eight has been the victim of an actual rape.

"The correlation [between music videos and rape] is not directly through behavior," he explains. "It's through attitudes. It would be weird if images of women didn't have an effect on people's view of how to act towards them, or how women think about themselves," he says.

Jhally also co-authored the book Enlightened Racism with fellow Communications Professor Justin Lewis. The book was based on a study funded by Bill Cosby, and dealt with the effects of "The Cosby Show" on Americans' views on race.

"We asked what kinds of understandings of black poverty people have when culture tells you that on one hand, blacks are violent criminals, and on the other hand, you have programs like 'The Cosby Show' that show that some blacks transcend this. What we found is that, in white America especially, people blamed blacks for their own problems.

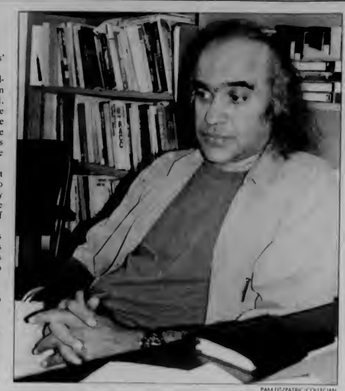
"It let white people off the hook. It showed whites that they didn't have to do anything. They thought, 'If only blacks would change themselves like the Huxtables have.' It led to a denial of racism."

Jhally says that these studies, and his organization, are an extension of his teaching. He raises controversial issues like race relations and sexuality to heighten students' awareness.

"We have to talk about a whole host of things," he says, "and we have to understand them in the most intelligent way possible."

"I always tell my students, 'There is no such thing as neutrality, and there is no such thing as innocence. Everyone is political ,every single moment of their lives. By going along with the present system, you're making a choice. You can choose to be ignorant, you can choose to be knowledgeable, but paralyzed with fear, or you can choose to oppose it."

"My job is never to tell people which one of these things to do," he says.



"My job is to raise these issues, and challenge them in a deep way.

SHAWN JUNTICH/COLLEGIAN

Playing with the devil

Eric passes the time playing with his devil sticks on a quiet day in Northampton.

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Sut Jhally, Professor of Communications at UMass.

New inspection process raises new concerns

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

As of tomorrow, both consumers and businesses will find car inspections in Massachusetts to be more difficult.

Due to new state-mandated standards, car inspections will now be more in-depth than they were in the past. New standards for the inspections will now cost area garages in the range of $100,000 for new equipment for the new dynamometer emissions test inspections. For consumers, this means that, rather than paying the traditional $15 fee for the inspection, the cost has now jumped up to a total of $29 per inspection.

Some UMass students expressed concern over the price increase for inspections.

"It works against the lower class people that have to depend upon used cars for transportation," sophomore Steven Belce said. "Since they are raising the price of the inspection, it is working doubly against them."

"I think that the price increase is outrageous," freshman Michelle Bechard said.

Another concern regarding the new car inspections is that the system still has some problems that may need to be worked out. In other states where these new inspection tests have been adopted, some technicians have taken false readings, while still learning to use the new equipment.

Each car's exterior, tires, suspension and interior are inspected, and technicians also look under the hood. A technician also will look for rust on the exterior of the car, and check the car's wear, shocks, front wheel drive, fluid levels and brakes. Now, due to the new standards, the inspection is required to be more detailed and more difficult to pass, to ensure the safety of the driver of the car and other drivers on the road.

While some consumers can get car inspections done ahead of schedule to avoid the price increase, after tomorrow this will not be possible. Also, while many of the area business have stopped doing car inspections because of the new policy, other local businesses are ready for the new standards. According to a representative from Kevin's Auto Repair in Hadley, "We are ready to go online as of October 1 for car inspections."

Similarly, Dana Automotive in Northampton will also be ready to give inspections in October for any customer that may need an inspection.

Tragedy in East Timor

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

DILI, East Timor – One day after the United Nations agreed to launch a formal inquiry into human rights abuses committed by Indonesian soldiers and their militia proxies in East Timor, the first real evidence of atrocities was discovered yesterday – the charred remains of at least nine people in the back of a burned-out pickup truck.

Australian troops attached to the U.N. mission here visited the site and photographed the remains for what they said could be evidence for the United Nations' inquiry commission. The United Nations agreed on Tuesday to form the commission over the objections of the Indonesian government, which insisted that it alone should investigate abuses in East Timor, which voted for independence from Indonesia last month.

Under the agreement, military officials here said, the new inquiry commission – the first step toward establishing a formal tribunal that can issue war-crimes indictments– will work in conjunction with the Indonesian National Human Rights Commission, a government body that has demonstrated some independence. Now with the official mandate, the U.N.-backed peacekeeping troops fanning out across East Timor will add collecting evidence of atrocities to their growing list of tasks.

"What we will do now is work with the United Nations" in collecting evidence, said Lt. Col. Drew Braban, the chief legal officer for the international force for East Timor, known as Interfet.

There have been other accounts of mass executions, but until yesterday no large number of bodies had been discovered – raising questions about the actual number of people killed here when Indonesian army troops and anti-independence militias went on a rampage following the independence referendum, forcing tens of thousands of East Timorese to flee their homes. Residents who survived the attacks in Dili have described how bodies were burned for quick disposal, and others were dumped at sea, but none of those accounts have been independently confirmed.

Local residents first led reporters to the charred remains of the bodies discovered yesterday at a vehicle junkyard at the edge of the main highway about two miles west of Dili, the capital.

RESUME BUILDER!

ATTENTION ALL JUNIOR SCHOOL OF MANAGEMENT MAJORS:

The Collegian is now accepting applications for the following positions:

* Assistant Finance Manager
*Assistant Business Manager

Applicants should possess computer and inter-personal skills.

Deadline for Applications: Friday Oct. 1st, 1999

Come down and fill out an application in Room 113, Campus Center. Contact Christine Carroll @ 545-3500 or e-mail at hrcollegian@yahoo.com with inquires.

Amherst Now Smoke

but downtown is still SMOKIN' HOT!!!

Family, friends, food and fun is what Amherst is all about.

Smoke

Lots of entertainment and breathable air.... and we're not just blowin' smoke!

Sponsored by the Amb

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Pottery

Allison Wax, BFA major, sits patiently in pottery class as she molds her creation

Clinton plans to cancel owed debt

By John Burgess
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – President Clinton pledged Wednesday to cancel all $5.7 billion of debt that 36 desperately poor countries owe the U.S. government provided they channel the saved money into programs for education, health and development.

His move, which is subject to congressional approval, builds on an international initiative to remove an additional $27 billion from the books of the world's poorest countries, many of them in Africa. The goal is a fresh break financially in the new millennium for heavily indebted countries such as Uganda, Mali and Bolivia.

"Unsustainable debt is helping to keep too many poor countries and poor people in poverty," Clinton said in an address to the annual meeting of the World Bank and International Monetary Fund. Countries should not have to "choose between making interest payments on their debt and investing in their children's education."

"Today I am directing my administration to make it possible to forgive 100 percent of the debt these countries owe to the United States, when – and this is quite important – when needed to help them finance basic human needs and when the money will be used to do so," Clinton said.

His words drew first applause, then a wave of excited whispering from hundreds of delegates in a hall at the Marriott Wardman Park Hotel here. Many of them represented countries that would qualify for the breaks.

"It is very welcome, of course, most welcome," said Tumusiime Mutebile, permanent secretary to the Ugandan treasury. With a package of new anti-poverty programs in place, his country has been among the first to qualify for the $27 billion international debt-relief initiative. Uganda owes about $3.5 billion to foreign creditors, which equals about half the country's economy as measured by gross domestic product.

The $27 billion program, in which the United States is also participating, applies to debt owed to international agencies such as the World Bank. Clinton's plan would affect only money owed to U.S. government bodies such ass the Agency for International Development and the Export-Import Bank.

The Clinton administration said in June that it would forgive "up to 90 percent" of this debt owed directly to the United States, but it never put a precise number on it. To qualify for either program, countries must convince international finance officials that they can't pay what they owe and are restructuring their economies and channeling the saved money into specific programs aimed at education, health and poverty reduction in general.

The programs don't wipe away all such debt. Even after the current relief programs and earlier ones run to completion, the poor countries would still carry about $45 billion on their books.

The announcement drew praise from the head of the U.S. branch of Jubilee 2000, an advocacy movement with chapters in more than 30 countries that has campaigned for debt relief since the mid-1990s. It brings together religious leaders, development agencies and politicians.

Clinton's move "represents a significant mobilization of the political clout of the White House to back debt relief," said Carole Collins, national coordinator for Jubilee 2000 USA. She said the movement would like to see a bigger total package of relief but welcomes this as progress toward that goal.

Bishop Faces Trial for Genocide

By Karl Vick
Washington Post

KIGALI, Rwanda – Before being taken to the killing ground where he now works as a tour guide, Emmanuel Murangira sought refuge at church. It was April 1994 and as Hutu extremists swept through the country-side hunting Rwanda's Tutsi minority, millions were clamoring for refuge in the Roman Catholic churches that sit atop the country's lush green hills like crowns.

Murangira joined the thousands at the elegant compound of Bishop Augustin Misago, head of the Gikongoro diocese about 100 miles southwest of Kigali, the Rwandan capital. But Misago told the terrified arrivals they must move on – sending them to the nearby classrooms of a technical college that today is a memorial filled with the smell of formaldehyde and the mummified corpses of 2,700 children, women and men.

That is a fraction of the thousands slaughtered there on the night of April 19, 1994.

"We went to Misago's place, and they brought us here," said Murangira, a gaunt figure with a perfectly round depression above his left eye, the entrance wound of the bullet that punctured his brain. "He was with the government and supported the killing of all these people here."

From the dock of the tribunal where he stands as the first Catholic bishop charged with genocide, at the most Catholic nation in Africa, Misago, 56, denies it all.

He will be tried in a Rwandan court – the first instance Tribunal of Kigali – that routinely sentences "category one" genocide defendants to death. He will not be tried by the United Nations war crimes tribunal for Rwanda, where the ultimate penalty is life imprisonment.

The difference, according to the defendants, is crucial. Dignified even in the pink summer-weight pajamas of a Rwandan prison inmate, Misago insists he is but a convenient scapegoat for the tenet vest of bitterness Rwanda's post-genocide government harbors against the Catholic Church.

That government was formed from the Tutsi-led rebel army that stopped the slaughter of more than 500,000 Tutsis and moderate Hutus, most of whom met their deaths in and around holy places. Twice before in Rwandan history, in 1959 and 1963, Catholic churches had provided sanctuary against ethnic violence. The fatal difference in 1994, Rwandan officials say, was the close ties between the church's top officials in Rwanda and the forces bent on genocide.

"This is Misago," said prosecutor Edouard Kayihura as proceedings opened earlier this month. "If it happens that the church is also tried, so be it."

The case has alarmed the Vatican, which called Misago's arrest "an extremely serious act which hurt not only the church in Rwanda, but the entire Catholic Church." So far, the Vatican has stuck by Misago, paying for his lawyers and offering moral support. At the same time, the trial underscores the contrast between the actions of church leaders in Rome and those inside a country where people were being chopped, shot and burned to death at the rate of 5,000 per day.

Transmutational Sounds
f r o m
the NYC Free Jazz Underground

Thurs. 30 Sept. 1999

8:00 PM

$5 Admission

Top of the Campus
11th Floor CC

Daniel Carter- Saxophones, Trumpet, Flute
Mark Hennen- Piano, Electronics
Toby Keshavan- Piano, Electronics

MILLITECH HAS PART-TIME & WEEKEND WORK

2ND SHIFT 4:00PM - 12:30AM
3RD SHIFT 12:00AM - 7:30AM
SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ALL SHIFTS AVAILABLE

Millitech is a high tech company making millimeter wave broad band wireless equipment for major telecommunication companies throughout the world.

[illegible] is convenient to the University -- on Route 116 in S. [illegible] just one mile past Sunderland Center.

[illegible] a challenging; the environment is clean and quiet.

[illegible] persons are an interest in learning, a willingness to [illegible], and eligibility to work in the U.S.

[illegible] at $8.50 an hour for Assemblers. There is a shift [illegible]% for work done on 2nd Shift and 15% for 3rd

PRODUCTION TESTING

[illegible] for testing and [illegible] and assemblies. Must have the ability to [illegible] and to keep accurate records. [illegible] RF/Microwave products and [illegible].

ELECTRO-MECHANICAL ASSEMBLY

This work requires that candidates have excellent [illegible] hand-eye coordination and an interest in [illegible] microassembly processes using small hand tools and [illegible] assembly equipment. Previous experience with [illegible] process would be an advantage but training will be [illegible].

ENGINEERING INTERNS

Electrical/Microwave Engineering Students, Manufacturing or Mechanical Engineering students, at the Junior, Senior or graduate level, with good GPAs and an interest in practical applications of their classroom experience, may be considered for part-time internships. Interested applicants must be available to work a minimum of 15 hours a week.

To apply for these positions fill out an application at our facility or send resume and cover letter to Human Resources, 20 Industrial Drive East, S. Deerfield, MA 01373
e-mail: hr@millitech.com FAX: 413.665.0089

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

September 30, 1999 / Page 4

Graduate Student Talya Westbrook sings with staff accompanist Ludmila Savenkova in a practice room of the Fine Arts Center.

ART AT UMASS

Edited by Kristi Ceccarossi Photograph and Layout by Brian McDermott

Music -

Encompassing far too much to address all of it in this little blurb, the music offered at UMass is various to say the least. There is always one (or more) performance per week featuring some form of classical or contemporary music or vocals.

For example, this weekend a very important celebration is in order. The Multihand Pops, which features nine different University ensembles, will perform, marking its 25th anniversary this Friday in the Concert Hall at 8pm. (Tickets are still available at $45.25!!!!!) Scheduled to show their stuff this year are the following: Chapel Jazz, Minuteman Marching Band (an old favorite), Percussion Ensemble, Symphony Band, UMass Marimbas, University Dancers, University Jazz Ensemble, Wind Ensemble, and Vocal Jazz and African American Music Ensemble. The program alone is outstanding and is an ideal opportunity for anyone interested to get a feeling of what the music department has to show for itself.

Following this overloaded performance is "Chopin in Paris" on October 2 at 8pm in Bezanson Recital Hall, presented by Professor Nigel Coxe. This is the first of a three-part series of piano concerts

Turn to Music, page 8

ART-

Art is without question abundant at UMass. The campus maintains at least five major galleries and there seems to be a new exhibit (and gallery for that matter) opening every day. For a preview of a few...

Just opened at the Hampden Gallery, Hirokazu Fukawa's "I Want You To Feel The Way You Do All the Time..." This collection is a sculptural installation, which shows 210 salted fish, each mounted individually on steel stands, and placed in two concentric circles facing a line of video monitors. This somehow creates four views of ocean horizons facing the salt-water fish and four river horizons to face the fresh water fish. Clearly, this speaks volumes about the artist's perception of society and deserves a look, preferably while experimenting with an illegal substance.

"Altared Space," an exhibition by Grace Williams, is currently showing at the Augusta Savage gallery in the New Africa House.

Also new to the Hampden is Alex Shetker's "House for Spirits," featuring carved wood sculptures all addressing...uhh...the spirit. These pieces invoke Native American imagery and were designed by a UMass Alumni, so show him your support. While you're there, you can see Fukawa's fish.

Augusta Savage Gallery (in the New Africa House) has also recently opened their current show, a mixed media exhibit by artist Grace Williams. In the artist's statement, she describes her work as "incorporating various techniques and a diversity of natural and recycled resources. Soft Sculptures, Glass and Tile Mosaics, Furniture, Altars and Vessels comprise the body of my work..." Entitled "Altared Space," Williams' work speaks of her own perception of the spirit, ancestry, and tradition.

Reading about what's available for you to actually see will never provide the impact a singular piece of art might potentially have. Your computer wallpaper and the more graphic images on TV can only provide a limited exertion on your perception. Edify yourself on an entire culture with a fifteen-minute walk through an art gallery. Later you'll find the experience makes great conversation at parties.

Members of the Mystic River Singers perform an honoring song at the UMass Pow Wow.

Jordan Zolan and Jennifer Lake rehearse for "Tone Clusters," a student directed one act play.

Members of the UMass Marching Band practice near the Mullins Center.

Senior Stephanie Yellin works on a necklace at the Student Union Craft Center.

Theatre -

Theatre, like just about everything else at UMass, is slighted because there is an extraordinary amount of it taking place and so few people get wind of it (of course, on a campus so expansive). But thankfully, at least for a little while, you have no excuse for not broadening your horizons via the stage, as the Collegian is prepared to fill you in on the dramatic highlights of this semester.

A perennial favorite with local audiences, the theatre department will present their student direct-

Turn to Theater, page 4

Fish Food

Hirokazu Fukawa's "I Want You To Feel The Way You Do All the Time..." is now on exhibit at the Hampden Gallery.

Students needed For design contest

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Are you interested in graphic design, drawing, or art in general? Well, there's a competition for you, going on right now, as we speak.

Icestorm International is currently sponsoring a design for the video release of several East German films. Because of UMass' DEFA library, our school has a unique position when it comes to German film.

Earlier this year, UMass' DEFA library announced a partnership with the DEFA Foundation of Germany, making UMass' library the only archive of East German film outside of Germany. This newly formed DEFA Foundation now holds the rights to all historic German films produced during the Soviet occupation of 1945-1992. This impressive collection includes 950 full-length feature films, 820 animated films, and more than 5,200 documentaries and newsreels.

So, now that UMass can distribute East German films worldwide, they need a videocassette design for the video release of "GDR Underground films." All students are eligible for the contest and must meet the requirements set forth by Icestorm International. Work must be submitted with both a disk and hard copy by October 5, 1999.

For an entry form or more information, please contact John Supple, Fine Arts Center room 445 or call 577-0027.

The winner will receive a $100 prize and all finalists will have their work displayed at the Center for Arts in Northampton in conjunction with the Northhampton Film Festival.

People will do crazy things to WIN

$25,000!

You can just go to

www.1800COLLECT.com

1-800-COLLECT

Save a Buck or Two.

Savings vs. dialing "0" with AT&T.
No purchase necessary. Open to U.S. residents. Void where prohibited. For Official Rules, go to www.win25000.1800COLLECT.com or send a SASE to: Win $25,000 Rules, P.O. Box 5086, Blair, NE 68009-5086. Sweepstakes ends 10/15/99.

Three Kings A studio's Masterpiece

Claudia Eller
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD — In a one-upmanship town like Hollywood, it's downright shocking when direct competitors generate strong, positive buzz about another studio's movie.

For several weeks now, executives all over town have been talking up Warner Bros. release Friday of writer-director David O. Russell's "Three Kings," a politically charged action-drama picture set at the end of the Persian Gulf War that stars George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg and Ice Cube.

So why all the fuss about a movie that some top Warner executives had serious trepidation about green-lighting in the first place?

The story, about the misadventures of a band of greedy American rogue soldiers who turn heroic after going behind enemy lines to heist gold stolen by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, is thematically reminiscent of such earlier films as "The Treasure of the Sierra Madre" and "Kelly's Heroes."

What sets it apart, and even has rival execs rooting for it, is an out-there style normally reserved for independent films, not big-budget studio fare.

Russell said he looks at "Three Kings" as "an independent film done on a studio budget."

Indeed, as Warner's rivals are first to remark, it's Russell's off-center narrative and unconventional filmic style that distinguish "Three Kings" as wildly original — the kind of film Hollywood doesn't produce enough but is often rewarded for when it does (think of this summer's sleeper hit "The Blair Witch Project").

Russell employs ironic, war-themed humor even darker than "MASH" and employs unusual cinematic tricks with camera moves, atypical film stocks like Ektachrome (normally used in home still cameras) and manic editing techniques to bring across the surreal, chaotic nature of modern warfare.

"Three Kings" was the 41-year-old's first studio film and most ambitious project yet, following his two more personal independent features, "Spanking the Monkey" and "Flirting With Disaster."

"The guidepost for me was the movies I grew up with in the '70s that were made by studios but were independently minded," said Russell, citing films such as "Klute," "Dog Day Afternoon," "Chinatown" and "Shampoo."

The movie, co-financed by Village Roadshow Pictures, cost close to $50 million with re-shoots. "Three Kings" was a risky movie for Warner to back, given its political theme. The story unflinchingly blames the Bush administration for allegedly abandoning Iraqi civilians at the end of the war after encouraging them to rise against Hussein and pledging its help. In fact, the project was the subject of much heated internal debate about whether or not it should be made at all.

The project's strongest advocate, production President Lorenzo di Bonaventura, is said to have met with intense resistance above and below him before the production was ultimately given the go-ahead.

"Most of the great movies at Warner Bros. have had the hottest internal debates," he said, referring to other controversial releases from the studio, such as "Falling Down" and "The Matrix." di Bonaventura noted how such works "break the formula in one way or another."

Warner faced the inherent dan-

Turn to Kings, page 9

■ Theatre

continued from page 4

ed Evening of One Acts at the Curtain Theatre October 6-9 at 8pm. This fall's selections are, as usual, quite varied and seem to take a journey from the more standard conventions of theatre, to the less popularized forms of story telling throughout the course of the program. The collection will start with Our Man in Madras, written by Gert Hoffman and directed by Andy Capelli. A cast of two will portray Jim and Jane, unfolding the events of a regular workday, and simultaneously revealing the characters' feelings about the value of life. The second installment is Tony and Pulitzer winner Tony Kushner's Terminating: a brief insight on the contrast of social expectations and our own truths. Naomi Bennett will be directing this piece.

Following Terminating is Tone Clusters, which is sure to challenge your ideals about scene blocking and the flexibility of one small cast. In Tone Clusters, Emily and Frank Gullick deal, in a rather unorthodox way, to their son's murder charge. Written by Joyce Carol Oates and directed by Tanya Kane, this portion of the evening will certainly maintain your attention (and possibly make you dizzy), if the other pieces somehow fail to do so.

Closing up the one-acts is 12:01 or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bug, written and directed by UMass undergraduate Nick Keenan. This particularly anticipated performance is a coming of age story set in the last hours of the millennium.

And that certainly isn't all you'll hear from the theatre department this semester. Their Main Stage production, She Stoops to Conquer by Oliver Goldsmith will show in the Rand Theatre November 11-20 and December 2-4 at 8pm. An entirely different theatre experience, this piece was originally produced in 1773 and met with great scandal. Now recognized as one of the most popular comedies of all time, this play brilliantly zings with our natural tendencies, potentially lowbrow jabs, and much energy.

An alternative, though not a distant one, to the department's season is The UMass Theatre Guild, a registered student organization (the oldest one to be exact - 94 years and going strong). The Guild not only stresses the successful production of one play and one musical per semester, they also work to foster the theatrical process and any interest in performance as a collaborative effort (in brief: they're a club, too). This fall they are presenting two very ambitious pieces: namely, Craig Lucas' Reckless and Stephen Sondheim's Company. The former is a rather sadistic comedy about a woman who must leave her home and family when she learns her husband has taken a contract out on her life and what happens next? The latter is one of the greatest representations of American Musical Theatre, following the story of Bobby who fears commitment and the encouraging antics from all of his married friends. These shows will be performed in November and December, respectively. Also on the Guild's agenda is a possible musical revue, a coffeehouse, and a trip to NYC: endless incentive to get involved or at least pay them some attention.

For those of you still unimpressed, UMass very graciously brings the college community an extraordinary variety of professional tours, all sponsored by our precariously renovated Fine Arts Center. Their line up is far too wide to dedicate any real exposition to, but for a little bait it includes stuff like this: Annie, Stomp, An Evening with Duke Ellington, A Christmas Carol, and the Reduced Shakespeare Company. Schedules and greater details are always available in the superfluously designed FAC lobby. Along the same line, The New World Theatre dedicates much support and effort to present extremely opposing performances to our campus. Their season has already had an exceptional start and also deserves a peek, which you'll unfortunately have to pursue yourself at the Theatre Department.

Having a long time obsession with the theatre, I can say with particular certainty (and bias) that the stage is an amazing vehicle to exercise your mind with, as a participant or viewer. What may sound lame in a short newspaper description can often introduce you to notions and interests that seem obvious once exposed to them, but will remain dormant until something stirs them. Theatre's cheap here and well done and a surprisingly entertaining alternative to one night of getting hammered. However, the shows usually get out by 10:30 and that leaves plenty of time to destroy the brain cells you might cultivate for two preceding hours.

Buffy Spinoff a Gem

James Endrs
The Hartford Courant

We're here to testify. This "Angel" really is from Heaven.

A preview of The WB's much-anticipated spinoff of its supernatural high school hit "Buffy the Vampire Slayer" has already made a believer out of us.

Starring David Boreanaz, "Angel" (which will be seen Tuesday nights starting Oct. 5), takes the "Buffy" legend to the next level, from teen screams to grown-up dream, or nightmares, depending on the episode.

Having left the already skewed reality of Sunnydale, Angel, the centuries-old vampire with a heart, heads for the portals of Hell, otherwise known as Los Angeles.

He's left Buffy (Sarah Michelle Gellar) but not his feelings behind, and now our beloved Angel is looking for redemption in a metropolis loaded with lost souls. As if trying to make it through young adulthood isn't enough.

Of course, Los Angeles turns out to have its share of devils, some of them even working on the side show business, which is guaranteed to keep Angel busy.

Building up brownie points with the Almighty, no doubt, Angel is a melancholy savior, a cutie pie who's a potential predator, and an otherworldly creature who always seems to be just one drop away from turning into a monster.

When we catch up with our vampire, who's trying desperately to keep his fangs to himself, his fridge is filled with pig's blood, a point not lost on his spiritual mentor Doyle (Glenn Quinn of "Roseanne"), who's has been sent by "the powers that be" to foster Angel's mission as "a faceless champion of the hapless human race."

At first, Angel isn't biting. "I'm not good with people," he demurs. But Doyle is a persuasive type, telling Angel to go

Turn to Buffy page 8

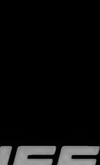
New TV season surprises most

Well if history tells us anything, it's that almost every prediction that I've made in this column over the past three years is wrong. My picks for the new TV season did not disappoint that theory. Two out of the three shows that I said would be terrific turned out to be sub-par. One of the shows I said would gain huge ratings did far worse than anyone expected, and despite previous opinions that I made, Buddy Hackett rules! Welcome to my world as a television critic. If you include my Emmy picks, I have a worse average than Shaq's free throw percentage, but hey can you really blame me? Let's see what went wrong.

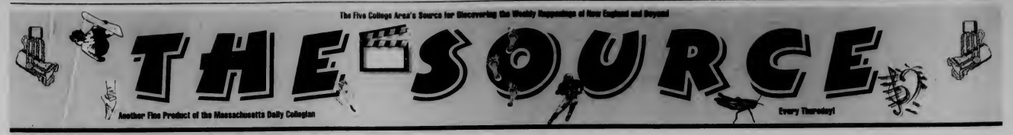
First of all, something I said that was right. "Action" is quickly becoming one of my favorite shows on Thursday nights. FOX's idea to air it at 9:30pm, between NBC's "Frasier" and "ER" was simply brilliant. Everyone knew that "Action" was a far superior show to the NBC bomb, "Stark Raving Mad," and consequently, FOX won the time slot. Jay Mohr, the star of "Action," is simply hilarious, and the supporting cast, that includes Buddy Hackett as a limo driver and Illeana Douglas as a prostitute turned screenwriter, steals the show on numerous occasions. Since FOX was completely unafraid to air "Action" with a TV-MA rating, the series gets away with more than any network show has ever before. This allows Mohr, and especially Hackett to bring their raunchy, but hilarious humor to the small screen, and puts "Action" among the top comedies on television.



The other two shows that I thought would be so terrific were both big disappointments. NBC own the rights to both of these series, and has been bragging about them for a while. First, "The West Wing," which seemed like it had so much potential for greatness, simply doesn't utilize all of its possibilities, which pretty much kills it. "The West Wing" dragged on, and to be honest, was boring and unoriginal. It only took fifteen minutes for me to realize that I was watching an unfunny "Spin City." If I want to watch "Spin City," I'd rather watch it with comedy and all, but thank you very much NBC for showing me how much the great Michael J. Fox series is an insult to both shows. Second of all, the idea behind making a new TV series is to make it new. Originality is the key, and "Third Watch" is by no means original. Once again, NBC will be forced to do something to make this show more enjoyable. Here's a hint, don't run it during "ER's" slot. "ER" is the top rated television show of the 1990's, if you start pulling that junk people will get pissed off really fast.

Wrestling fans, sit down. The ratings for "WWF Smackdown" were dismal. Now, I'm sure that on some WWF show, they have already claimed it was the top rated show on television last Thursday, and they'll have some stupid and obscure element that twists the numbers to make it seem that way. I'm also sure that after that was said, every wrestling fan will try to prove me wrong by saying something about the ratings, but before you start sending me hate mail, do one thing for me. Find out what a "rating" means. Nothing upsets me more than some kid regurgitating what they said on wrestling, when they have no clue what they're talking about. If you don't know what the difference between a rating and a share is, or if you have no clue what the number you're bragging about means, leave the hate mail at home please. Despite what they say, wrestling does not beat "Monday Night Football" every week, because if you're allowed to combine two shows to beat one, then I'm going to combine "Ally McBeal" with football, and show how inferior the two combined wrestling ratings are to Calista and the Patriots. The fact is that I expected "Smackdown" to do well, but with all of the season premiers on NBC, and "Action" on FOX, "Smackdown" did lousy. Sorry to break the news to you though.

Now that the month of premiers is almost over, we have to look forward to many special things that are coming up in the next few months. NBC has a terrible movie called "Road Rage," starring Yasmine Bleeth, and USA will proudly premier "G vs. E." FOX will begin the last season of "The X-Files," and maybe one day, we'll actually get a new episode of "I.R." What I'm going to do, is keep my mouth shut, because my predictions are killing me. That reminds me, does anyone want to bet against the Patriots this weekend? I'll give you Cleveland with 2 touchdowns.



Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

Last year, we wrote for Arts. Now it's your turn! If you are interested, come talk to Adam down in the Campus Center Basement, or call 545-1361.

Homecoming festivities top the list for this weekend, but if you're heading to Boston tonight don't miss the witty music of Jim's Big Ego at TT The Bears, otherwise head to the eleventh floor of the Campus Center for some avant-garde jazz. Rahzel, whom recently performed at Amherst College comes to Pearl Street tonight as well.

Forget about heading to the dining commons for lunch today and instead check out The Big Lunch on the Library Lawn on Friday. In the clubs, Ruby Dune is the first UMass act of the academic year to step up to Pearl Street's recognized stage as they open for rising Boston jam band Jiggle the Handle. Jiggle can credit much of their recent success to powerful jam band promoter and band supporter Andrew Stahl of Gamelan Productions. With Tuscan Groove and Kay Ta Funk graduated, fans might be looking for Ruby Dune to treat their curiosities.

On Saturday, the Homecoming Parade kicks off the morning, while the football game against Hofstra kicks off at noon. In the evening, Casino Night takes over the Campus Center, while Joint Custody plays Mike's Billiards. Richmond jammers Fighting Gravity are at the Paradise, ska act Big D & Kids Table steps on the Pearl Street stage, and the show of the week, Creed, Our Lady Peace, and Oleander are at Tsongas Arena.

The week is slow until Wednesday when one of the hottest college acts in the country performs at Pearl Street in Northampton with the Pat McGee Band. Their fan base as exploded so fast in Boston that in under a year they have gone from selling out the Paradise to performing at the 2400-person capacity Avalon Ballroom. If music isn't your thing then head over to the Curtain Theater where the first night of an Evening of One Acts await you. They will run through the remainder of next weekend.

Opening in the theaters this weekend are Three Kings, American Beauty, The General, and My Life So Far. Otherwise check out the Apple Harvest & Crafts Festival at the Amherst Common on Saturday or the final days of The Big E which concludes this Sunday.

-Tom Sadlowski

Thursday, Sept. 30

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Mark Herschler. 10 p.m., 21+

BAYSTATE
Mudfoot with the Jenniter Teft Band, 21+

CAMPUS CENTER 1109
Transmutational Sounds from the NYC Free Jazz Underground, 8 p.m.

CAVLIN THEATER
Lucinda Williams plus the Bottle Rockets

FIRE & WATER CAFE
Andy Buzzi, 8 p.m.
Jesse Sterling Harlson, 9 p.m.

IRON HORSE
Electric Blue & the Kuzmik Truth, Black Rebels and Gaia Roots, 8:30 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Dance Hall Crashers, No Use For A Name, Limp, 8 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Rahzel plus the X-Ecutioners, 8:30 p.m.

TT THE BEARS
Jim's Big Ego, 21+

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's KLS and M.I.C.

Performing Arts

TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports

BLUE WALL
WMUA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 1

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Mentos & the New Horizon, 10 p.m., 21+

BAYSTATE
The Stone Coyotes plus King Radio 21+

IRON HORSE
Bo Diddley, 7&10 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Jiggle the Handle plus Ruby Dune, 8:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
House with DJ Raupage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.

MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco

PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday, 10 p.m.

THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis. 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Karaoke

WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Sports

TOTMAN FIELD
Men's Soccer vs Temple, 3:30 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Something Every Friday with comedian Kyle Dunnigan followed by movie Big Daddy, 8 p.m.

LIBRARY LAWN
The Big Lunch, 11:30 a.m.-2 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 2

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Wildcat O'Halloran Band, 10 p.m., 21+

BAYSTATE
Angry Johnny & the Killbillies, 21+

IRON HORSE
Steve Forbert plus Greg Greenway, 7 p.m.
The Slip, 10 p.m.

MIKE'S BILLIARDS
Joint Custody plus Scotland, 9 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Fighting Gravity, The Popgun Seven, 7 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Big D & Kids Table, Step Lively, Sgt. Magnetti and Kicked in the Head, 8:30 p.m.

THE BIG E
Big Bad Voodoo Daddy, 8 p.m.

TSONGAS ARENA
Creed, Our Lady Peace, Oleander, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.

MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Hush

PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+

THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts

CALVIN THEATER
Trisha Brown Dance, 8 p.m.

Comedy & Improv

CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Sports

ALUMNI STADIUM
Football vs Hofstra (Homecoming), 12 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

ALUMNI STADIUM
Homecoming Parade, 10:30 a.m.

CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Casino Night, 6 p.m.-1 a.m.

Sunday, Oct. 3

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Ron Freshley Quartet, 9 p.m., 21+

IRON HORSE
Leo Kottke, 7 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
The Church, Baby Ray, 7 p.m.

THE BIG E
Trisha Yearwood, 3&8 p.m.

Sports

TOTMAN FIELD
Men's Soccer vs St. Joseph's, 1 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events

STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Movie Big Daddy, 8 p.m.

Monday, Oct. 4

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+

IRON HORSE
Leo Kottke, 7 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Echo & The Bunnyman, 8 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 5

Music

IRON HORSE
Paddy Keenan and Sean Tyrrell, 7 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Tim Reynolds, Sarah Wheeler Band, 8 p.m.

Performing Arts

TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports

CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs Brown, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 6

Music

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+

IRON HORSE
Susan Westenhoefer, 7 p.m.

PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Caedmon's Call, 6 p.m.

PEARL STREET
Pat McGee Band, 8:30 p.m.

TSONGAS ARENA
Indigo Girls, 7:30 p.m.

Dance Clubs

NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing with DJ Bitterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.

THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Performing Arts

CURTIN THEATER - UM
Evening of One-Acts with Our Man In Madras, Terminating, Tone Clusters, and How I Learned To Stop Working And Love The Bug, 8 p.m.

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455)
Buena Vista Social Club

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9153)
Blue Streak. For the Love of the Game, The Sixth Sense, Stigmata. Three Kings

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
Please Call

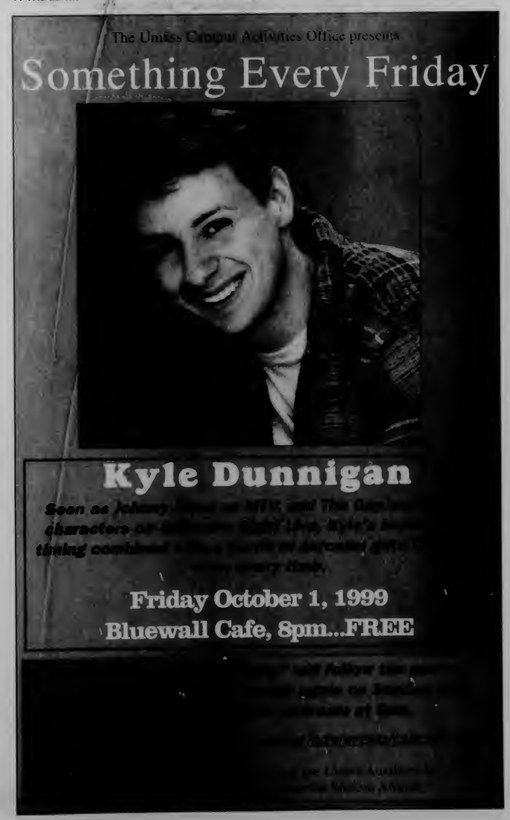
Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298)
Blue Streak. Double Jeopardy. For Love of the Game. Outside Providence. The Sixth Sense. Stigmata, The Thomas Crown Affair.

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0975)
Leila, Run Lola Run, My Son the Fanatic, Twins Falls Idaho, American Beauty, The General, My Life So Far

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
Blues Streak, Dog Park, Double Jeopardy. For the Love of the Game. Jakob the Liar. Mumford. The Sixth Sense. Stigmata. Bar of Echoes. The Thomas Crown Affair.

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (535-3456)
For the Love of the Game. The Sixth Sense. Double Jeopardy.

Outdoors & Trips



UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
424 Student Union (545-3437)
No events scheduled at this time.

Outing Club
422C Student Union (545-3737)
Rock Climbing every Wednesday meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps; Cabin Trip to Bethlehem, NH on Oct. 8-10.

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disc bowling at Northampton Bowl, biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains, visiting Puffer's Pond, shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall, hayride at the Bisson Farm in Hadley, mini-golf on route 9 billiards in the UMass campus center.

Turn to The Source page 8

October '99

ARTS ONCAMPUS . . .

A monthly calendar brought to you by the UMass Arts Council.

Events

Wednesday, October 6
■MUSIC: Rockin' in Rhythm: Music of Duke Ellington Dionne Reeves and Joe Lovano join members of the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra, under the direction of Nicholas Payton, for an evening of rarely heard gems from the 30s through the 60s, including some of the Duke's most popular small-band music. 7:30 p.m. at the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511

THEATER: An Evening of One-Acts Four short theater pieces will be performed. 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater. $ 545-2511. Through 10/9

Thursday, October 7
■MUSIC: Celtic Heart An evening of traditional Celtic music with a contemporary edge by singer Maura O'Connell, her traditional Irish band, and Eileen Ivers, the virtuosic violinist. 7:30 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall. $ 545-2511

LECTURE: Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning Lecture Series Planner Francesca Mallese to speak about planning and design in development. 4 p.m. in Prescottw Room Hills House Central. 545-2255

Friday, October 8
MUSIC/DANCE: Something Every Friday presents a performance by Jahali Akintaz. The music & dance of Kenya. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium 545-3600

Sunday, October 10
GALLERY TALK: Phyllis Kornfeld, curator of the exhibition, CELLBLOCK VISIONS (self-division) will discuss work on display. 4 p.m. in Wheeler Gallery. 545-0680

Thursday, October 14
LECTURE: Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning Lecture Series "Making Historical Places: How Perception Can Attach to Place" by Professor Ted Ghushing 4 pm in Prescottw Room Hills House Central 545-2255

GALLERY TALK: Sandy Gellis will speak about the exhibition, 'Primary Source' 7:30 p.m. at the University Gallery 545-3670

Friday, October 15
■MUSIC: Festival of Lights Sarod & Tabla Concert: Buddhadev Dasgupta & Navan Ghosh An evening of musical magic from tabla wizard Navan Ghosh and sarodiya Buddhadev Dasgupta. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium. $ 545-2511

Saturday, October 16
■DANCE: Festival of Lights Pooja: The Five Elements in Prayer Ranjana Devi's new work depicts the creation of the universe through dance, theater, sculpture, poetry, and narrative. 8 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511

Sunday, October 17
■LECTURE/MUSIC: The Geisha Obsession As part of the "Spirit & Soul: Dialogues with the Masters" series, anthropologist Lisa Dalby, the only Westerner ever to become a geisha, talks about this uniquely Japanese tradition. Following her talk, musician Masayo Ishigure plays the shamisen, an instrument every geisha learns. 3 p.m. in Herter Hall ■231 545-2511

Wednesday, October 20
■MUSIC: The Voronezh A trio of Russian virtuosos performs works of Bach, Vivaldi, Tchaikovsky, Russian and Gypsy songs and popular music on traditional folk instruments. 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511

Thursday, October 22
■DANCE: Ha Performance artist, writer, and butoh dancer Dawn Akemi Saito creates a mythical dreamscape relating the adventures of a woman who, mute as a child, must confront her family secrets in order to reclaim her voice. 8 p.m. in the Curtain Theater $ 545-2511 Through 10/23

Saturday, October 23
■DANCE: Ha, see 10/22 2 p.m. matinee today only ■THEATER: Reduced Shakespeare Company It's Apocalypse Now as the Bad Boys of Abridgement turn their twisted sensibilities to the most famous and infamous events, discoveries, and characters of the last 1,000 years in "The Millennium Musical" (abridged to the 21st century). 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts Center Concert Hall $ 545-2511

Wednesday, October 27
■MUSIC: Carol Wincenc, flute One of today's international stars, Carol Wincenc adds her personal interpretive voice to the classics of the flute repertoire. 7:30 p.m. in Bowker Auditorium $ 545-2511

Thursday, October 28
LECTURE: Landscape Architecture & Regional Planning Lecture Series "Rewriting History with Ecology: Change and Persistence in Land Use in Philadelphia and Cologne 1800-1990" by John Sinton, independent environmental scholar. 4 p.m. in the Prescottw Room Hills House Central. 545-2255

READING: From Urban Tatoo by Marie Hunver Clements at 8 p.m. in the Augusta Savage Gallery 545-5177

■Five College students are offered a discounted admission at Fine Arts Center events

■Sponsored, in part, by a grant from the UMass Arts Council

Exhibits

■AUGUSTA SAVAGE GALLERY
(10 New Africa House • 545-5177
M-TU 1-7 pm, W-F 1-5 pm
Altered Space
Grace Williams
Through Oct 19
POISIS: The Language of Images
Leandro Soto
Oct 26-Nov 23
Reception Oct 26 5-7 p m

■HAMPDEN GALLERY & SCULPTURE GARDEN
Southwest Residential Area • 545-0680
M-TH 12-6, SU 2-5 pm
I Want to Feel the Way You Do All the Time...
Hisakazu Fukawa
Through Oct 24
Houses For Spirits
Alex Sherkie
Oct 13-Nov 15
in the sculpture garden

■HERTER ART GALLERY
123A Herter Hall • 545-0676
M-F 11-4 pm Sat-Sun 1-4 pm
Recent Projects
Oct 4-29
Reception Oct 5, 4 p m
After Nature II
Oct 26-Nov 24
Reception Oct 26- 4 p m

■NTI DEVT UNION VISUAL & PERFORMING ART SPACE
Student Union Building • 545-0792
M-TH 10-5 pm, F 10-3 pm, SA-SU 1-4 pm
"Basotho" Portaits: Africa's Kingdom in the Sky
James Harris
Through Oct 15
Self Portait Student Exhibition
Oct 18-29

■UNIVERSITY GALLERY
Fine Arts Center • 545-3670
TU-F 11-4 30 pm, SA-SU 2-5 pm
Primary Source
Through Oct 22
Bridges & Boundaries Revisited: African-Americans and American Jews
Through Oct 22

■WHEELER GALLERY
Central Residential Area • 545-0680
M-TH 12-6 pm, SU 2-5 pm
CELLBLOCK VISIONS: cell division
Oct 4-Nov 7
Reception Oct 10, 2-5 pm

Plan Your Art Events NOW!
Apply for funding from the Arts Council to support your art event
The Council awards grants to UMass organizations. This year's remaining small grant award deadlines are October 31, December 2, February 3, March 2, March 9, April 11

10/99

UMass Arts Council, 101 Hasbrouck Lab, 545-0202

■ The Source

continued from page 6

Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Festivals

The Big E
Eastern States Exposition, 1305 Memorial Avenue, West Springfield (413-737-BIGE). The Big E is a New England extravaganza. Big name entertainment, dazzling thrill shows, New England history and agriculture, hands-on exhibits, ethnic performances and food, a slice life from each of the six New England states are all just a sampling of The Big E experience. Daily through October 3.

Apple Harvest & Crafts Festival
Amherst Common. Music, food, and crafts. Saturday, October 2 from 10am to 5pm.

Art Galleries

Bridges and Boudaries: African Americans and American Jews
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670). An exploration of relationships between African Americans and American Jews that combines scholarship, historical documentation, and fine arts. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22.

Primary Source
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670). Participating artists Roger Ackling, Doug Bradshow, and Sandy Gellis collaborate with light, rainfall, and mineral compounds. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22

Altered Space
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-51771). Mixed-media works by New York-based African American artist Grace Williams. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. through October 19.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0680). An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30

Libraries

Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-5 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2319)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2387)

■ Music

continued from page 4

devoted to Chopin and will include Ballade in A Flat, Fantasy in F minor, Nocturnes and Impromptus.

Music, music, music. You either feel it or you don't. And if you don't, you should start to try. Give birth to your senses or something. The FAC fosters a huge range of styles to experiment with. Call their box office anytime and they will very enthusiastically send you a copy of their upcoming events (545-2511).

Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

THE SAMPLES, PAT MCGEE BAND
Oct. 7, Avalon
LINEE
Oct. 7, Iron Horse
HERBIE HANCOCK
Oct. 8, Calvin Theater
THE SAMPLES
Oct. 8, The Webster
BETTE MIDLER
Oct. 8, FleetCenter
CANINE
Oct. 9, Paradise Rock Club
ZZ TOP & LYNYRD SKYNYRD
Oct. 9, Worcester Centrum
GEORGE CLINTON & THE P-FUNK ALLSTARS
Oct. 9, Worcester Palladium
MIXFEST '99 W/ BEN FOLDS FIVE, TRAIN, DURAN DURAN, JUDE, JEREMY TOBACK, VONDA SHEPARD
Oct. 9, City Hall Plaza
MIXFEST '99 W/ SUGAR RAY, BLONDIE, NATALIE MERCHANT, PRETENDERS, FASTBALL, LUSCIOUS JACKSON
Oct. 10, Foxboro Stadium
TIM REYNOLDS, RANE
Oct. 12, Tune Inn
JOHN PAUL JONES (of Led Zeppelin)
Oct. 12, Pearl Street
ELTON JOHN
Oct. 12, FleetCenter
ROBBIE WILLIAMS
Oct. 12, Avalon
VIPERHOUSE, GORDON STONE BAND
Oct. 14, Paradise Rock Club
TRICKY, DJ GENASIDE 2, STROKE
Oct. 14, Avalon
MIGHTY PURPLE, RANE
Oct. 15, Toad's Place
AGENTS OF GOOD ROOTS, DISPATCH, UNCLE SAMMY
Oct. 15, Middle East
LIVING DAYLIGHTS
Oct. 16, Iron Horse
VERTICAL HORIZON, ANGRY SALAD
Oct. 16, Paradise Rock Club
THE SHEILA DIVINE, SUPERDRAG
Oct. 17, Pearl Street
RESURRECTION TOUR
Oct. 16, Avalon
GODSMACK & REVEILLE
Oct. 16, Hampton Beach Casino
JIMMY PAGE & THE BLACK CROWES
Oct. 16, Worcester Centrum
INDIGO GIRLS
Oct. 16, Mullins Center
MARK ERELLI
Oct. 20, Club Passim
SQUEEZE
Oct. 20, Avalon
THE SHEILA DIVINE, SUPERDRAG
Oct. 20, Middle East
GOO GOO DOLLS, TONIC, JUDE
Oct. 20, Mullins Center
ELVIS COSTELLO, STEVE NIEVE
Oct. 21, Orpheum Theatre
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Oct. 23, Worcester Palladium
KID ROCK, POWERMAN 5000, DDT
Oct. 27, Tsongas Arena
FUEL
Oct. 27, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
JONATHA BROOKE & ANNE WEISS
Oct. 27, Amherst College Frontroom
BELA FLECK & THE FLECKTONES
Oct. 28, Calvin Theater
FUEL
Oct. 29, Avalon
THE PIETASTERS, SPRING HEELED JACK & THE PILFERS
Oct. 29, Amherst College Frontroom
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Oct. 29, Toad's Place
TYPE O NEGATIVE, PUYA
Oct. 30, Avalon
GUSTER, THE PUSH STARS, JUMP LITTLE CHILDREN
Oct. 30, Orpheum Theatre
COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Oct. 31, Orpheum Theatre
DROPKICK MURPHY'S, ANTI-FLAG, BLOOD FOR BLOOD, BOMBSHELL ROCKS
Oct. 31, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
"WEIRD AL" YANKOVIC
Oct. 31, Maine State Theater
IGGY POP
Nov. 1, Avalon
BEN HARPER & THE INNOCENT CRIMINALS, RAHZEL
Nov. 2, Avalon
MXPX
Nov. 2, The Webster
MEATLOAF
Nov. 2, Orpheum Theatre
MXPX, TOO BAD EUGENE
Nov. 3, Avalon
RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium
LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium
FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom
LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club
MICHAEL GLABICKI (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street
CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 13, Orpheum Theatre
311
Nov. 13, Worcester Palladium
BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum
LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater
STING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre
MOXY FRUVOUS
Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom
B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY 56 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-7400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8515)
BILL'S BAR 55 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9678)
BUTTERFIELD RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)
CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-8556)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8556)
FLEETCENTER 1 Fleet Center, Boston (617-624-1000)
HOT CLUB 10-12 Stearns Square, Springfield (781-4509)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL 239 Westminster Street, Providence (401-272-5876)
MARS NIGHTCLUB 350 Worthington Street, Springfield (746-8282)
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)
MULLINS CENTER UMass, Amherst (545-5001)
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS 17 New South Street, Northampton (584-7327)
ORPHEUM THEATRE Hamilton Place, Boston (617-679-0810)
PARADISE ROCK CLUB 967 Commonwealth Ave., Boston (617-562-8804)
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB 30 Pearl Street, Northampton (584-0610)
SOMERVILLE THEATRE 49 Davis Square, Somerville (617-625-4088)
THE GROTTO 25 West Street, Northampton (586-6900)
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield's 253-4400)
THE WEBSTER 51 Webster Street, Hanford (860-525-5553)
TSONGAS ARENA 500 Arcand Drive, Lowell (978-848-6900)
TT THE BEARS 10 Brookline Street, Cambridge (617-492-BEAR)
VAN METER RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
WORCESTER PALLADIUM 261 Main Street, Worcester (508-797-9696)
WORCESTER CENTRUM 50 Foster Street, Worcester (508-755-6900)
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN. 50 Conz Street, Northampton (586-5315)

■ Buffy

continued from page 6

light on his conflicted spirit routine and "get involved," declaring, "Look, high school's over, bud. You gotta make with the grown-up talk now."

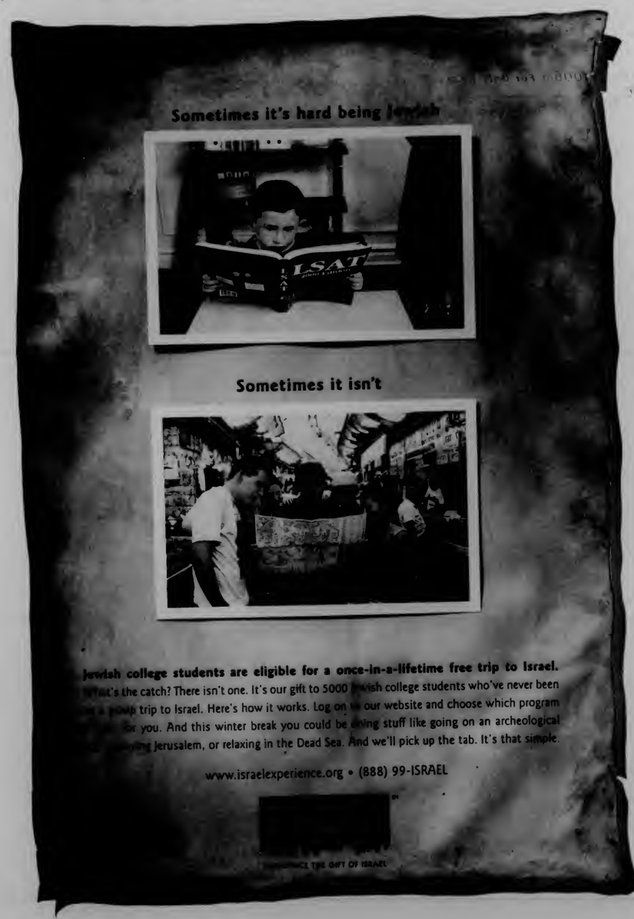
And with their first meeting, the premise of "Angel" is quickly and firmly established. Angel is to be Los Angeles' version of Batman, or maybe he's more like "The Equalizer."

Anyway, he's not alone.

Who should Angel run into right off the bat? Another Sunnydale transplant Cordelia Chase (Charisma Carpenter, also formerly of "Buffy.") Cordelia, a walking, talking L.A. cliche, has come to town hoping to be an actress. Which means she's attending lots of parties but not working much. Enter Angel, who, on their first encounter in the big city, is asked by Cordelia: "Are you still ... 'Grrrrr?'"

Angel sadly confirms that he is. "There's not actually a cure for that," he says.

Nor is there one for girls like Cordelia, clueless but strangely capable of survival in Hollywood. Cordelia supplies a lot of the comic relief, a foil for Bureanaz's sometimes sullen Angel.



(You'd be depressed, too, if you were the world's biggest threat to the woman you loved.)

With Doyle, a half-human, half-who-knows-what, as a guiding light (Doyle has visions that tell him who needs help), Angel, the recovering vampire, passes the time lending a helping "hellmouth" whenever and wherever possible. Doyle isn't much help in the kick-butt department, though.

"I'm not combat-ready," he tells Angel. "I'm just the messenger."

To which our hero replies, "And I'm the message."

The hour, from "Buffy" creator and executive producer Joss Whedon, mixes the supernatural with the surreal (the latter being life in L.A.), coming up with a potent entertainment that, like "Buffy," has its share of humor. How else to justify the idea, proposed by the jobless and pre-spoiled Cordelia, that Angel, Doyle and she make some money on their soul-saving, demon-smashing enterprise. At least a few of the truly grateful, she reasons, are bound to be rich.

Dramas garner great Ratings for networks

Brian Lowry
Los Angeles Times

HOLLYWOOD- If one week of ratings are any indication, the new television season is quite literally taking a dramatic turn, as several new drama series have exhibited ratings promise while most fledgling sitcoms look virtually dead on arrival.

This is still somewhat heartening to the major networks, which despite a 3 percent decline in prime-time viewing for the Big Four compared to "premiere week" a year ago have witnessed some validation of their strategy scheduling 22 new drama series and just 14 sitcoms this fall, reversing the comedy-drama balance of recent years.

On the downside, not only are most new sitcoms foundering, but some returning comedies scheduled at 8:30 p.m. or 9:30 p.m. after established programs - including such satellites as ABC's "It's like, you know ... " and "The Norm Show," haven't done a good job retaining their lead-in audience either.

Even NBC's "Must-See TV" Thursday lineup hasn't been immune. "Jesse," which stars Christina Applegate and underwent a creative overhaul after its first year, experienced a record dive from the ratings platform provided by "Friends," while "Stark Raving Mad," the new occupant of prime time's coveted real estate after "Frasier," chased away more than a quarter of the audience that tuned in for the five-time Emmy winner.

"No network seems to have premiered a comedy on the half-hour (8:30 or 9:30 p.m.) particularly well this season," NBC Entertainment President Garth Ancier conceded. By contrast, new one-hour programs have by and large opened respectably, at minimum demonstrating some conceptual interest in the shows. Long-term viability, as always, will ultimately depend on how many of those viewers choose to return in subsequent weeks. Taking a first glance at the dramas, ABC's "Once and Again" and "Snoops," CBS' sci-fi entry "Now and Again," "Family Law" and "Judging Amy," and NBC's "The West Wing," "Third Watch," "Law & Order: Special Victims Unit" and "Freaks and Geeks" all posted reasonably good ratings in light of time-slot expectations.

In the wake of languid summer ratings, viewers also answered the post-Labor Day dinner bell to watch popular series. Viewing spiked upward for such returning programs as "The Practice" (which, with a second consecutive best drama Emmy, drew its biggest audience ever Sunday), "JAG," "Law & Order" and "Providence."

Among the new comedies, NBC's "The Mike O'Malley Show" appears seriously wounded following "Will & Grace," which quickly established its credentials as a second-year hit by beating its principal rival, ABC's "Dharma & Greg." NBC is hoping "ER's" return this week will inspire more people to try "Stark Raving Mad," whose competition, Fox's much-ballyhooed Hollywood spoof "Action," stumbled out of the starting gate as well, despite mostly positive reviews.

■ Kings

continued from page 5

ger of backing a film that takes a strong position on the sensitive political question of America's role in the Middle East.

Russell said that when he first started to write, "politics was never an issue. ... They knew the kind of movie I wanted to do, and they assured me that had worked with other (fiercely independent) directors like Oliver Stone ... and knew it was going to be different." studio's theatrical business operations, told him. "We may have to reconsider doing the movie."

Thursday Night is Pasta Night at Mike's
All you can eat Pasta and Meatballs from 6:00 - 9:00pm For Only $4.95
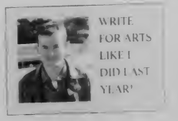
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
Don't forget Monday Night Football, or our FREE BUFFET every week starting at 9:00.
16 oz. Bud Lt., Mich Lt., & Bud Drafts for Only $1.50 this week. You keep the cup!
Shots of Dr. McGillicuddy's $2.25

Kosmik Baby...
Electric Blue and the Kosmik truth will be playing Iron Horse tonight for a Leonard Peltier benefit.



Spirit Dwellings
Sculptures of recent work by Alex Sherker, seen above, are now on display at the Hampden Gallery.

Bring it.
Where it matters most.
As one of the world's leading diversified technology companies, we're breaking new ground in everything from defense and commercial electronics, to aviation, to engineering and construction. As a Raytheon employee, you'll contribute to the development of exciting, revolutionary technology designed to make life better, easier, and safer throughout the world. Such as our STARS air traffic control system. And our award-winning NightSight™ technology.
But it all starts with you. Your creativity. Your knowledge. And enthusiasm about the future. In return, we offer exceptional training and professional development opportunities. A supportive, down-to-earth 'work' environment. And incredible benefits including flexible schedules designed to respect your quality of life.
So you can still show off all those great qualities of yours outside of work, too.
We have a lot to tell you about Raytheon and the exciting opportunities we have available. Plan on visiting our booth at your college career fair. If you are unable to attend the fair, please e-mail your resume to: resume@rayjobs.com (ASCII text only, no attachments), or mail to: Raytheon Company, Attn: National Staffing Data Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266. U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.
Opportunities are available for exceptional students with the following majors:
• Aeronautical Engineering • Chemical Engineering • Civil Engineering and Construction Management • Computer Engineering • Computer Science • Electrical Engineering • Finance/Accounting • Human Resources • Industrial and Labor Relations • Management • Marketing/Communications • Math • Mechanical Engineering • Physics
Check out our Website at www.rayjobs.com/campus for further information including a calendar of recruiting events. At Raytheon, we strive to be the employer of choice for a diverse workforce by attracting, retaining, and recognizing the most talented, resourceful and creative people.

Bringing technology to the edge
Raytheon

WRITE FOR ARTS LIKE I DID LAST YEAR!

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use MSG
253-7835 – 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

FREE BOWLING
AIR CONDITIONED
FOR EVERYONE IN YOUR PARTY WITH THIS AD
NORTHAMPTON BOWL
584-4830

Anyone Interseted in trying out for the UMass Women's Tennis team
Please Call Debbie Ginn at 545-3103 for details

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

September 30,1999

Who's privileged?

Although there has been a lot said about the issue of "affirmative" action, I believe that the argument has been far too one sided and I feel as though many things have been overlooked. First of all, let me state for the record that I'm not a racist, and I am not blind to the fact that diversity is a necessary component of this "melting pot" that we live in. Secondly, despite what some ignoramus told me the other day, I personally am not responsible for any racial tension in this nation nor am I (get ready for this) a recipient of the so-called "white privilege."

Can you believe that without knowing me personally, some ignorant buffoon graciously told me, "You have received so many privileges and gifts that you're unaware of, it's sickening... white people just don't get it." Well, isn't that nice? At first I thought that either

Gary Mendese

(a) this kid had a lobotomy recently or (b) was dropped on the head as a child, but then it soon dawned on me that this wasn't an abnormal belief. In fact, this misinformed opinion is a popular one among Americans, and it needs to be entirely rethought.

I'm sure that some of you are wondering where I get off stating that I am free from "white privilege," being a "white" male in college. Actually, you know what? Maybe you're right. I guess I am guilty of "white privilege" after all. I guess it was "white privilege" that got my single mother a job that paid $7 per hour to support her two young kids with no health insurance. And it was the same "white privilege" that bought us that 1978 Ford Pinto with the passenger seat missing and no muffler.

And it was the same "white privilege" that got my mother sick with uterine cancer a few years ago, leaving me at 16 years old, to help my step-father (who didn't make much more than my mother) pay the bills. And throughout all this time, it was the same magnificent "white privilege" that allowed my dead-beat father to avoid paying child support, helping our family go further and further into debt. And yes, that gracious "white privilege" brought us to the beautiful central Peabody, Mass. where we continue to live today.

Get my drift? Are you familiar with the expression, "he who lives in a glass house should not throw stones"? Well, before you cast judgment on someone you know nothing about... think! Now I know that many people out there have had it worse than I have, but my life (and you now know probably 1/10 of it) was no freaking picnic, okay? Yes, there are many wealthy "white" people out there, but don't associate an entire group of people with the same skin color with a certain set of stereotypes. Hmm... isn't that what started all of the racial tension in this country anyway? You think that people would learn from the past...

So, it seems to me that the biggest complaints of those in favor of "affirmative" action are "white privilege" and the fact that those underrepresented "minorities" aren't given a chance in college because of biased SATs, substandard high schools, and racial sentiments. Well guess what... SATs are not biased. Now, I don't like the SATs one bit because I think they're meaningless in terms of ability, but they're still not racially biased. All people have the same anatomies, right? Every race has the same basic genetic makeup, correct? Well, then you cannot say that SATs are racially biased; they're not designed to make "people of color" fail. Many people (some of which happen to be "minorities" in this case) who come from inner cities and ghettos attend lousy high schools, and it is because of this that they do not score well on the SAT.

My point is that our government needs to allocate its money more carefully and give some of this money to inner city schools. These schools need to raise the quality of the education provided, and then we will see more people (of all colors) in poor, crime filled neighborhoods doing better in school and on the SAT, and then going on to college. Race based "affirmative action" is not the answer! Keeping track of percentages and meeting quotas is insane. Chancellor Scott wanted to use socioeconomic status as a criterion for admission and that's a much better idea. After all, that's the heart of the matter, isn't it? Poor neighborhoods yield poor education and less chances of going to college, right? So why is everyone complaining about the new policy? Because there were less ALANA students admitted to the University this year? So what? Has anyone bothered to check out the number of applications filled out by "minority" students? How many students were rejected? What were their statistics?

Furthermore, how do you really know the number of students from a particular race that apply to school each year? Not everyone checks off that ridiculous box marked "ethnicity" anyway. Hey, if we got rid of that box entirely, no one would know what race anyone was and no one could complain about any racial bias in the admissions process. But I guess we're not ready for rational solutions, are we?

This whole percentage issue has gone completely berserk. People are actually trying to make the Commonwealth College more "diverse." What?! Are you kidding me? Students are admitted into the program because they earned it. Period, end of story, finito, that's it. You can't keep the number of admitted students from each race proportional to the number of students of that particular race who graduated high school. That's preposterous! And I know from firsthand experience that there are plenty of "minority" students out there that got where they are today on their own and would never want to take advantage of anything like "affirmative" action, because they would never know whether or not they got in on their own merit.

Look, I understand that there are many racial issues out there... I'm not denying that. There are bigots of all colors and I'd be willing to bet that you know at least one, I know I do. But we're going about this all wrong. Bringing students that were ill prepared for high school directly into college because of their race is bad for the students, as well as the entire nation. I didn't have the best upbringing in the world, but I still scored over a 1300 on my SATs and worked for everything that I have today, no thanks to the ever-so-wonderful "white privilege." To me, that's one of the greatest satisfactions of my life and I know I'm not the only one who feels that way.

Now I know that I may have enraged some people, but before you respond, please realize my point before you embarrass yourself in front of 17,000 people. Please understand that I realize there are a great number of "white" people that get spoon fed everything, but it's less common than you might think. Not everyone with light skin is privileged and not everyone with dark skin is neglected. By the way, are you sick and tired of the number of times I've used the words "white", "affirmative", and "white privilege"? Now you know how I feel.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

And on the seventh day...

I have been told that it is something called Catholic guilt. It can make you invite people you don't like out with you, just to be nice. It can make you get up for your Friday morning class, even if it is a lecture in Thompson. It can even make you leave your boyfriend's or your girlfriend's house early for fear of what might happen next.

Kathleen Ralls

Maybe that is what drew me out of my house on at 6:45 p.m. two Sundays ago. Some of you might agree that it was a sign, I am still not convinced.

It all started out so innocently. It was just one of those late Sunday afternoons, when the sun is still strong, and the streets beckon for you to get out of the house and do something. After much inner debate, I decided that I would take a run to campus.

After striding down the gentle slope of Lincoln Ave., I continued towards Whitmore to stretch. Taking a look around, I realized there were small packs of people making their way towards N. Pleasant St. Watching as the students emerged from the depths of Southwest, I noticed that none of them had backpacks on.

It was 6:50 p.m. on a Sunday night. "Where could they all be going?" I thought. Now, Easter may have been the last time I have set foot in a church, but I quickly put two-and-two together and realized they were the few, the proud, who still attend services while at school.

I admit I was impressed. Squeaking by on the Christmas-Easter plan, I remember the rejoicing that went on in my house the Sunday after I made my Confirmation. The prophecy was fulfilled. I was no longer obligated to go to church every week. The Pope and his bishops recognized me as an adult, now my parents were forced to reconcile with the notion. I, on the other hand, accepted the promotion with dignity and extra hours of sleep.

Yet, those students got me thinking. After eight years of CCD (or as we called it, the Chelmsford City Dump, though Chelmsford is not a city and has no dump), I must have some memories, good and bad, about the whole religious experience. It had to have been an act beyond God that prodded me to attend all those retreats and Saturday afternoon group sessions with the cheap red punch and cinnamon cookies in the basement of the church...

After School Football

Hey, after we discussed Moses, we headed out to my backyard for some girls versus boys football. Maybe they had Pop Warner in their favor, but we knew the lay of the land. Boundaries were disregarded in the course of scoring (their touchdowns). And we had a definite height and number advantage at the time.

Lasting memory: After scoring another illegitimate touchdown, John B. reached in for the ball and consequently scratched me in the process, leaving a scar that has yet to completely vanish. I guess God was teaching me a lesson after a little high stepping and taunting.

Father Tim

Hey, whether it was that boy or girl we bored holes into when she or he walked up for Communion, crushes got us through the Mass. Was it really possible that he was that cute with parents that goofy-looking? Fortunately for my parish, we had Father Tim. He was the hunky. Alan Thicke kind of guy whose thick black hair made the mothers' hearts go a-flutter. Friendly with a cute, squinty smile and a love for lambs on Easter, who wouldn't want to go to Confession?

17 Kids + No snacks

In our first few years of Catechism, there were four of us which allotted time and space for snacks. Whether it was popcorn or cookies, it was an opportunity to share in our blessings. As the years passed by, however, our class grew to four times its size, making my mom the most popular teacher at St. Mary's ever. Or at least I thought so. Come to think of it, we never did say Grace. I guess it was another of God's workings.

First Communion & sore throat equals bad pictures

First Communion, the first sacrament you can actually remember. Though I was in that "I hate anything but jeans" stage, I was secretly excited about my lacy, white-bibbed ensemble and doily socks. Cousin Joan had even made a baby's breath wreath with pink flowers for my hair, which was coifed into a feathery shell. God, unhappy with my materialistic gloating, reminded me of my sins with a sore throat so severe, I smiled for just one picture the entire day. Even my new white and blue watch from Avon could not change my outlook on the day.

Returning to present time, I admired the devoted passing me by. I guess they got more out of their religion than I did. I might have even felt a twinge of guilt, seeing as my mom was my teacher and I could have set a better example for the graduates of our class.

So, if you had seen me running back home on Sunday, I might have looked a little crazy, laughing while running back up that hill.

Catholic guilt may drive me to do a lot of crazy things, but it can't make me go to church.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian staff member.

The new struggle of women

As I stare at the cover of Cosmo magazine, I am bombarded with the bright, bold headlines that scream at me: "How to be Sexy", "4 Brilliant Ways to Get Everything Done", "Lose 5 Pounds This Week", "Why You Don't Need A Man" and "6 Ways to Love Yourself the Way You Are". The magazine is blatantly contradictory. Women are told to do this, be that, don't do this, don't be that... all at the same time. There is no way that we can be everything we are told to be.

When our grandmothers and even our mothers were growing up, the feminist movement had not reached its peak, so many of the different roles of society were not available to women yet. You could be a housewife, nurse or teacher. You were to take care of your home, children and husband, and that was about it. The important advances and results of women's drive for equality had not yet opened up the myriad of opportunities that exist for women today.

Laura Siciliano

In the last thirty years, the feminist movement has made important strides in the journey towards equality. Political awareness in the feminist cause helped to show females that they could do almost anything they set their mind to. However, with all of the new opportunities for women, the old expectations still remained. Women who would previously have not had a career outside the home began to find themselves working as a lawyers fighting against unjust laws. At the end of the day, though, women still have to go home and do the laundry. Hours and hours of new responsibilities were added to each day, but the day did not get any longer. In this modern, incredibly fast paced world, women are moving on "fast forward" constantly. The endless responsibilities of the modern woman are only speeding up the race of life.

I find that I sometimes feel as if I am being pulled in twenty different directions. I feel I must study twice as hard as my male peers so that I can succeed and be able to break through the glass ceiling. I workout in my free time, telling myself I am doing it for my health, but deep down inside I know that my goal is to look good in my jeans. I try to be independent and courageous, but I also worry that I am going to come across as a cold, heartless woman, since females are supposed to be the "sensitive" sex. However, when I let my heart show, I am afraid I appear to be a weak pushover. The heritage of my female ancestors is still engrained within me. I should be sensitive, kind, friendly, attractive: a "nice girl."

The modern world is telling me all of these things as well, but is also molding me to be fearless, strong, independent and to accept myself for who I naturally am. The very words that describe these expectations contradict each other. I cannot be everything. We cannot accept our bodies the way they are and try to lose weight at the same time; it just defeats the whole purpose of self-acceptance if we are tied down to a scale. Women cannot be independent from men if their self-worth is measured by their appeal towards the male sex. Humans cannot be hot and cold at the same time; we simply become warm, losing the qualities that we so strongly identify ourselves by.

The new modern struggle of women is to try to be the "Superwoman". You know, career centered, family oriented, independent, self-accepting and physically fit. We are in very different shoes than our grandmothers were. We have opportunities that they never had, something that I am eternally grateful for. However, we are also being tugged in twenty different directions by society, the media, our parents, boyfriends, friends, partners and the world. This, in essence, is the new struggle of women.

The feminist movement has done so much good for the plight of women. But I think it is time that the movement refocuses on helping women and society as a whole to learn how to balance lives. No one individual can be everything to everyone. However, women are capable of doing many things, much more than we give ourselves credit for. Feminists should try to help people find out who they are, what they want, and where they want to take their lives. When women can finally accept themselves and their sex for the very wonder that being female is, then the feminist movement will have succeeded. Women will have found sexual equality.

Laura Siciliano is a UMass student.

ED/OP WILL BE TAKING PHOTOGRAPHS OF COLUMNISTS INTERESTED IN HAVING PHOTOS RUN WITH THEIR COLUMNS. THE DATE IS WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 6TH 1999 AT FIVE O' CLOCK. COLUMNISTS SHOULD MEET AT THE STUDENT UNION STEPS.

Viens goes AWOL

It finally happened. Dan Viens was unable to come up with some humorous column for all of you to read. We think that he is avoiding all of us here at the Collegian, because he is embarrassed that he is nothing but a two-bit hack of a columnist. He never came down to give us his column and when we called his house, his roommate said that he was out of town playing in a Rock 'em Sock 'em Robots tournament. However, his roommate gave us Dan's official business number, so that we could try to contact him that way. One of the various Collegian interns called and was on hold for seven hours. Rather than run one of Dan's old columns or just blank space we made the executive decision to run the recording, which after seven hours, caused our intern to lose her mind. Here it is.

"Good evening. You have reached the official business line of Collegian columnist and Official New England Cock Fight Promoter of The New Millenium, Dan Viens. All of our operators are busy at this time. Your call will be the next call answered. Until then, please feel free to try our automated directory of Dan Viens related issues."

"For upcoming cock fights in your area press one. If you are interested in getting involved with the official UMass cock fighting club and you are a rooster owner, please press two. If you are interested in getting into cock fighting events and you are a rooster, please peck three now. For a round of phone sex with Dan's Spanish speaking neighbor, press four now. For a list of Dan's hobbies, please press five now. For any questions involving Collegian editorials past, present or future, press six now."

Our intern pressed six.

"You have pressed four. Please stay on the line while we connect you to Dan's neighbor. The next portion of your call will cost you $35."

Although we were a little angry that the system had malfunctioned, we figured that we would try out the phone sex, since we didn't have much to do. We put it on speakerphone because there were about ten of us in the room. Also, we figured that if we were going to be paying $35 then we might as well get our money's worth.

The phone sex turned out to not really be worth it. The woman had a sexy voice, especially because she was speaking in one of the romance languages. But as sexy as she sounded, we still couldn't understand what the hell she was saying to us. One kid was standing by with a pocket translator, but he could only grasp a few meaningless words. Once she got off the phone we put all the words together that we could remember. We think she wanted to pour maple syrup butter and hamster cheese all over her and then watch a sheep lick it off.

Once this revelry was over, the recording started again.

"To return to the main menu, please press the pound key."

Our intern pressed the pound key. He eventually got up to the point where he was before and pressed six again to find out about editorials.

"I cannot understand what you pressed. Here: maybe this is the one you were looking for. You have selected descriptions of clubs Dan Viens is involved in. Club number one: The Man Club. Please don't think that this club is all about masculinity or that it is limited to women. This club is all about being better than other people. For instance, when you see someone on television and they are complaining that they can't succeed in life because the man is keeping them down, they are talking about people like Dan Viens. In this club, one becomes accustomed to being ruthless and heartless. One learns how to succeed by pulling out all the stops and stepping on as many people as possible. In this club, you won't learn to climb the corporate ladder, you'll learn how to chop it down so you're the only one standing."

"Club number two, The Star Wars Porn Club. Do you love Star Wars? Do you love porn? Then why don't you come down to the Campus Center and sit around with a lot of real cool combinations of Star Wars character porn scenes? Last week, we had a three-hour discussion of how fantastic a scene with Princess Lea in Return of The Jedi and Darth Vader with his big helmet would be. This week's topic will be which human/alien would be best to get it on in a three way with R2-D2 and C-3PO. The combinations are endless. Suggestions for topics can be left at the Collegian in the Campus Center basement. If you would rather just bring them to our meetings, then that's fine too."

At this point, we realized that we were never going to find out anything about Dan's weekly column. We just decided to break down and check out the cock fighting part.

"You have selected how to get involved in cock fighting. Let's get ready to Coooooock Fiiiight. In order to be considered a serious member of The Cock Fighters Association of America, you first have to be a cock. When you buy your cock you have to make sure that it is the kind of rooster that is going to stand up and fight. You don't want to waste your money on no wimpy-ass cock. If your chicken is chicken, he's gonna get waxed in his first match. When you go to buy your rooster, if it doesn't try to peck off your hand then you best keep looking."

"Once you pick out your cock, take him to GNC. Tell them you want their finest bottle of champagne. Once you say that they will take you upstairs into a special room where no matter what, your chicken cannot have sex. In this room you will be able to buy all types of European steroids that will pump up your cock to championship potential."

"In order to keep your chicken healthy, keep him on a strict diet of dog food and road kill. This will get him plenty of protein and carbohydrates. log him around the block three times a day. If this sounds too demanding for you, then you're not cut out for this sport. You are going to have to quit your job, if you want your cock to be a champion of Mexico's favorite past time."

At first, we decided that we would all put our money together and by a cock, but then we started fighting over where it would stay. One guy bought his own cock. He got really into it and we haven't seen him all week. Either his rooster is doing very well, or it pecked him to death. Either way, we still didn't have a column for Dan Viens.

Last week, when his column didn't run on Thursday we received threatening phone calls. We didn't want a repeat of that so we decided to run this very bizarre message. Hopefully you will enjoy it and maybe gain some insight into the twisted life that one of our columnists leads. Also, if you see Dan, tell him that from now on, if he just wants to e-mail us his columns, he can. All of us have grown quite afraid of him after hearing his answering machine. Many thanks to you from the Ed/Op Staff.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menichel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

A big weekend

The Massachusetts men's soccer team will take on St. Joseph's and Temple this weekend at Totman Field.

McPhee gains respect in an attempt to tame the 'Hawks

By Michael Wilbon
The Washington Post

I am not outraged that Washington Capitals General Manager George McPhee popped the Chicago Blackhawks' coach in the eye the other night. I'm not even slightly annoyed at McPhee. If I were his boss, I'd give him a bearhug and heartfelt congratulations, maybe even a little bonus.

McPhee, if he erred at all, erred on the right side. He defended the people in his charge after the system set up to protect them from harm - in this case the NHL - went blind and deaf. McPhee likely will be fined. Whatever amount will be well worth it.

He will have earned the unqualified respect of the people who employ him, the people who work for him. And I'll bet other NHL clubs will think long and hard before they try to carve up one of the Capitals.

If the league office, starting with Commissioner Gary Bettman, had done its job, McPhee wouldn't have had to confront Blackhawks Coach Lorne Molleken, whose mission this preseason, it seems, has been to injure as many opposing players as possible. Perhaps he feels that would help even things during the regular season for the talent-bereft Blackhawks. Molleken, in the form of a black eye, got what was coming to him and here's why:

The St. Louis Blues, after a preseason game against the Blackhawks, called the NHL office to complain about Chicago's thuggery.

The Toronto Maple Leafs, after a preseason game against the Blackhawks, made a similar call to complain about Chicago, and even said they might cancel a second game against the Blackhawks rather than put up with more goonery.

The Dallas Stars, after the warm-ups for a preseason game with the Blackhawks, called the NHL to say it was clear what Chicago was trying to do: hurt people, not play hockey.

People in Bettman's office can't say they didn't know, because the NHL sent a supervisor to monitor the Capitals-Blackhawks game. The Blues, Maple Leafs and Stars are all lying? The NHL knew, and did nothing. Again. McPhee and Capitals Coach Ron Wilson were so certain of the Blackhawks' intentions, they scratched their most important skilled players - Peter Bondra, Adam Oates, Sergei Gonchar, to name a few - from the lineup that night.

Sure enough, the Blackhawks came out thugging from the opening faceoff. Mike Eagles, playing his 18th season in the NHL, told the guys on the bench he'd never seen a preseason game like this. It got so bad the Capitals considered pulling their players from the ice before the end of the game.

Anyone's capable of winning it all as Major League Baseball nears October

By Jon Heyman
The Sporting News

Baseball 1999, however, is filled with teams that are strong yet flawed. Everybody has a ding or a dent. That makes for an intriguing and unpredictable postseason. Sure, some teams look better than others. But not one looks impenetrable, unyielding, undeniable.

There isn't even one clear favorite.

Not too many conclusions can be drawn from a season that will end with several teams in the 95- to 100-victory range. Yet as the playoffs draw near, the National League's best appear vaguely superior to the American League's best, most of which were having pitching problems of varying degrees. So, that's our one bold prediction for this postseason. A National League team will win it.

The Braves have shown more heart and resolve than anyone after losing Andres Galarraga, Javy Lopez and Kerry Ligtenberg. They are our narrow favorites, truth something considering they don't have a true cleanup hitter, starting first baseman, catcher, or even a No. 1 or 2 hitter. Gerald Williams has proved he deserves to be an everyday player, but neither he nor Bret Boone, who follows him at the top of the batting order, has a particularly high on-base percentage.

The demise of the pitching staff is greatly exaggerated, it turns out. But remember, the big three of Greg Maddux, Tom Glavine and John Smoltz carried them to only one World Series title in all those years when the team was at or near full strength. Smoltz isn't at full strength this season after suffering an elbow injury. But he has picked up admirers as well as victories by revamping his windup and continuing to pitch through injury.

Like the Braves, the Astros deserve medals of valor for keeping things together despite devastating injuries. Yet the absence of Moises Alou will hurt even more in playoff matchups, where the opposing team will be more apt to pitch around Jeff Bagwell, who led the majors with 140 walks entering the week.

The Astros - like no other contender - rely on two players, and if Bagwell or Craig Biggio isn't on, they will be in trouble. The team is particularly vulnerable to right-handed pitching, as its .262 batting average attests. The Astros still have superb starting pitching, but there's a question whether the middle relievers vital against the best hitting teams can get them to dynamic closer Billy Wagner.

The Yankees' starting pitching is a big advantage, but they never know what they're going to get from Roger Clemens and they can't be sure how much David Cone has left. If those two are no better than ordinary, the Yankees could be in trouble.

If they're feeling up to it, the Indians always loom as a major threat. Third baseman Travis Fryman and catcher Sandy Alomar, a noted Yankees killer, are playing through injuries. Cleveland has yet to prove it can play with the big boys. It is 10-22 against the other playoff bound teams.

The Rangers can hit with the Indians, but they can't pitch with anyone. Their backend bullpen duo of rookie Jeff Zimmerman and former World Series MVP John Wetteland is superb. The question is how to get to them.

The Red Sox have overcome all odds to make it this far. Now, they need to overcome history. 81 years of it. Like the '88 Dodgers, they have one star player (Nomar Garciaparra). L.A.'s was Kirk Gibson) and one star pitcher (Pedro Martinez). L.A.'s was Orel Hershiser). With average talent elsewhere, they're going to need a lift the magic. But in this event-balanced year, no one should be discounted.

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Busch +Busch Light" $11.49 30/PK
Absolut $16.99
Molsons Golden and Molsons Light
MILWAUKEE'S BEST $9.99 30 Pk
$8.99 cse. btls.
SAM ADAMS OCTOBER FEST $9.95 12/PK
Vodka 80! EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
Highland Park Single Malt $34.99 750 Liter
Check Out Russell's Indoor Wine Specials!
Petes Octoberfest $17.99 cse. bots.
Foxhorn White Zinfandel $4.99 1.5 liter
Franzia Mt. Wines in 5L Box $6.99
Concha y Toro Wines...everyday $6.99 1.5 liter
Cavit Pinot Grigio $9.99 1.5 liter
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

THE MONKEY BAR GRILL
New York Style scene in Downtown Amherst
A new and exciting place to eat, offering Mediterrainian Cuisine and outdoor patio.
Featuring upscale microbrews
MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL
WEDNESDAY AND THURDSAY DJ FOOZ
FRIDAY AND SATURDAY RETRO TOP 40
SUNDAY SPANISH NIGHT
253-1616

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern
99 Homecoming!
The Tradition Continues
Kegs & Eggs
Saturday Oct. 2
Doors Open at 10:00 am
37 North Pleasant St.
Must be 21 Years of Age Proof of Age Required

Spirit Haus
Specially Beverage Center
MICRO BREW KEGS
Berkshire Brewing All Styles $85.00
Sam Adams Summer Ale $85.00
Bacardi Limon 750 ml. $9.75
Dekuyper Schnapps 1lt. $7.49
(Buttershots, Peachtree, Hotdamn)
Piccini Chianti 2/$11.99
Columbia Crest Semillon-Chardonnay 2/$11.99
338 College St. Rte. 9
1 Mile East of Amherst Center
Keystone Light $10.99 30 pks
Saranac $4.99 6 pk
Michelob/Light $7.99 12 pk btls
Molson Golden/Light $7.29 12 pk $13.99 case
Paper City $5.75 6 pk

Mets appear to have choked again for second straight year

By Johnette Howard
Newsday

NEW YORK - There was no pregame sugarcoating of how they had played themselves to the precipice of falling out of the wild-card race. Give them that much. But if the New York Mets felt like a gaggle of Tom Sawyers, all conning to witness their own funeral Tuesday night, they hid it well before the opener of their three-game series against their arch nemesis, the Atlanta Braves.

But that was before the Braves started the game with a hit batsman and five hits sandwiched around a sacrifice fly. And that was before the division champion Braves - they wouldn't rub it in now, would they? - brazenly called hit-and-run plays for the first three baserunners they had, and executed perfectly every time.

Mercifully, the Mets ended starting pitcher Orel Hershiser's night at one-third of an inning and brought in rookie Octavio Dotel, who promptly sent his second pitch bouncing all the way to the backstop, allowing the Braves fourth run of the first inning to all go home.

This 9-3 humbling was not the way the free-falling team returns home, class-its way out of the grave and justifies all those signs in the stands that read, "We Still Believe." In less than half an inning, a matsodorm silence shrouded Shea Stadium. This was like watching a play on Broadway that closes after the first night.

The Mets stunk. They folded. And now they deserve to hear that they have choked - the crudest slur in sports.

This game wasn't even 20 minutes old and the Mets once-stirring season felt over. Forget those five regular-season games left to play.

"There's no use even watching the out-of-town scoreboard," said Darryl Hamilton, "not when we're playing like crap."

"I can't believe it," Mets Manager Bobby Valentine said.

For the Mets, Tuesday night's game wasn't merely a devastating loss. Stylistically, emotionally and in the standings it all but assured their second straight late-season collapse is now total and complete. The Mets showed nothing to suggest they can run out the table and win all their remaining games. If there was any doubt, the nadir probably came in the bottom of the seventh, when pinch hitter Jorge Toca swung at Tom Glavine's first offering and his bat pinwheeled out of his hands, helicoptered high into the air, then landed with a thud 15 feet beyond third base.

Or at least that was the nadir until the top of the eighth, when ineffectual Mets reliever Dennis Cook had a screaming, stomping meltdown after being pulled from the game for surrendering two hits and a walk. Cook was so incensed about his subsequent ejection by plate umpire Alfonzo Marquez that he stalked in and shouted just inches away from Marquez' face, then bent down and frantically scooped dirt over the outside corner of the plate with both hands. Cook finally had to be restrained by three Mets coaches who sprang from the dugout when no teammates intervened.

Now, barring some out-of-town miracle in the next week - a death-spiral by Houston or Cincinnati that's every bit as desultory as the Mets' swoon has been - baseball folk will be talking for years about these seven miserable days in September, and how these $70 million Mets topped last year's fool because this year's team was better. Deeper. More acquainted with the pressure.

And they still blew it.

Fans sinking a mile low as new stadium problems emerge

By Julie Cart
Los Angeles Times

DENVER - Being a Broncos fan isn't the joy ride that it used to be. Rabid supporters of the two-time defending Super Bowl champions used to take pride in wearing their blue and orange game-day regalia and marching grandly into the home stadium wearing plastic horse heads.

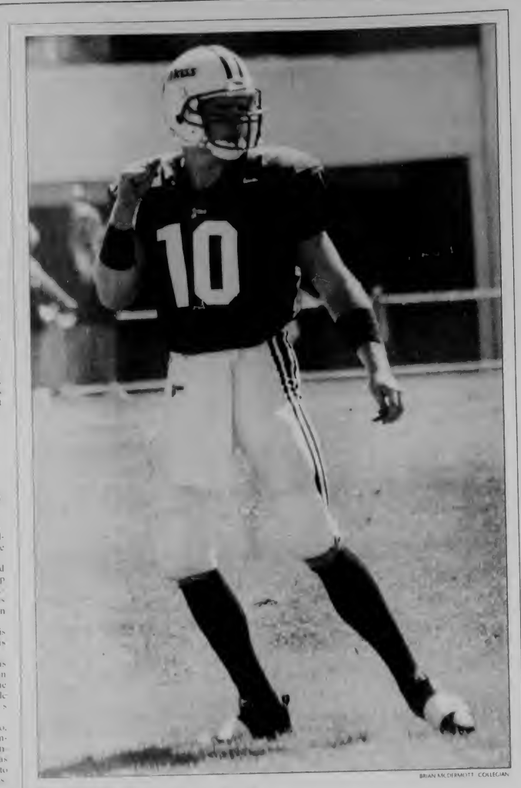
Now - as the team struggles with an 0-3 record and recovers from the retirement of demigod quarterback John Elway - the Broncos are derisively referred to as the Donkeys. Broncomania has been further deflated by another impending and hurtful loss - of Mile High Stadium. The team's beloved but shabby home since the Broncos were formed in 1960.

Mile High will be torn down when a new stadium is completed, in 2001. In most cities, the prospect of a state-of-the-art stadium is a joyous event. But the excitement here has been tempered by a standoff between fiscal policy and tradition. When Mile High Stadium is razed, the famous name will be buried with it. There's more. The Metropolitan Football Stadium District Board - the regional authority charged with planning the $350 million stadium next to Mile High - has let it be known that it will be entertaining offers from corporations seeking naming rights.

Pharmicom from such rights could bring as much as $100 million, experts say. That money would be used to pay off the construction debt for the public/private venture. Tax revenue from a six-county area is financing about 75 percent of the construction cost, and the Broncos pony up the rest.

In truth, the business of slapping corporate names on sports stadiums is so common it stopped being a trend years ago.

The crucial thing to understand with the construction of any arena, is that everything is for sale, everything," said Jeff Borden, associate editor at Crain's Chicago Business. "We are at the point where the tarpaulin that covers the field has logos on it. But you still, with tradition at risk. More power to Denver if it can keep Mile High. I doubt it."

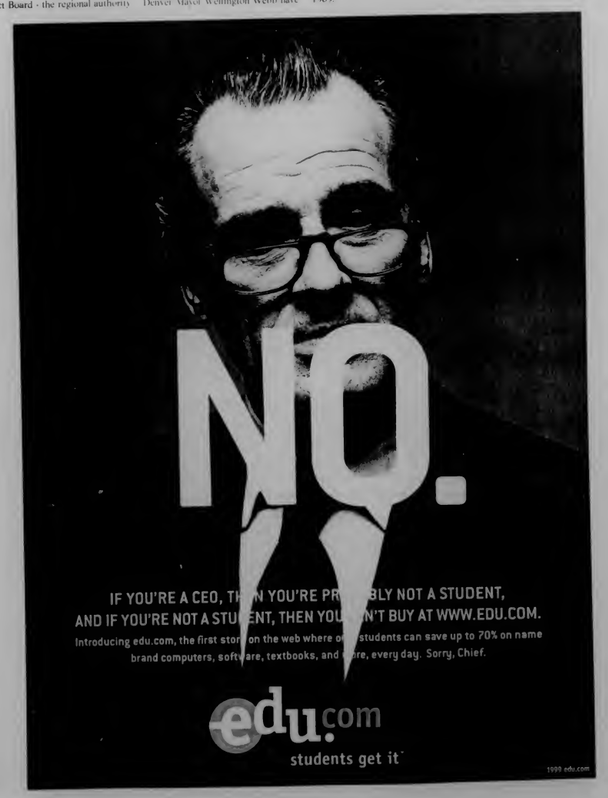


Even though a decision about the stadium's new name is months away, columnists, radio talk-show hosts and Denver Mayor Wellington Webb have weighed in on the issue, mostly decrying the commercialization of the modern world and arguing that the name Mile High should not be for sale.

"They are tilting at windmills," said Marc Ganis, president of Sportscorp Ltd., which arranges stadium financing. "It's a terrific brand that has served Denver well. But the Rubicon has been crossed."

But many fans say the Mile High is synonymous with Denver and is known around the world.

"It's been Mile High Stadium as long as I've been alive," said Dan Rider, 29. "I grew up watching the Broncos and going to games at Mile High Stadium. It's tradition and it's important."



Fans here generally get listened to, for good reason. For two years running downtown Denver has been converted to a dangerous mosh pit as Broncos fans gathered in response to the team's Super Bowl victories. "Rabid" is an oft-used but strictly apt adjective for these fans, many of whom drive from Wyoming, Montana and Kansas to attend games. Mile High Stadium has been sold out for every Broncos game since November 1969.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT - COLLEGIAN

Trying to get back on track

Trickl Bankhead and the Massachusetts football team will host Hofstra this weekend at McGuirk Stadium.

Multiband
25th Annual MUSICAL EXTRAVAGANZA in the Fine Arts Center
Presented by: Department of
Music &
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST 545-2227
Jazz, Percussion, Wind Music & Modern Dance
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1ST
8 PM · FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
Featuring:
Jazz, Wind, Percussion & Marimba Ensembles, Dancers, Vocal Jazz and African-American Music Ensemble & Minuteman Marching Band
Tickets:
$25 Priority Reserve Seats · $18 General Public · $12 UMass & Other College Students, elders & children under 18
Order tickets early. Last year's performance was sold out!
Tickets available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office
(413) 545-2511
Multiband Pops is Co-sponsored by
Advocate 22 Alumni Association WTTT AM 1430 22 WWLP

Join UMass
Women's Ice Hockey
First Practice
October 4th

■ field hockey

continued from page 16

threat.

Crooks took a page from teammate Zowie Tucker's book with 11:47 to play.

Flying aggressively at Harvard's Eliza Dick in mid-circle, and forcing her to shoot wide right. A Robinson steal later, Whiston again drove half the field before being unceremoniously dumped by Crimson back Katie Scott, just to the left of the Harvard goal. Many along the UM sideline cried foul, but it was UMass' Robinson who was warned by the officials and given a green card with 6:58 to go before the half.

The Maroon and White's luck finally ran out at the 6:07 mark, when an errant pass by Jaggassar in front of the UMass goal landed on the stick of Kalil, who buried it unassisted to put Harvard out front.

"There was no reason for them to score the first goal," Millhauer said. "We just made a mistake."

Shaking their heads in disbelief, the Minutewomen regrouped and charged hard at Harvard on their next possession. Northampton native Abbot blew past Ingram and left the ball in a seemingly perfect spot for the streaking Nicole Bardell, but Harvard's Nagle sprawled forward and swept the ball out of bounds. The Crimson's fifth penalty-corner saw another jaw dropping save by Crooks, and Koch again hit the deck after a solid clear. Halftime arrived, and it was clear that the Minutewomen would need to make some serious adjustments if they were to salvage a win.

"It was really a matter of us looking at each other and telling ourselves that we weren't going another game under," Crooks said.

UM's newfound intensity seemed to be an afterthought, however, when the Crimson's second goal found the net less than a minute into the second half. A sloppy cruse from Harvard tri-captain Katie Schoolwerth somehow found Kalil in the far corner, where she dished to a wide open Nagle in front of the UM goal. Nagle's shot just beat Crooks' acrobatic lunge, and it looked as though a win was indeed a Maroon and White fantasy.

"Even after the second goal, we were looking at each other and saying 'no way'," said Millhauer. "It wasn't that we weren't working between the first goal and the second; they just got lucky."

Lucky or not, the Crimson were looking more and more like a team that deserved a national ranking. But an unfortunate turn of events around the 31:45 mark seemed to turn the tide in favor of UMass.

Millhauer had finally succeeded in penetrating through the Harvard midfield when a hard clear by Ingram struck UM's Abbott in the side of the face. After the sophomore forward was helped off the field, Maroon and White midfielder Kristen Schmidt slashed boldly toward the Crimson goal, setting up UM's first penalty corner. Back Anke Bruemmer unloaded a rocket off the corner that would've hit paydirt, but the ball glanced off of a Harvard defender's leg instead. The result was a UM penalty stroke, which Millhauer tucked away easily to cut the Harvard lead in half.

"We've seen a lot of opportunities in the past few games that we could've really stepped up and reacted to, and led off of," Crooks said. "We did that with Chrissy's penalty stroke."

There was certainly no letdown after Millhauer's goal, as Koch flashed some brilliant stickwork at the top of the Harvard circle that led to yet another UM penalty-corner at the 21:03 mark. Crimson keeper Anya Cowan denied Bruemmer's initial attempt, but an infraction led to a second corner less than a minute later, and this time the German native struck gold to lock the game at 2-2. What had seemed like a sinking ship at halftime was suddenly rocketing toward the Promised Land.

"People decided that they were going to be more of a threat when they got in towards the scoring area," Shea said. "That makes a huge difference in our game."

The momentum had shifted violently in UMass' favor, and the Minutewomen weren't satisfied to have simply pulled even with Harvard. A lazy free hit by Crimson midfielder Elizabeth Sarles was immediately snatched up by Robinson, who snaked through the Harvard backfield to set up UM's fifth penalty-corner with 13:23 remaining. Cowan again stunned the attempt by Bruemmer, but Millhauer was in perfect position to fire the rebound in with a vengeance over the sprawled keeper. Harvard was stunned; the Minutewomen were elated.

"To score three goals after being down two is a big deal, especially in our sport," Millhauer said. "The fact is that everybody on the field believed that we could do it."

Harvard made a last ditch effort at notching the equalizer, but a Bruemmer steal and outlet with just under a minute left sealed up the unbelievable win.

"This is a big push for this team right now," Shea said. "They did it with pure hard work and guts. They just weren't going to say they couldn't win this game."

The Maroon and White returns to action this Sunday, against the No.1 Huskies in Storrs, CT.

PAUL BERNARD - COLLEGIAN

UMass field hockey players Lucy Koch, Tamra Geryk and Chrissy Millbauer react after Millbauer's game-winning goal against Harvard yesterday afternoon at Garber Field.

Sox preparing for Oct. in strange ways

By Dave Kindred
The Sporting News

Maybe we'll talk to the Green Monster, the high left field wall at Fenway Park. After 87 years sharing space with Ted Williams, Carl Yastrzemski and now Troy O'Leary, the mighty fence is headed for obsolescence. A new Fenway will be built across the street. They'll leave the Green Monster standing to remind us of what once was. So maybe we'll pay our respects and see what the old fella has to say.

During the '75 World Series, the monster asked Boston columnist Ray Fitzgerald, "Who's pitching for the Reds tomorrow?" When Litz answered, "Billingham," the monster said, "Hmmm."

Or maybe talking to a wall is a silly idea. Better to talk to a superstar, the A.L.'s leading hitter, Red Sox shortstop Nomar Garciaparra. What a season hitting over .340, on his way to 30 home runs with more than 100 RBIs. Besides, we remember him from his teen-age years as a scrawny 150-pounder at Georgia Tech, a kid with the quickest bat in Atlanta since Hank Aaron's.

Garciaparra, 26, now weighs 185, the first thing we notice as he rips batting-practice drives off the Green Monster. He still has the quick bat, only now he moves it with the forearms, wrists and legs of a man who has remade his body for speed, strength and agility.

Under the instruction of trainers specializing in high-performance athletes, Garciaparra committed himself to diet and workout regimens that have helped put him in the A-Rod/Jeter/Nomar debate about baseball's best shortstop.

So we're watching Garciaparra when Boston Globe baseball man Gordon Edes says, "See that? Every time he does that," Garciaparra had dropped a bat on the grass. Every time, the trademark up. He's got a thousand of those things he does, the same was every time. Watch him on the dugout steps tonight. Both feet on each step every time.

Good. We'll talk to Nomar about his sculpted body, his fetishes, the Red Sox's playoff chances, and maybe get a hitter's view of how unhittable Pedro Martinez has been this season. So when batting practice ends, we trot along to catch Garciaparra. It's an hour and a half before the first pitch. But no conversation is possible.

"I've gotta get ready for the game," Garciaparra says.

Professional journalists adjust and improvise. We decide to talk to catcher Jason Varitek, only to be told by a public relations person, "Not now. He's focusing." The P.R. person does a tomahawk slash thing with his hand, signifying Varitek's unwaning focus on the game to start any hour now.

Back down 10 wooden steps chewed to splinters by decades of spikes, through a dim tunnel with water dripping down concrete walls, we go back to the Red Sox dugout where, amazingly, Martinez is doing a one-on-one interview with a man who wants to know every thought Pedro has ever had. Pedro, bless him, answers every question.

So we wait our turn. But when Pedro is done with his autobiography, he has time only to say, "Nomar, he's greater and greater every day. Without Nomar, I do not know where our team would be."

We have had better days. But we watch closely during the game and, it's true, Garciaparra, every inning, puts both feet on each step of the dugout as he enters and leaves.

Then we bump into the sporting author John Feinstein, who recognizes a sad case of self-pity and throws a life preserver our way. He tells of the Jewish Red Sox fan who goes to his rabbi before Rosh Hashanah and says, "Rabbi, I have a problem. I know it's Rosh Hashanah, but it's the Yankees-Red Sox, and Pedro is pitching."

It's not such a problem," the rabbi says. "That's why God invented OCRs." "Causing the Red Sox fan to say, "You mean, I can tape the Rosh Hashanah services?"

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. through Mon. and Thurs. Oct. 1-4 and Oct.7
At 7 and 9:20 (note no show Oct. 5 and 6)
Capturing a Cuban Sound Before It Could Die
BUENA VISTA SOCIAL CLUB
directed by wim wenders
ry cooder ibrahim ferrer ruben gonzalez elades ochoa omara portuondo compay segundo
"EXHILARATING" -Stephen Holden, The New York Times
The documentary features two concerts the group performed, one in Amsterdam, the other last July at Carnegie Hall. The music, in its acoustic beauty and power, jumps off the screen. Mr. Wenders also interviews the musicians in Havana and roams the destroyed elegance of the city.
ACADEMY of MUSIC NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

We Sell
BEER & WINE
on SUNDAYS
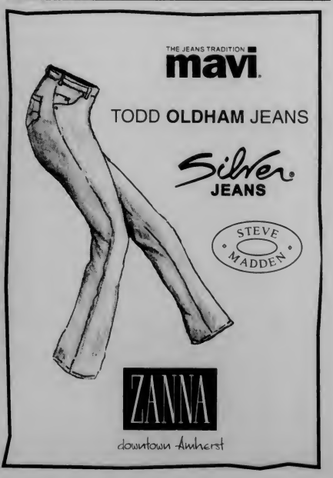
12 NOON - 9 PM
MONTAGUE MINI MART
We accept Visa & Mastercard
367-9551
60 Main St. Montague Center
10 Mins. from Campus



$1 Sushi
Rock and Roll
10:30pm-1am
Fri. and Sat
Nights
Japanese and Korean Restaurant
1 Roundhouse Plaza, Northampton, MA
413-585-1185
Behind City Hall, Off Main St.
What is the Difference?
#1 Sushi
Daily fresh raw fish over sushi rice
Stay Healthy & live longer!
"This one is what everyone falls in love with"
#2 Tatami Room
Cozy and Private, parties available up o 25 people
Lunch Specials $4 and up
10% OFF Dinner w/ Student ID expires 12/31/99
RESERVE FOR KARAOKE
OPEN 7 DAYS
Birthday Party Chefs Free Meal&Picture 4 person table

Advance tickets available at the Mullins Center Box Office and all Ticket Master locations.
To charge by phone call Ticketmaster at (860) 525-4500 or (413) 733-2500.
Purchase online at ticketmaster.com.
For additional info call the Mullins Center at (413) 545-0505
Presented by Jack Utsick Presents and Massconcerts www.massconcerts.com

October 1st through 31st
Continuous Rides Begin at 7 pm
A 30-minute narrated haunted hayride through the Corn Fields of Death, The Dark Forest, plus screams & chills around every corner. Look for the 24-Foot Ghost!
AGES 8 YEARS AND OLDER REQUIRED
—Not suitable for Young Children—
For Information & Directions, call
(413) 584-4550

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking "Best Buddies" to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Cavalier $375 very good condition a bargain! (413) 665-0241

Honda Prelude SI, 1992 Excellent condition, silver 5 spd, power brakes/windows sun roof, AM/FM stereo additional snow tires 96k $8500 (413)665-0218

88 Ford Bronco II Good condition Standard $1500/BO Call Erik at 323-9062

94 Mazda Protege All highway miles very clean 4-door NEW Shox+Struts standard, power everything! A/C 3,000 ODO Caroline 397-0922

SAAB 900 for sale 1991. 135k miles. Good condition. $4500 586-1688

'86 VW Vanagon 4-speed excellent condition. Please call Teresa at 256-0953

VW Jetta 87 5 Spd. GLI, grey, high milage - runs good $2000 call 256-6235 evenings.

CHILDCARE

MUST LOVE BABIES. References needed. Tuesday and Thursday - 12:30 to 3:00. Call Michelle at 256-8632

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

EARN UP TO $1000 By Posting Your Lecture Notes Online (408) [redacted] or [redacted] www.[redacted].com

Revolutionizing the way students study on the web!!

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

The Mullin Center Ice Rink seeks Zamboni drivers experience preferred but not necessary. Will train. Apply in person at the Ice Rink.

$IMMEDIATE$ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY$$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Promotions Company seeks reliable meticulous, student to poster towns and colleges. 10hrs a week. Tues, Weds, Fri. $7.00 a run plus bonus. Car and excellent references. 259-1227

EMPLOYMENT

Preschool Teachers Wanted work study positions and substitute positions available working with children ages 18 months to 6yrs. Cushman-Scott Childrens Center Call Ellen at 549-1167

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Physically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

EMPLOYMENT

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

Get the #%$! out of the water Earth Activists @ Clean Water Action get the best experience, great pay, training and benefits working to stop pollution & save the planet. $7.30 - $9.00/hr. Eve/wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

Relief Staff for apartment program serving adults with mental illness living in the community. Enthusiasm, patience & attention to detail a must. Get training & experience needed to work in human service field. Wages $7.50/hr. Send resume & cover letter to: Service Net att. David Mastroianni 129 King St. Northampton, MA 01060

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: DJ Fooz is now booking for Fall Semester. Date parties, formals, house parties, and school affiliated functions. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR RENT

Lockers for Rent: CHEAP! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Got Furniture? 4 couches, 2 loveseats, 4 easy chairs, 4 beds, 9 dressers, etc Reasonable. Free delivery 586-2221

Two Ani Difranco Tickets for Friday 10/1 3rd row $100 for both 397-0982

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

Bollinger Free Weights. Cast iron plates. Assorted sizes. 30¢/lb. Call Bill, 253-3294 or 545-0442

DP Gympac 1500 Fitness system. 50kg of weight. Padded bench and accessories. Many, many exercises. $75. Call Bill, 545-0442 or 253-3294

GREEK AFFAIRS

Attention University Women!! Informal Recruitment at lot Gamma Upsilon Wed., Thurs., Fri.: 6-8pm 406 N. Pleasant St. (next to Hillel) for more info. Contact Becky at 549-4726

Casco Bay Bartending classes start soon Student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

LOST & FOUND

On Steps MOR2 key ring with 2 keys. If yours call 253-9462 & describe or leave name & number. Found 9/27

Lost Angel: Tall Brunette, last seen dancing at ABC Saturday night wearing long black coat, sleeveless shirt and a large metal bracelet. I was a fool, please call me. 549-4441

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts 350/month + utilities Female preffered Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Know your rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to commuter services, RM 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

ST. JUDE

May The Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved, now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you M.M.

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America. Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$ $10,000 $$$$ CONTACT US today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamirca, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

Looking for a place to advertise??

Look No Further!!

Check out The Collegian Classifieds TODAY!!

Call 545-3500 to place your ad!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, SEPT. 30

Meeting— There will be a Poetry Society meeting at 8 p.m. in Campus Center 804-808.

FRIDAY, OCT. 1

Auditions— The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 6 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

SATURDAY, OCT. 2

Auditions— The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Service— There will be a Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome to attend the Kesher (reform) style service. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

Community Service— Massachusetts Community Water Watch will participate in a project to help clean up the Connecticut River. If you would like to participate in this event, call Christina at 545-0189.

SUNDAY, OCT 3

Class— There will be a class entitled "Catch the Wave: Leadership for the New Millennium" in Campus Center 1009. The class is sponsored by the Residence Life Leadership Development Committee, and will offer house council officer and student leader training. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. and lunch will be served.

Celebration— There will be a Five College Simchat Torah celebration at 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House. Everyone is welcome.

NOTICES

Crafts— The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the Fall Semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS from Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See store for terms and conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — SEPTEMBER 30, 1999

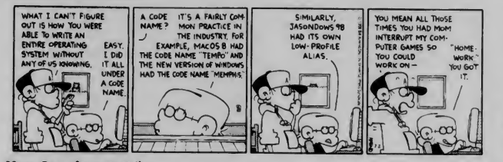
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (C)		Scenic Rail Journeys		Mystery! "Second Sight" (C)			Alchemy-Light	Being Served	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News (C)	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (C)		48 Hours (In Stereo) (C)		News (C)	Late Show (C)
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) (C)		48 Hours (In Stereo) (C)		News	Late Show (C)
WCVB	5	News (C)	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle (C)	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	★★½ "Beverly Hills Cop III" (1994, Drama) Eddie Murphy. (C)				News (C)	Nightline (C)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends (C)	Nanny (C)	Popular (C)		Charmed "Witch Trial" (C)		News		Friends (C)	Nanny (C)
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (C)	Friends (C)	Jesse (C)	Fraser (C)	Stark Raving	ER "Leave It to Weaver" (C)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV (C)	Real TV (R) (C)	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) (C)		Sheista Mc.	Sheista Mc.	News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra (C)	Ent. Tonight	Friends (C)	Jesse (C)	Fraser (C)	Stark Raving	ER "Leave It to Weaver" (C)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons (C)	Fraser (C)	Seinfeld (C)	Friends (C)	World's Wildest Police Videos		Family Guy (C)	Action (C)	News		Friends (C)	Fraser (C)
WWLP	22	News (C)	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! (C)	Friends (C)	Jesse (C)	Fraser (C)	Stark Raving	ER "Leave It to Weaver" (C)		News (C)	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	News (C)	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer (C)		This Old Hse.	DoctorCell	Mystery! "Second Sight" (C)		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose
WGGB	40	News (C)	ABC News	Seinfeld (C)	Fraser (C)	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	★★½ "Beverly Hills Cop III" (1994, Drama) Eddie Murphy. (C)				News (C)	Nightline (C)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy (C)	Judge Judy (C)	Seinfeld (C)	Fraser (C)	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo) (C)		Sheista Mc.		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date	Ricki Lake (C)
WTBS	49	Rosanne (C)	Rosanne (C)	Major League Baseball		Atlanta Braves at New York Mets. (Live) (C)				Wrestling (C)
A&E	41	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Shadow" (C)		Biography: McCarrie/Sosa		L.A. Detectives (R) (C)		Inside Story "Gangsta Girls" (R)		Law & Order	Blue Bamboo (C)
CNN	42	Worldview (C)	Moneyline Newshour (C)		Crossfire (C)	World Today (C)		Larry King Live (C)		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline (C)
COM	43	Saturday Night Live (C)		Daily Show (R)	Sean's Money	★★½ "Earth Girls Are Easy" (1989, Comedy) Geena Davis.				Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Sean's Money
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Serpent		On the Inside "Prison Tech" (R)		Peru's City of Ghosts		Into the Unknown (R)		On the Inside	"Prison Tech" (R)
ESPN	44	Sportscenter		Gamenight		College Football: Maryland at Georgia Tech. (Live) (C)						Sportscenter (C)
LIFE	45	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	★★ "Sworn to Silence" (1987, Drama) Peter Coyote.				"Deadly Relations" (1993, Drama)		Robert Urich, Shelley Fabares.		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Global Groove	Countdown	Beat Suite	Biorhythm	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Head Trip	Celebrity	Tom Green (R)	Say What Kike	Undressed (R)
NICK	46	All That (R)	Cindog	Hey Arnold! (C)	Rugrats (C)	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons (C)	Taxi	M.T. Moore	Happy Days
SCIFI	47	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) (C)		Star Trek (In Stereo) (C)		Sliders "The Weaver Sex" (C)		★★★ "Back to the Future Part III" (1990, Adventure) Michael J. Fox (In Stereo) (C)					"Back to"
TLC	54	Home Again	Home Again	56 Hours "In the Line of Fire"		Natural Disasters (R)		Gunfighters of the West		Gunfighters of the West		Natural Disasters (R)
TNT	48	Due South "Say Amen" (R) (C)		ER "The Storm" (C)		★★ "Needful Things" (1993, Horror) Max von Sydow, Ed Harris.
USA	49	Xena: Warrior Princess (R) (C)		JAG "Cowboys & Cossacks" (C)		★★★★ "L.A. Confidential" (1997, Mystery) Kevin Spacey. (In Stereo) (C)					Random Heart	Inside the NFL (In Stereo) (C)
HBO	50	★★ "Little Nikita" (1988, Drama) Sidney Poitier. (In Stereo) (C)				"High Voltage" (1998) Antonio Sabato Jr. (R) (C)		★★★ "Pale Rider" (1985, Western) Clint Eastwood. (R) (C)					"Executioner"
MAX	51	★★★ "Good Morning, Vietnam" (1987) Robin Williams. (R) (C)				"Sirens" (1999, Drama) Dana Delany, Vondie Curtis-Hall.				★½ "Knock Off" (1998, Action) (In Stereo) (R) (C)			Line's (R) (C)
SHOW	55	★★★ "It Could Happen to You" (1994) Nicolas Cage. (PG) (C)

HSCN Hampshire Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UPN/TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming



Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Welcome to the World² By Ryan O'Donnell

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Get Fuzzy² By Darby Conley

Welcome to the World² By Ryan O'Donnell

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – A collection of ideas that seem unrelated as the day opens may prove to fit together well in a tapestry of creative potential later on.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Now is not the time to shirk responsibility, or to be anything but punctual and well-mannered at meeting or any other social gatherings.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Others will be drawn to you today as a result of an inner strength you display that you do not thoroughly understand. You will shine!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – Teamwork is essential today. Don't refuse an offer of assistance merely because you want to be "on your own." Give and receive help today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – This is a good day to make yourself available for developments which can benefit you either directly or indirectly, personally or professionally.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Today will mark the beginning of one phase and the end of another, though it may be some time before you comprehend this significance.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You won't want to restrict yourself to the usual diet of activities today. However, many options may be just a bit too risky or dangerous for you.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Some of your behavior today is likely to defy comprehension, or even description. You're certainly following your own path at this time.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – This is one of those days when you may feel very much alone, even in the middle of a crowd. You're after something different, that's all!

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Those who know you may recognize a change today that has been long in coming, but is nonetheless dramatic and permanent. Give them time to readjust.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You won't have trouble finding things to do with your time today, as others are expecting much from you. Commit to one or more important projects.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You've been taking the blame for too long now, and it's time you insist that others bear some of the burden of a recent misfortune.

Quote of the Day

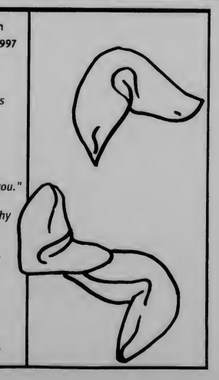
"Go down to the second floor and screw all the way to the top"

–Overhear during dorm renovations

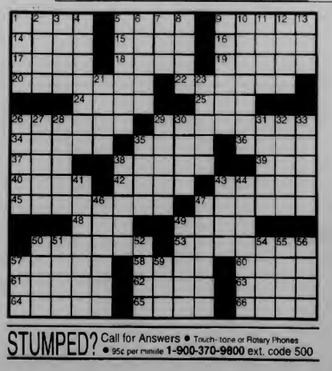
Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

Today I went to a Chinese restaurant.

After my meal the waitress gave me a fortune cookie.



It read:

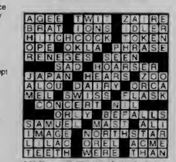


"Throughout your life small mammals will be attracted to you."

That sounded great but why can't the fortunes be more personal like, "Hi Leold, your girlfriend is going to dump you Saturday night."

That would be nice.

I can tell you one thing, I'd be eating a lot more Chinese food.



STUMPED? Call for Answers • Touch-tone or Rotary Phones • 95¢ per minute 1-900-370-9800 ext. code 500

ACROSS

1 Inlet
5 Speaker's place
9 Thrills slangily
14 Harem rooms
15 Neutral color
16 Dark
17 Lubricates
18 — Piper of Hamelin
19 Like an unkempt lawn
20 Massaged
22 Devours, slangily
24 Longings
25 Huge success
26 Clever
29 Part of I.Q.
34 Wants
35 Ermine and mink
36 Distract
37 Prince Valiant's son
38 Silly ones
39 Velvety surface
40 Rivals
42 Emanation
43 Steeple
45 Awkward
47 Force
48 Ms. Gardner
49 Detective Wolfe
50 Plucked
53 Opens, as a flag
57 — space
58 City in Norway
60 Profound
61 Ice
62 Brewer's grain
63 Author Ferber
64 Dithers
65 "What — is new?
66 Type of horse

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

DOWN

1 Chet
2 Norse god
3 Glen
4 Tried
5 Piety (on)
6 Sour substances
7 Anger
8 Soap bubbles
9 Persian Gulf nation
10 Sluggishness
11 Musical symbol
12 Farm babies
13 Shoal's home
21 Morning moisture
23 Elected
26 Foul-up
27 Long-legged bird
28 Extend "Life"
29 Ask about
30 Bear constellation
31 Comic Kovacs
32 Approaches
33 Uses a VCR
35 Quarrel
38 Celebrations
41 Blue-eyed cat
43 Ride the waves
44 More conceited
46 Turns inside-out
47 Signify
49 Makes void
50 Hindu teacher
51 Like — of bricks
52 Volume
54 Perform again
55 Singer Horne
56 Reach across
57 Frequently, to a poet
59 Actor Mineo

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Eggplant-Zucchini Casserole
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegtible Shepard's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Hampshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegtible Shepard's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Eggplant-Zucchini Casserole
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegtible Shepard's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Adam Martignetti
Photo Technitian — Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor — Morgan Tobor
Production Supervisor — Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff — Dan McGuinness-Rossi, Brian McDermott, "Sexcutioner"

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking "Best Buddies" to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Cavalier $375 very good condition a bargain! (413) 665-0241

Honda Prelude SI, 1992 Excellent condition, silver 5 spd, power brakes/windows sun roof, AM/FM stereo additional snow tires 96k $8500 (413)665-0218

88 Ford Bronco II Good condition. Standard. $1500/BO. Call Erik at 323-9062

94 Mazda Protege All highway miles very clean 4-door NEW Shox+Struts standard, power everything! A/C 3,000 ODO Caroline 397-0922

SAAB 900 for sale 1991. 135k miles. Good condition. $4500 586-1688

'86 VW Vanagon 4-speed excellent condition. Please call Teresa at 256-0953

VW Jetta 87 5 Spd. GLI, grey, high milage - runs good $2000 call 256-6235 evenings.

CHILDCARE

MUST LOVE BABIES. References needed. Tuesday and Thursday - 12:30 to 3:00. Call Michelle at 256-8632

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

EARN UP TO $1000 By Posting Your [illegible] Notes [illegible] or Cash [illegible] Revolutionizing the way students study on the web!!

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

The Mullin Center Ice Rink seeks Zamboni drivers experience preferred but not necessary. Will train. Apply in person at the Ice Rink

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Promotions Company seeks reliable meticulous, student to poster towns and colleges. 10hrs a week, Tues, Weds, Fri. $7.00 a run plus bonus. Car and excellent references. 259-1227

Preschool Teachers Wanted work study positions and substitute positions available working with children ages 18 months to 6yrs. Cushman-Scott Childrens Center Call Ellen at 549-1167

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

EMPLOYMENT

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

Get the #%$! out of the water Earth Activists @ Clean Water Action get the best experience, great pay, training and benefits working to stop pollution & save the planet. $7.30 - $9.00/hr. Eve/wknd hours. Call 413-584-9830

Relief Staff for apartment program serving adults with mental illness living in the community. Enthusiasm, patience & attention to detail a must. Get training & experience needed to work in human service field. Wages $7.50/hr. Send resume & cover letter to: Service Net att. David Mastroianni 129 King St. Northampton, MA 01060

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: DJ Fooz is now booking for Fall Semester. Date parties, formals, house parties, and school affiliated functions. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR RENT

Lockers for Rent: CHEAP! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union.

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

Got Furniture? 4 couches, 2 loveseats, 4 easy chairs, 4 beds, 9 dressers, etc Reasonable. Free delivery 586-2221

Two Ani Difranco Tickets for Friday 10/1 3rd row $100 for both 397-0982

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

Bollinger Free Weights. Cast iron plates: Assorted sizes. 30e/lb. Call Bill, 253-3294 or 545-0442

DP Gympac 1500 Fitness system. 50kg of weight. Padded bench and accessories. Many, many exercises. $75. Call Bill, 545-0442 or 253-3294

GREEK AFFAIRS

Attention University Women!! Informal Recruitment at lot Gamma Upsilon Wed., Thurs., Fri.: 6-8pm 406 N. Pleasant St. (next to Hillel) for more info. Contact Becky at 549-4726

Casco Bay Bartending classes start soon Student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

LOST & FOUND

On Steps MOR2 key ring with 2 keys. If yours call 253-9462 & describe or leave name & number. Found 9/27

Lost Angel: Tall Brunette, last seen dancing at ABC Saturday night wearing long black coat, sleeveless shirt and a large metal bracelet. I was a fool, please call me. 549-4441

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts 350/month + utilities Female preffered Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Know your rights Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to commuter services, RM 428 Student Union or Call 545-0865

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

ST. JUDE

May The Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored, glorified, loved and preserved, now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you M.M.

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$ $10,000 $$$$ CONTACT US today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak '2000' hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

Looking for a place to advertise??

Look No Further!!

Check out The Collegian Classifieds TODAY!!

Call 545-3500 to place your ad!!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, SEPT. 30

Meeting – There will be a Poetry Society meeting at 8 p.m. in Campus Center 804-808

FRIDAY, OCT. 1

Auditions – The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 6 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Service – There will be a Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome to attend the Kesher (reform) style service. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, OCT. 2

Auditions – The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Celebration – There will be a Five-College Simchat Torah celebration at 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House. Everyone is welcome.

Community Service – Massachusetts Community Water Watch will participate in a project to help clean up the Connecticut River. If you would like to participate in this event, call Christina at 545-0199.

SUNDAY, OCT 3

Class – There will be a class entitled "Catch the Wave: Leadership for the New Millennium" in Campus Center 1009. The class is sponsored by the Residence Life Leadership Development Committee, and will offer house council officer and student leader training. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. and lunch will be served.

NOTICES

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the Fall Semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

THURSDAY EVENING C - Campus SEPTEMBER 30, 1999

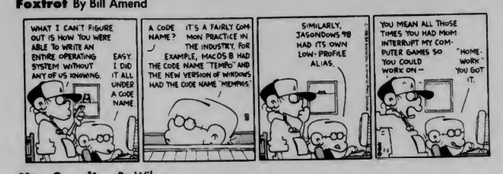
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scenic Rail Journeys		Mystery! "Second Sight"			Alchemy-Light	Being Served	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight		Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	48 Hours (In Stereo)	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight			Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)	48 Hours (In Stereo)	News	Nightline
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle			Popular		Charmed "Witch Trial"		News	Tonight Show
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny			Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Leave It to Weaver"
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!			WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)		Frasier	Sharla Mc.	News	Caroline's	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV			Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Leave It to Weaver"		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight			World's Wildest Police Videos		Family Guy	Action			Friends	Fraser
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends			Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Leave It to Weaver"		News	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!			This Old Hse.	DoctorCall	Mystery! "Second Sight"		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Charlie Rose
WGBY	6	World News	Newshour	Newshour With Jim Lehrer				It's "Beverly Hills Cop III" (1994, Drama) Eddie Murphy				News	Nightline
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier			Whose Line?	Whose Line?	It's "Beverly Hills Cop III" (1994, Drama) Eddie Murphy		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier			WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)		Sharla Mc.		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)
WTBS	49	Rosanne	Rosanne	Major League Baseball: Atlanta Braves at New York Mets. (Live)								Wrestling
AAE	21	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Shadow"		Biography: McQwire/Sosa		L.A. Detectives (R)				Inside Story: Gangsta Girls (R)	Law & Order "Blue Bamboo"
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live				Newsstand	Sports
COM	26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	It's "Earth Girls Are Easy" (1989, Comedy) Geena Davis,				Saturday Night Live		Daily Show	Moneyline
DISC		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Serpent		On the Inside "Prison Tech" (R)		Peru's City of Ghosts		Into the Unknown (R)		On the Inside "Prison Tech" (R)	Stein's Money
ESPN		Sportscenter		Gamecraft		College Football: Maryland at Georgia Tech. (Live)						Sportscenter	Prison Tech" (R)
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	ire: "Sworn to Silence" (1987, Drama) Peter Coyote,				"Deadly Relations" (1993, Drama) Robert Urich, Shelley Fabares,				New Attitudes	Sportscenter
MTV		Global Groove	Countdown	Beat Suite	Biorhythm	TRL (R) (In Stereo)			Head Trip	Celebrity	Tom Green (R)	Say What Kiss	Golden Girls
NICK		All That (R)	Cardog	Hey Arnold! (R)	Rugrats	Thomberrys		Sliders "The Weaker Sex" (R)	Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Taxi	We'll Move	Undressed
SCIFI		Quantum Leap (In Stereo)		Star Trek (In Stereo)		Natural Disasters (R)				Gunfighters of the West		Gunfighters of the West	Natural Disasters
TLC		Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours "In the Line of Fire"		ire: "Needful Things" (1993, Horror) Max von Sydow, Ed Harris,
TNT		Due South "Sey Amen" (R)		ER "The Storm"		Walker, Texas Ranger
USA		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		It's "Lethal Weapon" (1998, Drama) Sidney Poitier, (In Stereo) PG				It's "L.A. Confidential" (1997, Mystery) Kevin Spacey, (In Stereo)				Random Heart (In Stereo)	Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
HBO		ire: "Life Aquatic" (1998, Drama) Sidney Poitier, (In Stereo) PG				"High Voltage" (1998, Action) George Takei,						ire: "Pure Risk" (1998, Action) Dan Eastwood,	"Speculator"
MAX		"Good Morning, Vietnam" (1987) Robin Williams,				"Shiloh" (1998, Drama) Dana Delany, Voncile Curtis-Hall							"Lino's (R)
SHOW		"I Could Happen to You" (1994) Nicolas Cage,

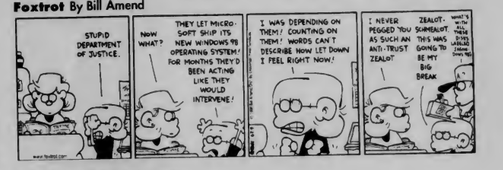
2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	20	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	21	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	22	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	23	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	24	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	25	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	26	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WYOH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Drabble By Kevin Fagan



Dilbert By Scott Adams

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Welcome to the World² By Ryan O'Donnell

Welcome to the World² By Ryan O'Donnell

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – A collection of ideas that seem unrelated as the day opens may prove to fit together well in a tapestry of creative potential later on.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Now is not the time to shirk responsibility or to be anything but punctual and well-mannered at meeting or any other social gatherings.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Others will be drawn to you today as a result of an inner strength you display that you do not thoroughly understand. You will shine!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – Teamwork is essential today. Don't refuse an offer of assistance merely because you want to be "on your own." Give and receive help today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – This is a good day to make yourself available for developments which can benefit you either directly or indirectly, personally or professionally.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Today will mark the beginning of one phase and the end of another, though it may be some time before you comprehend this significance.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You won't want to restrict yourself to the usual diet of activities today. However, many options may be just a bit too risky or dangerous for you.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Some of your behavior today is likely to defy comprehension, or even description. You're certainly following your own path at this time.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – This is one of those days when you may feel very much alone, even in the middle of a crowd. You're after something different, that's all!

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Those who know you may recognize a change today that has been long in coming, but is nonetheless dramatic and permanent. Give them time to readjust.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You won't have trouble finding things to do with your time today, as others are expecting much from you. Commit to one or more important projects.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You've been taking the blame for too long now, and it's time you insist that others bear some of the burden of a recent misfortune.

Quote of the Day

"Go down to the second floor and screw all the way to the top"

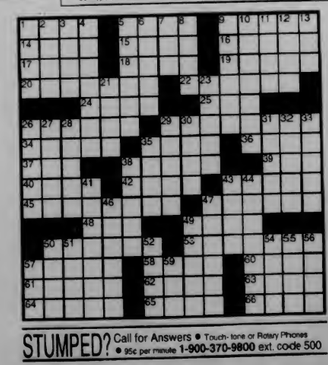
–Overhear during dorm renovations

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

Today I went to a Chinese restaurant.

After my meal the waitress gave me a fortune cookie.

It read:



"Throughout your life small mammals will be attracted to you."

That sounded great but why can't the fortunes be more personal like, " Hi Leold, your girlfriend is going to dump you Saturday night."

That would be nice.

I can tell you one thing, I'd be eating a lot more Chinese food.

ACROSS

1 User
5 Speaker's place
9 Thrills, slangily
14 Harem rooms
15 Neutral color
16 Dark
17 Lubricates
18 — Piper of Hamelin
19 Like an unkempt lawn
20 Massaged
22 Devours, slangily
24 Longings
25 Huge success
26 Clever
29 Part of I.Q.
34 Wants
35 Ermine and mink
36 District
37 Prince Valiant's son
38 Silly ones
39 Velvety surface
40 Reveals
42 Emanation
43 Steeple
45 Awkward
47 Force
48 Mr. Gardner
49 Detective Wolfe
50 Pluckiest
53 Oceans as a flag
57 — space
58 City in Norway
60 Pictured
61 Ice
62 Brewer's grain
63 Author Ferber
64 Dithers
65 "What — is new?"
66 Type of horse

DOWN

1 Chef
2 Norse god
3 Glen
4 Tried
5 Rely (on)
6 Sour substances
7 Anger
8 Soap bubbles
9 Persian Gulf nation
10 Sluggishness
11 Musical symbol
12 Farm babies
13 Shoal's home
21 Morning moistures
23 Elected
26 Foul-up
27 Long-legged bird
28 Extend "Life" anew
29 Ask about
30 Bear constellation
31 Comic Kovacs
32 Approaches
33 Uses a VCR
35 Quarrel
36 Celebrations
41 Blue-eyed cat
43 Ride the waves
44 More conceited
46 Turns inside-out
47 Signify
49 Makes void
50 Hindu teacher
51 Like — of bricks
52 Volume
54 Perform again
55 Singer Horne
56 Reach across
57 Frequently, to a poet
59 Actor Mineo

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

AGEE TWIT ZARA
BRAT ICING ONUS
HITCHCOCK JOKEN
OPE OKRA PHRASE
RENEGADES BERG
BAD HOAPSER
JAPAN HEARS ZOO
AMUSE AGING NICU
TESS SWISS FLESH
CONCERT OUR SIDE GRAPALS
SAMUEL MASH ALI
IMAGE NORTHSTAR
LOSER SHES ACME
LEEHM WEARS TEAN

© 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Eggplant-Zucchini Casserole
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegtible Shepard's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Hampshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegtible Shepard's Pie

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Tavern Batter Fish
Eggplant-Zucchini Casserole
Crilled Cheese Sadwich on Branola Bread

DINNER
Roast Pork Loin Dinner
Chicken Pot Pie
Vegtible Shepard's Pie
Louisiana Beans & Rice

Night Editor Adam Martignetti
Photo Technitian Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor Morgan Tober
Production Supervisor Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff Dan McGuinness-Rossi, Brian McDermott

STUMPED? Call for Answers • Touch-tone or Rotary Phones • 95¢ per minute 1-900-370-9800 ext. code 500

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Thursday, September 30, 1999

Hard work and dedication pays off for Kurowski

Soft-spoken forward moves past Myers atop the Minutewomen charts

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

If actions do speak louder than words, then it's pretty understandable why Emma Kurowski is soft-spoken on the soccer field.

After all, why do you need to talk trash when you are the career-scoring leader in the history of the Massachusetts women's soccer program?

"Emma is a woman of few words, but many goals," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said.

From the first day that she stepped onto the pitch in Amherst, Kurowski has been one of the primary offensive threats for the Minutewomen. No sooner had she stepped into the UMass lineup as a freshman in 1996, the Sutton native was suddenly looked upon to fill the scoring void that was left by a career and season-ending knee injury to then-senior Rebecca Myers.

Ironically, three years [and many goals] later, Kurowski and Myers crossed paths once again, this time on the UMass career-scoring chart. Although Kurowski entered this season only nine points behind Myers, she finally broke the mark last Friday against Connecticut. With two goals against the Huskies, the senior forward moved ahead of Myers for career marks in both points and goals.

"In 1996, on this field [Lower Boyden practice fields], I turned to my then assistant coach and said that if Emma stays healthy, then she's going to break the record before she finishes," Rudy said. "But the reality is that she really hasn't been healthy, and she still broke it halfway into her senior season."

Despite the fact that nagging injuries have plagued the two-time All-Atlantic 10 selection throughout her career, Kurowski was a bit oblivious to her chances of setting a new milestone coming into the season.

"I really didn't think about it and I didn't even know how close I was until they sent an Up To The Minutewomen [a newsletter sent out by the team] to my house. Then my Mom told me," Kurowski said. "I'm really excited [that I broke it], especially considering all the great players who were here before me and all the teams that went to the Final Four. Just to know that I'm on a list with them is awesome."

At the moment, Kurowski has tallied 41 goals and 26 assists in her career, good for 108 points. But it's more than just her ability to finish that separates her from the bunch. Tack on her versatility and knack for coming through in the clutch, and that what makes this Minutewoman an All-America candidate.

JORMA KANSANEN, SPECIAL TO THE COLLEGIAN

Emma Kurowski, the reigning Atlantic 10 player of the week, scored four goals over the weekend to move into first place on the career-scoring chart at UMass.

"She's a natural goal scorer who has a full repertoire of finishing skills," Rudy said. "In a way, she's like former West German great Ger Mueller. I was fortunate enough to be coached by his former coach Detmer Kramer, who said that outside the penalty area, Mueller was an average to poor player. But inside the penalty area, he's the best in the world."

"Although it doesn't exactly apply to Emma, there is a similarity…Emma is pretty damn good outside the box, too," added Rudy.

Nevertheless, scoring goals is what Kurowski is known for, and has been since day one. Some would see that as a big burden, but to this UMass star, it's all part of the game.

"You've got to score to win. That's what I try to do, that's what my job is, and that's why coach brought me here," she said. "Sometimes the rest of the team will look for me to score the big goals, but I don't feel any pressure."

This year goals have come early and often for the creative forward. She has eight goals through the first six games of the season, and appears primed and ready to add on to her new records.

"I'm getting to play forward again, so that certainly makes it easier to score," Kurowski said. "I played in the midfield the past two years, and there my role was passing more and setting things up. This year, I'm more of the go-to-person, someone who the team is looking to score more."

Temple and St. Joseph's will now have the task of trying to keep Kurowski from finding the back of the net this weekend. Not only will the Owls and Hawks have to contest with a striker who is on a roll, but also a UMass team that has a rejuvenated outlook after a solid weekend.

"We've never had two weeks off in the middle of the season since I've been here, and it worked to our advantage," Kurowski said. "It gave some people who were injured a chance to rest, and gave the team time to regroup. We're excited to get back out there, though."

On both a team and individual level, there still is some unfinished business that this Fine Arts major wants to take care of before her playing days at UMass are over.

"To go undefeated in the A-10 would be awesome, then to win the A-10 tournament because it's here at UMass," Kurowski said. "Individually, I just want to continue playing well and scoring so that the team wins."

Field hockey shocks No.19 Harvard, 3-2, behind shining senior

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Lesson of the day: If you're trying to knock out the Minutewomen, you'd better make sure they stay down for the count.

The Massachusetts field hockey team, seemingly on the ropes after spotting Harvard a two-goal lead, roared back for a 3-2 victory yesterday at Richard F. Garber field. The Minutewomen (3-5) employed an aggressive second half defense and some stellar stickwork from senior Chrissy Millbauer (2 goals) to stun the visiting Crimson.

"We've known this whole week that we can beat this team," Millbauer said. "I don't think anyone doubted it."

Harvard (5-2) may have indeed doubted it, having come into the contest with the No.19 ranking in the nation and only one loss (to the top-ranked Huskies of Connecticut.) And after the Maroon and White's horrendous showing in the first half, many among the home crowd may have doubted it, too.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Chrissy Millbauer

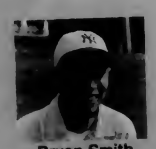
COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Michelle Crooks

UMass came out from the opening whistle with a noticeable lack of intensity, allowing the Harvard midfielders to eat up a lot of ground en route to the Crimson's first penalty-corner less than four minutes into the game. UM back Kerry Ann Iaggassar appeared to make a spectacular play in swatting away the ensuing shot, but the officials ruled that the Trinidad and Tobago native had jumped out early. Harvard got another chance, but this time the shot by midfielder Kalen Ingram sailed wide right.

Ingram would make immediate amends for the miss, stealing the ball cleanly on UM's next possession. The Ontario native paid dearly, however, as UM midfielder Lucy Koch sent her sprawling to the turf after retaking the ball. Koch then dished to freshman Erika Whiston, who used her blazing speed to beat no less than four Crimson defenders on her way toward the Harvard goal.

Out of nowhere came Crimson forward Dominique Kalil, snatching the ball away from Whiston and dribbling through a sea of Minutewomen, before clearing down the right sideline. UM coach Patty Shea recognized a lack of penetration by her forwards, and switched Millbauer up from her usual midfield spot at the 25:58 mark.



"In the first half, Harvard was just outplaying us," Shea said. "They took it to us, going after every ball."

Harvard wasted a second penalty corner with just over 22 minutes in the half, as the Crimson were unable to make a clean transfer at the top of the circle and get off a shot. Iaggassar again provided the critical clear, but on their next two possessions the Minutewomen came up empty after dumping the ball a little too aggressively into the Crimson end.

"We had a couple of balls go over the endline, and there's no excuse for that," Millbauer said. "We should've gotten to those balls and gotten some shots on goal. I don't know if we even got into the circle in the first half."

The UM defense, meanwhile, was trying to bend, but not break under relentless Harvard pressure. Co-captain Michelle Crooks, in her first start of the season between the pipes, made a spectacular diving save on Harvard's third penalty corner attempt at the 15:40 mark. Harvard midfielder Maisa Badawy corralled the ensuing loose ball and had the UM goal in her sights, but UMass' Lindsay Abbot came up with a breathtaking steal just outside of the UM circle and cleared to teammate Patty Robinson to kill off the

Turn to FIELD HOCKEY, page 13

NFL Week Three	Las Vegas Spread	 Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief	 Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor	 Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor	 Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor	 Adam White Sports Associate
Last Week (Overall)		7-7 (17-25)	7-7 (18-24)	9-5 (20-22)	6-8 (18-24)	6-8 (17-25)
New England @ Cleveland	N.E. by 12	New England	New England	New England	New England	New England
Baltimore @ Atlanta	Atlanta by 1	Baltimore	Baltimore	Baltimore	Baltimore	Atlanta
Arizona @ Dallas	Dallas by 7	Dallas	Arizona	Dallas	Arizona	Dallas
NY Jets @ Denver	Denver by 5 1/2	Denver	NYJ	NYJ	Denver	Denver
Jacksonville @ Pittsburgh	Jacksonville by 3	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville
Tampa Bay @ Minnesota	Minnesota by 7	Tampa Bay	Minnesota	Tampa Bay	Minnesota	Minnesota
New Orleans @ Chicago	New Orleans by 1	New Orleans	New Orleans	New Orleans	Chicago	Chicago
Philadelphia @ NY Giants	NYG by 9 1/2	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	NYG	NYG	Philadelphia
St. Louis @ Cincinnati	St. Louis by 3 1/2	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis	St. Louis
Kansas City @ San Diego	San Diego by 1	Kansas City	San Diego	Kansas City	San Diego	San Diego
Tennessee @ San Francisco	San Fran by 2 1/2	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee	San Francisco
Oakland @ Seattle	Seattle by 3 1/2	Seattle	Oakland	Seattle	Seattle	Oakland
Carolina @ Washington	Washington by 8 1/2	Carolina	Washington	Washington	Washington	Carolina
Buffalo @ Miami	Miami by 4 1/2	Miami	Buffalo	Miami	Miami	Atlanta

OCTOBER

1999

The Massachusetts
Daily Collegian
New England's largest college daily

Friday, October 1, 1999

Volume CVI Issue 11

Fence to go down today

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

The unsightly library fence will finally fall today at 12:30 pm.

The ceremonial whacking of the W.E.B. DuBois library chain-link fence will take place today at 12:30 p.m. The celebration will honor the staff of Facilities Planning and the contributors who have helped make it possible to replace the old fence with a new iron fence and benches.

The proposed design for the new fence will improve the use of the library plaza and begin to make the library an area of excellence for the campus community, according to a press release.

The fence design also simplifies pedestrian access to the library. On the eastern side of the building, the fence opens up an additional stairway to the plaza level and relieves the need for backtracking to reach the library entrance.

In addition, a new sidewall on the northwest corner of the plaza creates a more direct path to the entrance of the library. By redirecting the heavy pedestrian and bicycle traffic more to the east, this plan also protects the large oak tree near this corner of the plaza from additional damage.

The minimum existing distance from the building is maintained to maximize pedestrian safety along the fence, and protect pedestrians from the potential danger of brick chips falling from the façade.

The new fence will be completed in mid-October. The library is working to raise $75,000 to fund the new fence. Donations are being accepted at the main floor of the library.

-Christy Barbale

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

The land down under

Truly a cross-section of our landscape, the library's courtyard is a fantastic place to hide.

Apple festival: fun by the bushel

By Erica Mattison
Collegian Correspondent

This Saturday, the Amherst Family Center will hold its 13th Annual Apple Harvest and Crafts Festival on the Amherst Town Common. From 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., the free festival will fill the Common with over 100 crafters selling their work, homemade food, live music, games for children and raffle prizes from places like EMS and the Lord Jeffery Inn.

"It's a traditional New England festival," said Leigh Schroeder Salvage, the 1999 Festival Publicity Chair and parent of two young children. The main draws for college students are likely to be the modern jazz group Cosmic Fly at 3 p.m. and the assortment of winter clothing. "It's a great place for people to get shopping done for the winter," Schroeder said.

Vendor Chairperson Suzanne LoManto commented that there are "lots of things for under $10 [as well as] really funky jewelry, stuff for the dorm like soaps and luxury relaxation items to relax and soothe after a hard day of studying."

The center, a program of the Hampshire Community Action Commission, is a non-profit organization, which alms to provide services to everyone. Consequently, the events are free or very affordable. This festival raises

Turn to FESTIVAL page 3

Convocation awards ten medals

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts began celebrations for Homecoming yesterday with the Homecoming Festival Convocation, in which ten distinguished faculty and alumni were awarded the highest honor offered by the University. The Chancellor's Medals are awarded to recognize the accomplishments and exemplary service of individuals, who include a recipient from each of the nine schools and colleges.

Chancellor David K. Scott opened the event with an encouraging welcome, citing that the University has been ranked as the tenth-best public national university.

"Let us rejoice. We have a great deal to rejoice about as we launch off the Homecoming Festival with this convocation," Scott said.

The ceremony honored both the individual nominees and the strong academic tradition of the entire University.

The presentation of the 1999 Chancellor's Medal Recipients followed Abramson's address allowing the remaining nine recipients a chance to be spotlighted.

Anne Bryant was first to be honored during yesterday's ceremony. Bryant, a doctor of education, has committed her life to furthering education and is actively involved in various organizations. She has been previously awarded by the University for outstanding contributions to the field of education and has been the recipient of several honorary doctoral degrees.

James M. Douglas, a member of the National Academy of Engineering dedicated 30 years to teaching Chemical Engineering at UMass before retiring in May 1998. Throughout his time at the University, he served as an administrator, scholar and teacher.

From the College of Humanities and Fine Arts, Judith Ann Barter was honored. She completed her doctorate in Cultural and Social History at UMass in 1991 and has continued to share her passion for art history with her students.

A graduate of UMass in 1957, Melvin Howard serves as the Chair of the Commonwealth College Alumni Advisory Board. He was honored yesterday in part because of his ideas and insight that have helped to create the new college and successfully integrate it into the University.

Paul J. McDonald, an award recipient from the Isenberg School of Management, has served as Chairman of the Business Advisory Council for the past six years.

Award recipient, Raphael P. D'Alonzo from the College of Natural Sciences and Mathematics School of Public Health and Health Sciences has helped identify funding for projects and worthy research topics. Since 1990 he has been involved in securing nearly $2 million in grants, contracts and gifts for the University.

From the School of Nursing, Melanie C. Dreher was awarded. As Dean of the School of Nursing, she oversaw much growth and her leadership aided in the creation of the Commonwealth's first publicly supported doctoral program in nursing.

The award recipient for the College of Social and Behavioral Sciences was Bruce Friend. He is an active part of the UMass Chancellor's Council, and has worked in accordance with MTV Networks and other programs in order to expand the youth education.

John M. Maki, also an At-Large award recipient, is professor emeritus of Political Science. Maki joined UMass as Chair of the Asian Studies Program. Until his retirement, he served as Vice Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, among other offices.

Gandhi's birthday to be celebrated tomorrow

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Mohandas K. Gandhi was a driving force in the early stages of the non-violent pacifistic movement. Gandhi viewed non-violence as the way toward world peace. "If we remain non-violent, hatred will die as everything does, from disuse," he said.

Traprock Peace Center and Students Exploring Peace and Action (SEPAAC) stay true to the ideals of Gandhi. Tomorrow the organization will be celebrating the 130th birthday of the famous advocate of non-violence. They will be holding a celebration and conference entitled "A Conspiracy of Hope" at Converse Hall at Amherst College to spread the ideals of Gandhi. The event will begin at 1 p.m. with introductory remarks from Sanat Majumder, author and former Assistant Professor at Smith College. Majumder, a lifelong follower of the teachings of Gandhi, will touch on the history of the non-violent movement as well as speak about his own experiences with repression and discrimination in countries such as South Africa and India.

The next speaker on the agenda is 80 year-old non-violent activist Frances Crowe. Her lecture, entitled "Non-violent Activism Today" will mainly deal with how to incorporate non-violent activism into daily life. One of the major topics will be an increased action towards weapons manufacturers like the company Raytheon.

Also planned for the day is a program about the Y2K problems and the necessity for building a more simple and sustainable lifestyle. Since the abolition of nuclear weapons was a major issue that Gandhi felt strongly about, a lecture from Amherst College organizer Seth Levin about non-violence and nuclear abolition is also included on the agenda.

Finally, there will be a lecture by Rick MacDowell regarding the effects of both U.N. and U.S. sanctions against Iraq. He will also address the training

Turn to Ghandi page 2

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

A moment of Zen

Artist Thomas Matsuda's installation "Searching for the Buddha in the Mountains" is a quick getaway from the stresses of college life.

Students to clean Connecticut River

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

The first-ever Source to the Sea Cleanup will be held this Saturday, bringing together 56 groups of individuals to clean up the Connecticut River. The groups are scattered throughout New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

University of Massachusetts students will be doing their part, working to clean up a section of the Connecticut in Northampton. Organized by Christina Maginnis, an AmeriCorps member who is serving her year with the Massachusetts Community Water Watch. She works with the Massachusetts Student Alliance and MASSPIRG.

UMass students will work on Northampton Meadows, which is near the Old Mill River. It is the first time that anyone has worked to clean up the area.

"It's disgusting: there are tires, washing machines, stoves, and windowpanes," Maginnis said. "It's gross and it needs to get cleaned up, and to be honest I'm surprised that Northampton – good, suburban Northampton – would have a site that is potentially polluting."

Peggy McDonough, Outreach Coordinator for the Connecticut River Watershed Council, agreed, saying that including all of the other things that are found in the river, cars have been found. "Entire cars," McDonough said, adding, "they can polute the water so much with all of their paints and hard metals."

Northampton's Department of Public Works has offered to take care of the trash gathered on Saturday, and while Maginnis would like to see what is pulled from the area around the river recycled, she acknowledged that it would depend on what the DPW would be willing to do.

"We're doing our best to get things cleaned up, and we want the water to be cleaned up so it won't be polluted," Maginnis said. "We want to take the tires to a tire processing/recycling center, and we want to recycle what we find, but that all depends."

Maginnis said that there are about 15 different cleanup sites in Massachusetts alone.

"There are some areas of the Connecticut where you don't really want to swim, and to be honest," Maginnis said, "it isn't really all that accessible anyway. There are fences or steep concrete slopes that prevent anyone from getting close to the water."

Volunteers from UMass include members of the group S.H.A.R.E. (Students Helping Area Reach-out Efforts) and some groups from Residence Life.

McDonough said that the gloves, and other supplies, were being distributed from a central location. She said cleanup efforts like this one really focus on the issue of pollution.

Coast Guard cracks down on drug runners

By Roberto Suro
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – Over the past year, the U.S. Coast Guard has confiscated a record 56 tons of cocaine as it struggles against the latest trick in the smuggling trade, an armada of small, high-powered vessels that race across the Caribbean on a daily basis, officials announced yesterday.

The new contraband carriers, called "Go-Fast" boats by the Coast Guard, now account for 85 percent of all the illicit maritime cocaine traffic – about 400 tons a year – into the United States, according to government intelligence estimates. Long, thin and low to the water, the boats can manage 40 to 50 knots, twice the top speed of a typical Coast Guard cutter.

"About the only way we ever caught a Go-Fast was if they blew an

Turn to COAST GUARD page 2

EXTENDED FORECAST

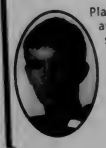
Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 67 LOW: 44	HIGH: 65 LOW: 44	HIGH: 64 LOW: 42

ARTS

No movies for you!

The Hampshire Mall Theaters will not open until next fall. Find out what students think about the situation inside.

The fashion impaired



Jiggle the Handle, a creatively dressed ensemble, will appear tonight with UM's Ruby Dune at Pearl Street Night Club in Northampton.

B1

SPORTS

Putting the "foot" in football

Placekicker Jason Cherry and the UMass football squad will try to play cruel hosts to Hofstra tomorrow at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

C1

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Bob Dobbs • Photos by Rick Stedman

What do you think about the Hampshire Mall Theater not opening until next fall?

"From an economical standpoint, it makes no sense whatsoever."

Geoffrey Metcalf
Junior
Economics

"I think that it's really bad. It's a pain to go all the way to Northampton, and the other one is very bad. When the new one opens, it will be expensive. It should have been left the way it was."

Lytta Dorsey
Sophomore
Economics

"I am disappointed. I want to see good movies for a cheap price."

Tim Rehberg
Sophomore
Pre-Nursing

"It doesn't affect me because I didn't go that much, but it's a cheap thing for students to do on weekends."

Annie Sicherman
Sophomore
Undeclared

"There are only four movies we can see. Blockbuster's going to do more business."

Mike Holzmiller
Junior
School of Management

■ ghandi

continued from page

of Central and South American soldiers in assassination techniques and will discuss military repression.

The conference will then convene to the Unitarian Society of Amherst for a dinner and celebration. The group will hear poetry expressing Gandhi's philosophy and experience classical Indian music and dance presented by Arnab Chakravarti, and Rashna and Namrita Singh.

The suggested donation for attendees to the conference is about $5-10 dollars. Free passes to the celebration will be offered to any student community volunteers frequently giving time to aid causes that regard either peace or social justice issues.

Although Gandhi is no longer alive, his word lives on for many area students to emulate. In his words, "In the empire of non-violence every true thought counts, every true voice has its full value."

Corrections

Several Registered Student Organizations were accidentally left off the list that ran in the Sept. 29 issue. Navigators, Zoo Disc Frisbee, Lambda Epsilon, Lambda and Lambda Pi Chi were not included.

In the article "Homecoming offers alumni good times," which ran in the Sept. 30 issue, dates for Homecoming festivities were incorrectly listed. The Big Lunch and Multibands are taking place today, Oct. 1, and Homecoming Park is taking place tomorrow, Oct. 2.

The Collegian regrets the errors.

Amazon.com branches out to products besides books

By Karen Kaplan and Jonathon Gaw
Los Angeles Times

Amazon.com, the biggest retailer on the Internet, said Wednesday it is aiming to get even bigger by opening an online mall to sell merchandise ranging from auto parts to buffalo steaks.

But the company's plan to let thousands of other merchants hang shingles on its site risks tarnishing its hard-

Turn to AMAZON, page 3

■ coast guard

continued from page 1

engine, but otherwise they could just wave goodbye at us and take off," said a Coast Guard officer who asked not to be identified.

In recent months, however, the Coast Guard has used more aggressive tactics, such as sending helicopters with sharpshooters to fire high-caliber bullets at the engines of fleeing vessels. The result, officials said, has been four seizures totaling 6,640 pounds of cocaine and marijuana.

Those new operations, along with several large seizures earlier in the year that stemmed from an intelligence breakthrough, pushed the Coast Guard's total cocaine haul for fiscal 1999 to nearly 112,000 pounds, compared with about 85,000 pounds the year before, officials said in advance of the official announcement.

"We made significant investments in intelligence assets that improved our ability to detect where smugglers are departing from, the ways points they use and their destinations," said Adm. James M. Loy, commandant of the Coast Guard. The money for those assets — primarily upgraded radar and infrared-sensing equipment — came from $270 million in supplemental funds appropriated for Coast Guard drug interdiction efforts last year.

In addition, the seizure in January of the Cannes, a cargo ship carrying more than 5 tons of cocaine between Trinidad and Houston, provided information about a major smuggling network and led to the seizure of three other ships carrying more than 10 tons of cocaine, officials said.

Loy, who took over as commandant in May 1998, said the greatest challenge was in the southern Caribbean, where traffickers used to move cocaine easily by boat from Colombia to way stations in Mexico, Central America, Haiti and the Dominican Republic. There, the drugs were repackaged and shipped on to the United States over numerous routes.

"We were getting beaten badly in the transit zone a year ago because the Go-Fasts were simply outrunning us," Loy said.

The 40- to 50-foot open boats typically carry several extra drums of fuel, a crew of two to five people and up to a ton of cocaine. They can travel from Colombia to Haiti, for example, in just 20 hours, according to the Coast Guard.

"By day, they'll often drift if they think we are patrolling, and they can be so well-camouflaged that you can fly right over one and not see it," a senior official said.

MILLITECH HAS PART-TIME & WEEKEND WORK

2ND SHIFT 4:00PM - 12:30AM
3RD SHIFT 12:00AM - 7:30AM
SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ALL SHIFTS AVAILABLE

- Millitech is a high tech company making millimeter wave broad band wireless equipment for major telecommunication companies throughout the world.
- The location is convenient to the University -- on Route 116 in S. Deerfield just one mile past Sunderland Center.
- The work is challenging; the environment is clean and quiet.
- The qualifications are an interest in learning, a willingness to [illegible] as scheduled, and eligibility to work in the U.S.
- [illegible] starts at $8.50 an hour for Assemblers. There is a shift [illegible] of 10% for work done on 2nd Shift and 15% for 3rd

Candidates [illegible] a variety of [illegible] modules and [illegible] instructions and [illegible] RF/Microwave products.

ELECTRO-MECHANICAL ASSEMBLERS

This work requires that candidates have excellent manual dexterity/ hand-eye coordination and an interest in work that involves microassembly processes using small hand tools and semiautomatic assembly equipment. Previous experience with microassembly process would be an advantage but training will be provided.

ENGINEERING INTERNS

Electrical/Microwave Engineering Students, Manufacturing or Mechanical Engineering students, at the Junior, Senior or graduate level, with good GPAs and an interest in practical applications of their classroom experience, may be considered for part-time internships. Interested applicants must be available to work a minimum of 15 hours a week.

To apply for these positions fill out an application at our facility or send resume and cover letter to Human Resources, 20 Industrial Drive East, S. Deerfield, MA 01373
e-mail: hr@millitech.com FAX: 413.665.0089

The Umass Campus Activities Office presents

Something Every Friday

Kyle Dunnigan

Seen as Johnny fame on MTV, [illegible] characters on Saturday Night Live, [illegible] timing combined with a touch of [illegible] once every [illegible]

Friday October 1, 1999
Bluewall Cafe, 8pm...FREE

I Can See Clearly Now

In the process of clearing up yesterday, the cloudy sky made a magnificent backdrop for the chapel's steeple.

■ amazon

continued from page 2

won reputation for sterling customer service.

"Amazon is so committed to great customer experiences, and they won't be able to ensure a great customer experience by hooking up with every Tom, Dick and Harry who wants to sell something," said Peter Krasilovsky, program director with Kelsey Group, a Princeton, N.J.-based market research firm that specializes in online commerce.

Investors apparently believe that the rewards outweigh the risks and sent Amazon.com's stock surging 23 percent, rising $14.88 to close at $80.75 in Nasdaq trading.

Analysts are optimistic about the prospects for Amazon.com's mall despite the lackluster performance of Internet malls operated by America Online, Microsoft, Yahoo and a host of Internet start-ups.

One reason is that Amazon.com will deploy an advanced search engine to help shoppers find specific items, even if they are buried deep within the mall or are on another site altogether. Amazon.com acquired the search technology last year when it bought Junglee.

■ festival

continued from page 1

approximately one third of the center's funds. Last year, the event raised $15,000 and this year the hope is to raise around $15,000.

Amherst Family Center Provides Sense of Community

Many UMass students will be working at the Festival. The UMass Buddy Program brings students to the Family Center to play with the children. The center provides educational workshops and support groups for parents with children ages five and under. Parents who feel like relaxing and talking to other parents are able to drop their children off for a little while at one of the professionally staffed, age appropriate classrooms.

The center has four paid staff members, consisting of one director and three classroom teachers. They are currently seeking another pre-school room teacher. The Amherst Family Center is based on give-and-take - the 200 official members both volunteer their time as well as receive the services of the center.

For those who are interested, Jennifer, the Apple Harvest and Crafts Festival Volunteer Chair, is still looking for volunteers. Contact her at 253-7324.

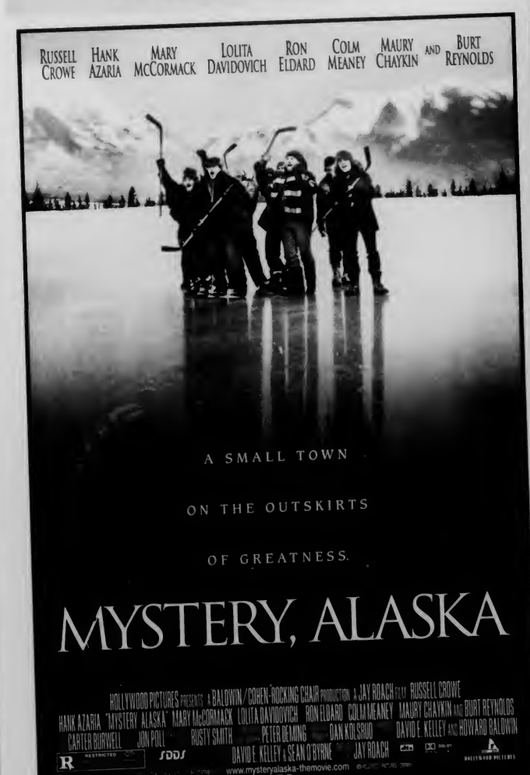
Tree Huggers

Stockbridge freshmen discover the wonderful world of leaf structure on what became a beautiful day.

The Collegian is hiring for the Developing Nations Page. Call 545-1361 and ask for Ken or Lenny.

When I think of power I think of Thor, big hippos, and the Collegian....

National Anthem Auditions!



The UMass Athletics Department [illegible] for singers interested in performing the anthem at winter sporting events.

Thursday, October 7, 1999

Auditions will be held in the Curry Hicks [illegible] ning at 7:15 pm.

For more information call [illegible]

Note: Auditions will also be held for the UMass Hoop Band beginning on October 25th and continuing through October 28th at Grinnell Arena. The following instruments are needed: trumpet, saxophone, trombone, bass, and guitar, keyboards and percussion. Call 545-6060 for more information.

McMurphy's Uptown Tavern

'99 Homecoming
The Tradition Continues

Kegs & Eggs

Saturday Oct. 2
Doors Open at 10:00 am

Must be 21 years of Age • Proof of Age Required

Band Day!

Show your support, come to band day Saturday OCTOBER 9th

McGuirk Alumni Stadium
UMASS vs. Northeastern

Check out the FREE PROGRAM featuring articles and team rosters compliments of the Collegian

Defending sick stuff

Richard Anderson

Yes, ladies and gentleman, once again New York Mayor Rudy Giuliani has gotten his sanctimonious panties into a Puritanical knot. The issue is Sensation, an exhibition of contemporary British art scheduled to open this week at the Brooklyn Museum of Art. Giuliani termed the exhibit "sick stuff" and threatened to eliminate all public subsidies to the Museum unless it cancels the show. With the museum directors standing firm, Giuliani has upped the ante by threatening to evict the museum under an obscure city statute that stipulates that access to city-owned buildings must be available to all citizens. Since the exhibit restricts children under seventeen from admission, Giuliani claims that the museum is violating its lease. He has even mentioned seizing control of the Museum and firing the board of directors. But Richard, you're probably asking, how indecent would an exhibit have to be to provoke such desperate, vitriolic opposition?

Pretty indecent. Among the works on display is a portrait of the Virgin Mary smeared with feces and another piece that consists of a pig bisected and floating in a tank of formaldehyde. In a word, it's sick stuff. Michael Kimmelman recently asserted in The New York Times that Rudy's response is an obvious political ploy in his undeclared Senatorial bid. By weighing in on the side of righteousness, the Mayor has put Hillary Clinton in the untenable position of saying she supports censorship or supports religious desecration. Whatever the motives, Rudy's response is reprehensible and just plain dangerous.

Ostensibly, the Mayor's beef is not with the art but with its public financing. God-fearing Christians shouldn't have to subsidize the desecration of their saints, he feels. But in America, everyone from God-fearing Christians to Vishnu-fearing Hindus pays taxes that help finance programs they don't support. No one asked me if my money could be used to support the war in Kosovo or bail out the S&L's. That's America.

His Honor seems to think that the National Endowment for the Arts (NEA) and other programs were only designed to subsidize art that he himself finds tasteful. Remember, though, that art is inherently subjective. What offends the Mayor of New York may touch someone else deeply. Many great movements in art were initially dismissed as offensive. Early Impressionist works met with great rancor at the Paris Salons. What if the Mayor of Paris had shut down those exhibits? Many paintings that we now revere would have been lost.

I am not comparing Edward Manet to Damien Hirst, one of the artists on display. Anyone who spreads dung on a painting is an idiot. But the point is that state-sponsored art provides a means by which artists on the periphery are able to play their trade. The NEA does not exist to give added ballast to the artistic establishment, but to encourage the development of new voices. Steven Spielberg doesn't need institutional largesse to produce his films. He is a bankable commodity, forever populist and incapable of offending Mom and Pop America. It is precisely those artists challenging the zeitgeist who benefit the most from endowments.

Implicit in this argument is the normative position that the government should be subsidizing art in the first place. Not everyone agrees. The Republican-led Congress of Newt Gingrich came perilously close to obliterating the NEA a few years back. Fresh attacks on state-sponsored art only weaken the position of such crucial programs. The government funds art because most of us believe that life is not just a matter of economics, infrastructure, and national defense. A house provides shelter as its function, but most of us adorn our homes with wallpaper, rugs, and curtains. Similarly, individuals in a society cannot exist solely to serve their function in the economic/social system. Our lives would be routine and monotonous without the flavor provided by the arts.

In this post-industrial age, our ability to experience life on an emotional, visceral level is threatened by the emergence of computers and other technologies that sate our appetites for convenience but inhibit our ability to feel. We spend hours on Instant Messenger, writing in fragmented, hackneyed English. Satellites and cables provide copious servings of mindless television, which demand absolutely no engagement from the viewer. Just as Aldous Huxley predicted in Brave New World, technology has become a drug that masturbates the mind and takes away the soul.

It is therefore crucial in 1999 that America continues to support art that stimulates us to laugh, cry, scream, and especially to think. Attempts by conservatives to censor art are especially frightening when one considers that autocracies often utilize the arts as a tool of propaganda. No single individual or group should control the content and distribution of art. In American history, Rudy Giuliani's threats are reminiscent of Nixon's impoundment of Congressional funds or Reagan's infamous program starving. The constant variable in all three cases is an elected official circumventing the law to serve his own dark purposes.

The Brooklyn Museum announced Wednesday that the exhibition would proceed and that it had filed suit against the city for violating the First Amendment. Had Giuliani stayed quiet, Sensation would have soon joined the ranks of forgotten controversies, just like 2 Live Crew and The Last Temptation of Christ. But now the courts will once again tell us what is acceptable and what is not. All because of one mayor who stood up and struck a blow for censorship.

Richard Anderson is a UMass student.

Libertad, Libertad

Rene Gonzalez

For most Americans, Puerto Rico and its people are not something to really think about. But recent events have attracted attention to the island of 3 million residents and have threatened the very foundations of the United States' freedom and equality under the law. I'm writing about the controversial release of the Puerto Rican political prisoners involved with the Armed Forces for National Liberation and the Popular Boricua Army (Los Macheteros). I'm also speaking about the unprecedented unification of the 3 major political parties in Puerto Rico to demand the immediate exit of the U.S. Navy and its land territories in the small island-town of Vieques, a Puerto Rican territory.

These two subjects are related. They both reflect the true relationship between the United States and Puerto Rico because they reflect the colonial status of Puerto Rico. The Puerto Rican political prisoners, none of whom were convicted of any violent crime, are freedom fighters in the truest sense of the word. I'm not using the term loosely, as Reagan did during the Iran Contra years; I'm talking about people who had enough of inequality and exploitation and decided to fight back with the same severity they received. During the years when the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics (U.S.S.R.) existed, the United States was ruthless in its pursuit of leftist and independence movements around the world and often persecuted and executed members of these movements.

Independence believers in Puerto Rico are no exception. (I have family members who were unlawfully followed and harassed by the FBI.) So the actions of the political prisoners must be seen in this context. It was self-defense and justified, armed struggle for national liberation. These are not religious fanatics with the view that the United States is a satanic institution; these are intelligent, educated professionals in their fields who were fed up with the imperial domination of Puerto Rico by the United States and took arms to liberate themselves (just like your forefathers on the U.S. mainland). Even the United Nations De-colonization Committee recognized the political prisoners as freedom fighters, and demanded from the United States their release and independence for Puerto Rico.

This is one instance where the United States is on the side of tyrannical rule. Don Pedro Albizu Campos, one of the fathers of the independence movement of Puerto Rico said, "When tyranny is law, revolution is order," and it certainly applies to Puerto Rico's case.

The other issue concerning Puerto Rico is the U.S. Navy's occupation of two thirds of Vieques, a small island town near Puerto Rico. The Navy has occupied the small island town since the 1940s, and their occupation has always stirred up trouble with Puerto Ricans. During the 1970s, fishermen decided to block the Navy's constant bombing practices with their fishing boats. It was a symbolic gesture that succeeded in bringing attention to the problem but failed in its objectives. To say more, the leader of the fishermen was arrested and taken to Miami, Florida where he later committed "suicide" under mysterious circumstances (he was badly bruised and had suffered severe head trauma before death).

More recently, the death of David Sanes Rodriguez (a civilian security guard) by the U.S. Navy's warplanes has stirred up the most unified resistance to Navy rule on the island ever in the history of Puerto Rico. Current polls rate the demand for the Navy to leave as over 80% of the population, an unheard show of unity voiced on any issue in Puerto Rican history. Even with the plethora of constitutional violations to the Vieques residents (and U.S. citizens) by the Navy, President Clinton continues to stall on his decision for the Vieques issue. Representatives and Senators have showed even more apathy and insensitivity to the Vieques residents by claiming that it is more important to consider "the national security" implications of the removal of the Navy from Vieques than it is to consider the violations to the 5th Amendment where it is stated that no citizen will be "deprived of life, liberty, or property, without due process of the law."

This is a disgrace. This is a blatant disregard of the wishes of the residents of Vieques and Puerto Ricans in general. This only reaffirms my belief that Puerto Ricans are "second class citizens." It goes beyond my comprehension how Puerto Ricans are subjected to all the laws and responsibilities (including military duty in the U.S. armed forces) of the United States without the most basic right of a democracy: the right to vote. Is this not imperial oppression? It is a shame and a threat to the U.S. legal system. If the will of the unified Puerto Rican people is ignored – since they are U.S. citizens – what is to say that other groups of people of color will not suffer the same fate, regardless of their legal status? This is racism. This is imperial oppression. This is colonialism. This is tyranny. This is a dictatorship. The power to remove the Navy from Vieques lies in the hands of President Clinton, and he has not used it.

The case of the Puerto Rican political status and of the United States' imperialist behavior must be settled. If the United States really stands for freedom and liberty, then they must show it. The Puerto Rican people are tired of waiting.

René Gonzalez is a UMass student.

Train of thought

Christine Ravinski

I love trains. Not those efficient, clean monstrosities that so famously lull you to sleep and exude whiffs of nostalgia. I love riding trains in Russia.

As all students abroad learn in Europe, trains are the only way to go. America has a car thing; Europe has a train thing. The Russian transportation system is especially an experience like no other. There are many conversations to be had, sub-zero temperatures to endure and real live bandit hold-ups on trains in Russia. What more could you ask for?

And so I found myself last winter standing on a frosty platform at midnight, waiting for the St. Petersburg train and watching the temperature sink to minus 30 Celsius. There was a building to go into, of course, but well trained by the PVTA, I knew that the train would fly by if I dared turn my back. The cold was starting to freeze my feet through the soles of my hiking boots at 2 a.m., when a nice couple came out and persuaded me inside with a hot cup of tea.

Inside, crammed into all available seats, the waiting passengers resembled a flock of penguins on a nature show, except with furry hats. They huddled together under the dim lightbulbs of the station, talking nonchalantly and sipping hot tea. Everyone in Russia carries seemingly large amounts of food on trips with them. My host mother, in due accord, had forced me to lug a bag of sausages, bread (a whole loaf), cheese, some yogurt, a few drinks, some cookies, and a few spotted apples out the door with me, should I get hungry on my seven-hour overnight exodus. Everyone had their food out now. The train was going on three and a half hours late, and it was a party.

When the train finally came we piled into the cheaper open-berthed wagons that have all the look and feel of a compact summer camp cabin. I scrambled for the last place, opposite a group of curmudgeonly old men.

The train pulled out of the station and then abruptly lurched to a halt. It didn't budge again for another 5 hours. My three neighbors were sitting close together in the darkness, talking in calm tones. The topic of conversation seemed to be the relative goodness of the good old days, with a solid round of capitalist-bashing when that got dull.

"I haven't gotten my pension, you know, for four months now."

Everybody nodded silently.

"That never would have happened in the old days!" someone asserts after a grace period. More nods, another grace period. Russians share their problems with each other so regularly that the process has its own verb.

"And people today, they get so lazy."

A grunt. "And greedy." A silence.

"And everybody's in a hurry suddenly. Nobody's got time to enjoy life anymore."

"Back when I was a student, we had everything! We could travel, we could work at whatever we wanted to, we always had everything in the stores... and now it's all gone. And for what?"

"Well, what can you do?" is the pessimistic response.

This was too much for me; I had to make a scene now.

"Where could you travel?" I asked. The trio noticed me for the first time. My accent had sparked a light of competition in the speaker's wrinkled eyes.

"Anywhere I wanted." He proclaimed. Yup. This was a competition.

"Wow! Did you ever get to go to Paris?" I queried in earnest.

My new competitor looked at me as if I had not two, but three heads.

"Well, no, of course not out of the country..." he said, with an elliptical "Silly!" stuck on the end.

"Oh, well, did you get to go to Moscow often?"

He started explaining to me that one needed permission to travel to the capitol, when his friend started giggling. Point one for me.

It is true, though, that disorganization in Russia has led to bureaucracy of epic proportions, the result being that getting anything accomplished can require Herculean efforts over paperwork and mean office workers. My new friend went on to paint the picture of simpler times back home on the collective farm, listening to (party approved) music and going to (party approved) shows at night. It was a very strange take on freedom.

I can't say anyone won that little contest, as it soon broke down to a debate on the "woman question" (women's lib is still a question), and I had to make a fool out of myself picking up everybody's bag at once and trying to prove I was not in pain from it. Ahem.

Other times on the trains were more pressing. Have you ever wondered, watching "Shindler's List," what that feeling might be if you just couldn't find the right papers? When my dad came to visit I forgot to mention rule number one to him: Don't look over at the military police and exclaim in a loud and foreign voice, "Wow, they have such big guns here!" Sure enough they came over, carrying their big guns, to discover we did not have documented permission to travel where we were. We had skipped this detail, having only been in town for six hours. They probably weren't going to shoot us for it, but they weren't going to do anything nice, either. I explained, I flattered, I even flirted. I told him how absolutely beautiful the main church was and how we appreciated living to see this day and see that church. Finally, one officer got bored and took the other one off with him. Our lives were spared.

Russians get very political on their trains. I miss that here. You just can't sit back and argue about government policy on the Peter Pan to New York bus with the same feeling that you aren't moving and that it isn't a problem. You don't have to be on the constant watch for bus bandits. There's no adventure. There's not much thought. And nobody brings along food in case there's a party.

Christine Ravinski is a UMass student.

Ed/op cannot print letters to the editor that are in response to other letters to the editor that have already been published.

Ed/op will be taking photographs of columnists interested in having photos run with their columns. The date is Wednesday, October 6th 1999 at five o' clock. Columnists should meet at the Student Union steps.

Takin' up space

Ryan Benharris

There's something very wrong with the parking situation on this campus. (You all knew that though.) You also all know that the words "parking situation" are synonymous with "Parking Services." Guess what: I think you're wrong. What I'm about to say may shock, upset and offend you, but this is how I feel. Now, I'm not here to defend Parking Services or take sides, but I am here to say that fingers are being pointed in the wrong places when parking problems are discussed.

Last week, when someone asked me who was to blame about parking problems on campus, especially in the Orchard Hill purple lot, my response was not Parking Services. My response was "other students." That's right, rude ignorant and careless students of the University of Massachusetts. When I walked through the purple parking lot, after driving around for over half an hour looking for a space, I saw a common sight that always disgusts me. The purple lot is filled with cars that have yellow stickers, or even worse, no stickers at all. Why does this happen? There are so many different explanations such as "the yellow lot's too far away," or "a purple sticker is too expensive." However, the real reason that this happens is shear ignorance.

People with yellow lot stickers simply don't care that they are taking someone else's space. They don't care that a person who has paid more money, and supposedly been granted that space, is now at a loss. The person who parked there with the yellow lot sticker is being selfish, and there's no other explanation.

I also attended a program given by two terrific resident assistants in the Webster/Dickinson cluster in which they invited a representative from the OMBUDS office to talk to students about problems. The most common problem was that they either had no place to park, or they had parked illegally because there was no place to park and received a ticket. Another complaint was that they called Parking Services, and were given such awful advice that they became even angrier.

My opinion on the subject is that the people with purple lot stickers have to take a stand. I suggest that a petition be written up that states that as residents who purchased these stickers, we will not stand for someone else's ignorance. Signs should be placed in the dorm rooms stating that we will take the proper precautions necessary to stop what's going on. Tell people who have parked in the wrong lot that you will not be afraid to call the UMass Police to help with the situation. Explain to them that they are doing something wrong, and affecting hundreds of people at the same time. Instead of all that complaining, and instead of calling Parking Services, do something!

I also do not believe that Parking Services is completely innocent. A female resident at the OMBUDS program said that a man in the parking services office told her to "park in the purple lot near Sylvan," when she couldn't find a space on a weekday night. How dare you advise woman to do something so dangerous as walk back from a place halfway across campus by herself in the middle of the night. Whoever you are, you should be ashamed of yourself! Secondly, to Parking Services, before you start towing all the purple lot cars that are parked illegally because they couldn't find a space, why don't you take care of those cars with yellow lot stickers first.

So many mornings I have seen the tow trucks taking away a car with a purple lot sticker on it, while right next to it sits a car in the wrong lot, that hasn't even received a ticket. Also instead of ticketing the normal amount for yellow lot cars, double it! If you do your job properly, it will save many people a lot of aggravation, and it will avoid you having to tow so many cars.

Here's some advice for everyone. To people with yellow lot stickers; please park in the yellow lot. I know it's difficult, and I know it sucks, but the truth is, you have no right to upset other people by parking in the wrong place. To people with no stickers; don't park in any lot. Visitors are supposed to park in the garage... make sure that you do that. To Parking Services; have some mercy on people with purple lot stickers that are parked illegally in the purple lot. You don't know why they had to do this, and there are other people that are much guiltier than they are. Secondly, don't ever advise someone, especially a woman, to do something as stupid as walk across campus at night simply because she can't find a parking space. If nothing else, you could be asking for a lawsuit when you suggest that.

Finally, what can people with purple stickers do to make the whole situation better? Be patient and take a stand. If you can't find a space, and you see a lot of cars that shouldn't be in that lot, call the police. If you know someone who parks in the wrong lot, tell that person to stop. Even if it's your boyfriend, girlfriend, brother or roommate, they're affecting you. And the truth is that if they don't care enough about where you park, then you shouldn't care if they get towed or ticketed either!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian staff member.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Poinkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauner Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

UM jam band to rock Pearl Street

By Matthew Maggiacomo
Collegian Correspondent

Ruby Dune, perhaps one of the most talented up-and-coming jam bands in the Amherst area, have caught a huge break. They will open for Iiggle the Handle tonight at the Pearl Street Night Club in Northampton.

No doubt, this is a huge opportunity for the band, which is comprised of four UMass undergrads. It is only a matter of time before the Amherst community catches on to the funky sounds and remarkable creativity that this band has to offer, and a gig at Pearl Street is a large step in the right direction.

"Now that we're playing one of the trinity of good clubs in Northampton, the possibilities are endless," says bass player Iordan Richmond.

Guitarist/vocalist Vim Tingle agrees: "We've always wanted to play Pearl Street; there's such a history there."

Ruby Dune has been playing together since the spring of 1998, when Tingle and drummer Vin D'Agostino first jammed together in Dickinson Hall. After several failed auditions for a bass player, they finally stumbled upon Richmond. The rest is history: Richmond knew a keyboardist by the name of Jay Zubiel, and soon Ruby Dune was a four-piece band ready for gigs.

Ruby Dune's music is as eclectic as their widely varied list of influences. While D'Agostino lists Neil Peart, Matt Sorem, and Uncle Calzone as his most significant influences, Richmond acknowledges Herby Hancock and Bela Fleck as musicians most responsible for the shaping of his style. The band has covered everyone from Eric Johnson to Prince in their live shows.

When asked if they have any surprises in store for tonight's gig at Pearl Street, Tingle replied, "Aside from the macaroni?"

Headlining tonight's show is Iiggle the Handle, an esteemed band in the genre of jam music. Iiggle is no stranger to the Amherst area: this past spring they were one of the featured bands in the University's own Fill the Hill festival.

Iiggle the Handle is well-established on the east coast, and has even ventured as far west as Colorado. They have made appearances during the H.O.R.D.E. festival, and have been featured in publications like Gig Magazine and Relix.

The Iigglers have shared the stage with performers like Leftover Salmon and the Spin Doctors, and have been given air time on over fifty radio stations across the United States.

While a gig at Pearl Street may be a routine stop for Iiggle the Handle, it remains a huge opportunity for Ruby Dune.

"Any place where we can share the stage with Iiggle is fine in my book," says Richmond.

Tonight's show begins at 8:30 and is an 18+ show. For more information, visit Ruby Dune's web site at www.phlopcat.com/rubydune.

PHOTO COURTESY OF RUBY DUNE

UM Jam band Ruby Dune will appear with Jiggle the Handle tonight at Pearl Street night club in Northampton.

Rose Polenzani rides the Iron Horse

By Lisa Metcalf
Collegian Staff

The CD release show at the Iron Horse Music Hall for Rose Polenzani's Anybody was a small and intimate one. Beth Ansel, who was originally supposed to perform, was unable to attend. Filling in was Megan Toohey. Megan, draped in the rags of an alternative artist stated, "I fear that I have the Natalie Imbruglia look going on tonight.... and I've made a grave mistake."

However, Toohey's music style was not even remotely close to being in the same category. She performed a brand of music that was similar to folk with more than just a hint of angst. Her lyrics were intelligent, with the kind of hooks that stick in your head. Unfortunately, the woman who recently rocked a show at Yale played a short of only a few songs.

Rose Polenzani took the stage and immediately started with "Look No Hands." In such a small, intimate setting her sweet, soft-spoken charisma made the performer endearing to the entire audience. Polenzani sings with heart and soul, conveying her emotion with her voice adding a lilt of sadness and longing. Her songs give you the sense of a definite history behind the music. The emotions you feel are comparable to what a good, sad Sarah MacLachlan song can do for you. Let's face it, there are only so many artists who have truly captured that longing spirit that a good depressing song will evoke. Whether or not you understand what I'm trying to say, you will identify with the weary lives of the focuses of Polenzani's songs.

Some of Polenzani's more memorable songs focus on socially conscious issues. Trying to create a parallel to the character in her song "Olga's Birthday" she states that, "If this song were about fashion instead of religion... what would happen. I guess she'd be tied down in the dressing room and forced to try on khakis." The song being about a woman in love with another woman — forced into a life with a man because of the constraints of society and religion.

Amongst the other songs that she performed were "Molly's Lilly," a song with major influences from the Salem witch trials, which focuses on family debt, Molly, and the devil. She also sang "Parhelion," which is about a transgendered person in a relationship where the other person wasn't aware. "How easily I'd lie to you," she sang both sweetly and harshly throughout the song.

It's no wonder that the Indigo Girls picked this rare gem of a performer to open for them on their tour this year. She's been busy besides that — playing a show with Shawn Colvin, and appearing at the Lillith Fair, along with the Newport Folk Festival. She's definitely making a name for herself, and there's no doubt why.

Rose Polanzani's voice dripped with sadness at the Iron Horse on Wednesday night

Araki tries hand at love with Splendor

By Kevin Thomas
Los Angeles Times

Splendor marks a new direction for filmmaker Gregg Araki, who had pretty much explored all he could about Gen X sex, drugs and despair in such provocative movies as Nowhere, The Doom Generation, Totally Fucked Up and The Living End.

Araki hasn't lost his edge; he's covered a brighter side of life. So at least for now he's moved away from such concerns as AIDS, heavy drugs and death and turned to romantic comedy. Not to worry, Araki, who never in fact lost his belief in love (or his sense of humor), brings to Splendor the bold, richly hued color, the sharp wit and the unconventional sensibility that characterized his most recent films. If anything, Splendor marks a return to his earliest no-budget works in which he viewed his contemporaries with an amused compassion as they struggled to sort out their lives and their emotions – which is pretty much what Kathleen Robertson's Veronica is doing here.

Veronica, who from time to time addresses the camera in telling us her story, informs us that she's from some suburban hell where the choices seem to be either an exciting life as a mall beautician or marriage to a guy with "Beer to Eternity" tattooed on his biceps. Being drop-dead gorgeous, Veronica heads for Los Angeles, eventually admitting to us that she's an aspiring actress.

No sooner does she hit her first club, where a costume party is in progress, than she connects with a guy wearing a Prince Valiant get-up – he's Johnathon Schaech's Abel. Then her gaze falls upon the hunky blond drummer in the club band – Matt Keeslar's Zed. Abel is tall, dark and handsome and Zed is tall, blond and handsome. Veronica is equally attracted to both. Since she's such a beauty herself, she begins to wonder if she can get away with having her cake and eating it too.

Once they're past macho displays of righteous indignation, Abel and Zed decide that sharing Veronica would work too. Pretty soon Veronica finds herself in a state of bliss beyond her wildest dreams. Then she's up for a role in a TV movie and meets the director, Ernest (Eric Mabius). As a career decisions and Ernest begins his own pursuit of her, Veronica realizes that in comparison to this new man in her life Abel and Zed are pretty immature. Ernest has a lush home with a pool, a kind, considerate and clearly enamored Cyclopic of plot twists later, however Veronica finds herself more miserable than she has ever felt in her life. Can it be possible that at least occasionally those who have it all have to pay for it one way or another?

Splendor is a Design for Living for the millennium that zooms with a giddy joy only to reveal that its beautiful people have been hit with genuine emotion, causing them pain that's totally unexpected. In the midst of his people's escalating angst, however, Araki never forgets that he's making a romantic comedy, which he gives a fresh spin while respecting its traditions.

Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 585-4788

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

World Art
AT THE HAMPSHIRE MALL
GIFTS
JEWELRY
CLOTHING
TAPESTRIES HOURS:
10-9 M-S
11-6 SUN
TEL 413-582-0012
Great Stuff to help make your room a home!
10% OFF YOUR PURCHASE WITH THIS AD!

Two cons have disguised themselves as beauty pageant pros.
Before they can pull off the heist, they'll have to put on a show.
ENTERTAINMENT WEEKLY
"Happy, Texas is as good as its buzz!"
Peter Travers, ROLLING STONE
"Happy, Texas keeps the laughs coming!"
William H. Macy, Illeana Douglas and Jeremy Northam are first-rate. Dynamo Steve Zahn offers nonstop comic invention... a class act!
Happy Texas
They need pros. They're getting cons.
www.happytexas.com
Get Happy 10-1-99!

Don't "Fall" For The Rest ... Our Prices Are The Best
LIQUORS 44
Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday pricing
1/2 KEGS
BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, MICHELOB LIGHT, AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, COORS LIGHT, COORS, ROLLING ROCK
$39.99 +DEP.
BUD & BUD LIGHT CASE 24/16 OZ. BOTTLES $16.49 +DEP. 16 OZ BOTTLES
BUSCH, BUSCH LIGHT, BUD DRY CASE OF 30 12 OZ. CANS $11.49 +DEP. 30 PK
MILLER GENUINE DRAFT, GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE 24/12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $9.99 +DEP.
SAM ADAMS 12 PK BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP.
NEWCASTLE BROWN ALE 12 PK. BOTTLES $11.99 +DEP.
CIDER JACK 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
WINE OF THE MONTH
FETZER VINEYARDS SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY, VALLEY OAKS CABERNET SAUVIGNON, EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750 ML. $7.49
FRANZIA CHABLIS, BLUSH, RED, GRENACHE, RHINE, CLINET, BLANC, FR. COLOMBARD, CHILLABLI RED, BURGUNDY 5 LT. $6.99
VENDANGE CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUVIGNON 1.5L $6.99
CITRA WINES ALL FLAVORS 1.5L $5.99
BOGLE MERLOT 750 ML. $7.99
ARBOR MIST ALL FLAVORS 1.5 L $5.49
JENKINS VODKA 1.75 $8.99
BACARDI RUM LIGHT & DARK 1.75 L $15.49
SOUTHERN COMFORT 1.75 L $16.49
SEAGRAM'S GIN & LIME GIN 1.75 L $12.99
ABSOLUT CITRON 750 ML $14.99
CAROLANS IRISH CREAM 750 ML $7.99
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344
NORTHAMPTON 586-3007
HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 9/30/99 THRU WEDS. 10/6/99
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

Colorful PC's the rage

By Rob Pegoraro
The Washington Post

The latest selling point in the home-computing world is not a faster processor or 3-D card, but the right hue of polycarbonate plastic. The Dell and Gateway desktops of the world soldier on in their usual beige armor, but others in the industry have discovered the joys of technicolor. Hewlett-Packard, for instance, now offers a choice of "Titanium Gray," "Cobalt Blue," "Krypton Green" or "Xenon Purple" front panels. NEC's new Z1 comes in a snazzy purplish gray. And just last month, eMachines Inc. launched its eOne computer, an all-in-one box in translucent blue and white.

That last computer's choice of color and shape just made it slightly more obvious who's taking inspiration from whom; in the wake of Apple selling more than 2 million iMacs in shades of blue, green, gold, purple and red, the world is now safe for something besides beige or black. This, on balance, is a good thing: it's about time computer designers had some of the artistic freedom accorded to the folks who dream up forks or cell phones.

But the iMac's success isn't just about color, as I realized when eMachines loaned me an eOne to review. Yes, this gumdrop-shaped contraption looks reasonably stylish on a desk, packs an impressive array of features and costs under $800 after a rebate. (The design may be a little too stylish: Apple is suing eMachines for allegedly ripping off the iMac's looks.) But it's not a wicked-fast machine; my test unit suffered from a glitchy power supply, and at its plastic-and-metal heart, it's the same old needlessly complex computer that built the United States remains uninterested in.

I realized this when I looked around the side and back of the eOne. An iMac has a grand total of nine holes in its case: one for the power cord, one for the modem, one for an Ethernet jack, two for its universal serial bus (USB) ports, one each for audio input and output, and a pair of headphone jacks. An eOne, by contrast, has 19: power, modem, a second phone-line jack, Ethernet, two USB, one parallel, one serial, two PS/2 mouse/keyboard ports, one game/MIDI port, video-in, two audio-in, one speaker out, one headphone out, one microphone in, plus a pair of Type III PC card slots.

Pop quiz: Where do the printer and scanner go? Digital camera? Joystick?

In the parallel or USB ports, the serial port and the game port, of course. But what if you've never used a computer before? Will you know to look for the parallel port on the back of the eOne, even though everything else is on the side? Will you know that you're supposed to shut down the computer before plugging in that printer? Not if you're used to connecting speakers to a stereo, where things just work.

The eOne is a fine attempt at making a better-looking PC (lawsuits aside), but it fails miserably at making computing less fussy.

But this is not to pick on eMachines; the entire industry seems incapable of deleting features, even if doing so would make life simpler for most users. The USB port, the latest major change, was supposed to replace all of this with an all-purpose, plug-it-in-and-it-works connector for everything from keyboards to scanners, but instead it's just another item on the menu. Computer geeks will also note that this profusion of gizmos eats up a limited supply of system resources, compromising stability and performance.

LAURA LARTIGAN

Helluva nice mock-turtle buddy!

Boston's Jiggle the Handle will jiggle onto the Pearl Street stage after UM's Ruby Dune tonight.

Films now playing in the area

The Sixth Sense
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

The Sixth Sense lies somewhere between psychologically intense realism and science fiction, slowly opening the viewer's eyes to a singularly bizarre arrangement. Bruce Willis gives a surprisingly solid lead performance as Dr. Malcolm Crowe, a clinical psychologist specializing in children, reminding us that he's not restricted to movies like Armageddon and The Fifth Element. Crowe becomes involved with Cole, a troubled young boy who confides in Crowe that he can see dead people.

A (David Troupes)

Stigmata
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Frankie Paige (Patricia Arquette), a party-going hairdresser and self-professed atheist, is terrified to discover that, wound by wound, she is being subjected to Stigmata, the injuries that Christ underwent during his crucifixion. Stigmata receives high marks for its ambitious approach to style and the potential of its script, but the final product seems too disorganized and loosely structured.

C- (David Troupes)

For Love of the Game
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Kevin Costner plays a pitcher facing what might be the last season of his career, ultimately having to choose between his love of the game and his love of a woman. For Love of the Game is the victim of one thing and one thing only: bad writing. Costner and Kelly Preston each give fine performances, despite the shallow treatment of their characters.

C (David Troupes)

Run Lola Run
Playing at Pleasant Street Theater

Run Lola Run, a German import brought to us by Sony Pictures Classics, is the story of two people, Manni (Moritz Bleibtreu) and Lola (Franka Potente). Lola has 20 minutes to get to Manni and, hopefully, pick up 100 grand along the way. One of the most inventive films in current release, Run Lola Run, is a delight, both suspenseful and funny.

A- (Kevin Monahan)

Web sites that work for you

By Michael J. Himowitz
The Baltimore Sun

Now and then I run across a Web site or service that promises to be incredibly useful. GuruNet and NoWonder.com are two that live up to their billing.

Launched in September, GuruNet is a source of instant information that pops up when you hold down the Alt key and click your mouse button on a word or phrase in a Web page, e-mail message, word processing document or any other Windows program.

In a second, you'll find yourself looking at a GuruNet Web page that has already figured out what you want to know. If you've clicked on a common word, you'll see a definition, with links to synonyms from a thesaurus. If it's a name (say, George Washington or Michael Jackson), you'll find a brief encyclopedia biography. If it's a publicly traded company, you'll find a Market Guide profile with quick links to current stock prices, historical charts, news and a corporate background.

You'll also find quick links to a variety of search engines, and as GuruNet becomes more popular, to other users who have clicked on the same word or phrase.

To access the service, you'll have to download a 700-kilobyte program from GuruNet's Web site. The software, which installs automatically, adds the Alt-click function to Windows and launches Microsoft Internet Explorer when you ask for information (unfortunately, there are no Netscape or Mac versions yet).

What amazes me is GuruNet's ability to understand the context of the words in your document and produce relevant information. For example, if I click on the word "time" in the phrase "It's time to go home," GuruNet shows me the definition of the word "time" from the American Heritage Dictionary and synonyms from Roget's II Thesaurus. If I click on the same word in the phrase "time flies," it finds the old cliche in the American Heritage Dictionary of Idioms and tells me that it means "Time passes quickly." When I click on "Time" in "Time Warner," it delivers information on the media conglomerate and its latest stock price.

Like a lot of cool Web software these days (including the popular ICQ instant messaging program), GuruNet was developed in Israel, but the company has backing from some heavy-duty Silicon Valley venture capitalists. It hopes to make money in two ways – by linking to Internet content providers and merchants who pay GuruNet a fee if you buy something from them (Amazon.com has already signed up), and by providing customized, internal versions of its information engine to corporations and institutions.

Not surprisingly, GuruNet works best with a high-speed Internet connection through a local area network in an office or a college dorm, or a cable modem, DSL or ISDN provider at home. But it will function over a dial-up line as long as you're connected.

If you ever get stuck on a word or have to look up information for any reason (I guess that means most of us), GuruNet is a must-have Web utility. You can get it at www.gurunet.com.

Now let's talk about help, and how hard it is to get when something goes wrong with your computer. If you've ever found yourself on indefinite hold when you call a tech support line – or you finally get through and find out that the guy on the other end has no idea what's making your life miserable – it may be time to pay a visit to www.nowonder.com.

This free technical support site is manned by 1,200 knowledgeable volunteers who will answer your questions by e-mail, usually within 24 hours. You'll find experts on the Windows, Macintosh, OS/2 and Linux operating systems who get their kicks from helping other people instead of giving them the brush-off.

If you don't want to wait, you can also post your problem on a message board where other users can offer informal aid and comfort. The board appears to be a popular feature – most of the help requests I saw generated multiple responses, often within an hour or so of being posted.

I stumbled on the site when a friend asked me whether it would be possible to use the new generation of Macintosh printers, scanners, disk drives and other peripherals with older Macs that don't have a Universal Serial Bus port.

Because I'm not a Mac hardware maven and didn't know the answer offhand, I posted the question on NoWonder.com. The same day I got a response from an experienced Mac user who told me it was quite possible if an older Mac has a free PCI slot. He also referred me to an online dealer who sold USB adapter cards. It couldn't have been much easier.

NoWonder's volunteers give the site's clients the same kind of courteous treatment I remember from my early days on the Compuserve Information Service, when patient, experienced users guided me through more than one jam. They understood that none of us emerged from the womb knowing how to format a floppy disk. It's good to see that this generosity and kindness still exists.

Write for Arts

Get Tough

Skechers at ZANNA

ZANNA

downtown Amherst

AT THE GATES OF SMITH COLLEGE
Fri. through Mon. and Thurs. Oct. 1-4 and Oct.7
At 7 and 9:20 (note no show Oct. 5 and 6)
Capturing a Cuban Sound Before It Could Die
BUENA VISTA SOCIAL CLUB
directed by wim wenders

"EXHILARATING"
Stephen Holden, THE NEW YORK TIMES
The documentary, features two concerts the group performed, one in Amsterdam, the other last July at Carnegie Hall. The music, in its acoustic beauty and power, jumps off the screen. Mr. Wenders also interviews the musicians in Havana and roams the destroyed elegance of the city.
ACADEMY of MUSIC Cinema Treasures NORTHAMPTON 584-8435

Business Journalism. Education Health Law
QUINNIPIAC COLLEGE GRADUATE PROGRAMS
Masters
Business Administration
Health Administration
Teaching
Journalism
Pathologists' Assistant
Physician Assistant
Advanced Physical Therapy
Biomedical Science
Molecular and Cell Biology
Nurse Practitioner
First Professional:
Law
Law/Business Administration
Law/Health Administration
Quinnipiac offers the caliber of programs, faculty and facilities you want in a graduate school. With a level of attention that's equaled by few. It's the kind of practical, real world training and education that give you the skills, confidence, and connections you need to succeed in the most competitive field of all: Life
203 281-8672/1-800 462 1944 • Hamden CT 06518 • www.quinnipiac.edu
Challenging students to meet the challenges of the future.
QUINNIPIAC COLLEGE

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1 A great place to get contacts lenses.
2 Free sample start-up contact lens solutions
3 Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
4 Same day replacement of disposable contact lenses, in many cases.
5 FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
Frederick H.Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1997
SEX DANCERS STARTING 5 P.M.
BEAUTIFUL GIRLS NEED MONEY???
APPLY IN PERSON FOR AMATEUR NIGHT COMING MONDAY OCTOBER 18TH!!
CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Route 5 & 10 Whately
665-8733
PROUDLY PRESENTS MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL!!!
EVERY MONDAY!!!
MON 5PM-1AM
TUES-SAT 1PM-1AM
1ST PLACE == $200
2ND PLACE == $100
3RD PLACE == $50
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1998

UM set for NY showdown

Cross country's best converge on Bronx

By Bryan Smith
Collegian Staff

No, it's not the Red Sox versus the Yankees battling it out in the Bronx. But there will be some accomplished combatants taking to the streets of New York City on Saturday.

The showdown in the Bronx will be hosted by Iona University. The Gales will provide the city that never sleeps with the Meet of Champions, a meet that promises to be an exciting forum for the Minutewomen to show that they can run with the best there is to offer in collegiate cross-country today.

Nicole Way

Sally Hirsch

The Maroon and White will again look to their experience: Seniors Sally Hirsch, Lizzie Shepyck, Sharon Tillotson, and Nicole Way, who along with sophomores Kristin Cisowski and Katherine Blais hope to find their stride and compete for the coveted top stop with the large field of opponents.

UMass will see some familiar faces in the crowd, having already raced against Boston College, Boston University, SUNY- Albany, and Dartmouth College.

On September 18, the Minutewomen placed third in a meet hosted by Central Connecticut State behind a really strong BU squad and two spots ahead of Albany. In their first meet of the season UMass also saw a tough BC team win the meet that they hosted. Along with the schools that the Maroon and White have already seen this season, Atlantic 10 rival Rhode Island will find themselves in the mix.

The meet will also have Ivy League foes Brown, Harvard, and Princeton. Two of this country's military academies in Navy and Army, along with the College of New Jersey, the University of Houston, Marist College, Purdue University, Siena College, and the University of Virginia, will also occupy the pack.

This deep field poses a test for a UMass squad that has not had any form of competition outside of practice in the last two weeks. The meet will need once again to have their healthy Minutewomen will need once again to have their strength be in pack running.

The top performers for the Maroon and White have been able to stay with the lead pack in both of their first two races, but have fallen of the pace in the last mile. If UMass is to finish well in the Meet of Champions, they need to push hard from the outset and maintain their intensity throughout the race.

Minutemen to test their mettle in New York

By Andrea Crane
Collegian Staff

Bringing up the level of challenge and competition, the Massachusetts men's cross country team will travel to Bronx, NY this Saturday to race at the annual Meet of Champions. After having a week off to train and rest, the Minutemen will compete against 25 different teams from around the country this weekend.

The Maroon and White finished second just behind the Terriers of Boston University at their last meet. The race was held Sept. 18th in Burlington, VT. A handful of sophonores set the pace for UMass, all finishing in the top 15. The field of Minutemen was led by Ryan Corbett, who secured an impressive 5th place overall. He was followed closely by fellow sophomores Kevin Currin and Dave Prasse, who placed 12th and 15th, respectively. Senior Matt Ely and junior Tom Stuart rounded out the score for the team by finishing 16th and 18th.

The upcoming race will be a great opportunity for the Minutemen to check out both the regional and national competition. Elite opponents not located within New England, including the likes of Kansas, Oklahoma, Wake Forest and Kentucky will be on hand.

The Maroon and White will also get a chance to peek at other strong A-10 contenders, particularly St. John's, LaSalle and George Washington.

"This is a good meet to see some powerful teams outside of the Northeast," head coach Ken O'Brien said.

With the adrenaline rushing and a field of strong competitors pushing them, the Minutemen will work to better their personal scores.

"The level of excitement increases when so many teams are on the course," coach Ken O'Brien observed. "There is an extra challenge beyond that of the usual quad races," he added.

Every year UMass rotates between attending the Meet of Champions in New York and the Paul Short Invitational, held in Lehigh, Pennsylvania.

"Over each of our runners' four years here, we like to take them both places twice," O'Brien said. "This way they get to race against a variety of different competitors."

After this weekend, the Minutemen are scheduled to face off at the New England Championships in Boston, MA. The meet will take place on Friday, October 15th at 1:30 p.m.

■ Tennis

continued from page 10

Horak for the squad's next meeting against ranked powerhouse Dartmouth on Monday.

■ Minutemen

continued from page 10

came back to pull out the win in straight sets, 6-2, 7-5.

The Minutemen's next tourna ment will be at Colgate this Saturday through Sunday, where they will meet B.U. and Fairleigh Dickinson. Although Fairleigh Dickinson is considered to be the top contender Wilkins is more than optimistic. "I think we're the next best team there but that remains to be seen; we'll see what we can do."

■ Football

continued from page 10

better for going out and playing them. It gave some of our younger guys some experience in seeing what it's like going through preparation and, for all our kids, seeing what it like at the I-A level." Whipple said. I said last week that every player on t plays I-AA believes he is good enough to play I-A, and I think our kids need to see just what I-A is all about."

This season, Hofstra has opened up the season 4-0, including three victories against Atlantic 10 conference opponents last weekend, the Flying Dutchmen knocked off Cal-Poly San Luis Obispo 38-3 with many different players getting into the mix.

The UMass defense who has been prone in the opening three weeks will have to answer to a high powered offense that has chalked up 56 points against 17 Saturday. Connecticut in its season opener. Quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi threw for three touchdowns in just over a half of play. Carmazzi is the leader and has a history with the Minutemen, burning the UMass defense for three scores last season including a 75-yard scamper down the left sideline to give Hofstra a lead late in the third quarter.

He is joined in the backfield by Vernon Sanders a player Whipple is very familiar with heading into the weekend. The senior back put up 164 yards on the Hofstra defense last week one.

"We will certainly be tested [this weekend] and both of us [UMass and Hofstra] would agree we are [not] where we want to be right now. We need a big game [this weekend] one will be a tough one."

Special teams could play a huge role in tomorrow's game as well. Last season Hofstra missed three field goals in the game, including a last second attempt that would have connected on just one of the Flying Dutchmen attempts this season while the Minutemen have gotten just a single field goal from Jason Cherry, and Doug White. Cherry did say he said back that would account for the last Minuteman scoring in the last 10 [illegible]

Kenny takes "Rage" on road to conference foes

By Seth Szilagyi & James Piehl
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team will look to snack on the "Big Apple" today, and will then try to "Steel" a win at Pittsburgh this weekend.

The Minutewomen are poised to take advantage of a slumping Fordham volleyball team. The Rams are riding a five-match losing streak, posting a 1-11 season record and 0-4 in the Atlantic 10 conference with their most recent loss coming at the hands of Dayton, 3-1.

The weak Fordham offense is only managed a languid attack percentage of .102, while allowing opponents to attack a hefty .289. The only category the Rams do dominate against their opponents is in errors.

UM's offense recently ignited during the match at home against the Harvard Crimson, in which head coach Bonnie Kenny was able to effectively plus some hard working members off her bench. The play of these reserves paid big dividends in UM's domination of the Crimson.

"I think it was great that a lot of people were able to play against Harvard," head coach Kenny said in a press release. "Our starters played really hard so our bench could see some playing time. I think it is great when a player like Audra Bodenstab, who comes to practice every day and works hard, can come in and be successful. Jennifer Davis did a great job in her first start."

The Minutewomen's squad boasts leading A-10 digger senior Kari Hogancamp, who has averaged 5.07 digs per game (which increases within conference matches to a whopping 5.46). Senior Jill Meyers holds the conference's second highest kill average with a strong 4.51 per game.

Fordham's stats leader is junior Stephanie Fike. By mere statistical comparison, Fike only manages a team-high 2.41 kills and 2.51 digs per game.

After feasting on Fordham, the Minutewomen will look to devour the Dukes of Duquesne in Pittsburgh. Like Fordham, DU is riding a trough with a three game losing skid, leaving them 6-8 overall and 1-3 in the A-10. The Minutewomen will have to contain the Dukes' team leaders. Senior Anita Ball smashes a powerful .356 hitting percentage, which is enough for third in the conference, while junior Heather Buckman is third in the conference in service aces with 0.49 per game.

A perfect weekend would see UM in the driver's seat at both matches. It also would entail co-captain Meyers adding a little more icing to her career cake, as she is a mere five blocks shy of becoming UMass' all-time blocks leader.

■ Soccer

continued from page 10

late as many conference victories as possible to secure their place in post-season play. UMass will meet Temple on Friday at 3:30 at Totman, a place that Temple has not left with a win since 1990. (Although they currently lead UMass 7-5-1 in all time meetings.) Continuing on to Sunday, UMass will play St. Joseph's at 1:00. The Hawks also have not been able to defeat the Minutemen at Totman since 1990, with UMass leading the all-time series 8-4.

UM set for Philly battles

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's soccer team will head to the City of Brotherly Love this weekend when it takes on Temple and St. Joseph's in two key Atlantic 10 matchups.

The Minutewomen (3-2-1, 1-0 in the A-10) are coming off a 3-2 win over Rhode Island last Sunday at Totman Field. Temple enters with a 5-4-1 mark, 0-1 in the conference, while St. Joe's is off to a 6-1 start, 1-0 in the league.

"Temple is better than in past years. They've got a bunch of people back from the team we saw last year, and they beat us. UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. They've beaten us more than any other A-10 team in the regular season. No other team has beaten us twice."

Kara Green

Offensively, the Owls will be led by senior midfielder Lori Brennan and forward Brandi Wright. UMass will take on Temple this afternoon at 4 p.m.

"Wright is a big kid who is good to a good start. She's got four goals on only six shots," Rudy said. "But the thing that scares me is the unexpected. Maybe they will play us straight up, like they did last year, but other times they just stay in a heavy bunker. It will be interesting to see what they do."

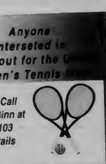
The Hawks, who will face the Minutewomen on Sunday afternoon at 1 p.m., have a mix of old and new faces that have helped them get off to one of the best starts in school history. One of those new faces is head coach John Byford, who has St. Joe's heading in the right direction.

Top players for the Hawks include forward Lisa Benvenuto and All-Atlantic 10 pick Mindy Spellman. Benvenuto already has eight goals for St. Joe's in the first seven games of the season. Ellen-Carine Stenrud will also be a key threat for the Hawks.

"Benvenuto has been scoring a lot of goals for them. She was a kid that we liked [during the recruiting process] because we knew that she had a lot of potential down the road," Rudy said. "And if he [Byford] has turned Stenrud loose, then they could be solid. Spellman is another player who we like too."

One note that does worry Rudy this weekend are the field surfaces, including the artificial turf at St. Joe's, a surface the Minutewomen haven't played on this season.

"It's an interesting contradiction. You go from a field that is down in a bowl, a 1920's football stadium [at Temple] to an old artificial turf field inside a track," he said. "You couldn't have two different playing situations."



On the UMass side of things, senior forward Emma Kurowski and juniors Kara Green and Brooke Bartlett are all coming off impressive outings over the weekend. As a team, the Minutewomen are averaging nearly three goals a game, and will look to add to that total this weekend.

"We can't miss layups in the first half like we did against Rhode Island. We had three of them inside six yards. The game could've been 6-0 at the half, if we had finished off some reasonable chances, but we didn't" Rudy said. "So that's what's going to be key for us this weekend."

Collegian Sports... For Three!

GO UMASS!

Anyone Interested in trying out for the UMass Women's Tennis Team
Please Call Debbie Ginn at 545-3103 for details

10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Located near the Colonial Village bus stop at the corner of Rts. 9 and 9. East St.
8 Friday Night @ 10:00 "Derek Gumuchian" One Man, One guitar 1,000,000 good times
Saturday Night @ 9:45 "Joint Custody"
9
"Everyday from 3-7pm $4.00 hour pool"
Ultimate Best! 1997

FREE BOWLING
AIR CONDITIONED!
FOR EVERYONE IN YOUR PARTY WITH THIS AD
NOT VALID FRIDAY & SATURDAY PM - CLOSE HOLIDAYS, SPECIAL EVENTS
ENJOY BY 10/1/1999
LIMIT ONE FREE GAME PER GROUP PER DAY
NORTHAMPTON BOWL 584-4830

amc There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 8PM.
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall 584-9153
SIXTH SENSE:
Today at (4:50@ $3.25) 7:40 10:30
Sat at 2:00 (4:50@ $3.25) 7:40 10:30
Sun at 2:00 (4:50@ $3.25) 8:00
Mon-Thurs (5:50 @ $3.25) 8:40
BLUE STREAK:
Today at (5:00@ $3.25) 7:50 10:30
Sat at 2:10 (5:00@ $3.25) 7:50 10:30
Sun 2:10 (5:00@ $3.25) 8:10
Mon.-Thurs. (6:00@ $3.25) 8:40
FOR LOVE OF THE GAME:
Today at (4:30@ $3.25) 7:20 10:10
Sat at 1:40 (4:30@ $3.25) 7:20 10:10
Sun at 1:40 (1:30@ $3.25) 7:40
Mon-Thurs (5:30@ $3.25) 8:20
THREE KINGS:
Today at (4:40@ $3.25) 7:30 10:20
Sat at 1:50 (4:40@ $3.25) 7:30 10:20
Sun at 1:50 (4:40@ $3.25) 7:50
Mon-Thurs (5:40@ $3.25) 8:30
AMC Hamshire 6
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 great years! We'll be changing the way you see movies with... 16 New Screens fall '99
$3.00 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
Special Engagement No Passes or Coupons

Multiband POPS
25th Annual MUSICAL EXTRAVAGANZA in the Fine Arts Center
Presented by: Department of Music & DANCE
UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS AMHERST 545-2227
Jazz, Percussion, Wind Music & Modern Dance
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 1ST
8 PM · FINE ARTS CENTER CONCERT HALL
Featuring:
Jazz, Wind, Percussion & Marimba Ensembles, Dancers, Vocal Jazz and African-American Music Ensemble & Minuteman Marching Band
Tickets:
$25 Priority Reserve Seats · $18 General Public · $12 UMass & Other College Students, elders & children under 18
Order tickets early. Last year's performance was sold out!!
Tickets available at the Fine Arts Center Box Office
(413) 545-2511
Multiband Pops is Co-sponsored by:
Advocate Alumni Association WTTT AM 1400 22 WWLP

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday - Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar

Bookworks presents
Author Fred Golder will be signing his new book titled Uncivil Rights
EMPLOYMENT ISSUES FOR THE NEW MILLENIUM BRINGS NEW SOLUTIONS TO CONFLICTS AT WORK
Also comes with a complete "Survivor's Guide to Legal Terms"
October 2nd 1999
11am
University Store
M-F 9 to 5
Sat. 11 to 4
(413) 545 - 2519

SINCE 1984
La Cazuela RESTAURANT
Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST
Hand Crafted Food
Seasonal Specials
Extraordinary Tequila List
Superb Margaritas
Warm Hospitality
Please join us!
Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage
www.lacaz.com

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking "Best Buddies" to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

ALPINE COMMONS 4 Bedroom, 2 Baths, Fully applianced kitchen, Private balconies. All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to Umass. Move-in Special ! 256-0741

AUTO FOR SALE

'85 Cavalier $375 very good condition a bargain! (413) 665-0241

Honda Prelude SI, 1992 Excellent condition, silver 5 spd, power brakes/windows sun roof, AM/FM stereo additional snow tires 96k $8500 (413)665-0218

88 Ford Bronco II Good condition. Standard. $1500/BO. Call Erik at 323-9062

94 Mazda Protege All highway miles very clean 4-door NEW Shox+Struts standard, power everything! A/C 3,000 ODO Caroline 397-0922

CHILDCARE

Babysitter Amherst some nights/weekends 253-3359

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

EMPLOYMENT

Help Wanted Housekeeping 3 to 6hrs a week in home of Grad Student, single parent. 7.00hrly, more for larger tasks. Car a must. All cleaning supplies provided. Call Eves 367-9129

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

The Mullin Center Ice Rink seeks Zamboni drivers experience preferred but not necessary. Will train. Apply in person at the Ice Rink

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phisically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

EARN UP TO $1000 By Posting Your Lecture Notes Online (400) 123-4567 or Click Here [illegible] Revolutionizing the way students study on the web!!

Promotions Company seeks reliable meticulous, student to poster towns and colleges. 10hrs a week. Tues, Weds, Fri. $7.00 a run plus bonus. Car and excellent references. 259-1227

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

Preschool Teachers Wanted work study positions and substitute positions available working with children ages 18 months to 6yrs. Cushman-Scott Childrens Center Call Ellen at 549-1167

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ For Hire: DJ Fooz is now booking for Fall Semester. Date parties, formals, house parties, and school affiliated functions. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

Got Furniture? 4 couches, 2 loveseats, 4 easy chairs, 4 beds, 9 dressers, etc Reasonable. Free delivery 586-2221

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

Bollinger Free Weights. Cast iron plates. Assorted sizes. 30c/lb. Call Bill, 253-3294 or 545-0442

DP Gympac 1500 Fitness system. 50kg of weight. Padded bench and accessories. Many, many exercises. $75. Call Bill, 545-0442 or 253-3294

INSTRUCTION

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

LOST & FOUND

Found Dorm Key in bathroom at Boyden Gym on 9/28 Call 5-4092

MISCELLANEOUS

Support Amherst Gymnastics come to their yard sale on the Common in The Center of Amherst. It runs 10 to 3 on Sunday Oct. 3. Items from 10 families. Rain or shine.

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts 350/month + utilities Female preffered Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted 1bdrm in 3bdrm Apt behind Puffers Pond. Must be easy going. Big yard, parking $333/mo+utilities Call Bry/Joe 549-4055

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined you favorite suit! Are dept collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

ST. JUDE

May The Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored , glorified, loved and preserved, now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you M.M.

TRAVEL

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Looking for a place to live for next semester?

Why wait?

Place an Ad in The Classifieds and find the home of your dreams!

Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 1

Auditions – The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 6 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Service – There will be a Shabbat Service at 6 p.m. at the Hillel House. All are welcome to attend the Kesher (reform) style service. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

SATURDAY, OCT. 2

Auditions – The UMass Theatre Guild is holding auditions for its fall musical "Company" at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. in Campus Center 101. Call 545-2015 for more information.

Celebration – There will be a Five College Simchat Torah celebration at 7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House. Everyone is welcome.

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, UMass' improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in the Campus Center, room 165.

Community Service – Massachusetts Community Water Watch will participate in a project to help clean up the Connecticut River. If you would like to participate in this event, call Christina at 545-0194.

SUNDAY, OCT. 3

Class – There will be a class entitled "Catch the Wave: Leadership for the New Millennium" in Campus Center 10409. The class is sponsored by the Residence Life Leadership Development Committee, and will offer house council officer and student leader training. Registration begins at 11:30 a.m. and lunch will be served.

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, UMass' improvisational troupe, will be holding auditions from 4-7 p.m. and 8-11 p.m. in the Commonwealth Room of the Student Union. No experience necessary. Call Sarah at 546-4574 for more information.

MONDAY, OCT. 4

Meeting – The UMass French Club will hold its second meeting at Claudia's Cafe, 1 East Pleasant Street, at 8 p.m. Coffee and beverages will be served. Contact Lisa at 546-7019 for more information.

Reading – The Amherst College Creative Writing Center will present poet Mary Jo Salter, reading from her work at 8 p.m. in the Babbott Room of the Octagon at Amherst College.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division-Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the Fall Semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

Who are public service announcement to printed daily, a submit a p.m. please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Manaying Editor by noon the previous day.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

UStore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Hampshire Services Cable Network

1 HSCN Bulletin Board
2 CBS/3 Hartford
3 CBS/4 Boston
4 ABC/5 Boston
5 PBS/57 Springfield
6 HSCN Movie Ch.
7 UPN/20 Hartford
8 Weather Channel
9 NBC/30 New Britain
10 Fox/61 Hartford
11 PBS/24 Hartford
12 WHOH & HSCN International
13 UMass Academic TV
14 WB/New Haven
15 HSCN Programming
16 The Learning Channel
17 UVC-TV19
18 ABC/40 Springfield
19 Gavel to Gavel
20 NBC/22 Springfield
21 Sundance
22 Bloomberg Financial
23 CTN
24 TBS
25 BET
26 TV Land
27 Univision
28 Comedy Central
29 Cartoon
30 Much Music

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 1, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⧖		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	Connecticut Journal		Kennedy Center Presents: Americanos		Foto-Novelas
WFSB	3	3 News ⧖	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Dermdest	Candid C.	Now and Again "On the Town"		Nash Bridges "Irade Off" ⧖		News ⧖	Late Show ⧖
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Dermdest	Candid C.	Now and Again "On the Town"		Nash Bridges "Irade Off" ⧖		News ⧖	Nightline ⧖
WCVB	5	5 News ⧖	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⧖	Hughleys ⧖	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Odd Man Out	20/20 ⧖		News ⧖	Nightline ⧖
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ⧖	Nanny ⧖	Jamie Foxx ⧖	Jamie Foxx ⧖	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	Cold Feet (In Stereo) ⧖		News	Tonight Show
WHGH	82	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⧖	Providence "The Letter" ⧖		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ⧖	Real TV (N) ⧖	★★½ "Frankie" (1978, Horror)	Bradford Dillman, (In Stereo) ⧖			Cold Feet (In Stereo) ⧖		News	Tonight Show
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra ⧖	Ent. Tonight	Providence "The Letter" ⧖		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		News		Friends ⧖	Frasier ⧖
WTIC	3 11	Simpsons ⧖	Frasier ⧖	Seinfeld ⧖	Friends ⧖	Terror on the Job (In Stereo) ⧖		Most Shocking Moments		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		News ⧖	Tonight Show
WWLP	3 22	News ⧖	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⧖	Providence "The Letter" ⧖		Dateline (In Stereo) ⧖		Cold Feet (In Stereo) ⧖		News ⧖	Tonight Show
WGBY	3 6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⧖		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Chart	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ⧖
WGGB	3 40	News ⧖	ABC News	Seinfeld ⧖	Frasier ⧖	Hughleys ⧖	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Odd Man Out	20/20 ⧖		News ⧖	Nightline ⧖
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ⧖	Judge Judy ⧖	Seinfeld ⧖	Frasier ⧖	★★½ "Pilgrim" (1978, Horror)	Bradford Dillman, (In Stereo) ⧖			Star Trek: Voyager "Warlord"		Blind Date	Ricki Lake ⧖
WTBS	42	Rosanne ⧖	Rosanne ⧖	Friends Prince	Major League Baseball	Orlando Murlins at Atlanta Braves. (Live) ⧖				★★½ "Drakula" (1987, Comedy)		Dat Astolyed
A&E	43	Simon & Simon "Bad Betty"		Law & Order ⧖		Biography: Don Ameche		L.A. Detectives ⧖		Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R)		Law & Order "Nurture" ⧖
CNN	44	Worldview ⧖	Moneyline Newshour ⧖		Crossfire ⧖	World Today ⧖		Larry King Live ⧖		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline ⧖
COM	45	Saturday Night Live ⧖		Daily Show (N)	Stein's Money	Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live		Saturday Night Live
DISC	46	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery	Deadly Nat	On the Inside: Golden Gate		News	Discover Mag.	Storm Warning! "Wind" (R)		Sportscenter ⧖
ESPN	47	Sportscenter		50 Greatest	NHL Hockey	Pittsburgh Penguins at Dallas Stars. (Live) ⧖				"Zeitfeist: Flight 174" (1995, Suspense) William Devane.		New Attitudes	Golden Girls
LIFE	48	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	★★ "Someone She Knows" (1994, Suspense) Marlee Matlin.				Head Trip		Fanatic (R)	Reel World ⧖	Reel World ⧖	Head Trip (R)
MTV	49	Globe Groove	Countdown	Beat Seat	News	TRL (N) (In Stereo)		Love Lucy		Jeffersons ⧖	Yall (In Stereo)	M.Y. Moors	Happy Days
NICK	50	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! ⧖	Rugrats ⧖	Kenan & Kel	Angry Beavers	Brady Bunch	Love Lucy	Sliders (In Stereo) ⧖		First Wave (In Stereo) ⧖	Portergeist: The Legacy (R) ⧖
SCIFI	51	Quantum Leap (In Stereo) ⧖		Poltergeist: The Legacy ⧖		Farscape (In Stereo) ⧖		Silicon Spies		Save Our Streets "Benaysi"		Save Our Streets	High Speed Pursuit: Inside
TLC	52	28 Home Again	Home Again	48 Hours (R)		High Speed Pursuit: Inside							In "Chasers" (1994) Tom Berenger, Erika Eleniak.
TNT	53	The South "Hunting Season" ⧖		ER "Middle of Nowhere" ⧖		★★★ "Top Gun" (1986, Drama)	Tom Cruise, Kelly McGillis.			★★★ "A Bronx Tale" (1993, Drama) Robert De Niro, Chazz Palminteri. (In Stereo) ⧖		On the Inside: Golden Gate
USA	54	Xena: Warrior Princess (R) ⧖		JAG "Rendezvous" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger ⧖				"Steel Fighter" (1989) Costas Mandylor. (R) ⧖		Chris Rock ⧖
HBO	59	(5:45) Reverb (R) (In Stereo)		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) ⧖		★★½ "There's Something About Mary" (1998) Cameron Diaz. ⧖				Rats-Roaches (R) "Fat Camp" (1999) Carrot Top. ⧖		Pleasure Zone
MAX	60	★★ "Great Expectations" (1998, Drama) Ethan Hawke. ⧖				★★ "Progeny" (1998) Arnold Vosloo. ⧖				Dangerous Ice-1 (Outer Limits "Haven" (R) ⧖		Total Recall
SHOW	61	★★★ "Escape From Alcatraz" (1979) Clint Eastwood. PG ⧖

Spunk By Mike La Riccia

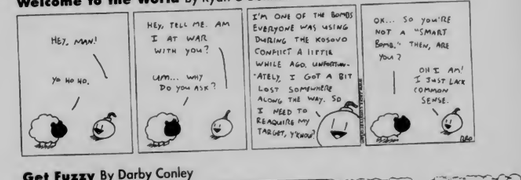
Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Welcome to the World By Ryan O' Donnell

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Robotman By Jim Meddick



Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Get Fuzzy By Darby Conley

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) Your friends are likely to be far more important to you than expected at this time. You may want to do things on your own, but teamwork is invaluable.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Share what you are thinking with those around you today, and before you know it, your ideas are likely to result in something tangible.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're in no mood for something casual and transitory at this time. You're far more interested in what can become "long-term."

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You can put an end to the sort of rumors which have been passed back and forth lately with surprising abandon. Stick to the truth at all times.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Someone you know quite well, but haven't spoken with in some time, is eager to talk to you today. Make yourself readily available.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – The pursuit of pleasure and self-gain is likely to lead you down an unexpected path before the day is out. Pay attention to unspoken warnings.

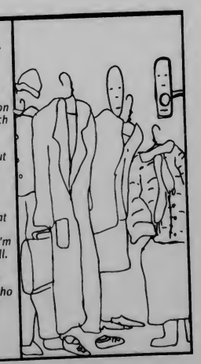
Aries (March 20-April 19) – You may be proud of your ability to see problems on the horizon, but something complicated is likely to take you by surprise today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) –You may be making a series of rash judgments at this time, upsetting the friends and loved ones around you. Take the time to think things through.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Familiarity is something that can actually serve you well today, despite your preference for things that are novel. You'll have a chance to relax.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Someone you're working with at this time may express certain reservations after hearing of your plans. It's time to make your pitch in person.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Someone may be waiting for you to make the "first move" today. Are you willing to put it all on the line? In reality, risks are few.



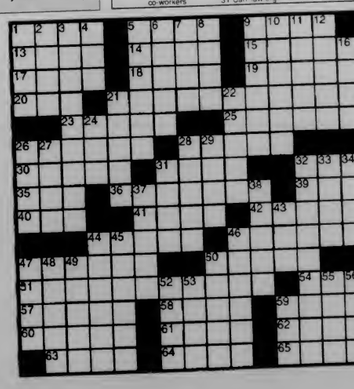
Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It's a good time for you to stick up for someone who did you a favor in the recent past. You'll realize that you can work wonders together.

Quote of the Day

"In the Middle Ages, probably one of the biggest mistakes was not putting on your armor because you were 'just going down to the corner'"

– Jack Handey

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997



I want to be a great leader of people, but I'll start small. First at the bus station using non-verbal communication I'll try to line them up and march them onto the bus.

I'm a magnet for people without a purpose. We find each other the way brutes find a certain street corner together.

If I can't get them on the bus, at least, I'll make them anxious. I'm pretty sure I can do that. I'm a natural with neurotics as well.

Eventually, I can have a whole regiment of neurotic people who otherwise have no purpose in life but are very good about getting on buses.

ACROSS
1 Commerbund
5 Can. province
9 Cleans a bill
13 Moon goddess
14 Bread purchase
15 Actress Ekberg
17 Eva's mate
18 "Whatever – wants
19 Playwright Neil
20 Big shot, for short
21 Portrayal
23 Neutral color
25 Pine leaf
26 Savage
28 College women
30 Wipe clean
31 Sloping walkway
32 Tabby
35 Sunbathe
36 Conceal
39 Bullfight cheer
40 Reply to a ques
41 Comic-book heroes
42 Avoid adroitly
44 Spew
46 Hippodromes
47 Four-leaf —
50 Mil material
51 Similarity
54 Flop
57 Muscat native
58 Brilliant sch.
59 Work as a model
60 Roused
61 Daughter
62 Writer Wister
63 Precious ornament
64 Exclusively
65 Tackles' co-workers

DOWN
1 Balkan
2 Imported car
3 Crisp veggies
4 Sandwich meat
5 Charge without proof
6 Not tight
7 Nursery item
8 At a distance
9 Hurled and gutted
10 Joins forces
11 Bashful
12 Bar seat
16 Actress Meara
21 Cuts into small pieces
22 Clumsy
24 Speaker's pauses
26 Greek cheese
27 Tehran's country
28 Insert mark
29 Porters
31 Can. law org.
32 Liquid popcorn
33 Hawkeye of "M*A*S*H"
34 Jeans partners
37 Long-distance commuter's home
38 Ghostly
43 Guitarist Paul
44 Flatter
45 Caustic to remember
46 Flamboyantly
47 As the — flies
48 Tart flavor
49 City near Kyoto
52 Tree whol
53 Compulsory ambition
53 You could hear a drop
55 Pre-owned
56 Bears shelters
59 "The Bells" author

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Bagel Sandwich
Chicken Tetrazzini
Garden Burger
Spanikopita

DINNER
Pepperoni Calzones
Beef Bourgulgnon
Cheese Calzones

Worcester

LUNCH
Bagel Sandwich
Chicken Tetrazzini
Sweet & Sour Tofu
Spanikopita

DINNER
Pepperoni Calzones
Beef Bourgulgnon
Cheese Calzones
Black Eyed Peas

Hampshire

LUNCH
Bagel Sandwich
Chicken Tetrazzini
Spanikopita

DINNER
Pepperoni Calzones
Beef Bourgulgnon
Cheese Calzones

Berkshire

LUNCH
Bagel Sandwich
Chicken Tetrazzini
Sweet & Sour Tofu
Spanikopita

DINNER
Pepperoni Calzones
Beef Bourgulgnon
Cheese Calzones
Black Eyed Peas

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Mr. White
Photo Technician	Becky Vegas
Copy Editor	Ziggy Stardust
Production Supervisor	Katie Ross Glue
Production Staff	DJ Jimmy G Vlad The Impaler

Sports

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

October 1,1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Minutewomen try to play giant killers at No.1 UConn

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Unlike the three unfortunate teens in this summer's Blair Witch debacle, the Massachusetts field hockey team is just about out of the woods.

But first, they've got to chop down its biggest tree.

The Minutewomen fill face their toughest challenge of the season on Sunday, when they travel to Storrs, CT to take on the top-ranked Huskies. Connecticut presents UMass (3-5) with its sixth-straight ranked opponent, a mere nine games into the '99 campaign.

"It doesn't matter whether UConn is the top team according to the coaches' poll; it's still a UMass-UConn game," said UM head coach Patti Shea. "The emotion is going to run high anyway."

The undefeated Huskies (6-0) have torn through their fair share of ranked teams as well, downing Penn State, New Hampshire, Princeton, and Harvard en route to their spot atop the polls.

Their biggest test came against the Nittany Lions on September 17th, when UConn forward Laura Klein netted the only goal of a tight 1-0 Huskie win. Not only did the upset unseat then-No.1 Penn State, it snapped their 25-game home winning streak.

Last season, the Huskies outlasted UMass in a 2-1 double-overtime thriller at Richard F. Garber field.

The Minutewomen have improved steadily this season, while weathering an arguably stronger schedule than UConn. Tough losses at the hands of No.3 North Carolina (4-1) and No.4 Maryland (7-0) gave the Maroon and White invaluable experience that should translate into an elevated level of play come NCAA tournament time.

"You take on the most challenging teams, and you learn from them," said senior co-captain Michelle Crooks. "You take that to your conference and win [those] games, and then you face all the top teams again. What they come with early on is what they're going to give you in October and November."

By then, the Minutewomen should have their high-powered field hockey machine in perfect running order. The offense, which has struggled throughout the early portion of the '99 campaign, finally caught fire in Wednesday's 3-2 comeback win over No.19 Harvard. Senior Chrissy Millbauer scored a pair of goals for UMass, while teammate Anke Bruemmer rocketed home one score off a UM penalty-corner.

Much of the Maroon and White's success against the Crimson can also be attributed to dramatic improvements in free hits and passes. The UM midfield, in particular sophomores Kaitlyn Byron and Jill Fantasia, turned a so-so first half on Wednesday into a clinic on precision passing over the last 35 minutes against Harvard.

"We had the first pass, but that second pass wasn't there; we weren't finishing the string," said Millbauer. "The first half was a lot of unfinished business."

One area which the Minutewomen appear to have perfected is team defense. Shea's backfield tandem of Kerry Ann Jaggassar and co-captain Lucy Koch have made an art of shutting down opposing offenses with a nifty combination of aggression and control.

The UMass goal may be its most solid position, where Welsh native Zowie Tucker took a step aside Wednesday to allow Crooks a chance to shine. The Pennsylvania native responded in style, notching two highlight-reel saves in the win.

And with a spectacular view of her team's performance from the net, Crooks feels that the comeback win was as fine a hockey display as it'll take to topple the Huskies.

"It took a lot for us to go down two on Harvard and come back," Crooks said. "Coming back from that is probably equally as difficult as playing a No.1 team."

Millbauer agrees, and cites her own experiences against UConn as proof enough that the two teams belong on the same field.

"It's going to take a lot Sunday to prove to UConn that we're better than them," Millbauer said. "We've played them every year since I've been here, and there's no reason why we shouldn't be good competition for them."

PAUL BCCIDAU

Lucy Koch and the rest of the UMass field hockey team will look to topple the top-ranked UConn Huskies on Sunday in Storrs, CT.

UM set for homecoming war

Minutemen try to shoot down Dutchmen

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Wanting and needing carry two different weighs. You want something, but that something is not necessarily needed.

Only three games into the season, the Massachusetts football team needs a victory not so much for the win column but to boost the overall morale of a team that is at a shortage of confidence.

Oh, but the Flying Dutchmen of Hofstra want it. They want it so badly.

Tomorrow at McGuirk Alumni Stadium, the Minutemen take on Hofstra nearly a year to the day after demoralizing the Flying Dutchmen at Hofstra Stadium. Falling 40-35 at home against the Minutemen still rings for the fifth-ranked Dutchmen, who venture north to Amherst with much more on its collective mind than simply coming away with its fifth victory of the season. There's much more to this equation than upending the defending national champions.

The loss certainly stung, but the way it happened has Hofstra looking for revenge.

Leading 12-0 at halftime, holding an explosive UMass offense to just 98 yards in the first half, looked to be cruising to victory against a jumpstart Minuteman squad. Then... The Collapse.

UMass (1-2, 1-0 Atlantic 10 Conference) finally lit the scoreboard when Dan Healey blocked a punt early in the third quarter that was recovered in the end zone by Willie Hemmer for a touchdown. Unblemished through a half, the proverbial floodgates blew open and then some, as Todd Bankhead found Adrian Zullo on an out-and-in pattern with three seconds remaining to cap the miraculous comeback. The 40 points was the most Hofstra had given up in a half in team history.

Turn to Football, page 7

FOOTBALL
UMASS VS. HOFSTRA
TOMORROW AT NOON
91.1 FM-WMUA
DAVID ROSE-PLAY
MARK FIETO-COLOR
WMUA PREVIEW

This weekend's game time has been changed to noon time to accommodate Homecoming festivities.

In the past, Homecoming Weekend has provided UMass with a post to lean on as the the Minutemen have been victorious for the past seven seasons.

"The one thing we have going for us is that it will be at home, after playing on the road the last two weeks," head coach Mark Whipple said. "It will be good to get back in front of our home fans and, hopefully, give them something to cheer about again because they deserve it."

Ranked second two weeks ago, the Minutemen have fallen to 16th in the country with two consecutive road losses, including last weekend's 24-3 defeat at the hands of Division 1-A Toledo.

Two weeks after his 92-yard, four touchdown performance against New Hampshire, Adrian Zullo pulled a disappearing act in the Minutemen's visit to Toledo, catching just a single pass in the offensive shutdown against the Rockets. His frustration is a microcosm of the Minuteman offense thus far, especially in the first quarter, as UMass has yet to score in the opening frame in three games.

"We went into the Toledo game thinking we were going to win, and we felt that way until the fourth quarter," Whipple said. "We hung in there, we just didn't get the things done that we needed to."

Quarterback Todd Bankhead has struggled in opening up the '99 campaign, under the microscope last week against the Rockets. Despite a fractured wrist on his non-throwing hand, Bankhead got the nod but was ineffective, completing just 13 of 30 passes for 97 yards and two interceptions. The Minutemen's inability to move the ball was never more evident than against the 1-A Rockets.

"They are a good football team, and I think we are

BRYAN MCDERMOTT

Marcel Shipp will look to rack up his sixteenth-straight 100 yard game when he hits the field against Hofstra tomorrow at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

Maroon and White tops Vermont

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team left Vermont victorious on Wednesday, proving that they are as good as it gets. The Minutemen overpowered Vermont, winning all of their singles matches in straight sets and winning their doubles matches as well.

In the number one singles slot, senior Parsa Samii defeated Ryan Burnet 6-1, 6-4, while freshman Will Shaw came up with a win against David Nesin 6-3, 6-3 in the number two spot. Juniors Fabien Rabanal and Bill Greener, along with senior Josh Bainton and sophomore Todd Champeau, topped it all off by winning their singles matches as well.

Assistant men's tennis coach Scott Wilkins spoke enthusiastically about his team's performance.

"I'm happy with the outcome. We weren't sure what to expect, but we knew we had the stronger, deeper team. The last few years maybe a few of the guys didn't take the match as seriously as they should have and were therefore too confident, so we only beat them 5-2," Wilkins said. "But this year we took care of our business, everyone took care of their own matches, stayed positive and finished them off 7-0, so I was happy with that business like effort, that no one took them too lightly."

Bill Greener

Where there is commonly a large discrepancy between the experience level of underclassmen and upperclassmen, all members of this years' team have been demonstrating near equal playing ability and maturity.

The strength of the younger team members was evident on Wednesday, when they faced Vermont without key player Steve Prisco, who was ill. Despite the fact that many of the remaining participating players were also ill, the Minutemen still walked away undefeated.

Freshman Will Shaw also stepped up to help lead the Minutemen to victory. "I think Will is well equipped because he keeps his head, he's very mature, and he has a very good all around game," said Wilkins. "I expect big things and I've already seen good things from Will, so he's a player of the future and going in the direction we want to go, and we're going to build around him as well as Steve Prisco."

Also doing his part to help elevate his team was junior Bill Greener, who successfully played his first match since recovering from a sprained ankle. Greener won the first set 6-2, but then fell behind 2-5. He then

Turn to Minutemen page 7

UMass blows Red Storm off the map, 8-1, in NY

By Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

One game does not a season make. But try telling that to the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team, who will try to savor their first victory of the season for as long as humanly possible. Wednesday the squad absolutely obliterated the St. Johns Red Storm by a score of 8-1 on the beautiful vista of the US Tennis Center in Flushing Meadows, New York.

The win evened the team's record at 1-1 on the year. Equally impressive was the fact that the win comes on the heels of a tough home loss to Columbia; that match that could have easily gone either way.

Coach Judy Dixon was somewhat concerned about her team's focus following the Columbia loss. But luckily for Dixon, the Minutewomen had a bad case of amnesia and buried that match deep in the recesses of their minds.

Starting at number one singles was Ola Gerasimova. If the senior wanted to relish her time playing in Flushing Meadows, she certainly didn't show it. Gerasimova wasted little time in dispatching her opponent Rohika Hardas in a mere two sets (6-2 6-0) to chalk up her victory. "Ola played well, and she played aggressively," coach Judy Dixon said after the match.

Gerasimova's domination seemed to trickle down to the rest of the squad. Coming off her recent forearm injury, sophomore Helena Horak showed little signs of being rusty. Instead of playing defensively, Horak was fierce. "Helena dictated the play in her match, which was somewhat of a surprise," Dixon said. And who could blame Dixon for expecting more of a tentative style of play from her number two singles player, who hadn't played a match in three weeks? But St.Johns' Corina Cetateanu was little trouble for Horak, who blasted her way to a 6-1, 6-1 victory, and also had little time to enjoy the home of the US Open.

But the good times didn't end there. When the smoke finally cleared, the Minutewomen had garnered six of a possible six wins in the singles bracket. Annie Hamilton at the number three slot beat up on her counterpart, Natalie Mitchell, 6-1, 6-2. "Annie played beautifully and had no problems," said Dixon in praise of her number three singles player after the match. Hamilton's play has not gone unnoticed. After battling her way to a hard fought victory versus Columbia, she has taken her game to the next level in a this season

Dixon did make some minor adjustments to her lineup prior to the St.Johns match, moving her usual number four singles player Robyn Lebovitz down to number five. Taking her place in the fourth slot was Katie Stammen, a true freshman. Neither really missed a beat. Lebovitz earned herself a convincing victory by downing the Red Storms Erin Jackson in two sets (6-1,6-1). Freshman sensation Katie Stammen dominated as well, winning in straight sets 6-2, 6-2 over her St. Johns foe Vera Efstathiou.

Dixon felt that Robyn's win was only part of her success. The coach felt that the win really gave back the co-captain's confidence, which she felt may have waned in recent weeks.

Freshman Beth Ebert completed the perfect day at singles by defeating Mirela Blanaru 6-7(7-5), 6-0, 7-5. The other two points came at doubles, where the tandem of Ola Gerasimova and Annie Hamilton defeated the duo of Hardas and Cetateanu 9-8(7-5), having to go to a tie-breaker to finally decide the match. Finally Lebovitz and Stammen teamed up to form a formidable pair, cruising in their match against Mitchell Efstathiou 8-2. In fact the only loss of the day came at number three singles, where coach Judy Dixon decided not to play a tandem of Horak and another member. This was a wise move, considering the Minutewomen didn't need to win the point and thus were able to rest

Turn to Tennis, page 7

Men's soccer out to bully A-10 foes

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

"Thank you sir, may I have another," is what the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team hopes to hear after they attempt to paddle their floundering Atlantic 10 opponents into submission this weekend.

The Minutemen will enter this weekend 3-4 on the season, but 0-1 in the Atlantic 10. However, UMass will try to turn it around, as they will play two at Totman Field on Friday and Sunday. The games will mark the second and third A-10 games for the Maroon and White.

The teams that will trek to UMass to challenge the Minutemen this weekend are Temple University and Saint Joseph's University. Both will be looking for a victory to improve their standing in the Atlantic 10.

Temple has a 3-4-1 record and is 1-0 in the A-10. They are just coming of a loss to Pennsylvania, where they were defeated 3-1. Their game against UMass will be one half of a two-game road trip, which could work in the Minutemen's favor since the Owls have yet to find themselves in the win column after a single away game this season. But for UMass to be successful, they must shut down Temple's leading scorer and point man, Kevin Kelly. Kelly has found the back of the net eight times this season and has personally nailed the coffin shut on two teams, scoring the winning goal in both games.

Not scoring any winning goals in any games this season is St. Joseph's, which heads towards the weekend with a 0-8-1 record. With respect to the A-10, St. Joseph's is at 0-1 after losing to Temple last weekend for the second time this season. As a unit, the Hawks have only beaten goalkeepers nine times, but have watched their goal keeper retrieve the ball from the back of the net 27 times. If there were any highlights to St. Joseph's season it would have to be that they have only been shutout twice, which is less than the shutouts endured by UM.

However, in defense of UMass, the Minutemen have tallied 16 team goals with senior Adam Black holding five to his credit. Black is also this season's leading point man, with eleven points in nine games. On the other end of the field, senior goalie and captain Todd Fowler has combined with sophomore goalie Bryan O'Quinn to keep the Minutemen competitive in many of their games this season.

This weekend's couple of games will be an important series for UMass. The end-of-season A-10 tournament is only composed of four teams, and UMass needs to accumu-

BRYAN MCDERMOTT

Bo Cassidy and his fellow Minutemen will surely get a kick out of hosting Temple and St. Josephs this weekend at Totman field.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

Monday, October 4,1999

Volume CVJ Issue LXJ

Body of UM student found in locked car

The body of a University of Massachusetts student was discovered Friday in a car parked in a lot in the Puffton Village apartments. The student has yet to be identified by the Amherst Police Department.

The 26 year-old was discovered in the backseat of his locked automobile at 1:55 p.m. Friday. The car was parked in a parking lot adjacent to a pool. Officers from the Amherst Police and Fire Departments responded to the call.

Upon discovery that the car was locked, windows were smashed out of the car so that officers could get to the body.

According to the police, no foul play is suspected, but the death is still under investigation.

Both detectives of the Amherst Police Department and the Massachusetts State Police are investigating the death. The name of the deceased individual is being withheld until the student's family members can be identified and informed of the death.

– Sam Willkinson

Votes come in on Senate questions

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday, nine percent of the University of Massachusetts student body voted in the Student Government Association elections.

According to Jeremy Rouille, the chancellor of elections for the SGA, the voter turnout was "up a little from last year." Rouille attributed the increased student participation to the two referendum questions added to the ballot for this year's Student Senate elections.

On the first referendum question, which regards adding new cable stations to the existing campus cable selections, 1,206 students voted in support of the motion to add the new stations, while 249 students voted against adding the new stations. The second referendum question dealt with the issue of alcohol violations for students under the age of 21. On question two, 255 students voted that the University should inform parents about student alcohol violations, while 1,235 students voted against the proposal.

Students also voted for Student Senate representatives. For the Southwest Residential Area, the five elected-at-large senators are Kim Salaycik, Kerry Mulcahy, Dan Morrissey, Johnathon Laubinger, Liz Bradley, and William Greener. For Coolidge Residence Tower, the two Senators elected were Jim Eltringham and Rebecca Silverman. For Kennedy Residence Tower, the Senate representatives are Rebecca Austern, and Nick Clement and Justin Dunne, who were tied in votes. For Patterson Residence Hall, the elected area representative is Joshua Osowski. For John Quincy Adams Residence Tower, the elected representatives are Matthew Dailey, and Kris Lundberg and Sam Nostraitra, locked in a tie. David Soffer is now representing Cance Residence Hall. Sofia Cozzolino is Pierpont Residence Hall's representative. The representatives for Washington Residence Tower are Keith Arnowitz and Adam Cardinal. The representatives for John Adams Tower are Colleen Gilchrist and Megan Van Orden.

In the Northeast Residential Area,

Turn to ELECTION page 2

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Saturday drive
Two of the Homecoming Parade participants ride in their classic car.

Orchard Hill students propose new purple parking lot

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The grass field that once existed in Orchard Hill has turned to soiled dust since students started parking on it, and University of Massachusetts Parking Services, the Student Government Association (SGA), and Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) are considering turning what once served as a recreational area into a new purple-sticker parking lot.

According to SGA President Jeff Howe, he has received a number of complaints from students in regards to a lack of parking availability in Orchard Hill. Howe said that the issue was dealt with last year in the SGA Senate, but was overwhelmingly shut down when a number of senators objected to creating another parking lot.

But because students have started parking on the grass adjacent to Grayson Residence Hall this semester, it has been suggested that the area is a "natural spot for a parking lot." Howe said. Howe went to Parking Services Director Michael Brennan stating that he wanted the issue re-considered.

"The new parking lot would provide an additional 50 spaces and would be something that immediately impacts students of Orchard Hill and Central in a positive way," Howe said.

Howe said Brennan was in favor of the new lot, but since it was a financial issue, the feasibility of creating the lot would have to be considered by the Physical Plant. Howe said he recently spoke with Brennan, who told him the project will go on.

But for students like Grayson senator Asif Sayani, a junior biology major, the idea of creating a parking lot out of an area that he said was never meant to be one makes him want to fight against it.

"At first it sounded like a good idea, but the more it was considered and thought about, we realized that it would really suck to have a parking lot there," Sayani said.

According to Sayani, he was the only senator that spoke out against the motion of creating another parking area in Orchard Hill.

Sayani said it would cost approximately $30,000 to create 50 available parking spaces. He said this kind of money could be spent in better ways.

"The money was a major concern," Sayani said. "The money could easily be spent on renovating the yellow lot and providing better lighting in the yellow lot."

Sayani also said "cleaning out the tree line could easily mean cleaning out the trees in the areas which would possibly cause imbalance of the ecosystem to the area."

Sayani explained that the existing purple lot across from Webster was created four years ago because of the same problem: a lack of parking spaces. Sayani said he doesn't see how this new space will prevent the need for another parking lot in the future when these spaces become over-populated with the number of purple-sticker-holders.

Sayani said he has met with Brennan on various occasions to discuss the issue and started a petition that was sent to Brennan and Chancellor David K. Scott. Despite these efforts, Sayani said he has gotten nowhere.

Orchard Hill Governor Jefferson Smith, a senior history, political science, and philosophy major, said he is hesitant to approve or disapprove of the issue without hearing from the student body.

If we can get a consensus by the students on what proposal is best, then it would certainly make it easier for Parking Services to execute their plans in the Orchard Hill Area," Smith said.

Smith said that he has planned to arrange a public meeting with students, Parking Services, SGA, and OHAG at some point during the next week.

"This is going to be a big meeting because hopefully all parking proposals will be considered." Smith said.

California computer snafu previews Y2K meltdown

By Virginia Ellis
Los Angeles Times

SACRAMENTO, Calif. – In an unwelcome preview of what a Y2K meltdown could be like, massive computer crashes have repeatedly forced agencies throughout California to turn away customers for driver's licenses, food vouchers, and other services.

The California Highway Patrol suddenly had difficulty checking criminal records. Child Protective Services could not get quick access to abuse files. For two days Glendale's Department of Motor Vehicles office had to process driver's license renewals manually. And one consulting firm clocked 19,000 minutes of intermittent outages – an eternity in the fast-paced world of computer technology – from January to July.

"This has been a lot worse than anything we expect from Y2K," said Elias S. Cortez, the state's chief information officer.

But the problem, which state officials fear may be ongoing, is not another botched computer project. It is the phone

Turn to Y2K page 2

BARBARA BRADBURY/ COLLEGIAN

Music with style
The UMass Amherst Marching Band tuba players strut around in shades and tuxedos.

Sony co-founder dies

By John Burgess
Washington Post

Akio Morita, co-founder of Sony Corp. and principal matchmaker in the world's love affair with consumer electronics, died yesterday of pneumonia in Tokyo at the age of 78.

With $500 in capital, Morita cofounded the company in 1946 in a Tokyo building that still bore the scorches of wartime fires. Over the next half-century, he helped hook the planet on one electronic product after another – the tape recorder, the transistor radio, the VCR, the Walkman, the compact disc.

Before Sony, home electronics meant large, expensive units with wooden cabinets in affluent homes. Drawing on new technology and marketing concepts, Morita helped create "personal electronics," with products falling in price, weight, and size even as they rose in capability.

Morita's company created tens of thousands of jobs in the wake of the World War II defeat, and helped turn the words "Made in Japan" into a symbol of unsurpassable quality. "I consider him one of the people who brought Japan back from where it was in the '40s and created a new industrial concept," said Henry A. Kissinger, who first met Morita in the 1970s during a visit to Japan as secretary of state.

As Sony blossomed into a giant with plants and billboards around the world – its corporate group's sales rang up at $57 billion in the last fiscal year – the ebullient Morita functioned variously as product conceiver, business strategist, and chief salesman. He rarely seemed more animated than when demonstrating a brand new product.

He was proud to dream up things that people had no idea they wanted. "Our plan is to lead the public with new products rather than ask them what kind of products they want," he wrote in "Made in Japan," a 1986 autobiography. "The public does not know what is possible, but we do."

Garrulous and fluent in English, he traveled abroad extensively and counted as friends such people as conductor Leonard Bernstein and Katharine Graham, chairman of the executive committee of The Washington Post Co.; U.S. ambassadors were guests at his home in Tokyo.

Sporting hair that turned silver early in life and was parted down the middle in the style of a prewar Tokyo dandy, he put a glamorous face on the normally drab and anonymous business leadership of his country. Morita's Sony was an early leader in putting manufacturing plants abroad, and naming foreigners to important executive positions.

Morita had his share of failures – his Beta video system lost a world contest against the rival VHS. But his company nonetheless achieved near universal recognition.

Morita was born Jan. 26, 1921, into a wealthy family that owned a sake-brewing business in the industrial city of Nagoya. The young Morita became an obsessive electronics hobbyist, neglecting his schoolwork to build a crude phonograph and radio.

He studied physics in university, and at the time of Japan's surrender to the World War II allies in 1945, he was a newly commissioned lieutenant in the Japanese navy, researching heat-seeking weapons.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 58 LOW: 40	HIGH: 61 LOW: 37

SOURCE: WEATHER.COM

Water and Garbage Everywhere
Almost 1,000 volunteers gathered this past Saturday to clean up the Connecticut River. Read about what they found inside.

PAGE 3

Kings Seize Gold
Despite opening on a record number of screens, Three Kings disappointed at the box office. Check out our box office report as well as our review of the war dramedy. Read about all the weekend's activity in today's Arts !! will drive you crazy.

PAGE 5

Meyers and the Minutewomen
Jill Meyers and the Minutewomen volleyball team defeated Fordham and Duquesne this weekend. With her performances, Meyers became the all-time block leader at UMass.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Sports

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — October 1, 1999

Minutewomen try to play giant killers at No.1 UConn

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Unlike the three unfortunate teens in this summer's Blair Witch debacle, the Massachusetts field hockey team is just about out of the woods.

But first, they've got to chop down its biggest tree.

The Minutewomen (11) face their toughest challenge of the season on Sunday, when they travel to Storrs, CT to take on the top-ranked Huskies. Connecticut presents UMass (3-5) with its sixth-straight ranked opponent, a mere nine games into the '99 campaign.

"It doesn't matter whether UConn is the top team according to the coaches' poll, it's still a UMass-UConn game," said UM head coach Patty Shea. "The emotion is going to run high anyway."

The undefeated Huskies (6-0) have torn through their fair share of ranked teams as well, downing Penn State, New Hampshire, Princeton, and Harvard en route to their spot atop the polls.

Their biggest test came against the Nittany Lions on September 17th, when UConn forward Laura Klein netted the only goal of a tight 1-0 Huskie win. Not only did the upset un-seat then-No.1 Penn State, it snapped their 25-game home winning streak.

Last season, the Huskies outlasted UMass in a 2-1 double-overtime thriller at Richard F. Garber field.

The Minutewomen have improved steadily this season, while weathering an arguably stronger schedule than UConn. Tough losses at the hands of No.5 North Carolina (4-1) and No.4 Maryland (7-0) gave the Maroon and White invaluable experience that should translate into an elevated level of play come NCAA tournament time.

"You take on the most challenging teams, and you learn from them," said senior co-captain Michelle Crooks. "You take that to your conference and win [those] games, and then you face all the top teams again. What they come with early on is what they're going to give you in October and November."

By then, the Minutewomen should have their high-powered field hockey machine in perfect running order. The offense, which has struggled throughout the early portion of the '99 campaign, finally caught fire in Wednesday's 3-2 comeback win over No.19 Harvard. Senior Chrissy Millbauer scored a pair of goals for UMass, while teammate Anke Bruemmer rocketed home one score off a UM penalty-corner.

Much of the Maroon and White's success against the Crimson can also be attributed to dramatic improvements in free hits and passes. The UM midfield, in particular sophomores Kaitlyn Byron and Jill Fantasia, turned a so-so first half on Wednesday into a clinic on precision passing over the last 35 minutes against Harvard.

"We had the first pass, but that second pass wasn't there; we weren't finishing the string," said Millbauer. "The first half was a lot of unfinished business."

One area which the Minutewomen appear to have perfected is team defense. Shea's backfield tandem of Kerry Ann Jaggassar and co-captain Lucy Koch have made an art of shutting down opposing offenses with a nifty combination of aggression and control.

The UMass goal may be its most solid position, where Welsh native Zowie Tucker took a step aside Wednesday to allow Crooks a chance to shine. The Pennsylvania native responded in style, notching two highlight-reel saves in the win.

And with a spectacular view of her team's performance from the net, Crooks feels that the comeback win was as fine a hockey display as it'll take to topple the Huskies.

"It took a lot for us to go down two on Harvard and come back," Crooks said. "Coming back from that is probably equally as difficult as playing a No.1 team."

Millbauer agrees, and cites her own experiences against UConn as proof enough that the two teams belong on the same field.

"It's going to take a lot Sunday to prove to UConn that we're better than them," Millbauer said. "We've played them every year since I've been here, and there's no reason why we shouldn't be good competition for them."

PAUL BUCCIONI

Lucy Koch and the rest of the UMass field hockey team will look to topple the top-ranked UConn Huskies on Sunday in Storrs, CT.

Maroon and White tops Vermont

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts men's tennis team left Vermont victorious on Wednesday, proving that they are as good as it gets. The Minutemen overpowered Vermont, winning all of their singles matches in straight sets and winning their doubles matches as well.

In the number one singles slot, senior Parsa Samii defeated Ryan Burton 6-1, 6-4, while freshman Will Shaw came up with a win against David Sevin 6-5, 6-3 in the number two spot. Juniors Fabien Rabanal and Bill Greener, along with senior Josh Bainton and sophomore Todd Champeau, topped it all off by winning their singles matches as well.

Assistant men's tennis coach Scott Wilkins spoke enthusiastically about his team's performance.

"I'm happy with the outcome. We weren't sure what to expect, but we knew we had the stronger, deeper team. The last few years maybe a few of the guys didn't take the match as seriously as they should have and were therefore too confident, so we only beat them 5-2," Wilkins said. "But this year we took care of our business, everyone took care of their own matches, stated positive and finished them off 7-0, so I was happy with that business like effort, that no one took them too lightly."

Bill Greener

Where there is commonly a large discrepancy between the experience level of underclassmen and upperclassmen, all members of this years' team have been demonstrating near equal playing ability and maturity.

The strength of the younger team members was evident on Wednesday, when they faced Vermont without key player Steve Prisco, who was ill. Despite the fact that many of the remaining participating players were also ill, the Minutemen still walked away undefeated.

Freshman Will Shaw also stepped up to help lead the Minutemen to victory. "I think Will is well equipped because he keeps his head, he's very mature, and he has a very good all around game," said Wilkins. "I expect big things and I've already seen good things from Will, so he's a player of the future and going in the direction we want to go, and we're going to build around him as well as Steve Prisco."

Also doing his part to help elevate his team was junior Bill Greener, who successfully played his first match since recovering from a sprained ankle. Greener won the first set 6-2, but then fell behind 2-5. He then

Turn to Minutemen page 7

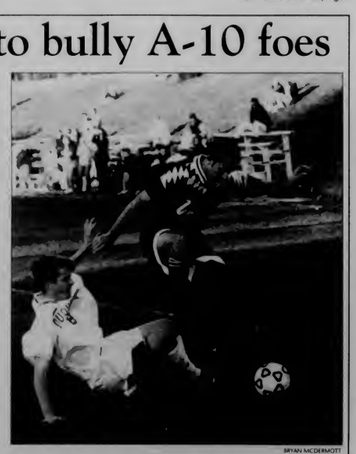
Men's soccer out to bully A-10 foes

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

"Thank you sir, may I have another;" is what the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team hopes to hear after they attempt to paddle their floundering Atlantic 10 opponents into submission this weekend.

The Minutemen will enter this weekend 3-4 on the season, but 0-1 in the Atlantic 10. However, UMass will try to turn it around, as they will play two at Totman Field on Friday and Sunday. The games will mark the second and third A-10 games for the Maroon and White.



The teams that will trek to UMass to challenge the Minutemen this weekend are Temple University and Saint Joseph's University. Both will be looking for a victory to improve their standing in the Atlantic 10.

Temple has a 3-4-1 record and is 1-0 in the A-10. They are just coming off a loss to Pennsylvania, where they were defeated 3-1. Their game against UMass will be one half of a two-game road trip, which could work in the Minutemen's favor since the Owls have yet to find themselves in the win column after a single away game this season. But for UMass to be successful, they must shut down Temple's leading scorer and point man, Kevin Kelly. Kelly has found the back of the net eight times this season and has personally nailed the coffin shut on two teams, scoring the winning goal in both games.

Not scoring any winning goals in any games this season is St. Joseph's, which heads towards the weekend with a 0-8-1 record. With respect to the A-10, St. Joseph's is at 0-1 after losing to Temple last weekend for the second time this season. As a unit, the Hawks have only beaten goalkeepers nine times, but have watched their goal keeper retrieve the ball from the back of the net 27 times. If there were any highlights to St. Joseph's season it would have to be that they have only been shutout twice, which is less than the shutouts endured by UM.

However, in defense of UMass, the Minutemen have tallied 16 team goals with senior Adam Black holding five to his credit. Black is also this season's leading point man, with eleven points in nine games. On the other end of the field, senior goalie and captain Todd Fowler has combined with sophomore goalie Bryan O'Quinn to keep the Minutemen competitive in many of their games this season.

This weekend's couple of games will be an important series for UMass. The end-of-season A-10 tournament is only composed of four teams, and UMass needs to accumulate enough points to be one of them. Currently, the Minutemen are in 11th place, but only two points behind 8th place Rhode Island.

BRYAN MCDERMOTT

Bo Cassidy and his fellow Minutemen will surely get a kick out of hosting Temple and St. Josephs this weekend at Totman field.

UM set for homecoming war

Minutemen try to shoot down Dutchmen

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Wanting and needing carry two different weights. You want something, but that something is not necessarily needed.

Only three games into the season, the Massachusetts football team needs a victory not so much for the win column but to boost the overall morale of a team that is at a shortage of confidence.

Oh, but the Flying Dutchmen of Hofstra want it. They want it so badly.

Tomorrow at McGuirk Alumni Stadium, the Minutemen take on Hofstra nearly a year to the day after demoralizing the Flying Dutchmen at Hofstra Stadium. Falling 40-35 at home against the Minutemen still rings for the fifth-ranked Dutchmen, who venture north to Amherst with much more on its collective mind than simply coming away with its fifth victory of the season. There's much more to this equation than upending the defending national champions.

The loss certainly stung, but the way it happened has Hofstra looking for revenge.

Leading 12-0 at halftime, holding an explosive UMass offense to just 98 yards in the first half, looked to be cruising to victory against a jumpstart Minuteman squad. Then... The Collapse.

UMass (1-2, 1-0 Atlantic 10 Conference) finally lit the scoreboard when Dan Healey blocked a punt early in the third quarter that was recovered in the end zone by Willie Hemmer for a touchdown. Unblemished through a half, the proverbial floodgates blew open and then some, as Todd Bankhead found Adrian Zullo on an out-and-in pattern with three seconds remaining to cap the miraculous comeback. The 40 points was the most Hofstra had given up in a half in team history.

FOOTBALL
UMASS VS. HOFSTRA
TOMORROW AT NOON
91.1 FM-WMUA
DAVID ROSE-PLAY
MARK FIETO-COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

This weekend's game time has been changed to noon time to accommodate Homecoming festivities.

In the past, Homecoming Weekend has provided UMass with a post to lean on as the the Minutemen have been victorious for the past seven seasons.

"The one thing we have going for us is that it will be at home, after playing on the road the last two weeks," head coach Mark Whipple said. "It will be good to get back in front of our home fans and, hopefully, give them something to cheer about again because they deserve it."

Ranked second two weeks ago, the Minutemen have fallen to 16th in the country with two consecutive road losses, including last weekend's 24-7 defeat at the hands of Division 1-A Toledo.

Two weeks after his 92-yard, four touchdown performance against New Hampshire, Adrian Zullo pulled a disappearing act in the Minutemen's visit to Toledo, catching just a single pass in the offensive shutdown against the Rockets. His frustration is a microcosm of the Minuteman offense thus far, especially in the first quarter, as UMass has yet to score in the opening frame in three games.

"We went into the Toledo game thinking we were going to win, and we felt that way until the fourth quarter," Whipple said. "We hung in there, we just didn't get the things done that we needed to."

Quarterback Todd Bankhead has struggled in opening up the '99 campaign, under the microscope last week against the Rockets. Despite a fractured wrist on his non-throwing hand, Bankhead got the nod but was ineffective, completing just 13 of 30 passes for 97 yards and two interceptions. The Minutemen's inability to move the ball was never more evident than against the 1-A Rockets.

"They are a good football team, and I think we are

Turn to Football, page 7

BRYAN MCDERMOTT

Marcel Shipp will look to rack up his sixteenth-straight 100 yard game when he hits the field against Hofstra tomorrow at McGuirk Alumni Stadium.

UMass blows Red Storm off the map, 8-1, in NY

By Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

One game does not a season make. But try telling that to the University of Massachusetts women's tennis team, who will try to savor their first victory of the season for as long as humanly possible. Wednesday the squad absolutely obliterated the St. Johns Red Storm by a score of 8-1 on the beautiful vista of the US Tennis Center in Flushing Meadows, New York.

The win evened the team's record at 1-1 on the year. Equally impressive was the fact that the win comes on the heels of a tough home loss to Columbia; that match that could have easily gone either way.

Coach Judy Dixon was somewhat concerned about her team's focus following the Columbia loss. But luckily for Dixon, the Minutewomen had a bad case of amnesia and buried that match deep in the recesses of their minds.

Starting at number one singles was Ola Gerasimova. If the senior wanted to relish her time playing in Flushing Meadows, she certainly didn't show it. Gerasimova wasted little time in dispatching her opponent Rohika Hardas in a mere two sets (6-2,6-0) to chalk up her victory. "Ola played well, and she played aggressively," coach Judy Dixon said after the match.

Gerasimova's domination seemed to trickle down to the rest of the squad. Coming off her recent forearm injury, sophomore Helena Horak showed little signs of being rusty. Instead of playing defensively, Horak was fierce. "Helena dictated the play in her match, which was somewhat of a surprise," Dixon said. And who could blame Dixon for expecting more of a tentative style of play from her number two singles player, who hadn't played a match in three weeks? But St.Johns' Corina Cetateanu was little trouble for Horak, who blasted her way to a 6-1, 6-1 victory, and also had little time to enjoy the home of the US Open.

But the good times didn't end there. When the smoke finally cleared, the Minutewomen had garnered six of a possible six wins in the singles bracket. Annie Hamilton at the number three slot beat up on her counterpart, Natalie Mitchell, 6-1, 6-2. "Annie played beautifully and had no problems," said Dixon in praise of her number three singles player after the match.

Hamilton's play has not gone unnoticed. After battling her way to a hard fought victory versus Columbia, she has taken her game to the next level in a this season

Dixon did make some minor adjustments to her lineup prior to the St.Johns match, moving her usual number four singles player Robyn Lebovitz down to number five. Taking her place in the fourth slot was Katie Stammen, a true freshman. Neither really missed a beat. Lebovitz earned herself a convincing victory by downing the Red Storms Erin Jackson in two sets (6-1,6-1). Freshman sensation Katie Stammen dominated as well, winning in straight sets 6-2, 6-2 over her St. Johns foe Vera Efstathiou.

Dixon felt that Robyn's win was only part of her success. The coach felt that the win really gave back the co-captain's confidence, which she felt may have waned in recent weeks.

Freshman Beth Ebert completed the perfect day at singles by defeating Mirela Blanaru 6-7(7-5), 6-0, 7-5. The other two points came at doubles, where the tandem of Ola Gerasimova and Annie Hamilton defeated the duo of Hardas and Cetateau 9-8(7-3), having to go to a tie-breaker to finally decide the match. Finally Lebovitz and Stammen teamed up to form a formidable pair, cruising in their match against Mitchell Efstathiou 8-2. In fact the only loss of the day came at number three singles, where coach Judy Dixon decided not to play a tandem of Horak and another member. This was a wise move, considering the Minutewomen didn't need to win the point and thus were able to rest

Turn to Tennis, page 7

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CXX Issue XXX — Monday, October 4, 1999

Body of UM student found in locked car

The body of a University of Massachusetts student was discovered Friday in a car parked in a lot in the Puffton Village apartments. The student has yet to be identified by the Amherst Police Department.

The 26 year-old was discovered in the backseat of his locked automobile at 1:55 p.m. Friday. The car was parked in a parking lot adjacent to a pool. Officers from the Amherst Police and Fire Departments responded to the call.

Upon discovery that the car was locked, windows were smashed out of the car so that officers could get to the body.

According to the police, no foul play is suspected, but the death is still under investigation.

Both detectives of the Amherst Police Department and the Massachusetts State Police are investigating the death. The name of the deceased individual is being withheld until the student's family members can be identified and informed of the death.

– Sam Wilkinson

Votes come in on Senate questions

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday, nine percent of the University of Massachusetts student body voted in the Student Government Association elections.

According to Jeremy Rouille, the chancellor of elections for the SGA, the voter turnout was "up a little from last year." Rouille attributed the increased student participation to the two referendum questions added to the ballot for this year's Student Senate elections.

On the first referendum question, which regards adding new cable stations to the existing campus cable selections, 1,206 students voted in support of the motion to add the new stations, while 249 students voted against adding the new stations. The second referendum question dealt with the issue of alcohol violations for students under the age of 21. On question two, 255 students voted that the University should inform parents about student alcohol violations, while 1,235 students voted against the proposal.

Students also voted for Student Senate representatives. For the Southwest Residential Area, the five elected-at-large senators are Kim Salaycik, Kerry Mulcahy, Dan Morrissey, Johnathon Laubinger, Liz Bradley, and William Greener. For Coolidge Residence Tower, the two Senators elected were Jim Eltringham and Rebecca Silverman. For Kennedy Residence Tower, the Senate representatives are Rebecca Austern, and Nick Clement and Justin Dunne, who were tied in votes. For Patterson Residence Hall, the elected area representative is Joshua Osowski. For John Quincy Adams Residence Tower, the elected representatives are Matthew Dailey, and Kris Lundberg and Sani Nostraitra, locked in a tie. David Soffer is now representing Cance Residence Hall. Sofia Cozzolino is Perpont Residence Hall's representative. The representatives for Washington Residence Tower are Keith Arnowitz and Adam Cardinal. The representatives for John Adams Tower are Colleen Gilchrist and Megan Van Orden.

In the Northeast Residential Area,

Turn to ELECTION, page 2

BARBARA BRADBURY/COLLEGIAN

Saturday drive
Two of the Homecoming Parade participants ride in their classic car.

Orchard Hill students propose new purple parking lot

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

The grass field that once existed in Orchard Hill has turned to soiled dust since students started parking on it, and University of Massachusetts Parking Services, the Student Government Association (SGA), and Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) are considering turning what once served as a recreational area into a new purple-sticker parking lot.

According to SGA President Jeff Howe, he has received a number of complaints from students in regards to a lack of parking availability in Orchard Hill. Howe said that the issue was dealt with last year in the SGA Senate, but was overwhelmingly shot down when a number of senators objected to creating another parking lot.

But because students have started parking on the grass adjacent to Grayson Residence Hall this semester, it has been suggested that the area is a "natural spot for a parking lot," Howe said. Howe went to Parking Services Director Michael Brennan stating that he wanted the issue re-considered.

"The new parking lot would provide an additional 50 spaces and would be something that immediately impacts students of Orchard Hill and Central in a positive way," Howe said.

Howe said Brennan was in favor of the new lot, but since it was a financial issue, the feasibility of creating the lot would have to be considered by the Physical Plant. Howe said he recently spoke with Brennan, who told him the project will go on.

But for students like Grayson senator Asif Sayani, a junior biology major, the idea of creating a parking lot out of an area that he said was never meant to be one makes him want to fight against it.

"At first it sounded like a good idea, but the more it was considered and thought about, we realized that it would really suck to have a parking lot there," Sayani said.

According to Sayani, he was the only senator that spoke out against the motion of creating another parking area in Orchard Hill.

Sayani said it would cost approximately $30,000 to create 50 available parking spaces. He said this kind of money could be spent in better ways.

"The money was a major concern," Sayani said. "The money could easily be spent on renovating the yellow lot and providing better lighting in the yellow lot."

Sayani also said "cleaning out the tree line could easily mean cleaning out the trees in the areas which would possibly cause imbalance of the ecosystem to the area."

Sayani explained that the existing purple lot across from Webster was created four years ago because of the same problem: a lack of parking spaces. Sayani said he doesn't see how this new space will prevent the need for another parking lot in the future when these spaces become over-populated with the number of purple-sticker holders.

Sayani said he has met with Brennan on various occasions to discuss the issue and started a petition that was sent to Brennan and Chancellor David K. Scott. Despite these efforts, Sayani said he has gotten nowhere.

Orchard Hill Governor Jefferson Smith, a senior history, political science and philosophy major, said he is hesitant to approve or disapprove of the issue without hearing from the student body.

If we can get a consensus by the students on what proposal is best, then it would certainly make it easier for Parking Services to execute their plans in the Orchard Hill Area," Smith said.

Smith said that he has planned to arrange a public meeting with students, Parking Services, SGA, and OHAG at some point during the next week.

"This is going to be a big meeting because hopefully all parking proposals will be considered," Smith said.

California computer snafu previews Y2K meltdown

By Virginia Ellis
Los Angeles Times

SACRAMENTO, Calif. – In an unwelcome preview of what a Y2K meltdown could be like, massive computer crashes have repeatedly forced agencies throughout California to turn away customers for driver's licenses, food vouchers and other services.

The California Highway Patrol suddenly had difficulty checking criminal records. Child Protective Services could not get quick access to abuse files. For two days Glendale's Department of Motor Vehicles office had to process drivers license renewals manually. And one consulting firm clocked 19,000 minutes of intermittent outages – an eternity in the fast-paced world of computer technology – from January to July.

"This has been a lot worse than anything we expect from Y2K," said Elias S. Cortez, the state's chief information officer.

But the problem, which state officials fear may be ongoing, is not another botched computer project. It is the physic

Turn to Y2K page 2

BARBARA BRADBURY/COLLEGIAN

Music with style
The UMass Amherst Marching Band tuba players strut around in shades and tuxedos.

Sony co-founder dies

By John Burgess
Washington Post

Akio Morita, co-founder of Sony Corp. and principal matchmaker in the world's love affair with consumer electronics, died yesterday of pneumonia in Tokyo at the age of 78.

With $500 in capital, Morita co-founded the company in 1946 in a Tokyo building that still bore the scorches of wartime fires. Over the next half-century, he helped hook the planet on one electronic product after another – the tape recorder, the transistor radio, the VCR, the Walkman, the compact disc.

Before Sony, home electronics meant large, expensive units with wooden cabinets in affluent homes. Drawing on new technology and marketing concepts, Morita helped create "personal electronics," with products falling in price, weight, and size even as they rose in capability.

Morita's company created tens of thousands of jobs in the wake of the World War II defeat, and helped turn the words "Made in Japan" into a symbol of unsurpassable quality. "I consider him one of the people who brought Japan back from where it was in the '40s and created a new industrial concept," said Henry A. Kissinger, who first met Morita in the 1970s during a visit to Japan as secretary of state.

As Sony blossomed into a giant with plants and billboards around the world – its corporate group's sales rang up at $57 billion in the last fiscal year – the ebullient Morita functioned variously as product conceiver, business strategist, and chief salesman. He rarely seemed more animated than when demonstrating a brand new product.

He was proud to dream up things that people had no idea they wanted. "Our plan is to lead the public with new products rather than ask them what kind of products they want," he wrote in "Made in Japan," a 1986 autobiography. "The public does not know what is possible, but we do."

Garrulous and fluent in English, he traveled abroad extensively and counted as friends such people as conductor Leonard Bernstein and Katharine Graham, chairman of the executive committee of The Washington Post Co.; U.S. ambassadors were guests at his home in Tokyo.

Sporting hair that turned silver early in life and was parted down the middle in the style of a prewar Tokyo dandy, he put a glamorous face on the normally drab and anonymous business leadership of his country. Morita – Sony was an early leader in putting manufacturing plants abroad, and naming foreigners to important executive positions.

Morita had his share of failures – his Beta video system lost a world contest against the rival VHS. But his company nonetheless achieved near universal recognition.

Morita was born Jan. 26, 1921 into a wealthy family that owned a sake brewing business in the industrial city of Nagoya. The young Morita became an obsessive electronics hobbyist – neglecting his schoolwork to build a crude phonograph and radio.

He studied physics in university, and at the time of Japan's surrender in the World War II allies in 1945, he was a newly commissioned lieutenant in the Japanese navy, researching heat-seeking weapons.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Tuesday	Wednesday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 45	HIGH: 58 LOW: 40	HIGH: 61 LOW: 37

SOURCE: WEATHER.COM

Water and Garbage Everywhere
Almost 1,000 volunteers gathered this past Saturday to clean up the Connecticut River. Read about what they found inside.
ARTS PAGE 3

Kings Seize Gold
Despite opening on a record number of screens, Three Kings disappointed at the box office. Check out our box office report as well as our review of the war dramedy. Read about all the weekend's activity in today's Arts. It will drive you crazy
ARTS PAGE 5

Meyers and the Minutewomen
Jill Meyers and the Minutewomen volleyball team defeated Fordham and Duquesne this weekend. With her performances, Meyers became the all-time block leader at UMass.
SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

CHRISTINA MAGINNIS

Alex Genaud, Steven Lauber, and Erin Gillis, all UMass students, help clean the Old Mill River in Northampton with the support of the Massachusetts Community Water Watch.

River cleanup successful

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

A four-state effort to clean up the Connecticut River brought 56 different groups from Massachusetts, New Hampshire, Vermont and Connecticut together this Saturday, bringing close to a thousand volunteers to the water's edge.

Christina Maginnis, an AmeriCorps volunteer, is still recovering from Saturday's Source to the Sea cleanup. The cleanup lasted from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

"We lifted a lot of heavy things out of the Old Mill River," Maginnis said. "It was awesome. We pulled out two ovens, 132 air conditioners, three old cars, a farm reaper, and a furnace."

The morning started for the workers at 9:30 a.m. at the Bluewall in the Campus Center.

"We were at the site by 20 after ten, and we gave a safety talk to the gathered students," Maginnis said. "We told them to basically use common sense and not pick something up that they [couldn't] pick up, and then the volunteers went straight into it."

Students from MASSPIRG, Smith College, S.H.A.R.E. and two residence halls were involved in the event.

"These volunteers pulled out 134 tires, and that wasn't all of the tires that were there. Many were in the river that we couldn't reach," Maginnis said. The tires will be recycled at a tire recycling facility in Northampton. Other scrap will be handled by Northampton's Department of Public Works.

"The volunteers were so fired up, so motivated, and so ready to work. We accomplished so much and we only scratched the surface of the site," Maginnis said. "They didn't care if they got wet because they were good volunteers who had their hearts in it and knew they were doing good things for the Earth."

According to Maginnis, students found all kinds of garbage, including beer cans with pull-tabs, rather than pop-tops – cans that had been in the water for more than 20 years.

Because the cleanup at the site has only "scratched the surface," according to Maginnis, a meeting is scheduled for tomorrow at 5pm in room 423-A in the Student Union to plan the next cleaning.

Gandhi's values survive

By Jason Spears
Collegian Correspondent

Sharing how their struggles embodied Mohandas K. Gandhi's philosophy of nonviolence, speakers and activists gathered on Saturday as a part of the "A Conspiracy of Hope" conference at Amherst College. The conference was held on what would have been Gandhi's 130th birthday.

Speaking about British rule in India, Sanat Majumber professor emeritus of Westfield State College and former assistant professor at Smith College, said, "Not much you [could] do but grow up in India angry in those days."

Majumber was raised in Calcutta, India, and while in college there he became involved with student protests. A dramatic event in his student days altered his views on violence and turned him toward Gandhi's values. British police and soldiers opened fire on a group of student protesters that included Majumber. He witnessed one of his closest friends die from a British bullet. After the experience Majumber recognized "the frailty and futility of violence," and began to follow and study Gandhi's teachings.

"It is a must that every now and then we revisit the lives and legacies of some great souls...for guidance and inspiration," Majumber said.

Two active members of the Nuclear Abolition Task Force spoke about how they look to Gandhi for inspiration. Unitarian minister and Amherst College alumnus Jon Relmus said he found "solace and in-spiration" in Gandhi's philosophy.

A Gandhian ideal Relmus found inspiring is "Act in the world in which [you] are expressing your love for others even as you are...in argument about truth with them."

Tom MacLean of the Blue Heron Farm Community, and Jeff Dodd of the Green Age Solution, explained how Gandhi's beliefs helped them in their pursuit of more self-sufficient lifestyles. Dodd shared technological solutions that Green Age Solution has developed in order to help people lead less destructive and more sustainable lifestyles.

Mary Trotochaud and her husband, Rick Macdowell, discussed the effects of the eight months Trotochaud spent in prison as a result of her actions against the School of the Americas in Fort Benning, Ga. At the School of the Americas, the United States government trains foreign nationals in the techniques of assassination and repression, in the hope of promoting democracy. Many of the school's graduates have been implicated in killings and acts of terror in Central and South America.

Nonviolence "is the only option," Macdowell said. "The only hope for the future is if we engage each other, the system, the governments, the militaries and the environment in peacefulness...in ways that find harmony."

The conference was organized by Traprock Peace Center and Students Exploring Peace and Action at Amherst College.

■ Y2K

continued from page 1

company.

Pacific Bell, hired by the state to ferry its data records across the high-speed telephone lines, is governed by a corporate culture so steeped in voice communication, state officials say, that it has had difficulty adjusting to the demands of a sophisticated data network. And they and their consultants – question whether the company will ever be able to reinvent itself enough to adequately manage state data communications over the long term.

Company officials insist PacBell is a leader in data communications and has vastly improved its service in recent weeks – although they admit that the company has not measured up.

"We didn't provide the quality of service that [the state] expected of us or that we expected of ourselves," said Doug Michelman, a Pacific Bell vice president.

Hardest hit has been the agency motorists love to hate, the DMV, which has been struggling to correct a public image of indifference and inefficiency. The outages have been "devastating to customer service," according to an internal report. And once computer service is restored, "the lines of customers are staggering."

For many customers, the nettlesome task of renewing driver's licenses or transferring auto registration became an ordeal. Some DMV offices called in fire marshals to control the crowds. Others closed early and turned customers away.

A few customers in different parts of the state suffered the indignity of having their cars towed because the computer record of their license purchase got swallowed in cyberspace.

The debacle provided a stark reminder of the extent to which government has become dependent on computers and the havoc that results when they cannot function.

This summer, the Women, Infants and Children program, which provides supplemental nutrition to poor families, reported a severe drop in participation, attributed in part to the computer outages. As a result, the state has had to return $3.7 million in unspent funds to the federal government.

■ election

continued from page 1

the elected-at-large senators are Michael McCarthy, K. Michael Taugher, Thao Tran, Bernard Cahill, Daniel Peppin, and Margo Feeney. The election results for individual residence hall senators were not available at press time.

In the Sylvan Residential Area, the elected-at-large senators are Fiona Cox and Chris Tarnstrom. For McNamara Residence Hall, there was a two-way tie between Lesley Silva and Paige Steele. For Cashin Residence Hall, the representative is C. Patrick Callahan. For Brown Residence Hall, the representative is Jeff Biardlo.

In the Orchard Hill Residential Area, the at-large senators are Michael J. McCarthy and Michael Whitehouse. For Dickinson Residence Hall, the representative for Senate is Jennifer Casavant. For Field Residence Hall, the Senate representative is Anna Faktorovich. For Grayson Residence Hall, the representative for Senate is Asif Sayani. For Webster Residence Hall, the Senator is Matthew Harrison.

In the Central Residence Area the at-large senators are Chuck Johnson, Kenneth Campbell, Grace Sullivan, Katherine Silva, and Pat Decoyrey. For Baker Residence Hall, the representative is Mary Lois McCaroll. For Van Meter Residence Hall, there was a six-way tie for the seat between Kerry Hatleg, Kristine Fartini, Lisa Freidan, Julie Dana, Grace Sullivan, and Chuck Johnson. For Gorman Residence Hall, the representative is Jennifer Bishop.

The commuter senators elected are Mark Bonifacc, Tara Cavezzani, Joshua Cohen, Dan Friedman, Rachael Gagne, Ethan Handwerker, Eric Hoffman, Carol King, Matthew Leduc, Jason Malestrom, Keith McCormis, Daniel Mencher, Rob Moore, Tammie Nocera, Dan Osko, Amy Pellegrino, Michael Redmond, Mike Rossetti, Aaron Saunders, Tricia Sebo, Chris Soriano, Sarah Szemreylo, Jennifer Worcester, and Phil Zetse.

According to Roulle, the Senate will break any ties that took place in the election. Also, all of the newly elected positions will be ratified before the first Senate meeting on Wednesday.

Reinvention key for Gore

By Dan Balz
Washington Post

Reinvention represents a familiar plot line in American politics: The once-confident front-runner re-emerges as the self-proclaimed underdog. The cloistered incumbent suddenly becomes the guy next door. The Washington insider sheds coat and tie, picks up a drawl, and sounds the note of a resentful outsider.

Last week, hoping to extract his campaign from what one Democrat called "a horrible swamp," Vice President Al Gore tried all three.

Gore's abrupt decision to shift his campaign headquarters from Washington to Nashville, to jettison his top pollster, and to challenge rival Bill Bradley to a series of debates was part symbol and part substance. The moves reflected not only his concern about the growing strength of Bradley's campaign, but also his belief that his campaign had become dysfunctional in the hothouse environment of Washington.

What was equally remarkable about Gore's announcement, however, was the timing of it all, coming four months before the first caucuses in Iowa and the first primary in New Hampshire. If any further evidence were needed that the campaign of 2000 is operating to a set of rules and a political clock never before seen, Gore's effort at reinvention should prove it.

Presidential front-runners usually wait until they lose a contest before tearing up their script. Gore acted on the basis of bad polls, negative news coverage, and slipping fund-raising – the elements that together have been dubbed the "invisible primary" that takes place the year

Turn to CAMPAIGN, page 3

TELL US MORE ABOUT YOURSELF ON OUR

ONLINE CAREER PROFILE

AND START YOUR JOURNEY TOWARDS A GREAT CAREER.

www.pwcglobal.com/ocp

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

Join us. Together we can change the world.SM

© 1999 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. PricewaterhouseCoopers refers to the U.S. firm of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP and other members of the worldwide PricewaterhouseCoopers organization. We are proud to be an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Pat and Fred

Guitarists Pat Costello and Fred B. play some music at Saturday's Apple Harvest Festival on the Amherst Common.

Photo meeting tonight at 7 pm
in the Collegian photo dept.
New photographers are welcome.

■ campaign

continued from page 2

before a presidential election.

"This is the cycle where the invisible primary has been treated as more important than the real primary," said Republican consultant Mike Murphy. "Gore is worried that a devastating loss in the preseason of perception will lead to a real loss in Iowa and New Hampshire."

Gore's announcement will mark the last week of September as the most significant week to date in the campaign, the moment at which the Democratic race took on a new shape and, for Gore, the hope for a fresh start after a summer of missteps. But there was much more than Gore last week to signal an intensifying presidential campaign.

On the Republican side, former Vice President Dan Quayle shattered a campaign that had appeared doomed for months, opening the door slightly for Steve Forbes to emerge as the conservative of choice. Arizona Sen. John McCain formally launched a candidacy that had been gaining altitude for weeks, partly on the strength of a best-selling memoir of life in a Vietnamese prison camp.

Texas Gov. George W. Bush, maintaining cruising speed as the GOP front-runner, announced that his campaign had scooped up a record $36 million as third-quarter spending reports were made public. But after proclaiming itself a frugal beer-and-peanuts operation, Bush's campaign also was revealed as perhaps the freest-spending presidential campaign in history.

Of equal significance was Bush's decision to distance himself from the Republicans in Congress, sounding a populist note of criticism over their budget priorities by saying they should not "balance the budget on the backs of the poor." This declaration of independence clearly rattled Gore and the Democrats, and one Republican dubbed it Bush's "Sister Souljah moment," a reference to Bill Clinton's attack on a rap singer in 1992.

Meanwhile, Gary Bauer, the candidate of the Christian right and "family values," found himself forced to denounce as "scurrilous" charges from others once in his campaign that he was spending too much time behind closed doors with a young, female aide.

On the Democratic side, Bradley unveiled a $65 billion-a-year plan designed to move the country toward near-universal health care coverage. The proposal represented a risky reaffirmation of the federal government's role in health care after the demise of President Clinton's plan in 1994. It also represented the first installment on Bradley's promise to run a campaign – and a presidency – of boldness and big ideas, not, as he suggested of Gore, timidity and bite-sized issues.

MELISSA SHERMAN/ COLLEGIAN

Bringing down the fence

This past Friday marked the end of the unsightly fence surrounding the UMass library.

Are you interested in a career in Clinical Social Work?

Join the Smith College School for Social Work

at the
Alumni Symposium

Past, Present and Future of Clinical Social Work

Saturday, October 9, 1999
9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Seelye Hall, Room 106 on the
Smith College Campus
Northampton, Massachusetts
Seating is limited. Please call (413) 585-7960 to RSVP

Meet with the Admission Director

at the
Graduate and Professional Schools

Information Day

Wednesday, October 27, 1999
10:00 a.m. – 3:00 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom on the University of Massachusetts, Amherst Campus

National Anthem Auditions!

The UMass Athletics Department wi present interested in performing the winter sporting events on
Thursday, October 7, 1999.
The auditions will be held in the Curry Hicks C
ning at 7:15 pm.
For more information call

Note: Auditions will also be held for the UMass Hoop Band beginning on October 25th and continuing through October 28th at Grinnell Arena. The following instruments are needed: trumpet, saxophone, trombone, bass, and guitar, keyboards and percussion. Call 545-6060 for more information.

Everything YOU need to know about a career @ Procter & Gamble

http://www.pg.com/careers

Looking For
All Majors

Deadline for Summer 2000 Internship Application is October 22.
What are you waiting for?
Come visit us @ UMass Amherst to learn more about our summer co-op positions :

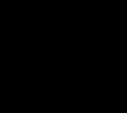
SOM Career Fair Mullins Center
October 6th, 1999 12 noon - 5 PM
Career Network Info Expo Campus Center
October 13th, 1999 10 AM - 3 PM

Editorial/Opinion



The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Integrity, Inc.

All too often on the Editorial page of the Collegian, insolent fools like myself avoid the important issues of the nation, choosing instead to poke fun at everyday things and be an overall bad moral example for the rest of campus, who, of course, hang on our every word as though it were gospel.

Well, I am here to tell you that I'm going to do something about it – eat lunch. It that doesn't work, I'm flat out of ideas. Suggestions?

"Wait," you are probably saying to yourself in the direct context of the subject at hand, "where are you going to eat?"

Seth Koenig

I'll figure that out when I get there. Don't save me a place.

In the meantime, I will attempt to better society in a most noble and honorable fashion by informing you, the UMass student and/or Collegian reader, about the benefits of using Trojan Supra Brand Condoms.

Of course, the fact that they sent me a package (pun intended) that included a Trojan Supra Brand Condom ball cap, a Trojan Supra Brand Condom tee shirt, and three Trojan Supra Brand Condom condoms has absolutely nothing to do with the fact that I mentioned Trojan Supra Brand Condom in this column. All I care about is journalistic integrity and I would never bow to corporate sponsorship and its corrupting influence.

With that in mind, you would be a complete moron if you did not wear Trojan Supra Brand Condom condoms the next time you engaged in safe sex with your loved one.

While I'm on the subject, I will touch on other key issues that I'm confident you are thinking about now – that also have nothing to do with the fact that they arrived in my mailbox here at the Collegian as promotional packages.

Security is always an important part of every woman's life, and therefore, independent of any bribery, I will tell you about a revolutionary new weapon of mass destruction called "The Stunning" ring.

This ring is, and I wouldn't dream of quoting a press release (because that would be immoral), a "Stunningly beautiful ring with self-defense pepper spray made of sterling silver and genuine black onyx which can be worn at all times, can be used for safety while jogging, working or dating."

I've never heard of "pepper spray made of sterling silver and genuine black onyx," but I'm sure it is quite deadly.

Definitely not, according to the cheap publicity stunt of Stunning Innovations, Inc., but rather to my own astute research, the aforementioned company "was formed to develop, manufacture, and sell a line of jewelry items designed for women that contain self-defense pepper spray."

With that in mind, you would be a complete moron if you did not wear Trojan Supra Brand Condom condoms the next time you engaged in safe sex with your loved one.

Joe Hippensteel, a very important person involved with this revolutionary breakthrough, said "I believe the day will come when virtually every woman will be prepared with this beautiful and convenient means of protection."

Did you hear that? With incredible amounts of journalistic integrity, I too, picture a utopist society wherein females of all ages are walking enforcers of justice, spraying "the strongest pepper spray formula available on the market today" from each and every item of clothing that they own. It's great that Mr. Hippensteel cares so much for the safety of the individuals of this nation, and not at all for exploiting a specific market to make jillions of dollars.

We need more people like him out there. I think the folks at MSNBC.com are a lot like Joe – or at least they sent me two hats that in no way influence me, as a newspaper person, in thinking so. In fact, without paying attention to the literature that came with the hats, I can inherently tell that if there is anybody out there who is nearly perfect in every way, shape and form, it is most likely the head of MSNBC.com.

People out in the real world wonder why not-normal people like myself want to work in newspapers. Well, the reason is that we feel that it is our powerful civic duty to inform you about the world around you, and help you govern through the harsh society in which you live. We find it abhorrent when large, faceless corporations mail us cheap gifts to try and sway our publications into printing beneficiary material on them. So, please, if you are a large, faceless corporation interested in mailing me a sports car, do not, in any way, have it delivered to The Massachusetts Daily Collegian, c/o Seth Koenig, 113 Campus Center, UMass, Amherst, MA, 01003. I refuse to speak about such a car in this reputable newspaper, even if it is a 2000 Dodge Viper with all the bells and whistles.

Remember, practice safe sex with Trojan Supra Brand Condom condoms.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

The Vernacular

Language is a wonderful thing. It is the foundation upon which our society is built. Through it, mankind is able to express the full spectrum of emotions available to him. Whether words are used to express love, hatred, or apathy, they are the cornerstones of communication, the legacy of history, and that which brings us together as a species. Without words we would not know love, we would not know happiness.

That said, I am speaking today on behalf of that quarter of this school who prefer not to speak in the common tongue. Those men and women who, like myself, have decided to abolish that which is slang and trite from their everyday conversation. Now I am not a purist; I sink to the level of the lemming quite frequently. But I am allowed to do so, for popular jargon is so intoxicatingly conducive that even the staunchest of supporters for lofty dialect cannot help but give in to temptation every once in a while.

Now I am not sending a clarion call across campus for the student body to begin quoting Machiavelli and Virgil, but I do believe that something must be done for those touched individuals who choose to exercise their minds. Those meandering flaccid fools who dare to mock academia, who feel inanely inadequate by the superior vocabulary of their peers, should not cast the charmingly verbose into the lion's den. Instead, perhaps they should try reading a bit more. Assignment is one thing, but to read for one's own growth is an entirely more uplifting and rewarding experience.

William F. Larkin

As is repetitiously evident by my presence on this page, I write editorials for The Massachusetts Daily Collegian. And while some may claim that is not much to be proud of, I contest these stalwart naysayers and their stark negativity. I feel that writing for our school's newspaper is a privilege, and thus it should be treated with the respect of professionalism.

It annoys me to learn that there are those amidst the circulation who condemn my columns. Not that I mind constructive critique, for no one is perfect, and I am far from that. Were that I am perfect, you would not see me seated at the back of class, you would not see me sitting outside my beloved portico smoking a cigarette, and you would certainly not be subjected to my propaganda on a weekly basis. I would not be here; I would spend my days in an ivory tower surrounded by Dante and Milton. But that's just me.

For it is the criticism of my diction, the quality of my word choice, which has wrought the wrath of a majority of the readers. And this is unacceptable. Why should I give into sloth and use the vulgar common English, when I am capable of giving the English language just credence? I enjoy lofty words. They are an essential component of my writing, and I shall not part with them for anything - not for the criticism of my peers, nor for the harassment of my superiors.

In a journalism class I recently had the honor to privilege, my instructor, Judith Cameron, who is a rather talented and insightful woman, told me that when a writer is speaking to his audience through the media of newspaper, the writer is to assume a sixth-grade reading level. Now this morsel of advice confused me greatly.

All that this woman had told me to this point, all the precise instruction that heretofore I was given, seemed logical and correct. But now, this caveat paradoxically opposed the tenets of writing. For it is my understanding that writing is a tool, an augment for those who lack the insight to discern for themselves. We as writers clarify the enigma, we translate the terse. Should we not do so in the most erudite fashion?

Allow me to beseech you this. Are we at this University not considered collegiate? Do we indeed lack the potential for reading that which is beyond simplicity? If so, please, take me away from this place. For I contend that a university is a place for higher learning, the epicenter of academia. Not a children's playground and not a nursery. Thank you.

William F. Larkin is a UMass student.

Voice your opinion. Write for Ed/Op.

Shamued

by phil flickinger (www.l-e-x.com)

Where are times when lawsuits can be frustratingly frivolous. The lawyer who burned himself for pouring hot coffee on herself, or the people blaming Jenny Jones for a murderer's work.

They take advantage of the legal system, and they ruin things for people who really have legitimate lawsuits.

Sam Wilkinson

And then there are lawsuits that are just depressing and still have a certain element of entertainment value.

For some reason, parents of a man in Florida are suing SeaWorld for quite a few million dollars. Patricia and Mike Dukes of South Carolina are suing the park after their son, a drifter named Daniel, was found dead inside the park.

He was also naked.

And he was on the back of the whale.

Now sure, perhaps this lawsuit is wildly legitimate. Perhaps Dan, as he was probably called, was invited into the tank by the people who run the park and, while frolicking with the whale Tillikum, was accidentally stripped of all his clothes and ended up dead on the whale.

Perhaps.

The evidence, however, points elsewhere. As in – he snuck in at night, and either jumped into the tank or was pulled in, and then he was killed.

His parents are suing because the whale was portrayed as a stuffed animal, the kind of whale that is, and this is a quote from the family's lawyer, "a huggable, kissable, human-loving, friendly. I'll let you ride on my back" type whale.

The whale, which weighs 11,000 pounds, is an orca.

And while there are a lot of people that say, "Hey, let's go to SeaWorld to see the orcas," a lot more probably say something like, "let's go to SeaWorld to see the... killer whales."

Killer.

As in death.

So just to recap. A man snuck into SeaWorld to hang out for the night because he had nowhere else to go because he was a drifter. He then either jumped into the water, which is likely, or Tillikum hopped out of the water, grabbed him while he was at the cotton candy stand, and then pulled him in. But he ended up naked.

Far be it from anyone to assume that perhaps he decided to go for a swim or take a bath, and then he stripped naked. He hopped into the water, and then the killer whale killed him.

This isn't a lawsuit. This is incompetence.

It is absolutely incompetent that a lawyer would take this case.

Worse yet, this sets the poor family up for all kinds of horrible jokes from soulless members of the media and the late-night circus.

For example:

What happens when you swim naked with a killer whale? You die.

If someone tells you that you will survive swimming with a killer whale, what is happening? You are being SHAMued.

What word backwards in Tillikum's name would have Dan noticed before he plunged into the water? Kill.

Furthermore, let's be real here. The whale weighed 61 times Dan's 180 pounds. When something is portrayed as being soft and fuzzy and it weighs 61 times a person, a bell should ring about the possible danger of getting into the water with such a creature.

Think of it this way. Five smaller cars weigh about 11,000 pounds together, and they are portrayed as comfortable in advertisements. That doesn't mean a person should hop into traffic.

Even if that did make sense, it barely works with 27-year-old Dan. He's 27. If he hasn't figured out by now that playing with killer whales that weigh 61 times what he does could be dangerous, he was never going to. He was an adult, and part of being an adult is knowing that certain things certainly aren't safe.

Dan screwed up. He snuck into a park where he shouldn't have been, stayed the night, and something happened that ended with him naked and dead on the back of Tillikum.

He was wrong to sneak into the park.

He was wrong to get near enough to the water to be grabbed, and he was certainly wrong if he jumped in.

It doesn't matter if SeaWorld said that Tillikum was the friendliest whale in captivity or the deadliest. It doesn't matter if they portrayed him as a giant friendly killer whale, or as a ruthless killer whale. Something of that size is never to be fooled around with.

But the worst part of all of this, and by far and away the most depressing, is that the parents are getting involved in this lawsuit.

Will it be worth all of the media ridicule, the cruel jokes, and the plain old harshness of people when they hear about this? No. This is a family that has lost a son, and while the jokes would be cruel, they are making a joke of his death by filing this lawsuit.

But the more important question is whether or not a few million dollars is going to bring Dan back, and clearly it will not.

It's unfortunate that this family is willing to risk Dan's memory by not learning that lesson.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reed Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Satty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Black Affairs

Minorities 2 The Aid of Freshman!!

By J. Evan Granger
Collegian Correspondent

Sex, partying, drinking, and fun are just some of the words that most first-year students have in mind as they enter college. The reality is that independence, responsibility, bills, and studying are words that more often go along with the experiences of first-year students.

"College is a place to start all over, and where you have many opportunities. It is a place to expand your knowledge. [The University of Massachusetts] is a place that, because of its size and number of options, will help me to decide what I will do with my life," comments freshman Justin Steuer.

When a student enters college, it is believed that he or she has career aspirations, or at least some idea as to the direction life will take. After all, they have had all of their high school years to make that decision. However, the reality is that many students are not certain. They are unsure of what academic and occupational path to choose. What to do with the rest of ones life is a difficult decision for an 18-year-old to make. Having just left the nest, these students are forced into an insecure environment. Some students are lucky to have the security that is necessary to function at this large university, but for those who do not, there is the Student Support Transitional program.

Student Support Transitional program, better known as SST, is designed to help the most promising, undeclared students find their place in the university's academic center. There are many Residential Academic Programs designed to help students with declared majors better excel in their fields. The SST program helps to ensure that undeclared students will not get lost in the shuffle.

The Patterson dormitory houses both the SST program and the Patterson program. Both are designed to help undeclared freshmen through their first year. Tim Fields, the Assistant Program Coordinator explains, "The Patterson program is for all students who live in Patterson, whereas the SST program is designed for 95 to 100 select students who are either first generation, minority, or disabled students." The program is funded by the McNair grant and was created "to increase student support, and also to increase the retention of the targeted students." Tim believes that this can be achieved because of "the accessible office in the building, social events, and workshops designed to help the students adjust better," and " the mentors who assist the student with anything from homework to problems at home."

The Program offers two special classes, University 191F and Southwest, that the students are required to take. These classes help to put the large campus into perspective, as well as familiarize the students with on-campus activities, real life issues, and important locations and facilities. The students are also offered free tutoring to ensure that any difficulties with classes are addressed. Hopefully, at the end of the year they will have settled on a major. In addition, the students receive a $100 dollar book voucher, and have their $200 deposits waived, to help them get started.

This is the first year that the program has been offered. In order for its funding to continue, there must be evidence of the program's success, meaning a high retention rate of the participants. "Although it is still early in the year, I think the classes we take will be very informative and will help with any questions I have in my first semester," said freshman Jesse Shauffer.

William Melendez, another SST student said that "the classes seem pretty boring, but I can see that these are the kind of classes that I will really appreciate later on, and the book voucher helps too."

The aims of the program are clear to those involved in it. They understand that this program is the best tool that they have to begin their college experience. Many students find that the classes offered are not ways to build up their GPAs, but rather are places where they are taught about resources they would otherwise not know of available to them on campus.

Keeping the promise

By Victoria Joy Salesman
Collegian Correspondent

What do Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Malcolm X, Anacoana, and Sylvan have in common? "Weren't they crowd motivators?" says freshman William Melendez as he scratches his head for an answer. Wrong. If it was a Friday night, and the question was "where are you going?," the answer would be, where else, the X.

"The UMass campus perceives the X to be nothing more than a party spot. If they took the time to ask questions, then they would know that the X is more than just the most popular place to throw a party," says sophomore communications major Faiza Bodden, intern for the X.

Hard as it seems to believe, UMass is the home to seven cultural centers. Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., Malcolm X, Anacoana, and Sylvan, are among them. Cultural centers are located in each residential area. From September 19th to the 27th, UMass reopened its cultural centers for the 1999-2000 academic school year. This year looks to be a turning point for the cultural centers. When originated, the cultural centers served many purposes, acting as study halls, cultural exchanges, and social/recreational centers. In more recent years, the cultural centers have either been completely forgotten or utilized primarily for social gatherings. Although educational activities have existed, at many times it has been a result of policies stating that if you have a social, you must have an educational prior to doing so. As a result, the quality of educational programming has significantly declined.

Despite the setbacks of the past, the cultural centers are now under new management. Ms. Mounira Morris, Head of the Cultural Centers, and Mr. Ric Townes, Assistant Vice Chancellor, spoke at the reopenings about the histories of the cultural centers. They handed out short surveys about programs that the students wanted to see at the cultural centers. Kristen Moore, a sophomore psychology major, maintains, "I felt they were really taking an interest in who matters the most, the students, because they are the community." Ms. Morris, Mr. Townes, and their capable staff are untapped resources in Campus Activities. It is to their dedication, and the impeccably organized assistantship of Mr. Townes and Ms. Lisa McCalla that the cultural centers are even open.

Each of the cultural centers is located in the basement of their building. That does not, however, detain them from hiring capable students to run the everyday operations, and from promoting the welfare of minority students all across campus.

RSO's, Resident Assistants, and other organizations are welcomed and encouraged to utilize the cultural centers for social, cultural and educational programming. For more information, please contact Ms. Morris at Campus Activities at 545-4716. Be aware that Ms. Morris schedules months in advance, so plan ahead.

Ms. Morris made a promise to all of those who worked with the cultural centers last year, and obviously she has made good on her word. She said, "It's going to be different." Now that she has kept her part of the bargain, will you the community keep yours?

Exploitation and globalization are murdering our heritage, culture, and future. From the bonds and shackles of the slave trade to the wipes, hoes, and lynchings of the 60's; from the war-torn dwellings of Somalia to the projects of Campton; from the imprisonment of Mandela to the assault of Mr. Rodney King, our society has been robbed, shot, targeted, stabbed and is bleeding profusely both internally and externally. Yet, through it all, we cannot be broken, we cannot be moved, and we cannot be forgotten.

If you are interested in writing, drawing, painting, or submitting a photograph for Black Affairs, contact Hugh at 5-1762

Boy II Man – extraordinary journey

By Jennifer L. Lodge
Collegian Correspondent

The owner of a convenience store and his friend murdered Emmett Till, a fourteen-year-old boy from Chicago. It was reported that the boy whistled at the storeowner's wife, Mr. Bryant, the owner of the store, pleaded not guilty and was acquitted of all charges. Ms. Mamie Bradley, Emmett's mother, decided to have an open casket because she wanted the world to "see what they had done to [her] son." A few weeks later, Mr. Bryant confessed to the world the details of the murder, knowing that he could not be tried twice for the same crime. The following is a reflection of the ramifications of the incident.

There is a part of you that drops to the farthest place in your hollow soul and stands in the dampness raging. There is a piece of you that fills with a hate so strong it fights itself in a battle against a bodiless enemy. Then your eyes drown themselves in tears that try to shield his face. Still, you see that little boy's body beaten and mangled, his face all disfigured, his left eye gouged out and a bullet hole adorning the center of his head. This is the image Professor Lester saw. In a country that professes that all men are created equal, one could constantly question if this land of the free and brave was paved with streets of torment and torture.

As a child, Professor Lester read signs that stated "Whites Only." It left so strong an impact that to this day those words, hung above water fountains, restrooms, waiting areas and restaurants, would forever evoke an emotion no words could express, no picture could convey, and no apology could erase. According to Terry Anderson author of The Sixties, at a time when Barbie would have her first boyfriend and Football was being played on the White House lawn," blacks were being beat with billy clubs, hosed, and "...dragged by their arms and legs down the stairs so that their heads were bouncing off." The nation was only beginning to sample its first bitter taste of civil rights.

As a fourteen-year-old black boy in Nashville, Tennessee, no one had to tell Professor Lester what violence was. No one knew the bright of hearing the windows blow from the intensity of a house lit red with the flame of a burning fire. No one could better describe how such injustices could manifest a deep-seated repugnance and allow it to irritate and cause a little boy to think of murder to help ease the pain. He grew up at a time that too many people only stop to remember in February for Black History Month. It was the 1960's when white hoods controlled the politics of the south, and a song for freedom rang loud through this nation.

Professor Lester knew all too well what the civil rights movement was all about. It was not one man's dream leading a group; it was a demand for equality that so many would die for. It was not so long ago that he stood before blacks and spoke of the Student Non-violent Coordinating Committees (SNCC), efforts to change the world. He took pictures of historic moments, not for the cover of some history book, but rather for his own memories. For two years, he worked full time for the SNCC, whose sole purpose was to facilitate and organize non-violent demonstration for desegregation. He was their photographer, writer, and occasional speaker.

It was not long before the bloody streets of the South would drive him away. He moved north with the hopes of one day going to Europe to become a writer. However, one plans changed. In 1971 a long-time friend from the SNCC and chairman of the Afro-American department at UMass called him offering a job as a teacher. He willfully accepted.

For the last 28 years, he has taught History 154 Social Change in the 1960's. At the beginning of the semester, the class was filled with over 400 students enrolled. The class is so popular that 400 more students were lined up at the door trying to add the class.

Every student sits tentatively listening as the powerful preacher-like voice rings throughout the auditorium. He teaches the most essential and sometimes unbearable facts from the 1960's. At times, even I wipe my eyes. Perhaps unsung as not only a writer, but a distinguished teacher he is one to be remembered. He is an ordinary man who stepped out of his ordinary life to make an extraordinary difference. He teaches his students that "history was made by the ordinary people who were not powerless" with participants in history as each of us are, even if we don't participate."

BMCP, let's not act slow

Admit the party really sucked!

For the last three years I took pride in the fact that I attended the functions thrown by the various minority organizations. In fact, last year's "Jeans and Tee Shirts" dance was so good that this year I played it up to all of the people I knew. I told all of the freshmen that I met I called New York, Boston, Baltimore, and even Cleveland inviting people to attend. As soon as I saw a flyer in the Campus Center, I immediately took one. I continued to play it up to all of my friends during the week. They said it was going to be corny, and that they would rather go home and play Monopoly with their parents, or get a home perm than go to "Jeans and Tee Shirts" this year. Despite it all I said that I would support the organization and its function.

Ten bucks and it sucked! Yes, the entire night was a huge disappointment. The party started off Black functions on an extremely bad note. Keep in mind that I spent ten dollars for a party that was supposed to have lasted for about 5 hours. The party was advertised to have the doors open at 9:00 pm. Now we all have heard jokes about "Colored Peoples' Time," but I know that an hour-and-a-half minute wait is ridiculous. The party didn't start until 11:00.

In addition, parties are supposed to be fun and relaxing. I'm sure that the people in the hip-hop room were dancing and enjoying themselves but the eight people in the reggae/soca room look pissed and frustrated. They did not look like they were relaxed and having fun at all. I was under the impression that I was going to be dancing and partying until the sun came up, but I guess I was wrong.

Everyone knows that hip-hop and rap are the driving musical force behind our generation. This year at "Jeans and Tee Shirts," the party was situated into two musical spheres, hip-hop/rap and reggae/soca. However, as a West Indian, I have a bias towards Caribbean music. Loving BMCP's concept, I decided that I would patronize the reggae-and-soca room because I could hear hip-hop at any party on campus, but rarely could I hear soca.

The music in the reggae room was atrocious. This was obvious from the amount of people who literally ran from the reggae/soca room into the hip-hop and rap room. The DJ played the same four songs over and over and over again until almost everyone left the room. At one point there was just a person working security and me in the room, and we both were sitting down. The DJ played the slowest roots and culture songs for a solid hour and a half after the people room will have a certain type of music, it is expected that the music would be from this decade. The songs that were played were songs that I heard growing up around the house. Back in 1985 when the songs that the DJ was playing were popular they would not have been played at a party. Let's be real and brutally honest for a change. My father is in a lodge and most of the functions those songs are not played. This is September and Carnival has finished, in fact Labor Day in New York just passed. "You mean to tell me dat dem ain't even had 'dat song dat Square One does sing, 'Jammin ding ding ding'" In 1999 that song will not fly.

When I spoke to the person in charge about my disappointment and the fact that I feel that we were robbed, he said that he was sorry that I felt that way. The "kicker" was that he said his comment was supported by people sitting in the lobby. Out of a virtually empty room, how he said that I was the only one who complained. If this is the case, and I am the only one who was upset and very disappointed in the first annual Black function on campus, especially the reggae/soca room, then I challenge you to write a letter to me at the Collegian, and I will be happy to read and respond to any letters that I receive. However, if you agree with me, feel free to stop into the BMCP office in the Student Union building and voice your opinion. Let them know that "Jeans and Tee Shirts" was a huge setback in the attempt to expose the school and the community to the different types of music in the Black cultures.

Complex shades of Blackness: WHERE DO WE GO FROM HERE?

By Muhammad Nassor Bey
Excerpts from speech given at the Million Man March

Where are we?

Still at the crossroads of history where we should remain till we decide to stop worrying about what white folks think of us, and begin acting as one people in this land. Until we begin to move in one direction, toward a black-nationalist conscience with an Afro-centric view of our own lives and circumstances, and place the concerns of African people of the diasporas at home and abroad first in our minds and actions. And we'd better get moving now or we're not going to be around much longer!!

Where are we? Many of us are still divided by superficial differences of class and religion, unwilling to talk to each other because we're Muslim and he's Baptist! She's rich and I'm poor, he's black and she's high yellow! Where do we get these ideas???

Where are we?

We're still letting our children go to schools that racetrack them into dumb classes, and segregate them, making them feel inferior. Take them out, form your own schools, or do home schooling.

We're still buying sneakers we don't make. Drinking beer we did not brew, living in homes we don't own, driving cars we didn't build, watching TV shows and movies that don't flatter us. We're playing with politics and playing with revolution ...and getting burned. We're letting so-called leaders sell us down the river at election time for a few block parties, picnics, and empty promises. We're lining up for the white-man jails, lining up for his lottery tickets, lining up for his beer and cigarettes, lining up for the slaughter!!

Where are we?

We're not in the libraries in numbers that we should be, researching our history, and reclaiming the names of our Fathers.

We're watching that idiot box again, playing Mortal Combat again, and getting high again. Losing our minds again!!

We are in a state of forgetfulness ... of our names, our languages, our rightful place in world history, and of the debt we owe to our dead fathers and our unborn sons. The debt of manhood.

Even while many of us struggle to work and achieve, save and raise families, there are still those who have not heard the call ...to Manhood, to Womanhood, to Nationhood! If you want success in life you must be prepared for it!

Words alone will not do it.
Good intentions will not do it.
Best efforts will not do it.
Voting alone will not do it.
Praying alone will not do it.
African-Americans must learn the lessons of suffering and so that we can appreciate the words of our elders about working together in this land. Like it or not, we are alone in this country. We must reach out to one another, and turn to one another instead of on one another, as many other groups do. We must not let ourselves be taken in by the old fears and bigotries, the old lies, and the old propagandas about Africa, our home, and ourselves.

So, where do we go from here?
Where do you want to go?

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Monday, October 4, 1999

Three Kings strikes gold

First Gulf War film an overdue must-see

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Three Kings
Directed By David O. Russell with George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg, Ice Cube
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

It's been over eight years since the Gulf War ended and history has taught that Hollywood is long overdue for a movie about the event. However, Three Kings is not the type of movie one would expect from Hollywood. In fact, Three Kings takes a truly unique perspective on the United States' involvement in Iraq and on war itself.

Writer and director, David O. Russell, whose previous work includes the little known Spanking the Monkey and Flirting with Disaster, does a masterful job creating a microcosm for all American society and the world in general. By using one small army division and in fact only four men, Russell simultaneously captures the blissful ignorance from which people saw the Gulf War and the unspoken motive behind U.S. involvement: namely, money.

Three Kings is the story of four soldiers who find an Iraqi map leading to stolen Kuwaiti gold. Rather than tell their superiors, they decide to steal the gold secretly. When they arrive on scene they must choose between their own greed and the desperate pleas of rebels being oppressed by Saddam's army.

What makes Three Kings so unique is its unending condemnation of U.S. policy. The film is a brilliant satire, its sharp wit and humor, of which there is plenty, reveals the inherent absurdity of U.S. involvement, and moreover, of the underlying explanation for that involvement.

The soldiers know no more than the public. They have never been in a battle and ultimately, they don't even know why they're in Iraq. Three Kings shows how they believe what the media feeds them, and how influential that media can be. They earnestly believe that they are trying to free Kuwait; that they are fighting for independence, and toss around George Bush's name, as if he were a demigod.

Three Kings exploits the contrast between the soldiers' thirst for Kuwaiti gold, an obvious metaphor, and their shock at the real suffering of war. For the first time, the foursome sees how U.S. intervention was only skin deep, and how the U.S. was abandoning Iraqi rebels when they needed them the most.

Russell manages to mix these strong themes of his screenplay with some truly impressive scenes. Part action movie and part art house film, Three Kings powerfully paints a bleak landscape of the Gulf War. The terrain looks more foreign than something from The Phantom Menace. Each bullet is magnified ten fold as it whizzes, seemingly harmless, through the air to its target. And the pain of the war is utterly gut-wrenching, and includes some fabulous scenes with oozing bile.

While none of the three leads (Clooney, Wahlberg, Cube) are particularly engaging in their roles, Russell makes them all very human characters. They have their motivations and they have their flaws. None are inherently good or utterly immoral. Like most people, they lie somewhere in the middle of these two extremes.

Three Kings may be a bit heavy-handed at times, including during an interrogation scene which is over the top, but it never forces you to accept its point of view. Rather it gives you an intimate and funny portrayal of four soldiers as they encounter their actual surroundings contrasted with what the media portrays as their surroundings.

Frankly, it's a miracle this movie ever got made, never mind distributed, by a major studio like Warner Brothers. They deserve congratulations for a movie so deviant from most mainstream media messages.

Films like Saving Private Ryan and Schindler's List are heralded for their depictions of war, and rightfully so. In my opinion, Three Kings should be included in this category. In addition to being a well-written, well-directed, and very entertaining movie, it is extremely relevant. It calls into question our past and demands a closer examination. A-

George Clooney as Special Forces Captain Archie Gates in Three Kings

Continuing the recent trend of singers turning actors, Ice Cube takes a surprising turn in Three Kings.

Distance breaks down

All reviews courtesy of Los Angeles Times
Album scale: one star (poor) to five (excellent).

Melissa Etheridge – Breakdown 2 stars **

Etheridge once sang with reckless fury, fueled by raging tales of obsession, jealousy and commitment as she reached desperately for the raw confession of Janis Joplin and the straight-ahead immediacy of Bruce Springsteen. It was music that also quickly fell into uninspired overkill, where feeling was replaced by volume.

"Breakdown" at least offers some relief from all that shouting, even if the Los Angeles-based rocker leans too heavily on mainstream balladry. Her lyrics remain torrid, confessional and accusatory, tapping into the emotional energy of her earliest recordings on "Stronger Than Me." These are predicable sentiments from Etheridge by now, but they're delivered with welcome restraint.

There are also moments of musical subtlety here, owing much to the rich production of Etheridge and guitarist John Shanks. Moody, psychedelic flourishes bathe "Scarecrow," an angry examination of the murder of Matthew Shepard, a young gay man in Wyoming. And Etheridge's mournful rasp is accompanied on the folky torch song "My Lover" with

Turn to ETHERIDGE, page 7

Box office leaves us in the lurch

Despite the opening of four new films this past weekend and almost universally poor reviews, Double Jeopardy retained the number one spot at the box office this past weekend. Jeopardy fell a remarkably small 26 percent from last weekend; that's the lowest week-to-week drop-off since The Sixth Sense. The action flick collected $17.2 million on 2884 screens to best all newcomers and bring its cumulative total to $47.4 million. U.S. Marshalls grossed a total $49.5 million during its entire domestic run, so by tomorrow Jeopradv will have passed that.

Gulf War dramedy, Three Kings, starring George Clooney and Mark Wahlberg, finished second for the weekend with $16.3 million. Three Kings became the largest October opener of all-time, opening on record 2942 screens nationwide. Despite the enormous screen count, Three Kings could only manage a $5,540 per-screen average, resulting in the disappointing total. Ironically, the movie has received stellar reviews. It goes to show that audience patterns have no relationship to a movie's quality. We'll have to wait until next week to see how it holds up.

Making its way to number three and probably earning itself more screens next week was American Beauty. The much-raved-about art house gem and consummate comparison for The Blair Witch Project collected $8.1 million on only 706 screens. That's about half of the screens originally projected for the Dreamworks film, giving it an amazing $11,473 per-screen average (less than Blair Witch, but very impressive nonetheless). I went to see the film three times this weekend and it was sold out all three times – once, two hours in advance. The demand is there

Turn to OFFICE, page 8

■ Etheridge

continued from page 6

barely more than her acoustic guitar and soft waves of keyboard.

She crafts yet another anthem of self-worth and individuality in "Mama I'm Strange," where she warns, "I'm descending pretending/ I'm blending/I'm going insane." It's a safe message, with the words set against music lacking in any kind of special energy. Like the rest of the album, it's sophisticated and unsurprising.

-Steve Appleford

David Bowie - Hours ... 2 stars **

On 1996's "Earthling," Bowie had seemingly resurrected his creative self, finding new inspiration in the drum-and-bass movement. But, as ever, he's already abandoned that style on Hours ..., which is often emotionally naked but musically uniformed, with memorable melodies hard to find. The album does have fine moments, such as the regretful torch song "Something in the Air" and lively guitar work by Reeves Gabrels and Chris Haskett (formerly of the Rollins Band). Which makes for some nice passages, but not a great album.

-Steve Appleford

Live - The Distance to Here 2 stars **

Dark, aggressive rock to the left, pop fluff to the right, this Pennsylvania quartet continues undaunted with its fourth album of reaching for the light. "Love will overcome," pleads Ed Kowalczyk in "Sparkle," guitars crescendoing around him. A noble stance, indeed. But the band hasn't moved forward in message or sound appreciably, since introducing its R.E.M./U2-flavored elixir in 1991, and the light's not getting any closer.

-Steve Hochman

India - Sola 3 stars ***

The Nuyorican diva has spent the better part of her career seeking suitable material for her powerful vocals, and this is her most successful effort since her Eddie Palmieri-produced debut. From the killer pop of "Hielo" to a superb version of La Lupe's hit "Que Te Pedi," this is one "salsa romantica" album where the romance is actually there.

-Ernesto Lechner

Melissa Etheridge mellows out to mixed results on her new album Breakdown

Crazy is typical

Sabrina takes false turn

By Robin Rauzi
Los Angeles Times

Drive Me Crazy
Directed By
with Melissa Joan Hart, Adrian Grenier
Playing at Springfeild Cinemas

HOLLYWOOD - Regard with suspicion any movie named after a song. It suggests there's not much to latch on to about the film in question, so its handlers have tried to co-opt the persona of a popular tune. "Can't Buy Me Love" and "Something to Talk About" both leap to mind.

In the case of Drive Me Crazy, anyone eligible to vote might not get the reference to the Britney Spears song, and that's likely intentional. The movie, which stars Melissa Joan Hart of TV's "Sabrina the Teenage Witch," will fall completely beneath grown-up radar, and that's no great loss. Like the song, the movie is bouncy and catchy but disposable pop material.

Hart stars as Nicole Maris, a campus booster nonpareil. In with the popular crowd, but still remarkably wholesome, Nicole is organizing a sort of massive homecoming dance to celebrate the centennial of Lincoln-Zonin High School (aka Time Zone High). Her next-door neighbor, Chase Hammond (Adrian Grenier) is the kind of guy who pulls pranks on people like her and views high school as nothing worth celebrating.

Nicole gets jilted by her dream date and Chase gets dumped by his girlfriend. Guess what Nicole and Chase do? Go ahead. Guess. OK, OK ... they "pretend" they're dating to make the other people jealous. And guess what happens? Go ahead. Guess.

But there's no point in being mean-spirited about a film like this. Stickily directed (though full of TV-style close-ups) and tightly cut, it is perfectly entertaining for 91 minutes. Like She's All That, Can't Hardly Wait, and others before it, Drive Me Crazy projects from the very beginning that nothing bad is going to happen in this movie. "Relax," it says. "It's all good here."

Adapted by TV writer Rob Thomas from the book How I Created My Perfect Prom Date by Todd Strasser, Drive Me Crazy is set in Utah, where somehow it is basketball season but also swim-in-the-river weather. Other aspects of Time Zone High, however, feel as real as home video such as the drill squad and the morning student news show.

Whatever charisma Hart has on TV the big screen dilutes it tenfold. Director John Schultz, formerly a doc umentarian, does her no favors by relying on the close-up. It's not that she's unattractive, it's more that she's unexpressive. Grenier, whose floppy curls and loping stride suggest high school, even if his 5 o'clock shadow does not, has far more charisma.

Melissa Joan Hart stars in Drive Me Crazy. Is there anything more to be said?

BRUISED BODY?
Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.
DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

Annoy Your Parents.
Become a Union Organizer!
Join the fight for worker rights. Service Employees International Union (SEIU), the fastest-growing union in the AFL-CIO, is looking for a few good organizers.
Do you like to fight for justice? Do you find yourself lamenting about the good old days of sit-down strikes in the '30s and the civil rights movement in the '60s?
Do you want to wear a suit and become a corporate drone, or do you want a challenging and fun job fighting for justice for working people?
No experience necessary — just a firm commitment to social justice, excellent communication skills, the ability to think creatively and independently, and a willingness to work long and irregular hours and to travel extensively. Positions available in Boston, Baltimore/DC, New York and Pennsylvania.
SEIU organizers fight for justice alongside hospital and nursing home workers, janitors, clerical workers, and public employees. Using aggressive and innovative tactics, together we challenge some of the largest and most powerful corporations in the world. And we win!
Salary begins at $24,000 (with excellent benefits)
Women and people of color encouraged to apply. Fax your resume and cover letter to Nina Schulman, Eastern Region Organizing Director, SEIU, (617) 492-8521. Questions? Call (617) 482-4471 ext. 20 or email Internet: schulman@seiu.org

MILLITECH HAS PART-TIME & WEEKEND WORK
2ND SHIFT 4:00PM - 12:30AM
3RD SHIFT 12:00AM - 7:30AM
SATURDAY AND SUNDAY ALL SHIFTS AVAILABLE
is a high tech company making millimeter wave broad equipment for major telecommunication companies throughout the world.
is convenient to the University -- on Route 116 in S. just one mile past Sunderland Center.
lenging; the environment is clean and quiet.
are an interest in learning, a willingness to and eligibility to work in the U.S. an hour for Assemblers. There is a shift done on 2nd Shift and 15% for 3rd Shift.
MECHANICAL ASSEMBLERS will receive on-the-job training in electromechanical assembly of microwave products and must have good communication skills.
ENGINEERING INTERNS
Electrical/Microwave Engineering Students, Manufacturing or Mechanical Engineering students, at the Junior, Senior or graduate level, with good GPAs and an interest in practical applications of their classroom experience, may be considered for part-time internships. Interested applicants must be available to work a minimum of 15 hours a week.
To apply for these positions fill out an application at our facility or send resume and cover letter to Human Resources, 20 Industrial Drive East, S. Deerfield, MA 01373
e-mail: hr@millitech.com FAX: 413.665.0089

teradynamic
YOU'VE WORKED HARD FOR YOUR DEGREE.
MOVED FORWARD, MADE THINGS HAPPEN.
KEEP THE MOMENTUM GOING AT A COMPANY THAT IS AS DYNAMIC AS YOU ARE.
Opportunities are available for December and May graduates in the following positions:
Account Managers
Buyers
Customer Service Representatives
Financial Analysts
Human Resources Administrators
Planners
Production Supervisors
With sales exceeding $1.5 billion, Teradyne is the world's largest supplier of automatic test equipment and software for the electronics and telecommunications industries and a leading supplier of high-performance backplane assemblies and connectors. Our products are used to test semiconductors, computerized telephone lines, networks, software and the Internet. Here you won't be stuck doing repetitive work. You'll be involved in the entire lifecycle of a project and able to see the end results of your work. You'll do it all in an environment that is creative and entrepreneurial, where self-motivated people thrive. Join our team and make your career Teradynamic.
TERADYNE
CHECK WITH YOUR PLACEMENT OFFICE TO FIND OUT WHEN WE ARE ON CAMPUS AND COME BY TO SEE US.
TERADYNE.COM

Coming soon...
SLAM/JAM FEST '99....
STAY TUNED.....
read the Collegian, you WILL be informed!

All I ever really needed and wanted to know I learned from a student run biz...
I went to a little place where there were PEOPLE.. and I ate EARTHFOODS..but needed some SWEETS n' MORE..so I went to that place in SYLVAN and I met my GREEK-O and know that I better hop on my BIKE CO-OP before I turned into a COLLEGIAN and so I sat on my WMUA..ah, what a day!
Bring this to COLLECTIVE COPIES to give to your kindergarten teacher
~tor~

Agnostic Front continues tradition

By Ray Hogan
Stamford Advocate

With 17 songs in less than half an hour, the long-reigning kings of New York Hardcore Agnostic Front, whip up an aural assault with the thrust of a battering ram for their second Epitaph release. It's hard to say how Riot Riot Upstart produced by labelmate Lars Fredrickson of Rancid, compares with previous AF efforts such as Victim in Pain, the now classic United Blood or the most recent Something's Gotta Give.

The newer stuff sounds superior (as in production values), and guitarist Vinnie Stigma even takes the occasional – gasp – guitar solo, but the urban urgency and blistering riffs that have remained AF's trademark for two decades sound as rebellious as they did 19 years ago.

Is that good or bad? Probably depends if you like hardcore, a music more abrasive than punk that evolved out of New York City in the '80s. Singer Roger Miret, Stigma, bassist Rob Kabula and drummer Jimmy Colletc (the same lineup that recorded Victim In Pain) don't follow youth culture trends other than the one they originally designed on NYC's Lower East Side.

The title track might be one of the best tunes AF has ever done, with Miret's rushed verse/chanted chorus style working with forceful effect. Issues such as making the right decisions, urban decay both physical and social, and unity remain his rallying cries, although there's a hint of elder-statesman reflection on "Sit and Watch" and "Police State" tells Mayor Giuliani what the downtown iconoclast thinks of his quality-of-life issues, pretty language it ain't.

■ office

continued from page 6

and building as its cumulative tally stands at $18.3 million.

Blue Streak fell two notches this week to number four. The movie still shows good legs, as its drop-off was a respectable 36 percent from $12.5 to this week's $8 million. Took for a four-week total of about $41 million and possibly 75 overall. Not Rush Hour, but not bad either.

The Sixth Sense collected $7.2 million (only a 14 percent drop-off) on 2821 screens so, see, there is a reason why it is still in theaters. That, and its mammoth $233 million total gross.

The latest teen flick, starring Melissa Joan Hart and that obnoxious Britney Spears song, Drive Me Crazy, finished sixth overall with $7.1 million. The movie is essential. It's She's All That reversed. That didn't stop drooling teenage boys from showing up to the 2,222 screens on which the film opened.

For Love of the Game faded into seventh with $5.4 million, another drop of about half. Basically, audiences just don't care anymore. Frankly, I can't blame them.

Pre-school children and "tickle me" fans everywhere were treated to Elmo in Grouchland this weekend, which opened on 1,210 screen, though anyone would be hard pressed to find one of them. The movie made $5.3 million, good enough for eighth place.

David E. Kelley continues to prove that he should stick to TV. After Lake Placid grossed a cumulative $28.8 million, his new project, Mystery Alaska is off to an equally horrid start. The fantasy hockey flick about a bunch of no-names preparing to play the New York Rangers collected $3.1 million (worse than Elmo...ouch) on 1673 screens. $1,852 per-screen averages don't impress anyone, especially me.

Stigmata finished its month run at number ten and $2.3 million. That's $44.3 total for the film that started out strong and faded fast amid competition. The multiplier for the film turned out to be a measly 2.6, well below the average 2.9 for the broad movie spectrum.

Outside the top ten, Stir of Echoes finished its first four weeks with $17.7 million, a multiplier of 3.05. As I've been saying, the film would have made more with more screens and maybe a big name studio behind it. Still, Artisan is probably happy. Thank you Blair Witch. Jakob The Liar fell 52 percent and only made $1 million dollars this past weekend. Last week's other opener, Mumford, wasn't even on the radar this week.

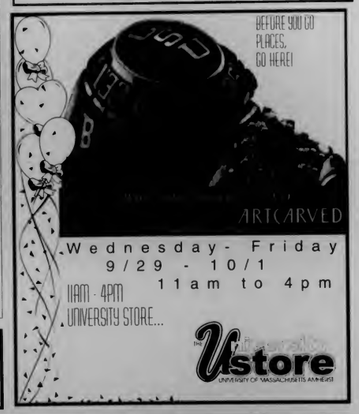
A Long Time Ago...
David Bowie, in his younger days, dreaming about Hours...his latest releases.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian...serving 17,000 copies daily...That's right...Monday, Thursday, Friday, Tuesday, Wednesday...and we even work on Sunday....

Lightning Crashes
And so does Live's new album. In stores, that is. Look for The Distance to Here next week.

Gonzalez & trio are Knightly



By Ray Hogan
Stamford Advocate

The Paladins
Slippin' In West Coast

One of the hardest battles fought by an act playing in a retro roots style is keeping true to the music's roots while not becoming a novelty. The Paladins, longtime rockabilly purveyors, don't have to worry about that. With 20 years of rockin' roadhouses, clubs, and theaters under their collective belt, the Paladins were learning rockabilly before today's crop of West Coast retro-(punk)rockers were old enough to get their first tattoos.

Led by singer/guitarist and original Paladin Dave Gonzalez, the trio lovingly celebrates early rock 'n' roll on "Slippin' In" (Ruf) by recalling the spirit of Eddie Cochran, Ritchie Valens, and Gene Vincent. But like fellow SoCal roots revisionists Los Lobos, there's a timeless quality at work here that puts the Paladins as much in the present as the past.

ARTS...space is available for your enjoyment!

Munchie Madness 3-6 PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos Especial 7.99 4.00
Potato Skins Supreme 7.99 4.00
Shrimp Cocktail 5.99 3.00
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
OCMP Welcome Here
http://virtual-valley.com/judies
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491

one number: 17,000
one name: The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

BUCCI
HAIRCUTS $10. always
25 n. pleasant st. amherst 256 0733
145 main st. northampton 586 0155

ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1997
SEX DANCERS STARTING 5 P.M.
CASTAWAY LOUNGE
Route 5 & 10 Whately
665-8733
FREE BUFFET AND PRIZES!!
ADVOCATE ★ BEST ★ OF THE VALLEY READERS POLL 1998
BEAUTIFUL GIRLS NEED MONEY???
APPLY IN PERSON FOR AMATEUR NIGHT COMING MONDAY OCTOBER 18TH!!
PROUDLY PRESENTS MONDAY NIGHT FOOTBALL!!! EVERY MONDAY!!!
MON 5PM-1AM
TUES-SAT 1PM-1AM
1ST PLACE == $200
2ND PLACE == $100
3RD PLACE == $50

Minutewomen to face Big Green

By Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

If the University of Massachusetts women's tennis squad were to travel up north and knock off the Big Green of Dartmouth College, it would be an upset.

We're not talking the '69 miracle Mets winning the World Series, but it would be a "statement" victory. A win would truly set the stage for a banner season.

The Minutewomen do have a good deal of momentum on their side going into this one. Everyone on the team is healthy, and after crushing St. John's in Flushing Meadows, the team's outlook has really changed.

In fact, before that win, coach Judy Dixon was looking at the Dartmouth match solely as a chance to "...prove that we can take on a nationally ranked squad."

"We don't expect to win, we will try to take points." But what a difference a win makes. Dixon after the victory was ecstatic with her team's play, and decided to challenge her players a little more. "Earlier in the week our goal was to go to Dartmouth and take three points, let me amend that. Our goal now is to go up to Dartmouth and win, because we have a shot all the way down the line."

So let the good times roll. This is a team on a mission, and who's to say that they can't beat a tennis powerhouse. Last year when the two teams met, the Minutewomen took the Big Green to the edge. Three of the matches came down to three sets. This is a pretty good feat when you consider Dartmouth at one point was ranked 6TH in the nation.

At first singles Dartmouth will pit Rebecca Dirksen against UMass' Ola Gerasimova. This battle will be a game within the game. The last two times the pair have gone against each other, it has been real close. Gerasimova has lost both times, but not by a whole lot. Each game has gone three sets and been a war to the end.

To say Dirksen has been "good" since joining Dartmouth would be a huge understatement. Last season she was ranked as high as 12TH in the East for singles, and 9TH for doubles. She has played first singles and doubles ever since becoming part of the team and last season was named to the first team All-Ivy for the second year in a row. A win for Gerasimova would seem to be essential if the Minutewomen are intent on downing the Big Green giants.

Dixon will most likely stick with what has worked, in terms of assembling a lineup for the Monday match. Gerasimova will stay at first singles which gives the squad their best chance for a point at that slot.

The dominating win versus St. Johns also gave the Minutewomen a chance, rest second singles player Helena Horak, who was slated to play third singles in the St. Johns match when Dixon elected to forfeit the point in hopes of resting Horak who had just come off of her forearm injury. Horak will probably play at second doubles come game time.

The next time the team will take the court will be at home in a make up match versus Amherst College, in a game that was originally cancelled due to early September rains.

49ers' Young gets concussion

By Ken Murray
Baltimore Sun

Steve Young took the first hit on his chest, just under his chin and at the top of his red No. 8. Then, in whiplash action, the back of his helmet caromed off a teammate's knee and the grass surface of Sun Devil Stadium in Tempe, Ariz.

Just like that, the intense quarterback for the San Francisco 49ers was revisiting no-man's land last Monday night. Out like a light for several long seconds, Young's past and future conspired to paint one frightening picture of a proud athlete on the edge.

When consciousness returned, Young found himself back in the center of a controversy over how to deal with an injury that endangers wide receivers and defensive backs as well as quarterbacks. His fourth concussion in three years focused attention on how sports leagues handle concussions and whether athletes should have the final say in deciding when – or if – they can resume playing.

For those seeking signs of progress in the NFL, there is this. In 1997, when Young was kneed in the head in the first quarter at Tampa Bay and suffered his third concussion in 10 months, he was allowed to re-enter the game in the fourth quarter.

On Monday, when he was knocked out of a game against the Arizona Cardinals on a clean but fierce hit by Aeneas Williams, he was not permitted to return. Although he tried.

"He asked me (to go back in)," 49ers Coach Steve Mariucci said the next day. "I simply said, 'Steve, you're not going in.' He says, 'I can play.' The doctor was there, and I said, 'Doc, what do you think?' He said, 'Hold him out.'

"I told Steve to stay out. He's a lawyer, he's going to debate, he's going to negotiate, he's going to try and convince you that his point of view sounds good."

In the rush to return to action, oft-concussed quarterbacks like Young and Troy Aikman of the Dallas Cowboys are caught in the middle of a riddle. Do you play on or do you play it safe?

And who ultimately makes the decision about when and whether an athlete can return to the field for practice or a game when he has had a head injury?

In Young's case, as with most players, it is a combination of opinions.

"I think the doctor has the predominant say because they have the most experience and as much diagnostics as possible," said Young, who has been ruled out of Sunday's game against the Tennessee Titans and perhaps next week's game at St. Louis.

"And I have a lot of say, too. If I'm honest with myself and with what happened and what has happened (in the past), then clearly you talk to your family, your girlfriend, and all of the people that are really important to you."

It is equally clear that evolving research needs to arrive at an agreed-upon protocol, which makes it more difficult for the star player or the obsessive coach to second guess or overrule a medical decision.

Scientific research has established that once a player has a concussion, he is more at risk in the next game, week, and season.

That makes an impartial decision more vital. One of the problems with the system now is that the injured player does have a voice. And denial does play a role.

"Certainly, athletes in general – especially elite athletes – have a much stronger sense of invincibility than the rest of us," said Dr. Andrew Tucker, a team physician with the Ravens and director of primary care sports medicine at University Sports Medicine at Kernan. "Whether it be a head injury or a muscular-skeletal injury, their acceptance of that comes a little slower.

"On the other side of the coin, you're talking about an injury that does affect judgment. It's like trying to figure out a person's judgment when they're under the influence of alcohol."

Concussions have driven any number of players from the game, among them quarterbacks Roger Staubach and Stan Humphries and wide receivers Al Toon and Don Beebe. In a book written by Ronnie Lott, the former 49er safety estimated he had no less than 12 concussions in his career – and lied about his recovers to get back on the field.

Aikman suffered the seventh concussion of his career in a 1997 game against the Philadelphia Eagles, and played the following week against the 49ers.

Humphries was forced to retire from the San Diego Chargers after the 1997 season, when he endured three concussions in two months, and two in successive week. The one that ended his career came after a hit under his chin by Cincinnati's Reinard Wilson.

"I was one of the worst," said Humphries, who estimated he had between 10 and 12. "I lost a little feeling in my right leg for an hour or two. It was real scary. That was the last time I was on the field."

The list of concussion patients this season already includes some prominent names. Miami Dolphins linebacker Zach Thomas suffered one in a preseason scrimmage Aug. 1, and when he tried to come back a few days later, saw flashes of light when he made contact. He sat out two weeks of training camp but missed only one preseason game. Forty-Niners running back Lawrence Phillips had a "mild" concussion in Week 1 returning a kickoff, but missed no time.

In Week 2, Green Bay Packers tight end Mark Chmura was hit in the back of the head by Detroit linebacker Chris Claiborne when he was on the ground, and came away with a concussion and a stinger, or numbness in his limbs. Chmura won't play again this season – or perhaps ever again – because of a disc injury.

In Week 3, Jacksonville wide receiver Reggie Barlow, Carolina center Frank Garcia, Buffalo quarterback Rob Johnson, and Young all had concussions.

The league is concerned about the trend. In 1997 – the season Aikman, Young and Humphries all were hurt – the NFL poured

$1.1 million into university medical research grants to study the components and long-term effects of mild traumatic brain injuries. The study is not yet complete.

In December 1997, a group of 21 representatives of medical societies whose members treat athletes and major national professional and collegiate sports leagues – including Dr. Elliot Pellman, team physician for the New York Jets – met to formulate guidelines on concussions. The recommendation were published in the current issue of the American Journal of Sports Medicine.

In the Sept. 8 issue of the Journal of the American Medical Association, research was published that sheds light on how concussion affects the brain. One member of the team that prepared the report offered an explanation of why violent collisions have become such a troubling part of professional football.

Dr. Michael Collins, of the department of behavioral health at Henry Ford Health System in Detroit, pointed to the laws of physics that apply when stronger, quicker 300-pound linemen and 250-pound linebackers bring down smaller quarterbacks and wide receivers.

"That's why concussions are becoming a greater problem," Collins said. "Mass is important when you've got more and more 300-pound linemen who can run a lot faster than they have in the past."

The resulting collisions, in effect, jostle the brain.

"If you think of the brain as an egg yolk inside an eggshell, if I twist it quickly, you won't see the egg break," Collins said. "But the yolk sloshes around inside. When a football player takes a hit, the head twists, so it's like the egg

"For example, the Steve Young hit this week he got hit in the chest – it's the whiplash that happened. He didn't hit his head on something hard, but something that moved him quickly from one spot to another caused the brain to slosh around."

Collins allowed that there is no way at this point to measure the severity of a concussion. He defined a bad one, intuitively, as when an athlete is confused for an extended time (for 15 to 20 minutes) and can't formulate memories, or loses memory of what happened before the hit. Another definition, he said, is an athlete who loses consciousness for more than five to 10 seconds.

Volleyball wins two

Meyers reaches block record

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

A little bit of senior Jill Meyers is all the Massachusetts volleyball team needed, as they mamboed over two A-10 rivals this weekend.

On Friday, the Minutewomen continued their Atlantic 10 season by heading into the Bronx to face Fordham University. The Rams proved to be no match for UMass, as they swept the match 3-0. UM came out of the gate slowly in game one, hitting a low .159 percent. They managed to squeak out a victory, however, winning 15-12. The women's offense began to flow in game two when they upped their percentage to .216, swatting 19 kills on 51 total attacks giving them the win, 15-9. UMass started firing on all cylinders in game three, pushing their hitting percentage to an impressive .370 with 22 kills on 46 attacks, as they finished off the match, 15-8.

Meyers tallied a double-double with 16 kills and 16 digs on only two errors. The senior co-captain hit an outstanding .424 hitting percentage on 33 attacks. Senior Kari Hogancamp continued her steady play posting a double-double, which included 11 kills and 11 digs. Junior Rebecca Hasson also put up solid numbers for the Minutewomen, as she totaled 11 kills and 10 digs for her second consecutive double-double.

"This was a good road win for us," head coach Bonnie Kenny said in a press release. "We didn't get our offense going until game three, but once we did that, we seemed to settle in. Kari Hogancamp probably had her best all-around match this year. She played great defense and terminated well for us."

The women continued their road trip, stopping off in Pittsburgh to face Duquesne University. UMass overwhelmed their hosts, as they easily disposed of the Dukes, 3-0. The win was the third in a row for the Minutewomen, not losing a single game in any of the wins.

Game one was a tough test for the squad, as they narrowly beat the Dukes, 15-2. UM scorched Duquesne with a sizzling .650 hitting percentage, including 15 kills on 20 attacks.

"I thought we played very strong in the first game," said Kenny. "We terminated and hit the ball very well."

Game two saw the team cool down when they hit a much lower .167, along with 8 errors, but still managed to drop DU, 15-6. In the third and deciding game Duquesne put up more of a struggle, only to see their efforts thwarted by the Minutewomen who closed out the match, 15-11.

"A big positive for us in the third game, was when we were very far behind and were able to come back and stick with it and stay patient. So, we ended up winning the match in three games instead of in four. Jen Drennan did a good job of coming in for us at setter in game three and of getting us into the game. Our block was the key for us tonight and we served well," said Kenny.

UMass was once again led by the efforts of Meyers, Hogancamp, and Hasson. Meyers posted 16 kills and four blocks, which made her the all-time blocks leader at UMass, passing Michelle Pacioreck's (1994-97) old record of 359, with 342. Meanwhile, Hogancamp recorded her 10TH double-double of the season with 10 kills and 16 digs. Hasson also padded her stats smashing 15 kills on her was to a match-high .519 hitting percentage with only one error.

With the two wins, the Minutewomen improve to 8-6 on the season and 3-2 in the Atlantic 10. UMass will be in action on Tuesday, October 5 versus Brown at 7pm in Curry Hicks Cage.

Captains come in Senior captains Todd Bankhead and Matt Dawson take the field.

■ baseball

continued from page 12

"I've always been a fan of the national leagues, and I grew up in St. Louis, so to like the Cardinals is obvious," Mileur said. "I'm also breaking down and finally, after 25 years, becoming a Red Sox fan."

As a fan, he fondly tells the story of celebrating an anniversary with the St. Louis Cardinals.

"I actually went back to St. Louis when they celebrated their 100TH anniversary and stayed at the hotel where a lot of the former players were staying, and right then, I got to be a fan."

He also spoke highly of a time when he got to speak to Ted Williams. While the team was in Nashua, Williams came to town to sign autographs, and, the organizer of the signing, in need of baseballs, called Mileur.

"Of course we sold him some, and when he came to pick them up, Williams came with them," Mileur said. "He sat around for about an hour and chatted with us. It was wonderful."

Mileur is now a full time fan. He sold the team in 1994.

"The whole business has changed. It used to be Mom and Pop organizations, and now, they're just huge," Mileur commented. "It came down to either owning or teaching and I chose teaching. Everything changed: the rules, the marketing, the presentation of the game. League meetings turned into an investors mentality with little talk of baseball."

But he still has his yearbooks and scorecards. He still has his "odds and ends" of memorabilia.

"I gave the Hall of Fame copies," Mileur said. "But I still have a lot of the stuff from when I was an owner."

And that includes the memories, both of times and people.

"When the team was in Harrisburg, we used to take people from around here down there to watch a few games over the weekend. Towards the end of that tradition, we were bringing 50 people," Mileur said. "A local sports bar took care of us those weekends. A few of us still go down every summer."

He remembers fondly Tom Prince, who is now a backup catcher with the Philidelphia Phillies.

"He came up with the Pirates, when we first won a league championship, which was the first time any team I'd owned won, he was the guy who hit the clutch homeruns or got the outs," Mileur said. "He was a good kid and his folks were always there at the games."

Mileur spoke of seeing Prince a few years ago at a game when he was down in the bullpen.

"We chatted about this and that," Mileur said. "He's a very nice young man, and he certainly had a respectable big league career."

SPORT JUST DO IT !

SHOPPING FOR A SPORT?
Anyone interested in trying out for the Women's Tennis
Please Call Debbie Ginn at 545-3103 for details

安城中國飯店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
253-7835 = 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

Band Day!
Show your support, come to band day Saturday OCTOBER 9th
McGuirk Alumni Stadium
UMASS vs. Northeastern
Check out the FREE PROGRAM featuring articles and team rosters compliments of the Collegian

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking 'Best Buddies' to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

AUTO FOR SALE

Honda Prelude SI, 1992 Excellent condition, silver 5 spd, power brakes/windows sun roof, AM/FM stereo additional snow tires 96k $8500 (413)665-0218

COMPUTERS

CELERON 333MHZ PC Tower with 128MB RAM, 4Gig HD, 4Meg Intel video card, 56I/ 90 modem, 10/100 ethernet card, 24X CDRom sound card, 2USB Ports, 4ISA Slots, 3 PCI Slots, IAGP ($900) - Pentium II 233 Mhz w/128 Meg RAM, 6Gig HD, 4 Meg S3 video card, sound card, 10/100 ethernet, 3PCI, 3ISA, 1AGP, 24X CDROM ($700) - Both come with Win 98, Corel 8 and MS Office preinstalled. Call Peter 253-6665

EMPLOYMENT

TEACHER/CHEMISTRY Part time for Senior High Please submit resume to Superintendent s Office, 170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01002 FAX 413-549-9883. An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Paraprofessional Position Title I Math/provides in-class support for students working with teachers in the High School math department. Send resume to: Superintendent's Office, Amherst Pelham Regional Schools, 170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01002 An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evenings and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact: Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

TUTORS/TRANSLATERS Bilingual/for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Farsi, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Spanish, Tabetan, Vietnamese, Yoruba. Contact ESL Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

SCHOOL CROSSING GUARDS AM and PM elementary school duty. Please contact Maintenance Office, Amherst Public Schools (549-9855) An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Pays $60 to $120 per shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

EMPLOYMENT

FREE BABY BOOM BOX +EARN $1200! Fundraiser for student groups & organizations. Earn up to $4 per MasterCard app. Call for info or visit our website. Qualified callers receive a FREE Baby Boom Box 1-800-932-0528 ext. 119 or ext. 125 www.ocmconcepts.com

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time Call 1-800-572-3361

Help Wanted Housekeeping 3 to 6hrs a week in home of Grad Student, single parent. 7.00hrly, more for larger tasks. Car a must. All cleaning supplies provided. Call Eves 367-9129

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

The Mullin Center Ice Rink seeks Zamboni drivers experience preferred but not necessary. Will train. Apply in person at the Ice Rink

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

EMPLOYMENT

EARN UP TO $1000 By Posting Your L[illegible] Notes O[illegible] (40[illegible] or C[illegible] [illegible] www.[illegible].com Revolutionizing the way students study on the web!!

Promotions Company seeks reliable meticulous, student to poster towns and colleges. 10hrs a week. Tues, Weds, Fri. $7.00 a run plus bonus. Car and excellent references. 259-1227

Preschool Teachers Wanted work study positions and substitute positions available working with children ages 18 months to 6yrs. Cushman-Scott Childrens Center Call Ellen at 549-1167

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

EMPLOYMENT

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

Klub Kai is now hiring Bouncers and Exp. Bartenders for info call Trimarco @ 413-586-2774

Kai Chi Restaurant/Hiring Exp. Wait Staff/Driver apply within after 4pm @ 413-586-2774

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

Your Ad could Fill this Space!! Call 545-3500

ENTERTAINMENT

OJ For Hire: DJ Fooz is now booking for Fall Semester. Date parties, formals, house parties, and school affiliated functions. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR RENT

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

CD-Rom/Soundcard External Software Inc. $150/BO. Kim 549-6856

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On UMass Bus Rte Call 256-0364

Muay Thai Kickboxing Classes in Amherst! Call Paul at 253-6699 for more information

LOST & FOUND

Found Dorm Key in bathroom at Boyden Gym on 9/28 Call 5-4092

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts 350/month + utilities Female preffered Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted 1bdrm in 3bdrm Apt behind Puffers Pond. Must be easy going. Big yard, parking $333/mo+utilities Call Bry/Joe 549-4055

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Aerial Photos of UMass Campus now available! On the web. www.air-photocollegecampus.com

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleaner ruined you favorite suit! Are dept collectors knocking at your door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today: 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

ST. JUDE

May The Sacred Heart of Jesus be adored , glorified, loved and preserved, now and forever. Sacred heart of Jesus, pray for us. St. Jude, worker of miracles, pray for us. St. Jude, helper of the hopeless, pray for us. Thank you M.M.

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff, Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplash-tours.com

Check out The Collegian Classifieds and find the rest of your life!!

Five College Community Calendar

MONDAY, OCT. 4

TUESDAY, OCT. 5

NOTICES

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Thanks for reading the Collegian.

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Hosting Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	UVC–TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	TV Land
13	WGCH & HSCN	Univision
14	International	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 4, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places "Miami" (R)		Red Flies		Hostage (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)		Connecticut Journal
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law (In Stereo)		News	Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football: Buffalo Bills at Miami Dolphins. (In Stereo Live)
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven "Yak Sack"		Safe Harbor (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	4	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Moesha	Parkers	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	30	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	70s Show	70s Show	Ally McBeal (R) (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)		News	Tonight Show
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Red Flies		Hostage (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 3)		Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	20/20		NFL Football: Buffalo Bills at Miami Dolphins. (In Stereo Live)
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Toronto Maple Leafs. (Live)						Frasier	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	"Eli's The American President" (1995, Comedy-Drama) Michael Douglas						It's "The American President" (1995)
A&E	51	Simon & Simon "Sea Humbug"	Law & Order "Golden Years"			Biography: Rock Hudson		Investigative Reports		Poirot "Dead Man's Mirror"		Law & Order
CNN	22	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	39	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Eli's The One" (1998, Comedy) Jennifer Aniston				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	43	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Salmon		Real LAPD "Life and Death" (R)		Why Dogs Smile		Why Dogs Smile		Real LAPD "Life and Death" (R)
ESPN	45	5:45) Sportscenter		Monday Night Countdown				Gymnastics: Women's World Team Trials.				Baseball Tonight
LIFE	97	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Beyond Chance		It's "The Baby Jessica" (1994, Drama) Suckdard Channing.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite		TRL (N) (In Stereo)		Say What Kyra	Road Rules	Making-Video		Fanatic	Undressed (R)
NICK	46	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Meude
SCIFI	85	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Outer Limits (In Stereo)		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	98	Home Again	Home Again	How'd They Do That?		Paramedics "Southern Comfort"		US SWAT: Elite Police Force		Air Rescue 5		Partemedics "Southern Comfort"
TNT	42	Due South "Call of the Wild"		Elt "Sticks and Stones"		Wrestling: WCW Monday Nitro. (In Stereo Live)						It's "Who's the Man?" (1993)
USA	59	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG "Ghost Ship" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		Wrestling		Wrestling		Gyrd. "Choose Your Own Evil"
HBO	60	It's "Hope Floats" (1998, Romance) Sandra Bullock. PG-13				It's "Silver" (1998, Suspense) Sharon Stone. R		Three Kings		It's "Shiloh" (1997, Comedy-Drama) Vanessa L. Williams. PG
MAX	65	It's "A Low Down Dirty Shame" (1994) Keenan Ivory Wayans. R				It's "Knockout" (1997, Action) Peter Phoenix. PG-13		It's "Rules of Engagement" (2000, Suspense) Meagan Freeman. R				"Mercury 22"
SHOW	61	It's "Eye For Murder" (1998, Comedy) Tim Robbins. PG-13				It's "Air Force One" (1997, Suspense) Harrison Ford. R				Norman Jewison on Comedy: Funny Is Money		Hoop Life

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Not a care in... By Pedro Gomes

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Leedee By Jim Meddick

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – While you tend to attairs that are not about to wait for anyone, someone you know and trust can tend to the planning stages of a future project.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – You can do without certain things, in favor of certain other things. All you have to do is make a choice, and decide what is most important to you.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're in need of a little insurance today, and an arrangement with someone in the know can get you exactly what you need.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – A realization that something is unavoidable is sure to act as a remarkable motivator today. What you do can surely make a difference!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – In order to get the answers you need to deal with current circumstances, you're going to have to ask certain questions as soon as possible.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – If you're going to break through certain barriers today, you're going to have to do it alone. You'll have moral support, but you're essentially on your own.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You'll surprise friends and loved ones by doing something that seems entirely unexpected. Actually, it's been planned for a very long time.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Now is no time to be heroic. There are certain things that need to be done, and you must consider practical realities as you progress.

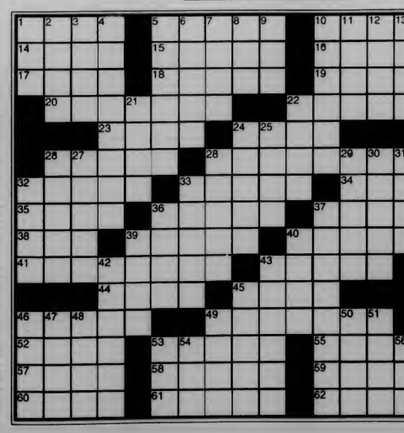
Gemini (May 21-June 20) – This is a good day to express your concern regarding certain plans that have been put into motion which present a number of dangers.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Don't be shy about asking for help today. You have certain things to accomplish and certain obstacles to overcome, and there are no two ways about it!

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – The time has come for you to make a decision: you can go forward, or you can change direction. Either way, you will surely feel challenged.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – When you're not tending to pre-assigned tasks, this is a good day for you to do what comes naturally. By all means, prioritize.

Quote of the Day



"Shhhh!!! I don't want the room to get knocked up..."

–Tara Hughes (reffering to getting written up)

Close to Home By John McPherson

Just as the upperclassmen were about to close the door, Lenny activated his inflatable Anti-Locker-Stuffing Suit™.

ACROSS
1 Harvard rival
5 Slip back
10 Neck spasm
14 God of love
15 Like the buildings at 1 Across
16 Like — of bricks
17 Type of ad
18 Outlets
19 Splitsville
20 Electronic pagers
22 Fortuneteller's deck
23 Fall on deaf —
24 Actor Reynolds
26 Vaguely
28 Calm endurance
32 Portends
33 Change from maxi to midi
34 Olive — of the comics
35 Matured
36 Patronage
37 "Casablanca" name
38 — Khan
39 Last Greek letter
40 Bnde's walkway
41 Harden
43 Coin of India
44 Roams around
45 Memo
46 Becomes level
49 Sandwich meat
52 Seller of 49 Across
53 Be of use
55 Egyptian goddess
57 — -edged; like some securities
58 Cut the turkey
59 California valley
60 "What — is new?"
61 Finished
62 Strong wind

DOWN
1 Somber-looking evergreen
2 Hussein, e.g.
3 Type of wolf?
4 Regarded highly
5 Footman's attire
6 Affirms positively
7 Brooches
8 Place
9 McMahon and Sullivan
10 Self-defense method
11 Appian Way, e.g.
12 Parent's warning
13 Tangle
21 Buddies
22 Clip
24 Brazilian port
25 Colorado Indians
26 Lie — keep a low profile
27 Just right
28 Singer Lee
29 Din
30 Bike or Inke
31 Ms. Sommer
32 Barnyard sounds
33 Coral areas
36 Surrounded by 37 Mellowing
39 Harem rooms
40 Volvo. e.g
42 Light
43 Turned over and over
45 Green
46 Bnm
47 Bnde's attire
48 Building wings
49 Shakespeare nickname
50 Isaac's son
51 Puppy sounds
53 High card
54 Cargo carrier
56 Took a load off

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

O	L	D		C	R	E	A	T	E		N	I	C	E
P	E	I		L	E	N	T	I	L		O	N	U	S
E	T	A		A	G	A	T	E	S		B	E	R	T
N	U	N		C	A	M	A	R	A	D	E	R	I	E
S	P	A	R	K	L	E	R		A	L	T	E	R
			H	E	E	L		P	A	S
G	O	R	D	O	N		B	R	O	W	N
A	N	N	A		A	N	D	R	E		H	A	L	E
P	E	A	S	A	N	T	S		A	P	P	L	E
			B	A	H		N	O	R	M
S	P	R	E	E		D	U	N	G	E	O	N	S
T	R	U	S	T	W	O	R	T	H	Y		G	A	I
A	I	M	S		A	M	O	R	A	L		L	I	E
L	O	B	E		R	A	V	I	N	E		E	V	E
E	R	A	S		T	R	E	A	D	S		R	E	T

10-4-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu
Call 545-3626 for more information.

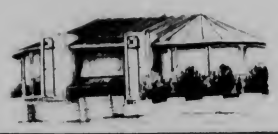
Franklin
LUNCH
Chicken Quesadilla
American Chop Suey
Eggplant Parmesian

DINNER
Shrimp & Rice Stir Fry
Pineapple Ham Steak Dinner
Casablanca Stew

Worcester
LUNCH
Chicken Quesadilla
American Chop Suey
Eggplant Parmesian
Lentils, Macaroni & Tomatoes

DINNER
Chinese Beef & Peppers with Snow Peas
Pineapple Ham Steak Dinner
Monterey Bake
Casablanca Stew

Hampshire
LUNCH
Chicken Quesadilla
American Chop Suey
Eggplant Parmesian



DINNER
Spaghetti with Meatballs
Pineapple Ham Steak Dinner
Monterey Blake

Berkshire
LUNCH
Chicken Quesadilla
American Chop Suey
Eggplant Parmesian
Lentils, Macaroni & Tomatoes

DINNER
Popcorn Chicken
Pineapple Ham Steak Dinner
Monterey Bake
Casablanca Stew

Today's Staff

Night Editor — Vanessa Walker
Photo Technition — Barbara Bradbury
Copy Editor — Samantha Poulten
Production Supervisor — John Burt
Production Staff — Benjamin T. Alcorn, Tereza Rodrigues

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

Flying Dutchmen spoil homecoming with 27-14 win

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The Hofstra football team was waiting for this chance.

Last year, in Hempstead, NY, the Massachusetts Minutemen came to town as an upstart young team looking for a big win to vault them into national prominence. The Flying Dutchmen were the perfect team to beat: respected, tough, and highly ranked at No. 5 in the nation.

UMass engineered an enormous comeback in that game, scoring 40 second-half points to win in the final seconds, 40-35. The victory was enough to push the Minutemen into the Top 25 and eventually, the team went on to bring home the National Championship.

Ranked No. 5 again, Hofstra came to Amherst, and this time it was Massachusetts' homecoming game. Adding to the incentive, UMass, with the title, is the clear team to beat for any program wishing to gauge where it stands when eyeing this year's trophy.

With their roles reversed, the Flying Dutchmen exploded for 20 points in the third period to drop the Minutemen to 1-3 on the year with a 27-14 decision.

Hofstra wasted no time getting on the scoreboard, as tailback Vaughn Sanders broke free on a 74-yard touchdown jaunt on the Dutchmen's first offensive play. The UMass defense would dig in and slow the Hofstra attack, though, stopping their first-half scoring there.

"Obviously it's pretty tough when they go... for 74 yards or whatever on the first play of the game, but after that play, for the rest of the first half I thought we played really well," UMass linebacker Matt Dawson said. "They didn't really get anything after that."

With 6:11 left in the half, Minuteman runner Marcel Shipp copied Sanders with a 64 yarder to tie the game. Shipp would head to the locker room with 146 yards at the break, en route to a 200-yard afternoon. His performance would leave him only three yards behind Garry Pearson for second place on the school's all-time rushing list with 3,856 overall.

Both teams stalled and squandered drives as the half wound down. Sanders left the Dutchmen with only one leg of their double-barreled backfield attack, going down with a broken left tibia that will likely keep him out the duration of the season. Fellow tailback Jimmy Jones was left to shoulder the burden of the running game, and he did so with 111 yards on 22 attempts.

But it was quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi who deep-sixed the Minutemen on this day. After Hofstra defensive back Robert Thomas took UMass signal caller Todd Bankhead's first pass of the third quarter into the end zone for his third defensive score of the year, Carmazzi began an offensive barrage that kept Massachusetts on its heels the rest of the contest.

"This game meant a lot to me," Carmazzi said. "Dating back to last year, it was probably the most frustrating loss in my career here. At half time, I kind of felt that I wasn't getting as much of the opportunity to really take control of this game, and so I asked (offensive coordinator) Rob Spence to try, as much as he can to put it in my hands and give me a chance to make some plays."

While Bankhead dealt with numerous drops from his receiving core on the day, the "Italian Stallion" took his team straight down the field on its next possession, going three-for-three on a four-play, 80-yard sprint that consumed only 1:36 of the clock. He completed the series with a 22 yard pass to receiver Charlie Adams to up the score to 20-7.

Dutchmen Damion Siricropi and Shawki Perry sacked Bankhead to end the next Minuteman drive, and the race was on again.

Carmazzi hit all four of his attempts on the subsequent drive, but made the definitive play on the ground, galloping into the open field for 43 yards on a fourth and inches keeper. The quarterback took four carries 52 yards to outrush Jones by 48 yards in the stint. Four minutes and 80 yards after the drive began, Carmazzi finished it with a four-yard scoring toss to wideout Jason Maxwell.

"You've got to credit Hofstra," Massachusetts Coach Mark Whipple said. "They've got a real good club and you can only do so much with Carmazzi."

The field general would end the game with 253 yards passing on 22 of 35 attempts, while running for 75 yards on 17 carries after consuming much of the fourth quarter clock in drives that stalled in UMass territory. Twice the Dutchmen were deep enough to score more points, but two Chad Johnson field goal tries missed their targets, and Hofstra would finish with 27.

Shipp scored his second touchdown of the game from seven yards out with 4:52 left in the game to justify an 11-play, 80-yard series that took up two minutes and 59 seconds to end the games scoring with the final of 27-14.

KARA STOKES

Not even Marcel Shipp's 200 yard performance could get the Minutemen back on track.

Troubles in red zone plague UM

Carmazzi excellent in victory

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team got stuck in traffic. The Minutemen would be cruising along, working the ball into Hofstra territory, when all of a sudden, they would get stuck in between gears and their road to paydirt would end, their chance of upending the No. 6 Flying Dutchmen ending along with it.

This season, points have come only through sustained drives for the Minutemen (1-3 overall, 1-1 Atlantic 10). Nothing has come easy, as it did seemingly so often in last year's dream ride. The red zone has head coach Mark Whipple seeing red just four games in.

"We just didn't do anything in the red zone," Whipple said. "The red zone was really a negative, and that's what hurt us."

"I think it really hurt our defense. They're really playing hard, they're playing well, but you're looking up and you're still down."

The door was open, inviting the Minutemen to pull a semi-upset for the second consecutive season against Hofstra. The cards were on the table, but UMass folded. It would only be a matter of time until the Hofstra offense began to churn.

"You can't give good teams that many chances, and they just executed better than we did," Whipple said. "That's the bottom line. They made plays when they had to."

While the UMass offense sputtered at midfield, Hofstra quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi found a groove, completing 11 consecutive attempts at one point in the second half, including a pair of scoring passes that all but ended UMass' afternoon. On the day, Carmazzi completed 22 of 35 for 253 yards and an interception.

By the end of the third quarter, the Flying Dutchmen (3-0) had put the game in their back pockets, gaining the lead with a 15-yard interception return for a touchdown by Robert Thomas.

"[Quarterback] Todd [Bankhead] never saw the corner and all of a sudden they're ahead 13-7 and really hadn't done a whole lot except for the first play of the game," Whipple said.

First half woes offensively continued and blended with the Minutemen's inability to score with a smaller field. UMass had an opportunity to take advantage of a rare Carmazzi miscue. At the end of the first half with the score knotted at seven, Jeremy Robinson picked off a Carmazzi pass at the Hofstra 38. Behind a pair of Bankhead completions to tailback Marcel Shipp, the Minutemen got to the Flying Dutchmen's 14-yard line. Jason Cherry's 31-yard field goal attempt was then blocked as time expired in the first half.

"When we made a mistake, they made the most of their opportunities and we haven't been able to do that, and that's the one thing that's frustrating. Last year, when somebody made a mistake, we pounced upon it and we have not done that."

Bankhead played for the third consecutive game with a fractured wrist on his non-throwing hand. Despite two interceptions, the senior co-captain looked to show signs of returning to last year's form, completing 25 of 42 passes. Many of the incompletions were drops on the receiving end, most notably on 4th down at the Hofstra 7 when Adrian Zullo could not grab ahold of a Bankhead toss in the end zone.

"Offensively, we did all right in the first half," Whipple said. "We just didn't finish things in the red zone and that really hurt. I think that gave them momentum."

Shipp's 7-yard touchdown run late in the fourth marked the first time that the Minutemen had crossed the end line in five trips inside the Hofstra 25-yard line.

The UMass defense held a high-powered Hofstra offense to a single touchdown, a 74-yard scamper by Vaughn Sanders on the first play from scrimmage. All Whipple needed was for his offense to move the ball and hope for the best upon nearing the end zone. A nine-play, 60-yard drive stalled at the Hofstra 20 before Doug White's 37-yard field goal attempt veered wide right, one of two kicker mishaps in the first half. Two drives later, UMass turned the ball over on downs after driving 54 yards to the Flying Dutchmen 22.

The Minutemen return to conference play on Saturday when Northeastern come to Amherst on Band Day. The Huskies gave Boston College a run before falling to the Eagles 33-22 in Chestnut Hill.

Men's soccer dominates A-10

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

This weekend the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team gave flying foes the bird as they clipped the wings off Temple University's Owls and Saint Joseph University's Hawks.

The Minutemen were ungracious hosts to guests Temple and St. Joseph's, as they gave nothing away to both teams at Totman Field this weekend. Only allowing one goal over the course of both games, the Maroon and White dominated the two Atlantic 10 competitors. The games were the second and third A-10 games for UMass, and were both equally important with respect to the University of Massachusetts standing in the A-10 conference.

"We were definitely pleased. We had to win both games, and we did," said University of Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch. "It was a good weekend for us."

However, last weekend did not go as well, as UMass dropped their Atlantic 10 opener to the University of Rhode Island 4-0. It was the end of a two game winning streak for the Minutemen and an unfortunate way to begin their Atlantic 10 conference games.

Yet, UMass rebounded on Friday as they handed Temple a 3-1loss and then unloaded on St. Joseph's, as they shutout the Hawks 7-0 on Sunday.

Temple reached UMass with a 3-4-1 record and was 1-0 in the A-10 when they left the bus on Friday. They were hoping to turn things around after just losing to Pennsylvania 3-1, but by the time the Owl's bus was pulling away from Totman they had dropped the second game in a row and now had their first A-10 defeat.

Although Temple struck first, and the Minutemen's offensive power eventually overwhelmed the Owls. The Maroon and White took aim at the Temple net twenty-two times while the Owls were only able to muster eight shots the whole game.

Kevin Kelly, Temple's leading scorer found the back of the net only five minutes into the first half. However, less than twenty minutes later Temple lost their lead when they scored on their on net. UMass junior and back Patrick Beatttie delivered the ball the bounced of a Temple defender, and by their goalkeeper.

It was a good break for the Minutemen, but their only offense did not just come from the other team. Senior and UMass forward Todd Baron scored two goals, including the game winner, coming from senior back Jonathan Bib's pass at the end of the first half. Baron's second goal was off a penalty kick which he put away midway through the second half, adding a little insurance to UMass' lead.

Tending net for the University of Massachusetts was sophomore Bryan O'Quinn. O'Quinn was reasonably safe in net, as he did not post any saves in the 3-1 victory.

Also finding themselves relatively untested were UMass senior goalkeeper Todd Fowler, and freshmen keeper Enzo Altomare. Both stood their ground, as they kept St. Joseph shooters from ever finding the back of the UMass net.

At the other end of the field, UMass shooters forced St. Joseph's beaten goalkeeper to recover the ball from the back of the net seven times. Senior Adam Black led the scoring as he hit netting three times, achieving his first career hat trick. Black also provided two assists, helping his teammates, junior Matt Christy and sophomore Fred Kinateder, score two goals apiece. Christy recorded an assist as well, but it was freshman forward Jeff Deren who left the game with the most assists totaling three. It was a carrier high game for all four of these UMass players.

It was the days leading scorer, Black, who began the UMass onslaught on St. Joseph's. About midway through the first half, Black scored off a ball deflected by Deren who was set up by Christy. Christy then followed Black's goal with a ball to the corner of the Hawk's net less than five minutes later. Pushing the score up to 4-0 at halftime, Black and Christy beat the Hawk's goalkeeper again, each earning their second goal of the day.

After the Halftime break, the hats hit the field, and Black put his third goal away as he teamed with Deren for the second time of the day. With a 5-0 lead, UMass was not done as Kinateder drove the final nails into the Hawk's coffin with his two goals. Freshman forward Yuri Morales and junior back Danny Brinkman both helped Kinateder as they both received assists.

Although this weekends games were important wins for this season's Minutemen, and they improve UMass' record to 7-4 and 2-1 in the A-10, they were also historically significant. Not since 1995, when Randy Jacobs acquired eight points for his performance in the Philadelphia Textile game, has a University of Massachusetts player achieved this level of success. Black broke that draught Sunday as he reached the eight-point mark. But that was not the only record that fell to Black, as his hat trick is the first for the Minutemen since Mike Butler did it in 1995.

Now with a wining record in the Atlantic 10, UMass will prepare for next weekend where they will meet A-10 rival George Washington University at Totman Field on Friday and Virginia Tech on Sunday.

UMass found the net 10 times this weekend in routs of A-10 rivals Temple and St. Joseph's

Mileur's a former minor league owner

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Political science professor Jerome Mileur is a published author, member of the University of Massachusetts faculty, chair of his department, and the former owner of a minor league baseball team.

"A couple of us, George Como, who was is a UMass professor, and Ben Surner, who was at Amherst, bought the Holyoke Millers," Mileur said. "We bought the team on a lark, really, for about $85,000."

That was in 1981.

Fourteen years later, with both Como and Surner no longer part owners, Mileur sold his part in the team. In 1997, he gave his collected papers about the ownership of a minor league team to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York. It was the first time that the HOF has accepted papers from a minor league club.

"I met a fellow named Tim Wiles who, as it turned out, worked at the Hall of Fame, and he was saying how he didn't really have all that much on the minor leagues," Mileur said. "Well, I said, 'I'll give you all of my paper' and Wiles turned to me and said 'Would you?'"

Mileur didn't anticipate giving away his papers, which included financial and operating records, but said he was happy to clean out his closet.

Looking back on his 13 years as the owner of a minor league team that changed ownership and homes three times, Mileur remembers certain things fondly and others with confusion.

"Like all things, I wondered every once in a while what I was doing in the business," Mileur said. "But it was never like owning a major league team. I could only take what I was given.

Mileur's Holyoke Millers, who later moved to Nashua, New Hampshire, and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, also changed their affiliations: from the Anaheim Angels to the Pittsburgh Pirates, and finally to the Montreal Expos.

"When we were with the Montreal Expos, that was the golden era," Mileur said. "One year, we had the best record in professional baseball, and that includes the major leagues and all of their affiliated teams."

That team, the Harrisburg Senators, was managed by Dave Jauss, a former UMass student, and also had Joe Kerrigan, the Boston Red Sox's current pitching coach, on the coaching staff.

"I met Dan Duquette when he was in the Montreal system, first when he was overseeing the team's farm system, and later when he was general manager," Mileur said. "And that team brought a lot of players through that now are on the national scene."

They include Mark Grudzinlanek, Bobby Bonilla, Rondell White, Cliff Floyd, and according to Mileur, during the 12 years that his former team was in Harrisburg, they sent 100 players to the major leagues.

During his ownership, Mileur took the role of a consultant and a director, but the day-to-day management of the team was the responsibility of others that he described as a "good crew."

"They never really needed much oversight," Mileur said, "which meant that a lot of my teaching wasn't affected."

According to Mileur, Major League teams have working agreements with their affiliates that spell out who's paying for what, established standards concerning issues of maintenance, and other day-to-day administrative issues.

"I learned what teams were concerned and what teams weren't," Mileur said. "Anaheim wasn't concerned at all, whereas the Pirates were concerned and I actually got to be good friends with Branch Rickey the third."

But no one was as good as Montreal, Mileur said.

"Even though their general managers and farm directors changed, they are still an excellent organization for player development," Mileur said. "I've become a fan of Montreal since I worked with them. I like the people, their organization. Harrisburg won the Eastern Championship for the fourth year in a row, and that obviously shows what a strong system they have."

But Mileur's former ownership doesn't prevent him from being a fan. Mileur likes the Pirates, and he especially enjoys the St. Louis Cardinals.

Turn to BASEBALL, page 9

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Monday, October 4, 1999

Flying Dutchmen spoil homecoming with 27-14 win

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The Hofstra football team was waiting for this chance.

Last year, in Hempstead, NY, the Massachusetts Minutemen came to town as an upstart young team looking for a big win to vault them into national prominence. The Flying Dutchmen were the perfect team to beat: respected, tough, and highly ranked at No. 5 in the nation.

UMass engineered an enormous comeback in that game, scoring 40 second-half points to win in the final seconds, 40-35. The victory was enough to push the Minutemen into the Top 25 and eventually, the team went on to bring home the National Championship.

Ranked No. 5 again, Hofstra came to Amherst, and this time it was Massachusetts' homecoming game. Adding to the incentive, UMass, with the title, is the clear team to beat for any program wishing to gauge where it stands when eyeing this year's trophy.

With their roles reversed, the Flying Dutchmen exploded for 20 points in the third period to drop the Minutemen to 1-3 on the year with a 27-14 decision.

Hofstra wasted no time getting on the scoreboard, as tailback Vaughn Sanders broke free on a 74-yard touchdown jaunt on the Dutchmen's first offensive play. The UMass defense would dig in and slow the Hofstra attack, though, stopping their first-half scoring there.

"Obviously it's pretty tough when they go... for 74 yards or whatever on the first play of the game, but after that play, for the rest of the first half I thought we played really well," UMass linebacker Matt Dawson said. "They didn't really get anything after that."

With 6:11 left in the half, Minuteman runner Marcel Shipp copied Sanders with a 64 yarder to tie the game. Shipp would head to the locker room with 146 yards at the break, en route to a 200-yard afternoon. His performance would leave him only three yards behind Garry Pearson for second place on the school's all-time rushing list with 3,856 overall.

Both teams stalled and squandered drives as the half wound down. Sanders left the Dutchmen with only one leg of their double-barreled backfield attack, going down with a broken left tibia that will likely keep him out the duration of the season. Fellow tailback Jimmy Jones was left to shoulder the burden of the running game, and he did so with 111 yards on 22 attempts.

But it was quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi who deep-sixed the Minutemen on this day. After Hofstra defensive back Robert Thomas took UMass signal caller Todd Bankhead's first pass of the third quarter into the end zone for his third defensive score of the year, Carmazzi began an offensive barrage that kept Massachusetts on its heels the rest of the contest.

"This game meant a lot to me," Carmazzi said. "Dating back to last year, it was probably the most frustrating loss in my career here. At half time, I kind of felt that I wasn't getting as much of the opportunity to really take control of this game, and so I asked (offensive coordinator) Rob Spence to try, as much as he can to put it in my hands and give me a chance to make some plays."

While Bankhead dealt with numerous drops from his receiving core on the day, the "Italian Stallion" took his team straight down the field on its next possession, going three-for-three on a four-play, 80-yard sprint that consumed only 1:36 of the clock. He completed the series with a 22 yard pass to receiver Charlie Adams to up the score to 20-7.

Dutchmen Damon Siricopi and Shawki Perry sacked Bankhead to end the next Minuteman drive, and the race was on again.

Carmazzi hit all four of his attempts on the subsequent drive, but made the definitive play on the ground, galloping into the open field for 45 yards on a fourth and inches keeper. The quarterback took four carries 52 yards to outrush Jones by 48 yards in the stint. Four minutes and 80 yards after the drive began, Carmazzi finished it with a four-yard scoring toss to wideout Jason Maxwell.

"You've got to credit Hofstra," Massachusetts Coach Mark Whipple said. "They've got a real good club and you can only do so much with Carmazzi."

The field general would end the game with 233 yards passing on 22 of 35 attempts, while running for 75 yards on 17 carries after consuming much of the fourth quarter clock in drives that stalled in UMass territory. Twice the Dutchmen were deep enough to score more points, but two Chad Johnson field goal tries missed their targets, and Hofstra would finish with 27.

Shipp scored his second touchdown of the game from seven yards out with 4:52 left in the game to justify an 11-play, 80-yard series that took up two minutes and 59 seconds to end the games scoring with the final of 27-14.

KARA STOKES

Not even Marcel Shipp's 200 yard performance could get the Minutemen back on track.

Men's soccer dominates A-10

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

This weekend the University of Massachusetts men's soccer team gave flying foes the bird as they clipped the wings off Temple University's Owls and Saint Joseph University's Hawks.

The Minutemen were ungracious hosts to guests Temple and St. Joseph's, as they gave nothing away to both teams at Totman Field this weekend. Only allowing one goal over the course of both games, the Maroon and White dominated the two Atlantic 10 competitors. The games were the second and third A-10 games for UMass, and were both equally important with respect to the University of Massachusetts standing in the A-10 conference.

"We were definitely pleased. We had to win both games, and we did," said University of Massachusetts men's soccer coach Sam Koch. "It was a good weekend for us."

However, last weekend did not go as well, as UMass dropped their Atlantic 10 opener to the University of Rhode Island 4-0. It was the end of a two game winning streak for the Minutemen and an unfortunate way to begin their Atlantic 10 conference games.

Yet, UMass rebounded on Friday as they handed Temple a 3-1loss and then unloaded on St. Joseph's, as they shutout the Hawks 7-0 on Sunday.

Temple reached UMass with a 3-4-1 record and was 1-0 in the A-10 when they left the bus on Friday. They were hoping to turn things around after just losing to Pennsylvania 3-1, but by the time the Owl's bus was pulling away from Totman they had dropped the second game in a row and now had their first A-10 defeat.

Although Temple struck first, and the Minutemen's offensive power eventually overwhelmed the Owls. The Maroon and White took aim at the Temple net twenty-two times while the Owls were only able to muster eight shots the whole game.

Kevin Kelly, Temple's leading scorer found the back of the net only five minutes into the first half. However, less than twenty minutes later Temple lost their lead when they scored on their on net. UMass junior and back Patrick Beattie delivered the ball the bounced of a Temple defender, and by their goalkeeper.

It was a good break for the Minutemen, but their only offense did not just come from the other team. Senior and UMass forward Todd Baron scored two goals, including the game winner, coming from senior back Jonathan Bibb's pass at the end of the first half. Baron's second goal was off a penalty kick which he put away midway through the second half, adding a little insurance to UMass' lead.

Tending net for the University of Massachusetts was sophomore Bryan O'Quinn. O'Quinn was reasonably safe in net, as he did not post any saves in the 3-1 victory.

Also finding themselves relatively untested were UMass senior goalkeeper Todd Fowler, and freshmen keeper Enzo Altomare. Both stood their ground, as they kept St. Joseph shooters from ever finding the back of the UMass net.

At the other end of the field, UMass shooters forced St. Joseph's beaten goalkeeper to recover the ball from the back of the net seven times. Senior Adam Black led the scoring as he hit netting three times, achieving his first career hat trick. Black also provided two assists, helping his teammates, junior Matt Christy and sophomore Fred Kinateder, score two goals apiece. Christy recorded an assist as well, but it was freshman forward Jeff Deren who left the game with the most assists totaling three. It was a carrier high game for all four of these UMass players.

It was the days leading scorer, Black, who began the UMass onslaught on St. Joseph's. About midway through the first half, Black scored off a ball deflected by Deren who was set up by Christy. Christy then followed Black's goal with a ball to the corner of the Hawk's net less than five minutes later. Pushing the score up to 4-0 at halftime, Black and Christy beat the Hawk's goalkeeper again, each earning their second goal of the day.

After the Halftime break, the hats hit the field, and Black put his third goal away as he teamed with Deren for the second time of the day. With a 5-0 lead, UMass was not done as Kinateder drove the final nails into the Hawk's coffin with his two goals. Freshman forward Yuri Morales and junior back Danny Brinkman both helped Kinateder as they both received assists.

Although this weekends games were important wins for this season's Minutemen, and they improve UMass' record to 7-4 and 2-1 in the A-10, they were also historically significant. Not since 1993, when Randy Jacobs acquired eight points for his performance in the Philadelphia Textile game, has a University of Massachusetts player achieved this level of success. Black broke that draught Sunday as he reached the eight-point mark. But that was not the only record that fell to Black, as his hat trick is the first for the Minutemen since Mike Butler did it in 1995.

Now with a winning record in the Atlantic 10, UMass will prepare for next weekend where they will meet A-10 rival George Washington University at Totman Field on Friday and Virginia Tech on Sunday.

KARA STOKES

UMass found the net 10 times this weekend in routs of A-10 rivals Temple and St. Joseph's.

Troubles in red zone plague UM

Carmazzi excellent in victory

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts football team got stuck in traffic. The Minutemen would be cruising along, working the ball into Hofstra territory, when all of a sudden, they would get stuck in between gears and their road to paydirt would end, their chance of upending the No. 6 Flying Dutchmen ending along with it.

This season, points have come through sustained drives for the Minutemen (1-3 overall, 1-1 Atlantic 10). Nothing has come easy, as it did seemingly so often in last year's dream ride. The red zone has been coach Mark Whipple seeing red just four games in.

"We just didn't do anything in the red zone," Whipple said. "The red zone was really a negative, and that's what hurt us."

"I think it really hurt our defense. They're really playing hard, they're playing well, but you're looking up and you're still down."

The door was open, inviting the Minutemen to pull a semi-upset for the second consecutive season against Hofstra. The cards were on the table, but UMass folded. It would only be a matter of time until the Hofstra offense began to churn.

"You can't give good teams that many chances, and they just executed better than we did," Whipple said. "That's the bottom line. They made plays when they had to."

While the UMass offense sputtered at midfield, Hofstra quarterback Giovanni Carmazzi found a groove, completing 11 consecutive attempts at one point in the second half, including a pair of scoring passes that all but ended UMass' afternoon. On the day, Carmazzi completed 22 of 33 for 233 yards and an interception.

By the end of the third quarter, the Flying Dutchmen (3-0) had put the game in their back pockets, gaining the lead with a 13-yard interception return for a touchdown by Robert Thomas.

"[Quarterback] Todd [Bankhead] never saw the corner and all of a sudden they're ahead 13-7 and really hadn't done a whole lot except for the first play of the game," Whipple said.

First half woes offensively continued and blended with the Minutemen's inability to score from a smaller field. UMass had an opportunity to take advantage of a rare Carmazzi miscue. At the end of the first half with the score knotted at seven, Jeremy Robinson picked off a Carmazzi pass at the Hofstra 38. Behind a pair of Bankhead completions to tailback Marcel Shipp, the Minutemen got to the Flying Dutchmen's 14-yard line. Jason Cherry's 31-yard field goal attempt was then blocked as time expired in the first half.

"When we made a mistake, they made the most of their opportunities and we haven't been able to do that, and that's the one thing that's frustrating. Last year, when somebody made a mistake, we pounced upon it and we have not done that."

Bankhead played for the third consecutive game with a fractured wrist on his non-throwing hand. Despite two interceptions, the senior co-captain looked to show signs of returning to last year's form, completing 25 of 42 passes. Many of the incompletions were drops on the receiving end, most notably on 4th down at the Hofstra 7 when Adrian Zullo could not grab ahold of a Bankhead toss in the end zone.

"Offensively, we did all right in the first half," Whipple said. "We just didn't finish things in the red zone and that really hurt. I think that gave them momentum."

Shipp's 7-yard touchdown run late in the fourth marked the first time that the Minutemen had crossed the end line in five trips inside the Hofstra 25-yard line.

The UMass defense held a high-powered Hofstra offense to a single touchdown, a 74-yard scamper by Vaughn Sanders on the first play from scrimmage. All Whipple needed was for his defense to move the ball and hope for the best upon nearing the end zone. A nine-play, 60-yard drive stalled at the Hofstra 20 before Doug White's 37-yard field goal attempt veered wide right, one of two kicker mishaps in the first half. Two drives later, UMass turned the ball over on downs after driving 54 yards to the Flying Dutchmen 22.

The Minutemen return to conference play on Saturday when Northeastern come to Amherst on Band Day. The Huskies gave Boston College a run before falling to the Eagles 33-22 in Chestnut Hill.

Mileur's a former minor league owner

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Political science professor Jerome Mileur is a published author, member of the University of Massachusetts faculty, chair of his department, and the former owner of a minor league baseball team.

"A couple of us, George Como, who was is a UMass professor, and Ben Surner, who was at Amherst, bought the Holyoke Millers," Mileur said. "We bought the team on a lark, really, for about $83,000."

That was in 1981.

Fourteen years later, with both Como and Surner no longer part owners, Mileur sold his part in the team. In 1997, he gave his collected papers about the ownership of a minor league team to the Baseball Hall of Fame in Cooperstown, New York. It was the first time that the HOF has accepted papers from a minor league club.

"I met a fellow named Tim Wiles who, as it turned out, worked at the Hall of Fame, and he was saying how he didn't really have all that much on the minor leagues," Mileur said. "Well, I said, 'I'll give you all of my paper' and Wiles turned to me and said 'Would you?'"

Mileur didn't anticipate giving away his papers, which included financial and operating records, but said he was happy to clean out his closet.

Looking back on his 13 years as the owner of a minor league team that changed ownership and homes three times, Mileur remembers certain things fondly and others with confusion.

"Like all things, I wondered every once in a while what I was doing in the business," Mileur said. "But it was never like owning a major league team. I could only take what I was given.

Mileur's Holyoke Millers, who later moved to Nashua, New Hampshire, and Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, also changed their affiliations: from the Anaheim Angels to the Pittsburgh Pirates, and finally to the Montreal Expos.

"When we were with the Montreal Expos, that was the golden era," Mileur said. "One year, we had the best record in professional baseball, and that includes the major leagues and all of their affiliated teams."

That team, the Harrisburg Senators, was managed by Dave Jauss, a former UMass student, and also had Joe Kerrigan, the Boston Red Sox's current pitching coach, on the coaching staff.

"I met Dan Duquette when he was in the Montreal system, first when he was overseeing the team's farm system, and later when he was general manager," Mileur said. "And that team brought a lot of players through that now are on the national scene."

They include Mark Grudzinlanek, Bobby Bonilla, Rondell White, Cliff Floyd, and according to Mileur, during the 12 years that his former team was in Harrisburg, they sent 100 players to the major leagues.

During his ownership, Mileur took the role of a consultant and a director, but the day-to-day management of the team was the responsibility of others that he described as a "good crew."

"They never really needed much oversight," Mileur said, "which meant that a lot of my teaching wasn't affected."

According to Mileur, Major League teams have working agreements with their affiliates that spell out who's paying for what, established standards concerning issues of maintenance, and other day-to-day administrative issues.

"I learned what teams were concerned and what teams weren't," Mileur said. "Anaheim wasn't concerned at all, whereas the Pirates were concerned and I actually got to be good friends with Branch Rickey the third."

But no one was as good as Montreal, Mileur said.

"Even though their general managers and farm directors changed, they are still an excellent organization for player development," Mileur said. "I've become a fan of Montreal since I worked with them. I like the people, their organization. Harrisburg won the Eastern Championship for the fourth year in a row, and that obviously shows what a strong system they have."

But Mileur's former ownership doesn't prevent him from being a fan. Mileur likes the Pirates, and he especially enjoys the St. Louis Cardinals.

Turn to BASEBALL, page 9

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue XXII — Tuesday, October 5, 1999

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

To class (some of us) go...

Student bares the rain and wind on their way to class Monday afternoon.

Students vote on alcohol policy

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Last Thursday, a majority of students voted against referendum question two on the Student Government Association elections ballot.

The referendum question regarded the issue of alcohol violations on campus. Students were asked whether or not parents should be notified of student alcohol violations for students under the age of 21.

The question was spurred by a mandate passed by the Board of Higher Education in 1997. Officials including Governor A. Paul Cellucci, members of both the Board of Education and the University's Board of Trustees saw the need for action following the alcohol related deaths of University of Massachusetts student Adam Prentice and the fatal alcohol poisoning of an Massachusetts Institute of Technology student in a fraternity-related hazing incident. Prentice died in the fall of 1997, after falling through the Morill Greenhouse. He had a blood alcohol level over the legal limit to drive a motor vehicle. The incident at MIT also occurred in 1997, when a student pledging a fraternity on campus was asked to drink all of the alcohol that he could consume and then subsequently died of alcohol poisoning.

The 1997 policy called for tighter restrictions on alcohol use and possession at the state's 29 public campuses. It replaced the Privacy in Education policy that previously existed for university students. The Privacy in Education policy stated when a student turned 18, others could not see any records that exist unless consent was given. The newly-created policy changed the original plan.

Under this new act, the board asked campuses to provide "effective alcohol education" and to appropriately improve the existing alcohol policies on each campus. Also passed by the committee were the increased enforcement of anti-hazing laws and a crack-down on fraternity initiation rites involving alcohol. The chancellors of each school were asked to design a solution to dealing with alcohol use on campus and in neighboring communities.

According to SGA president Jeff Howe, the SGA still continues to discuss the issue of underage drinking with the Student Affairs Judicial Issues Committees. Howe explained that the issue was added to the ballot in order to gauge student reaction to the policy as a whole. The SGA believes that the policy violates student rights.

"It is odd that the University would target alcohol instead of other issues," Howe said.

He explained the referendum question was added to the ballot in order to help illustrate to the Board of Trustees that the students were also against the policy.

Student Trustee Seth Avakian concurred with the statements made by Howe.

"We are 100% against any attempt by the administration to tell parents about alcohol violations," Avakian said. He said he hoped that the policy would eventually be worked out with the Student Affairs Judicial Issues Committee.

The SGA is "pushing to have the policy result in the fewest number of parental notifications possible. And only in the most extreme conditions," according to Avakian.

For now, students will not see a change in the existing policies regarding alcohol use among students under the age of 21. But, currently both the SGA and the Student Affairs Judicial Issues Committee will be working on the problem.

Police identify Puffton body as UM student

A body discovered locked in the backseat of a car last Friday has been identified as University of Massachusetts student Arthur Rudolph. Discovered at 1:55 p.m. in a Puffton Village parking lot adjacent to a swimming pool, the windows of the automobile had to be broken so that officers could get into the vehicle.

Officers from both the Amherst Police Department and the Amherst Fire Department responded to the reported body.

According to detectives at the APD, no cause of death has been established and release of that information will be at the discretion of the Medical Examiner.

Rudolph was a 26-year-old history major at UMass. He was a senior.

– Sam Wilkinson

Hollywood scientist to speak at Smith

By Andrea Peers
Collegian Correspondent

A breakthrough for the University of Massachusetts has arrived with the data feedback from an on-going telescope project. The project started in 1990, and is called the Two-Micron All-Sky Survey, or 2MASS. The University is responsible for the overall management of the study and data received.

The project is comprised of two, brand new, 1.3-meter telescopes, which are used to scan an infrared survey of the sky, creating an atlas of both northern and southern hemispheres. The first telescope was launched in June 1997, and is located at a base in Mt. Hopkins, Ariz. The second telescope used in the survey was launched in March 1998, and can be found in Cerro Tololo, Chile. Both telescopes have a three-channel camera, which is capable of detecting astronomical objects that will enable scientists to pinpoint the exact location of over 300 million stars. The last study done with infrared telescopes was almost 30 years ago. Much of the information is not accurate enough for scientist to observe such patterns in the Milky Way or the Universe in general.

In accordance with the University, NASA and the National Science Foundation are providing the funding for the project. So far the telescopes have accounted for 77.7% of both northern and southern hemispheres combined.

Leading this huge process is Dr. Charles A. Beichman, who represents the Infrared Processing and Analysis Center (IPAC), which is affiliated with NASA. Beichman is currently the Chief Scientist for NASA at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory (JPL), studying other forms of life on planets which are beyond our solar system.

Beichman will lecture about the recent findings of the 2MASS project at Smith College, this Wednesday Oct. 6, at 7:30 p.m. in the McConnell Hall Auditorium.

Having worked as a scientific advisor on Hollywood for "Star Trek: The Undiscovered Country," and "Starfleet Academy," Beichman is known for bringing complicated science to an understandable level.

Beichman received his college and graduate degrees from the University of Hawaii, where he studied physics and astronomy. He went to Harvard to obtain his undergraduate degree in astronomy. Since then he has worked back and forth with the IPAC and the JPL. His interest for life on other planets also carried into his work in 1996, where Beichman edited a road map plan with NASA, in order to search for other planets around our solar system. He also holds the position of co-chair in the Science Working group for the Terrestrial Planet Finder.

In Beichman's observation of the data from the telescope project, he has been able to identify new information. A new solar-type star formation showed signs of disks, which surrounded the star, leading Beichman and his colleagues to think that these stars will form new planets. 2MASS has also helped in identifying nearby Brown Dwarfs, and infrared quasars in the universe.

Beichman's work goes beyond his knowledge of astrophysics. He also studies complex space systems, data processing and spacecraft operations. More information, and recent photographs regarding the telescope findings can be located at www.ipac.caltech.edu/2mass/.

Tobacco firms in secondhand smoke battle

By Myron Levin
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Mobilizing against smoking bans and lawsuits that could cost them billions, tobacco companies are engaged in a far-reaching campaign to discredit evidence that secondhand smoke is harmful to human health.

Nowhere is the strategy more evident than in a legal battle over the evidence that has occupied at least 10 courts, including U.S. District Court in Los Angeles, where it appears likely to be resolved in the industry's favor.

In the latest phase of the dispute, Philip Morris is fighting University of Southern California researchers to get access to a single computer disk containing raw data from an influential five-city study known as the Fontham study, this found a causal-link between lung cancer and secondhand smoke. The company wants to scrutinize the data

Turn to TOBACCO page 9

Supreme Court begins term

By Joan Biskupic
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Supreme Court began a new term yesterday, featuring a slate of cases more momentous than any in recent years and likely to have an immediate impact not only on American life, but on politics in the upcoming election year.

A Supreme Court that has stayed on its hand on many big social issues in recent terms now seems to have its fingers in everything. The court will tackle questions on campaign finance, abortion protests, public funds for parochial schools, tobacco regulation, sex on cable TV and the right of patients to sue their HMOs.

"Every so often there's a term that's filled with cases that will be talked about for a long time," University of Southern California law professor Erwin Chemerinsky said. "This is one."

This docket is a fluke of timing as well as a reflection of the interests of the Rehnquist court. The justices must take cases as they come: they cannot start a lawsuit or make sure it is appealed all the way up. But they have great discretion over which petitions they hear, and some of the biggest cases on congressional power and how much states can help parochial schools, play into this court's larger efforts to reshape the law.

At the same time, the cases could become fodder for the presidential campaign. The question of public aid to religious schools, for example, is likely to feed the nationwide debate over public vouchers for private schools, a debate accelerated by Florida's recent adoption of the first statewide voucher program.

Further, this is a deeply split court and many of the big cases will turn on a single vote, highlighting the importance of even one presidential appointment to the bench after 2000.

The term will intersect with national politics most directly today, when the justices hear a case on the constitutionality of campaign finance limits Missouri has put into place for state and local elections. The cap of $1,075 on individual contributions to candidates – which parallels the $1,000 cap in federal elections – was challenged by a failed candidate for state auditor. He said he couldn't mount an effective campaign without being able to draw larger contributions. An appeals court struck down the limit, calling it a "heavy-handed restriction of protected speech" and citing the Supreme Court's 1976 admonition that money limits can have a severe impact on political debate.

As Congress struggles again with campaign finance reform, the Missouri case puts a spotlight on the high court's ruling in Buckley vs. Valeo 25 years ago, upholding limits on how much individuals and political committees can give to candidates but striking down restrictions on how much candidates are allowed to spend.

Campaign finance reformers and many states hope the court uses the Missouri case to send a signal for tighter limits on contributions and possible new ones on spending.

DAN SANTELLA / COLLEGIAN

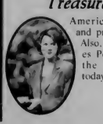
Stretching to the sky

A unique perspective, granted only to those who choose to look up.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 55 LOW: 32	HIGH: 64 LOW: 31	HIGH: 54 LOW: 32

SOURCE: RAINORSHINE.COM



Just doing his job

King Abdullah, the son of the late King Hussein of Jordan, is being recognized as an able leader. Read more about him inside.

NEWS PAGE 3

A National Treasure

American Beauty prods and provokes audiences. Also, Ruby Dune pleases Pearl Street. Read the reviews in Arts today.

ARTS PAGE 5

Bears in a Cage

After setting UM's all-time record in blocks this past weekend, Jill Meyers and the volleyball team return to action, taking on the Bears of Brown tonight at the Curry Hicks Cage at 7 p.m.

SPORTS PAGE 12

Arts & Living 6
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 1
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Police Log

Annoying Behavior
Oct. 1
An individual reported that a bucket of water was poured under a door at John Quincy Adams Dorm.
Sep. 30
An individual was reported to be exposing himself at the Campus Center.
Sept. 29
Skateboarders were reported at the Campus Center.

Health/Safety Hazard
Oct. 1
Staff was notified of an alarm sounding at the Auxiliary Services Warehouse.
Sept. 30
Individuals who were trying to light sticks on fire and were issued a warning at Webster Dorm.
Sept. 30
There was a loss of power in Hamlin Residence Hall. Housing and UH&S were dispatched to the scene.
Sept. 30
UH&S was dispatched to check a faulty smoke detector.
Sept. 30
UH&S was dispatched to check a fire alarm panel.
Sept. 30
UH&S was dispatched to check a loud noise in a mechanical room.

Suspicious Person
Oct. 1
A suspicious person was reported in Dwight Dorm.
Sept. 30
A suspicious person was reported in Patterson Dorm.
Sept. 30
A suspicious person was reported in Brooks Dorm.
Sept. 30
A suspicious person was reported on Observatory Road.
Sept. 30
A suspicious person was reported at the Auxiliary Services Warehouse.
Sept. 29
A suspicious person was reported at John Quincy Adams Dorm.
Sept. 29
A suspicious person was reported North Village Apartments.
Sept. 29
William Elsasser, 51, of Northampton, was arrested for trespassing.
Sept. 29
A suspicious person was reported in Chadboume Dorm.

Suspicious Vehicle
Oct. 1
A suspicious vehicle was reported in the Van Meter Garden.
Oct. 1
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 47.
Sept. 30
A suspicious vehicle was reported at the Observatory Building.
Sept. 30
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 45.
Sept. 29
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 33.
Sept. 29
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 11.
Sept. 29
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 50.
Sept. 28
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 22.

Vandalism
Oct. 1
An object was thrown at a window and then broke it at Greenough Dorm.
Sept. 30
A swastika was found on the main door of Thatcher Dorm.
Sept. 28
Offensive graffiti was found in a stairwell in Field Dorm.
Sept. 28
Unreadable graffiti was found in the men's room in Bartlett Hall. It was removed.

Japan refuses agency's investigative team

By Carol J. Williams
Los Angeles Times

VIENNA, Austria – Thorough inspection of Japan's nuclear facilities by the International Atomic Energy Agency and review of the "extremely unusual" procedures that led to last week's accident in Tokaimura could restore shaken public faith in that country's nuclear program, the U.N. agency spokesman asserted yesterday.

But the IAEA's 4-day-old offer to send an accident-analysis team from its international headquarters here has so far been rebuffed by Tokyo authorities, IAEA spokesman David Kyd said.

"We think this is a classic case where the international community needs to learn from what happened. But that's the Japanese's call," Kyd said in an interview. "Everyone worldwide needs to be reassured. We need to find out why it happened, what happened and how we can prevent it from happening again in the future."

Human error has been blamed for the accident that caused an uncontrolled chain reaction for 17 hours and exposed three workers at the JCO Co. plant in Tokaimura to life-threatening doses of radiation. Thursday's disaster, the worst ever in a country that depends on nuclear power for a third of its energy, compounded concerns about the Japanese nuclear industry's safety record that were already rife after a fire and explosion in Tokaimura two years ago and an earlier liquid-sodium spill at the Monju reactor, about 200 miles west of Tokyo.

"They've had a number of incidents this decade that have not just troubled experts but have troubled the population," Kyd said, noting that public confidence in the industry is essential in densely populated Japan and that only full cooperation with international experts can put public fears to rest.

One serious cause for concern at the Tokaimura plant is the unusual practice of hand-processing uranium, instead of using robotic methods preferred for safety and technological reasons elsewhere in the world, Kyd said.

"This seems to us rather strange, having so much human involvement ...The risks are clear, and that's why you now have three workers in life-threatening condition," he said.

Kyd declined "for the time being" to disclose what specific concerns the agency has expressed to Japanese officials who were coincidentally in Vienna for an annual conference at the time of the accident. He said IAEA officials remained hopeful that their offer of assistance will be accepted by Tokyo once the initial shock of the accident wears off.

The IAEA has no authority to insist on involvement in safety reviews in its member states, no matter how serious an accident or how many warning signals there might be that something is amiss. Only in cases where proliferation of fissionable materials for aggressive purposes is suspected does the agency have the power to "show up at the gates and demand entry," Kyd said.

But he made clear that the agency wants a look at the policies and practices observed at Japan's 53 nuclear reactors after what he described as processing techniques that violated established safety norms.

The first question the IAEA has for Japanese regulators is why such potentially hazardous material was being used at a plant in a residential area and whether Tokaimura is a prudent location for a fast-neutron reactor. Another question unanswerable without an investigation, he said, is why the JCO plant workers put so much uranium into the processing vat at once – exceeding safety standards more than fivefold.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

An umbrella of foliage
A lone walker passes under a colorfully transforming tree.

■ tobacco

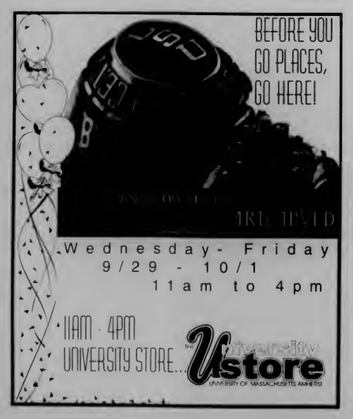
continued from page 1

in hopes of casting doubt on the evidence, which is weaker for second-hand smoke than for some other environmental hazards.

Tobham and similar studies have provided the scientific bedrock for a small but growing wave of secondhand smoke litigation that the industry aims to head off. At the same time, cigarette makers are determined to slow the spread of California-style smoking bans to less-regulated areas of the United States and to foreign markets where smokers still light up wherever they choose. Research suggests that smoking restrictions reduce cigarette sales by inducing many smokers to cut down or even quit.

Researchers from USC and other institutions involved in the Fontham study say the industry's relentless pursuit of the data could have a chilling effect on future health research. Citing promises of confidentiality to subjects in the study, they have resisted demands to cough up the data, which cigarette makers say they need to defend themselves in court.

The industry has been largely thwarted in this long-running game of cat and mouse, obtaining but a sliver of the data. But its five-year quest may be about to pay off. In Los Angeles, U.S. District Judge Richard A. Paez will decide if USC must honor an industry subpoena, and he has already ruled for the industry once.



Although tobacco companies have their hands full with litigation over primary smoking – such as the huge case filed last month by the Justice Department – secondhand smoke is an emerging threat, in part because the industry's standard defense that victims accepted the risk is not applicable.

Cigarette makers won the only two secondhand smoke cases to be decided by juries, but in 1997 they agreed to settle a class action by airline flight attendants for $349 million. The money was for health research and legal costs, not damages, but the agreement gave flight attendants a one-year window to sue once the settlement was final.

It became final last month, when lawyers opposed to the deal withdrew their challenge. As a result, a flurry of suits by flight attendants is likely over the next 12 months. A handful of secondhand smoke cases already are pending, including class actions on behalf of casino workers.

1/2 PRICE Appetizers
• Buffalo Chicken Wings
• Mozzarella Sticks
• Chicken or Beef Nachos
Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 586-8700

CR
Sphere Multimedia
2x1
10/5

Building The Wonders of
THE MODERN WORLD

With five divisions coast to coast and offices around the world, Analog Devices manufactures and markets high performance linear, mixed signal and digital integrated circuits that address a wide range of real world signal processing.

Combine all of this with our Fortune 1000 status and a work environment that encourages both personal and professional growth, while rewarding both team and individual accomplishments, and you have just discovered a career opportunity that can't be beat.

And what's more, we offer an excellent compensation package that includes:

• An investment partnership plan
• Matching 401(k) program
• Generous bonus and employee stock option plans.

We currently have career opportunities available in the following areas:

Product Engineers
Test Engineers
Applications Engineers
Design Engineers
Layout Engineers
CAD Engineers
Software Engineers

ANALOG DEVICES WILL BE ON CAMPUS AT THE CAREER FAIR ON OCTOBER 7. WE WILL BE HOLDING AN INFORMATION SESSION ON OCTOBER 25 AND INTERVIEWING ON OCTOBER 26.

If you are unable to visit us on campus, please send your resume to: Lori Lovejoy, Analog Devices, Inc., 804 Woburn Street, Wilmington, MA 01887.
Analog Devices is an equal opportunity employer.

ANALOG DEVICES

VISIT OUR WEBSITE: WWW.ANALOG.COM

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

America the beautiful
A flag beats madly in the wind of yesterday's unfortunate weather.

People not to be found in E. Timor

By Keith B. Richburg
Washington Post

BALIBO, East Timor – More than two weeks into a military operation aimed at bringing security and much needed relief supplies to tiny, devastated East Timor, aid agency officials and military commanders are stumped by a perplexing question: Where are the people?

As Australian troops have pushed into the territory's far western district, securing the border town of Balugade and the onetime pro-Indonesian militia stronghold of Balibo, they have encountered only a handful of people – at most, about two dozen refugees who have crossed the border into Indonesia proper to scavenge for food.

Here in Balibo, once home to 15,000 people, they found exactly one local resident – an elderly woman, believed to be deaf, who was left behind when the rest of the town fled.

Many people from the western districts of East Timor, and from the capital, Dili, were moved by force or by fear across the border into western Timor, in Indonesia, by violence that followed an Aug. 30 vote on East Timor's independence. The office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees and other aid groups have estimated that more than 200,000 East Timorese may now be in western Timor, and they fear that many are being held against their will by militias opposing East Timorese self-rule.

But East Timor had a pre-crisis population of 850,000 people. Even accounting for the possibility that 200,000 or more refugees are in western Timor doesn't resolve the mystery surrounding the whereabouts of thousands more.

"In the back of the minds of the humanitarians is this question mark," said Michel Barton, a spokesman for the U.N. Office of Humanitarian Affairs, which is coordinating the relief effort. "We think we should have been seeing more people, and we don't have an answer to that."

He added that "there's a certain amount of anxiety behind that question. There haven't been discoveries of mass graves yet. So it's a question: where are the people? We don't know yet."

A drive Monday from Dili in a military convoy, part of a U.N.-backed multinational peacekeeping force sent here last month, shows the extent of the depopulation of East Timor. During more than three hours, the convoy passed through once-crowded towns and villages – Liquica, Maubara, and Fatuboro – and encountered a total of six people. What remained in each village were scenes of near-total destruction: burned remnants of houses with their roofs caved in, empty shells of shops, and mangled vehicles on the roadside. The only buildings left intact are the churches.

The view from the road confirms the reports from U.N. and military officials who have made helicopter tours over the area.

Here in Balibo where nearly 900 Australian troops have taken control of a 58-square-mile area, the commander of the operation, Lt. Col. Mick Slater, said his only disappointment was "the population is gone. And we really want the population to come back and try to rebuild the local community. That's what we're here for."

His troops have scanned the surrounding hills looking for people who may have fled there to escape the violence, but so far, not a single person has been found. "The hills are empty," Slater said. "The population just isn't here."

Ross Mountain, the U.N. coordinator for humanitarian affairs, said "One assumes that there are literally hundreds of thousands up in the hills ... There's 600,000 people around someplace."

They are not, so far, in Dili. Even though refugees have started flooding back into the deserted capital from the surrounding mountains, the city now has fewer than 50,000 inhabitants. The eastern town of Baukau was less affected by the two-week rampage by Indonesian soldiers and militiamen, but even in Baukau the numbers don't add up; there are normally 24,000 people in Baukau but now there are about 7,000 – 4,000 original inhabitants, and about 3,000 displaced people from nearby areas.

Getting the refugees in western Timor to return will help resolve the question. The U.N. refugee agency and the Indonesian government in Jakarta reportedly have reached agreement to allow refugees to return to East Timor if they wish. But so far, the accord has not been implemented, and there are no signs of any movement on the ground.

NATO-led peacekeepers frustration grows

By Scott Martelle
Los Angeles Times

KOSOVO POLJE, Yugoslavia – NATO-led peacekeepers in Kosovo displayed deepening frustration Monday with recalcitrant Serbs and ethnic Albanians who have nearly shut down the province's main east-west route for more than a week.

Canadian Maj. Roland Lavoie, a spokesman for the NATO-led KFOR troops, warned that peacekeepers had given the protesters ample time to resolve their problems and indicated that soldiers might remove barricades that have choked the flow of people and supplies across Kosovo.

"KFOR fully accepts that peaceful protests are an integral part of democratic society," Lavoie said. "However, we cannot let a minority continually disrupt the daily lives of the majority."

Lavoie issued no timetable but hinted that peacekeepers will not tolerate the blockades much longer.

"If they persist in their disruptive behavior, KFOR will have to take appropriate action to restore freedom of movement throughout Kosovo," he said.

The Office of the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees has a warehouse in the barricaded region, and a spokesman said yesterday that the protest has hindered the relief agency's work in trying to winterize fire-gutted homes in advance of anticipated harsh weather.

Medical advances may aid in nuclear workers' survival

By Sonni Efron
Los Angeles Times

TOKYO – Advances in medical treatment for radiation victims give hope that one or more of the three workers severely irradiated last week in Japan's worst civilian nuclear disaster could survive, doctors said yesterday.

Two of the men received more than lethal doses of radiation Thursday after being bombarded with neutrons during an uncontrolled nuclear fission reaction at a uranium processing plant, and they remained critically ill yesterday. But their condition was stable enough that doctors announced plans to give them both transfusions of bone marrow cells using new, non-invasive techniques pioneered on cancer patients.

Both Hisashi Ouchi, 35, and Masato Shinohara, 39, were continuing to suffer from a disastrous decrease in their ability to produce blood cells, among other problems. But in an improvement on traditional bone marrow transplants, which were tried with little success on victims of the 1986 Chernobyl nuclear accident, Japanese doctors planned to give Shinohara a transfusion of blood cells from the umbilical cord of a newborn, a technique that avoids the rejection problems common with bone marrow transplants.

Ouchi was scheduled to receive a transfusion tomorrow of stem cells – immature blood cells that can develop either into red or white blood cells or into platelets – that would be harvested from the veins of his brother.

Most stem cells live in bone marrow, but small quantities circulate in the blood supply. In this new technique, called peripheral blood stem cell transplant, the donor takes a drug that increases blood cell production and then gives blood from a vein.

The stem cells are separated out and given to the recipient, while the rest of the blood is retumed to the donor. The procedure is no more painful than giving blood, so neither the donor nor the recipient requires a general anesthetic – a big advantage for weakened recipients like radiation patients.

Moreover, the stem cells from peripheral blood start producing white blood cells in the recipient in about two weeks, whereas cells transplanted from bone marrow take three or more weeks to produce these leukocytes. Meanwhile, the immune-compromised patient is at high risk for potentially lethal infections, said Dr. Hisamaru Hirai, a transplant specialist on the team that is treating Ouchi at Tokyo University Hospital.

"If we succeed, it would be the first time in the world" that a stem cell transplant has been used to help radiation victims, Hirai said. The technique has been used for about 10 years to treat victims of lymphoma and breast and lung cancer, who typically have the stem cells removed from their own blood and then reintroduced after chemotherapy or radiation treatments.

Doctors and radiation specialists said that a better understanding of the physiology of radiation poisoning gained from the Hiroshima atomic bombing, Chernobyl and other disasters has helped improve treatment for the victims of the uranium processing plant disaster in Tokaimura, about 80 miles northeast of Tokyo.

In addition, there have been advances in the creation of truly germ-free hospital rooms, infection prevention, intravenous nutrition, life support systems and methods for maintaining the body's electrolyte balance.

King Abdullah makes mark

By Rebecca Trounson
Los Angeles Times

AMMAN, Jordan – The economy is still stagnant. Unemployment hangs stubbornly around 20 percent, by most measures. And the gap between rich and poor is growing.

But seven months since the death of King Hussein has left Jordanians uneasy about the future in a nation with daunting domestic problems, but many here are encouraged by early signals from Hussein's son and successor, King Abdullah II.

The young king, who was virtually unknown to Jordanians until Hussein named him crown prince just before his death in February, has dived into an activist, energetic show of leadership that has pleased many in this nation of 4 million.

From unannounced inspections of a troubled government hospital to undercover forays into Jordan's free-trade zone and this city's chaotic streets, Abdullah, 37, is displaying a willingness to shake things up, using his personal prestige to shine a spotlight on long-festering problems of corruption, bureaucracy and inefficiency.

"People like his style, the level of his activism and the issues he's addressing," said Rami Khouri, former editor of the Jordan Times and a prominent political commentator here. "Much of it is symbolic so far, but he seems to have a feel for what people care about."

Abdullah, who spent his career in the army before ascending the throne, has remained faithful to his father's legacy of peace with Israel and strong ties to the United States. But he has also signaled early on that he will plot his own course, making domestic issues a priority, for instance, and moving swiftly to strengthen Jordan's relations with its Arab neighbors.

The king's focus on domestic matters, particularly his backing for a program of economic

The Collegian is looking for an editor for the Developing Nations page. Anyone interested should come down to 113 Campus Center and ask to speak to Lenny or Ken.

National Anthem Auditions!
...ested in perf...
...in at winter sporting ...
Thursday, October 7, ...
...ions will be held in the Curry H...
...ning at 7:15 p...
...rmation.
Note: Auditions will also be held for the UMass Hoop Band beginning on October 25th and continuing through October 28th at Grinnell Arena. The following instruments are needed: trumpet, saxophone, trombone, bass, and guitar, keyboards and percussion. Call 545-6060 for more information.

Everything YOU need to know about a career @ Procter & Gamble

Looking For All Majors
Deadline for Summer 2000 Internship Application is October 22.
What are you waiting for?
Come visit us @ UMass Amherst to learn more about our summer co-op positions :
SOM Career Fair Mullins Center
October 6th, 1999 12 noon - 5 PM
Career Network Info Expo Campus Center
October 13th, 1999 10 AM - 3 PM

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Eye sore

The new fence is just as ugly as the old one.

That basic fact is inescapable. People bitched and moaned in the Collegian for months about how they hated the old fence, how it was ugly, old, and just generally icky. They sold ribbons, set up displays and just generally made a nuisance of themselves for the holy purpose of acquiring a new, better fence.

Rob Schulze

The old fence was taken down today.

The new fence is as ugly.

Don't tell me that the fence isn't done yet, because I (1) know, and 2) I don't care. I can tell when something ugly is going to stay that way. "Sorry," I want to say to a proud expectant mother after glancing at her ultrasound, "but I'm afraid you daughter is not going to be attending her senior prom." No matter what frills they slap onto this thing, it's still going to be short, black and zig-zaggy. Instead of, oh, four sharp corners for me to walk into when I'm not paying attention to the world around me, there are now approximately 1.7 jillion billion. Conveniently set at hip-bone level, too – all the better to leave a long-lasting and painful bruise.

All this is secondary. They want to improve the looks of this campus by redoing a fence? Are they nearsighted? (Or maybe it's farsighted – I really don't know.) Why doesn't whoever was on charge of this great beautification project take a look beyond that fence, at the library it encloses?

That library is gross. It really is. I can just picture the meeting that led to the construction of this thing:

"Well, you see, gentlemen, what I have in mind is a huge twenty-plus story rod that is going to stick out of the middle of campus in such a way as to suggest that the University is in the process of having some very illicit thoughts."

"I don't know, Fred. That seems to me like it would be a very ugly blemish on a beautiful part of this earth, completely ruining the whole chemistry of the pond and chapel. Why the hell should we let you do this?"

"I'm your cousin."

"Oh, yeah. The contract's yours."

"Don't worry, I'll build it out of brick. Nobody will even notice how ugly it is!"

That's about where we stand now, with a giant brick penis of a library that totally wrecks the main part of campus. Not that that's all. This campus reeks of bad architecture. Campus Center. Grad Tower. Parking Garage. Herter. And, of course, everybody's favorite, that ugly disgusting pile of trash, let's hear a big round of applause for the Fine Arts Center!

I hate the Fine Arts Center. You hate the Fine Arts Center. The Fine Arts Center has no friends, and has become very adept at solitaire. It's the same scenario as the library – the whole structure is gross and repulsive, but instead of just bombing and starting over, what happens? A lobby is built! Is it an attractive lobby?

If you even had any doubt of this, you are a fool.

No, the lobby is ugly as sin as well. It has this weird opaque glass thing going, and neon lights that change color every so often. It reminds me of a strip club that I saw in Montreal one time. Who thought up the neon lights? I mean, yeah, I guess none of the buildings at Harvard have gaudy and tacky porn lights on them, so that makes us better, right? RIGHT?

It wouldn't upset me quite so much if every building were like this. The problem is that there are some very beautiful buildings on this campus, and even more ones that fall into the medium category, not craptacular and not exceptionally stunning. I would like for every building here to be great and beautiful, but I'd also be more than willing to settle for "not an eyesore."

So what's my solution? Well, I saw a tank down by the tunnel leading to Southwest today. Really. I was a little surprised, but everyone else just walked reeks of bad architecture. Campus Center. Grad by it like the most common thing in the world is for there to be assault vehicles in the vicinity of their dorms. I don't venture out to Southwest that often myself; maybe it's just a fact of life there.

Well, since this tank was just kind of hanging around without anybody to keep it company, I say that we (with 'we' meaning 'a bunch of you and not me') go commandeer this motherjumper and blow us up some sin-ugly buildings. We'd start at the FAC, taking care not to be blinded by the neon, then venture on to the Campus Center, plow on through the garage, and finally end up at the library.

The fence would be the first thing to go.

And the ducks would applaud.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

The End is near

I am not a very religious person but in light of recent world and local events, I can say that the end is near. Okay, 1999 has been a strange year all around, but since we have been back at school, it seems that "the Man upstairs" has been sending us some pretty clear messages. Floods, earthquakes, nuclear disasters and wacky animals are all present and accounted for. I, along with many of you, am wondering what the hell is in store for the world next. What follows is a list of actual, factual events that have been telling me that this little rock we live on is in for some big changes real soon.

Brian Lohnes

Y2K... I am sick of hearing about it, too, so this will be a quick one, but no one, and I mean no one, knows for sure what is going to happen on January 1, 2000. Hopefully nothing will happen, but there is a sick side of me that wouldn't mind seeing some honest to goodness panic in the streets. UMass is apparently in pretty good shape from what we have been told, but these are also the people who said dropping Affirmative Action was a good thing.

Wacky Accident in Maine... This is a true story that was reported on by the Associated Press last Friday. Apparently, a man in Maine was driving drunk in his pickup truck and he crashed into a sewage treatment plant. Unfortunately for this poor chap, his truck plunged into a huge holding tank of raw sewage and he drowned in it. He wasn't discovered until the next day when they had to drain the tank to get the truck out. I don't know if this applies to the end of the world thing, but, man, it sucks to be that guy.

Earthquakes... Has anyone else noticed that the world has had more earthquakes in the last month than in the rest of recorded history combined? Seriously, even the ground we live on is conspiring against us! In the time it took me write this paragraph approximately fifty-one earthquakes have occurred around the globe. Unfortunately, Canada remains unaffected.

Nuclear Mishaps... We can thank the wonderful folks in Japan for this disaster. While filling up a device used for holding Uranium someone headed off to the bathroom or went to get a cup of joe and wasn't paying attention to what was going on. To make a long story short, the sucker blew sky high and spread radiation all over creation. A few people have died but the true effect of the accident will not be known for several years and after the radiation has had time to act. This was the equivalent of trying to top off your gas tank and having smelly and generally nasty gas spray all over you.

Strange Animal Behavior... It has been said that animals are far more in tune with the Earth than humans. Oftentimes following natural disasters, stories arise of how animals were acting weird and doing weird things before the flooding, shaking, or mass destruction began. I saw something that, at first, made me smile, but upon further thinking, scared the wits out of me. I was on the balcony of my building and I looked down to see a little chipmunk. This cute little Alfalfa was gathering nuts and the like when he (okay, okay, or she) happened upon a pretzel. Then the chipmunk ate the pretzel! It ate it. Chomp, chomp, chomp, like it really knew what it was eating. Many of my friends were unimpressed by this story but if chipmunks are eating pretzels, bears may be eating prime rib and horses could be munching on veggie wraps after hours in the D.C.

70-degree days in October... Since it is now October, popular thought would say that 70-degree days were a thing of the past. But not this year, oh no – it's like we are at the University of Hawaii for Pete's sake. Even normally rough-and-tumble old folks who say, "When I was a kid...," have no comeback for this weather. They are all selling their houses, buying motor homes and "trying to see all the national parks before they are incinerated by the blazing heat of the sun." If older folks have stopped trying to outdo young whippersnappers like you and I, we must be in trouble.

Disease cures look promising... It figures that as soon as we stupid humans finally have hopes of curing some nasty diseases, the world is going to end. Irony is one cruel lady, and to top it off, she's not even attractive. In all truth, it is pretty exciting to see science making some big strides to fight AIDS and cancer. Unfortunately, the fact that the world is going to end faster than a Valu-Jet flight in a swamp puts a damper on things.

So there's the Doomsday guide to the next century. Hopefully, you will place it in a fireproof box so the new life forms that evolve can enjoy its creamy goodness. There is one thing still bothering me, though. I know I would taste good cooked medium rare, but well done? I think I would be a little dry and that my friends would be totally embarrassing.

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

Turning 21

Instead of writing about some current issue that some people may care about, I'm going to have my fun and write about something that just recently happened to me and that you have to experience. You will never forget your 21st birthday. Only one word is needed to describe mine: inchriation (being really drunk). I know, you're probably thinking either "duh", or "who gives a damn?" but it was an experience that my friends insisted that I put onto paper in order to entertain others.

"Candy is dandy, but liquor is quicker." – Willy Wonka and the Chocolate Factory.

Emily Vacanti

Willy Wonka really knew what he was talking about. But I have to say that candy flavored liquor is the best (Mike's Hard Lemonade). You don't even realize that you are getting drunk because it's so sweet, fizzy and good.

Before Saturday night, I was never much of a drinker (though that is changing almost as I speak). I have gotten truly drunk only, let me count, ...five or six times. I'm a junior. I've been at UMass for my whole college career. I know it's pathetic, but it is the truth. These five or six times include high school. That is really sad. So I had no alcohol tolerance. I realized this at my first fraternity party. After one drink, I was having trouble balancing. By the time I left, I didn't have any idea of how many I had had. If I had to guess, it would be somewhere around six or seven. Well, the good news is that your tolerance seems to go up remarkably overnight. It happened to me. In the past, after one, I was buzzed. Saturday night, I had many more than one, and was fine after the first few. I consider this good news. I now last longer at parties.

Back to what happened. So the day started out decently. I got up at 10:30 a.m. anticipating my parents' arrival at 11:00 a.m. They insisted on coming out early so that they could leave early, and so I could start hanging out with my friends and drinking early. Out we went to lunch, and I had my first legal beer: Sam Adams (very bitter with a wheat taste). Bertucci's, which is where we ate lunch, had an okay selection of beer. It is true that since I just turned 21, I didn't really know a good list of drinks from a bad one. In my defense, other restaurants either don't have a wine/beer/mixed drink list, or it really blows (it's not written down because it happens to be so short). After my parents left, I took the pleasure of going to a liquor store for the first time: Liquors 44. It was big and scary (since it was my first time in a liquor store, I thought it would be much smaller). But the selection was quite excellent. They had more brands of beer than I have ever heard of. The prices did not seem to be high either (again, I really have no knowledge in this area, it being my first time in a liquor store and all). And the people there were very helpful. They told me what, in their experience, were the favored drinks. They helped me with everything.

Then I went back home. I felt as though going out already buzzed would have been a stupid thing. So I waited for a while to get drunk. I had only one drink while out, mainly because I did not want to make an ass of myself in public and knew that I would if I was buzzed or drunk. So I waited until I got home.

Let the games begin. I don't know what everyone else likes to drink, but I can tell you that Mike's Hard Lemonade and Cider Jack are both quite good, and they get the job done, especially for lightweights (you two know who you are) or a non-drinker (me before Saturday night). Mike's Hard Lemonade tastes like lemonade flavored soda with just a bit of alcohol. Yum! That, combined with Raspberry Cider Jack and Irish Crème, somehow got me... rather drunk. At this point, you may be wondering what kind of real beer I had. I'm sorry to disappoint you all, but I don't have a real taste for beer. That stuff is way too bitter for me. I actually prefer Cider Jack and Hard Lemonade.

The morning after experience was not bad at all. It was actually rather nice and enlightening. After passing out somewhere around 3:00 a.m., and not waking up until 1:00 p.m., I thought I would have a mother of a hangover. I was pleasantly surprised. I woke up as though I hadn't had a thing to drink. No aspirin, additional water, or bread was needed (my friends had given me a 21st birthday survival kit complete with a bottle of water, Tic Tac's, Wheatables and Rolaids, all for my hangover). I didn't vomit at all. Some say that's because of my excellent metabolism. Since my tolerance went up overnight, I know that it has something to do with that. It can't have anything to do with my water intake during the day, considering that I took in no more water than I normally do. But just to be safe, later Sunday afternoon I popped a couple of aspirin to keep the dreaded headache away, but all in all, I feel fine.

I had a great 21st birthday. It was a birthday that I will never forget. I had only two unpleasant surprises that day, and both were by phone. So I say "screw it." I had fun and that's all that matters.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

Letters to the Editor

Run off the Road

To the editor:

To the young woman who ran me off North Pleasant Street, Monday, September 20th, since you never stopped at the scene of the accident, I thought I might reach you by letter. You might be interested to know what happened in those few seconds.

I was riding my bike along North Pleasant St., just approaching the entrance to Hills South and the Fine Arts Center Parking Lot, keenly aware of the traffic around me. I've been teaching at UMass for 32 years, and I know that newcomers (are you one?) sometimes aren't sure where they are going.

I became aware of you approaching behind me because you were driving faster than the other traffic. I moved in closer to the curb. Without warning, you swerved into the parking lot entrance. If I kept going straight, I would have crashed into your car, so there was no alternative but to turn with you. But you cut me off so sharply that I was forced into a high granite curb.

The impact threw me over the right handlebar, but an instant before the contact, you turned your head, watching me hit and go down. As I laid on the ground with my bike on top of me, I saw you speeding away.

For a moment I felt nothing, but then the pain began in my back.

You might be surprised to know that three cars stopped, and three people ran over to help me, picked up my papers (my briefcase had opened from the force of the accident) and offered to call an ambulance or take me to the University Health Center. Thanks to them, I made it there.

In the timeless tradition of Samaritans, their actions were in the sharpest contrast to your callous indifference.

Now, a week later, I think about you. At times I'd like to reason with you, perhaps inspire you to become more compassionate and careful of others, to talk about human decency, to remind you that most drivers stop if they've hit a dog or a cat. At other times, I'd like to shake you, to break through your indifference and egotism, to urge you to connect with others. I know you could learn from examining your decision to run from the scene.

But mostly I think about you simply because every time I walk or laugh or cough or turn over I have a sharp pain in two places in my back. My doctor says the pain, caused by muscle and ligament tears and muscle spasms, will not subside for six weeks. Unfortunately, my memories of you will not.

Professor John R. Nelson
Department of English

SGA for a diverse campus

To the editor (and Kevin Ann):

Don't worry! We, the Student Government Association don't think you are a racist or a white supremacist, just misguided and uneducated. The arguments for creating a diverse University and Commonwealth College are numerous. First, we live in an increasingly global society, and that trend shows no signs of slowing. Therefore, to be successful in anything from corporate finance to education, one must have the ability to work with persons from different nations, cultures, religions, political beliefs etc. What better training ground for this than a University campus? Quite simply, a diverse campus benefits all of us.

Second, this University, as a land-grant institution, has within its mission a commitment to "offer the benefits of a college experience to many who had traditionally been shut out, by reason of economics or social class."(The Chancellor's Report 1996) Do you disagree with that goal?

Third, your belief that a "lower standard" must be applied to minorities to ensure their acceptance into the Commonwealth College is absurd. During the admissions process the Commonwealth accepts over 20% ALANA students. Unfortunately, less than 8% enroll. There are several reasons for this disparity. Many other schools have minority scholarships that we cannot provide. The solution to this problem is to create scholarships for minority students through private donations. Another solution is to have an admissions officer responsible for recruiting ALANA students.

The standards used by admissions are biased against certain socio-economic groups. On average, an additional $10,000 in family income will increase a student's score by 33 points. ETS, the corporation that administers the SAT is internally investigating how to deal with the inequities of the SAT and how to create a system that accurately judges the potential success of students in college. The concept that a student can be best judged by simple numbers like GPA, class rank and SAT scores is outdated and inaccurate. As the flagship campus for the University of Massachusetts we must be leaders in investigating new techniques for admitting students. The Task Force on Admissions is currently exploring how to do that. Although the Task Force's report is not finalized, their presentation on new ways of admitting students was innovative and exciting. We hope that this letter has enlightened the campus community on why we fight so hard for diversity. If you care about this campus and want to make a change, please visit our office at 420 Student Union.

The Student Government Association

Poor Photo Choice

To the Editor:

We are disappointed that The Massachusetts Daily Collegian editorial staff chose to feature a photo of a skateboarder 'grinding' the edge of a park bench on the front page of your 9/28/99 edition. Skateboarding on public seating areas, planters and monuments is considered vandalism as it is irreparably damages the edges of seats, rendering them unusable. Some skateboarders also wax these edges for a better ride, creating an ugly mess, which cannot be removed, and additionally, soiling the clothing of those seated on the benches.

Over the past three years, the Grounds Management staff has installed planters and benches throughout campus to enhance the campus environment. During that same time, the President's Office funded the reconstruction of the Student Union patio. The Facilities Planning Division oversaw this project, which entailed replacing the broken pavement and providing handicapped accessibility, thus enhancing the overall appearance of this core campus building. Unfortunately, almost immediately after completion of the Student Union patio project, skateboarders and in-line skaters seriously damaged the benches and cut off one of the handrails to provide a better ride.

Funding for these projects is difficult to obtain. Over the past ten years, funding for maintenance has been substantially reduced and the Grounds Management staff is continually being asked to do more with fewer resources. When damage similar to that pictured in The Massachusetts Daily Collegian occurs, the cost of repairs prevents new projects from being funded. At times, funds are unavailable even for repairs, and damaged University property simply remains unrepaired.

Although skateboarding is not a misdemeanor, vandalism is. Featuring this type of recreational behavior using campus property on the front page of your newspaper only serves to promote this activity. We at the Physical Plant and the Facilities Planning Division are doing all that we can to make this campus a better place to live, study, and work. Anything you can do to discourage vandalism on campus would be greatly appreciated by the vast majority of the students, faculty, and staff.

R. Marc Fournier
Physical Plant

M. Blakey Smith
Facilities Planning Division

Bruce Thomas
Facilities Planning Division

Be a part of our DIVERSE staff. Come write for one of the Collegian's diversity pages.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majcrowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

THE MASSACHUSETTS DAILY COLLEGIAN

Multicultural Affairs

Being White Means...

...never having to ask the question, "What does it mean to be white?"

...not having to worry that if I drop out of school I won't be able to find a job.

...not feeling threatened as I walk across campus, for all around me are my people, my music, my slang.

...never worrying that when I enter a room of strangers, I will be looked at with hostility—the worst that can happen is that I will be ignored.

...never having to doubt that this or that course will have some material in it concerning my race—after all, I assume that the course will be about my history, my art, my literature, my national heroes, my race's philosophers, painters and generals.

...being comfortable.

...being confused by words like "institutional racism"

...that's not me is it?

...being afraid that everything I do or say will be called "racist."

...not feeling "white" unless I am around people of color.

...hearing the Doors in the next room, the Stones in the room across the hall... and thinking that the person who plays rap on the 1st floor is too loud.

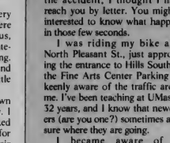
...telling everyone about my trip through Mississippi and Alabama, especially how everyone down there is racist.

...then going back to the all-white suburb where I grew up, passing the 95 percent white school I attended, driving down the quiet streets where I never saw a black man walking nor anyone ever questioned by the cops, much less arrested.

...wondering why a person of color who is friendly in the hall, refuses to recognize my existence when they are in a group of peers.

...feeling frustrated that people of color hate me because I am white and questioning their intolerance, prejudice, and stereotyping whites.

...not knowing what people of color want or why they want to be different.



...not having to think in negative terms (this is what I am not... about my race or my culture, for being white means that my culture is the yardstick for what's around me here: our skin, our history, our music, our society.)

...feeling guilty over the condition of people but being unable or unwilling to transfer this feeling into constructive action.

-Dawn Mays & Sandra Vonniessen, special to the Collegian.

Excuses, Excuses

Is it me or does it seem that in the past few years or so, there is a lot of excuse making? These is not the excuses for things like flaking, lying, or giving me a false phone number at a bar. What I mean are these excuses for behavior that is totally unacceptable like crime, immorality, or being a Phish fan.

Lenny Holston

As a person of color, I have been brought up surrounded by these sad excuses for everything that goes wrong in my community. Now before I get hate mail from GEO, let me explain that there is such a thing as institutional oppression, but that is a different article for a different day. This is also not to stereotype, but to expose all of us people of color who spend their days looking for reasons for why they screw up. These are the same people who give the rest of us hardworking minorities a bad name.

We, as people of color, have heard them all. Alcohol: there is a liquor store on every corner in the inner city, white communities do not sell malt liquor in their stores, getting minority celebrities to appear in beer commercials influences them to drink. Here is a revolutionary idea – do not drink!

I give you permission to use this idea with no charge. You could apply this to everything in your life. Are you pregnant, again? Here is another revolutionary idea that you can use for free – stop screwing, or at least stop doing it without protection. Don't blame the government for not providing you with birth control pills or your school for not teaching you sex education. Again, these are very pressing issues, but that is a different article for a different time. Yes, I know that my ideas are mindblowing and that I may win the Nobel Prize for them but I will still find the time to give autographs to all those who want one.

Hello, white people (again, not all, just those who make y'all look bad). I know there were some of you who were reading this so far saying, "Yes, you go Lenny, tell them how much they are screwing up. That Lenny is cool, he is special, he's not like the rest of them." The white world is very guilty of finding reasons for the evils they do, even more so than we are. In fact, many feel they are the only ones "allowed" to have excuses.

Do you remember the coverage of Woodstock '99, that big riot, and all of those rapes? The crowd was 98 percent white. What was the excuse they gave for it, "the water was $4.50 and there was not enough bathrooms." (A side note: I was reading the Bible the other day and it actually said that one of the signs of the apocalypse was "if there shall be a riot at a Dave Matthews concert and not one incidence of violence at Jay-Z's 'Hard Knock Life' tour." I swear it is in there).

> "If white kids start shooting people, I have to wait until July to see the 'Buffy' season finale."

Kids get shot on a daily, almost hourly, basis in our nation's ghettos. This does not usually merit even a blurb in the national news. Let gun violence spill over to white suburbia and everything from Marilyn Manson to Sony Playstation is the culprit. These poor little innocent children cannot be liable, they're white for Chrissakes! There's a drive-by shooting in Compton, I find the story on page 25 If white kids start shooting people, I have to wait until July to see the "Buffy" season finale.

I know that talking about the Columbine High School is a sensitive topic. I am not making light of it, but I am trying to put in into perspective. Many politicians use tragedies like these and our tendency to look for excuses to further their agendas. President Clinton has milked every tragedy of the last seven years to his advantage, again different article for a different day. Censoring movies, TV and videogames is not going to help. Criminals do not obey to gun control laws so that is futile. It is all about looking at ourselves for the real reason for society's evils.

If we as a society want to combat our evils we need to remember that it all starts at home. Sometimes, trying to find excuses does more harm than good. Example (warning, the following will definitely earn me hate mail from GEO and many other organizations, but shut up and read carefully): that little affirmative action things last semester. I am all for it but, there is something else that will get help get your kids into college, taking an active part in their education. While I was covering many of the demonstrations last semester, I ran into far too many parents who literally never read to their children, attended a PTA meeting, or ever met their child's teacher who willing complaining that ending affirmative action will be the reason their kids won't succeed.

We all find excuses. Stop, it's your own fault you suck and that your kids suck. I didn't cause it by listening to 2Pac and that person over there did not cause it by being a member of the NRA. Do something about your own life and then we'll protest. Address all hate mail to the Collegian.

Lenny Holston is a Collegian columnist.

Poem Of The Week

On Call With Mary J.

On the corner of Tulane and Central lies a coffee house
And I go mental
There I sit-my thoughts fly
I sometimes wonder-what happens when we die?
But the pen writes too quick
And before I know it-I take a lick
It is sweet-like candy
I'm on cloud nine, ain't that shit dandy?
She watches with intent eyes, realizes the taste was just lies
She breaks down, yet no tears fall...
Because her thoughts
Are now... "on call"

Tereseu O. Rodriguez is a UMass student.

Get Cultured... Read our Diversity Pages.

Being Black Means...

...means walking across campus on my first day of class and not seeing one African-American student.

...means having all white teachers and being surrounded in class by white students

...is opening my textbooks and seeing pictures of white people and reading white-washed theory, philosophy, and history which I find generally irrelevant.

...means going to a white counselor or advisor whom I don't trust and who doesn't know how to handle my presence or my problem.

...is trying to get administrators to understand my needs and do something about them, while acknowledging that they could never really understand.

...means combating the anti-politically correct movement while explaining why I want to be called African-American and not black.

...is watching whites look upon my natural hair, my braids, my mustache, my African garments, my black music and literature, my community language, and my other symbols of African pride as being militant and dangerous.

...is going into a class disadvantaged and finding that I have a professor who believes it is impossible for an African-American student to make an "A" grade.

...is not having a penny in my pocket and seeing white students visit Europe and Mexico and drive fancy cars, and at the same time knowing that their parents and ancestors got rich off the sweat and pain of my parents and ancestors.

...is being a resource person for curious white people who, after being answered, are not always willing to accept my expertise.

...is being in an ocean of white stimuli, being angry consciously or unconsciously, and feeling bad about my feelings.

...means going home to get my hair cut, buy magazines, and hair care products, eat foods of my culture and having to explain this to the person who says I need to stay on campus so I can "develop."

...means knowing that my going to college was at a great expense to my family, community, and church and trying not to feel pressured.

...means being lonely, hyper-alienated depressed, displayed, ignored, and harassed. Just the fact of being black is to be at the brink of revolt.

-Dawn Mays & Sandra Vonniessen, special to the Collegian.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

A banner day for culture at UMass

The Student Union displays a number of opportunities for its diverse population.

TV May Distort Reality of Racial Mixing

By Leonard Steinhorn
Special to The Baltimore Sun

"There'll be black faces, Asian faces, Latin faces, men, women all over the place," the producer of a new network television show giddily proclaimed this summer as he, like other white Hollywood executives, scrambled to cast minority actors after the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People criticized them for scheduling a lily-white lineup of fall TV shows.

If only the rest of society could be integrated so easily. Indeed, the recent brouhaha over the fall TV lineup obscures a little known fact about television and race: When it comes to blacks, television is one of the most integrated parts of American life.

That doesn't mean every show reflects racial diversity - too many don't, and many, such as the top rated situation-comedies "Friends" and "Frasier," remain completely white. But when the total television viewing experience is taken together – prime-time, soaps, talk shows, children's shows, news, sports, movies and advertising – our society as seen on television looks far more integrated than it is.

That says a great deal about how deeply separated we are. For most black and white Americans, the daily racial reality is that we don't live together, learn together, play together, pray together, or relax together. Even when we work together, we go separate ways at lunch and after work.

About a third of all black Americans live in neighborhoods 90 percent or more black, and most other blacks live in areas disproportionately or predominantly black. A Latino or Asian-American with a third-grade education is more likely to live in an integrated neighborhood than a black with a Ph.D. Sadly, the integration dream the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. worked so hard to achieve – an integration of people that goes far beyond the desegregation of opportunity and law – remains precisely that, a dream.

But on television, the picture is different. Blacks in real life may not visit whites in their homes, but blacks on screen are regular guests in white living rooms. Welcome to the land of virtual integration. It could be the pop star Brandy playing Cinderella; Bill Cosby or Della Reese starring in a show; Cuba Gooding or Chris Rock playing host on "Saturday Night Live"; Denzel Washington or Whoopi Goldberg doing a celebrity interview; Michael Jordan or James Earl Jones pitching a product; Ed Bradley or Gwen Ifill reporting the news, or any combination of black newscasters, athletes, entertainers, actors and anonymous extras who populate the airwaves hour after hour, day after day.

There are blacks on the morning shows doing the news and weather, blacks reporting stories for the news magazine shows, blacks playing and announcing sports, blacks interviewing and being interviewed, blacks on the police shows investigating homicides, and blacks offering up opinions on the political talk-show circuit.

In TV dramas like "ER" and "The Practice," black surgeons treat white patients and black lawyers represent white clients in far greater proportion than they do in real life.

Commercials are no different, conjuring up the image of integrated suburbs where black and white kids play basketball together, black and white women reminisce about growing up together, and black and white pals hunker down for a Sunday of watching football together.

Rarely does a typical viewer go more than a few minutes without seeing a black face on the screen. Although the number fluctuates each year, as many as 17 percent of all characters in prime-time entertainment this decade have been played by blacks. According to a 1995 study by the Screen Actors Guild, blacks constitute more than 12 percent of on-camera actors and more than 17 percent of all extras in television ads.

On the news, the number of black TV journalists is roughly proportionate to the overall black population in America, about 13 percent. Sports broadcasts – from the players to the announcers – are fully integrated. Even viewers of all-white shows like "Friends" will see blacks punctuate the half-hour slot via ads, promos, and news briefs, which consume about 25 percent of all television time.

To be sure, the integration of television is far from perfect. There are too few black leads, too many segregated sitcoms, too few story lines around black families, and as the NAACP cogently points out, too few black programming executives with the power to green-light ideas and create integrated shows. Moreover, blacks may be well represented in ads, but unless a celebrity is featured, blacks are less likely than whites to be the focus of the ad and more likely to be part of a group, a sequence, or the background cast.

Compared with the rest of America, however, the television screen looks like a veritable color-blind society. And that should be good news for television. For if it can help shatter stereotypes, fortify the interracial comfort zone, and multiply the number of black role models for everyone in America, television can accomplish an important goal that most other institutions in society have not been willing or able to accomplish.

The NAACP is right to keep pushing this cause. But virtual integration may also lead us to a classic case of unintended consequences: Because we too often mistake what's on the screen for what's in our lives, TV's virtually integrated world may lull white Americans into a false sense of self-congratulation about race and, ironically, retard progress toward real integration.

In the typical American household the television is on an average of seven hours a day. The televised image effectively wallpapers our lives. Research has shown that viewers often believe television reality to be as authentic as their actual reality, if not more so.

"Friends" is the quintessential name for a television show, not only because of the fictional friendship among the characters but because it's a metaphor for the virtual relationship we as viewers have with these and so many others on TV.

When it comes to race, television has made black people a part of white people's lives, virtually so. It offers whites the sensation of having meaningful, repeated contact with blacks without actually having it. For whites generally unaccustomed to interacting with blacks, who walk out their front doors and see few black faces in the neighborhood, who go to all white churches and social events, the mere presence of black images in their homes blurs the line between what is imagined and what is real about race in America.

If seeing is believing, if America appears integrated even if it isn't, then it's no surprise whites overwhelmingly tell pollsters that our major racial problems are behind us, that discrimination no longer unduly hobbles blacks, and that blacks have only themselves to blame for their problems.

Whites who see an integrated world on television will see their all-white neighborhoods or social clubs as exceptions, so to them it's not a big deal. Whites who flee real integrated neighborhoods but enjoy virtually integrated neighborhoods in their living rooms see no contradiction between the two and continue to view themselves as tolerant, fair-minded and color-blind.

The Collegian's Diversity pages provide the perfect opportunity for you to express what is on your mind about today's social issues.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian Tuesday, October 5,1999

Gem of jam bands, Ruby Dune, plays Pearl St.

By Matthew Maggiacomo
Collegian Correspondent

Ruby Dune
Pearl Street Night Club
October 1, 1999

Last Friday night, Pearl Street got a little taste of the best jam band [illegible] to offer. With the club-[illegible] packed with people ready to [illegible], Ruby Dune came through with an impressive set, combining both improvisation and solid, structured rock and roll.

Ruby Dune's set started off somewhat shaky, including their standard cover of Eric Johnson's "Cliffs of Dover." The crowd seemed reluctant to move until they broke into their latest song, a Latin number written by bass player Jordan Richmond called "Psatin."

Once they found their rhythm, Ruby Dune was unstoppable. After moving through old classics like The Ball and their seven-minute epic "Grumicel," it was clear that Ruby Dune owned the crowd.

"I've seen other jam bands, and these guys are great," said Tim Canada, a UMass sophomore.

It's hard to categorize the subject matter covered in Ruby Dune's songs. Guitarist and vocalist Vim Tingle often tries to make sense of the psychedelic and absurd in his lyrics. Somehow he manages to be down to earth while at the same time offering no real insight into what he's talking about, as displayed in "The Ball": Friends not seen since days that have long passed/ Greetings to you from down beneath the lizard tracks.

This odd mixture of sense and senselessness is perhaps the best accompaniment to their musical style, which fluctuates between precise structure and improvised disorder. Friday's set was no exception. Nearly every song featured solos from each member of the band, and the music would often carry itself to unexpected climaxes. At times, the crowd was alive and dancing; other times, they were left in awe.

Drummer Vin D'Agostino gave perhaps one of his best performances on stage. He supplied the band with most of their energy, and amazed the crowd with dual drum solos during "So Good."

"I was nervous as hell," said D'Agostino after the show. "But once the music started, I pretty much focused on it. I had an amazing time."

Headliners Jiggle the Handle played for a somewhat thinned out crowd after Ruby Dune. Opening with a catchy tune called "Finally," Jiggle got what was left of the crowd on their feet and dancing.

Despite their veteran status in the realm of jam music, Jiggle the Handle would be lost without guitarist Gary Backstrom. His remarkable soloing ability is the only aspect of the band that really stands out. Otherwise, their music is somewhat mediocre, blending elements of pop, classic rock, and light improvisation.

UM Music Heard in NYC

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

Did you know that UMass has a chamber choir? Did you know that for the last nine years that chamber choir has traveled annually to New York City to participate in a national celebration of music at Saint John's Cathedral? In the enormous bustle of a campus as large as ours it is too often, and too easily, overlooked that a group of our own students dedicates an exceptional amount of time and talent to experience such a remarkable event. So here's the certainly earned spot to give props to the chamber choir.

To give you an idea of how significant this occasion is, a brief description of it includes a procession of animals (consisting of an elephant, a camel, a llama, baby oxen, monkeys, birds and a pig) and an audience of approximately 6,000 people with their pets in tow — a powerful olfactory exercise.

The theme, made abundantly clear by the collection of fauna, is the veneration of earth and all its creatures. Life is honored in song, and as described by Dr. Abercrombie (chamber choir director), "it's a novel way of respecting the earth and animal life through music." The service also celebrates the birthday of Saint Francis of Assisi, an Italian monk who renounced his family's wealth for a life of contemplation, called everyone to consider all of nature as sacred, and founded the Franciscan monastic order.

Despite its rich Catholic roots, the program is designed in a very open-door, non-proselytizing manner, and brings together classical, jazz, salsa, gospel and Afro-Cuban music styles. UMass Junior, Jeff Kempskie, a music major and participant says, "It's the most powerful musical experience I've ever been a part of. I get goose bumps every time I sing it."

People will do crazy things to WIN

$25,000!

You can just go to
www.1800COLLECT.com

1-800-COLLECT
Save a Buck or Two.

Savings vs. dialing "0" with AT&T.
No purchase necessary. Open to U.S. residents. Void where prohibited. For Official Rules, go to www.win25000.1800COLLECT.com or send a SASE to: Win $25,000 Rules, P.O. Box 5086, Blair, NE 68009-5086. Sweepstakes ends 10/15/99.

XPRESSIONS and NOYZE

X-Ecutioners and Rahzel
Pearl Street Night Club
September 30

I must admit my skepticism surrounding Thursday night's show. Given the disenchanting state of current hip-hop, I was literally anticipating disappointment. But much to my delighted shock, I was emphatically mistaken in my assumptions. The artistic exhibition performed in the Ballroom at Pearl Street was undoubtedly the rawest, freshest, most-impressive display of elemental culture in recent memory. Each component of hip-hop's scientific formula was dissected and elicited with sharp skills and engaged, enthusiastic audience reflections.

The pre-game show featured local turntablists, the Drunk Monks, who commenced the festivities spinning classic joints, which spanned nearly two decades. On the floor a gathering of breakers spontaneously popped and spun with dizzying sprightliness, uniquely corresponding with the deejays well-selected rhythms. Energy levels rose momentously as the encompassing crowd "oood" and "aaahd" at every fantastic contortion and cut.

David Kutzoff

When the X-Ecutioners finally stole to center stage, the caloric vivacity which filled the room was all but unbridled. Although introductions were hardly needed, each member of New York City's turntablized Deities were individually brought forth. Roc Raider, Rob Swift, Total Eclipse and Mista Sinista, equipped with eight turntables and four mixers, began their set in traditional X-Men form, juggling beats and transforming their juggles into a common beat resemblance. The vinyl butchery ensued with an orchestra of manipulated sounds and brutal yet perfectly "executed" rhythmic severings. Perhaps the most mesmerizing spectacle of the scratch-symphony was their gang-anatomization of Gang Starr's "Full Clip," in which they lined up and took turns beguiling and deforming Guru and Primo's well-known number.

On the individual tip, I personally liked Roc Raider's molestation of the instrumentalized "Dr. Knockboots." He took this simple, funk-driven groove and literally splattered it with his own variations and interpretations. By the end of the routine, it was barely coherent that those records were indeed the same pair of secular beats with which he began. All in all, the four dexterous wizards of needle-thrashing were simply amazing. "Needle-less" to say, they would be a tough act to follow... right?

To me, the Godfather of Noyze seemed to be an oddly self-dubbed title. Why Noyze? Why not sound? Does not "noise" usually connotate auditory irritations, like a child screaming or that strange, ear-

Turn to X-Ecutioners, page 8

Isenberg School of Management
Undergraduate Placement Office
presents
SOM
CAREER DAY
1999

All Students Are Cordially Invited to Attend!!

Date: Wednesday, October 13, 1999
Place: Mullins Center
Time: Begins at 12:00 P.M. 5:00 P.M.

WHO WILL BE THERE?

•You (we hope) •About 1400 students attending firms: •Eighty or more firms

Advest
Team Aerotek
Alexander, Aronson & Finning
American Express Financial Advisors
Ames
Andersen Consulting
Arthur Andersen
Aspen Square Management
BDO Seidman
Black & Decker
Canby & Maloney & Co., Inc.
Cantor Fitzgerald
Carlin, Charron & Rosen
Carter Wallace
Chubb
Cigna Corporation
Cintas Corporation
CSC Consulting
DataViz
Deloitte & Touche
Edelstein & Co.
(EDS) Electronic Data Systems
EMC Corporation
Enterprise Rent-A-Car
ERC Wiping Products
Ernst & Young
Ferguson Enterprises
FDIC
First Data Investor Services Group
Feeley &Driscoll
Fidelity Investments
Filene's
Ford Motor Credit Corporation
Frito-Lay
General Electric
Great West Employee Benefits
Hannaford Brothers Co.
Hershey Foods
IBM
International Paper
Investors Bank & Trust
J.C. Penney Stores
J.H. Cohn
John Hancock
KPMG PEAT MARWICK
Liberty Mutual
MassMutual
MBNA New England
Northeast Utilities
Northwestern Mutual Life
O'Connor & Drew
Offtech
Olde Discount Stockbrokers
Osco Drug
Partners First
Pearson Education
Pepsi Bottling Company
Pratt & Whitney
Pricewaterhouse Coopers
Procter & Gamble
Putnam Investments
Raytheon
Reed Exhibition Companies
Reznick, Fedder & Silverman
Sands Brothers
Sentry Insurance
7-Eleven
Sherwin-Williams
Solutia
Staples
State Street Corporation Process Engineering
State Street Bank (Staffing)
Stop & Shop Co.
Sun Life
Teradyne
TJX Companies
Toys "R" Us
Travelers
Walgreens
Wallace, Inc.
Wolf & Co.

There will be a free shuttle leaving Haigis Mall for the Mullins Center every 20 minutes from Noon to 5:00 P.M.

Some helpful hints: (1) Bring a supply of resumes with you to leave with company representatives you meet; (2) Dress appropriately if possible. This means tie and jacket for men; dress or blouse and skirt for women. (3) Speak with corporate representatives of interest to you and ask for a business card, if available.

Mendes Delivers A National Treasure

David Troupes
Collegian Staff

American Beauty
Directed by Sam Mendes
with Kevin Spacey, Annette Bening, Thora Birch
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater, Northampton

Suburban America. A bubble world where everything we cherish is held safe, everything we desire is available. Everything that suffocates us is inescapable. American Beauty takes a fascinating look at the afflictions to be found in middle class culture, the neurotic human drama that potentially plays out behind every white picket fence in America. A magnificent script is brought to life by wonderful directing and a flawlessly talented cast; this is truly one of the best films of the year.

Lester Burnham (Kevin Spacey) is married to a woman he no longer knows, raising a teenage daughter who wants nothing to do with him and stuck at a job he hates. His wife, Carolyn (Annette Bening), is an unsuccessful real estate agent whose drive to succeed materially has forced her to neglect her marriage. Their daughter, Jane (Thora Birch), is entirely justified in hating her family; the cold routine of their life is eating away at her sense of self and sabotaging her own future.

American Beauty tells the story of each of these characters, balancing them perfectly. Several other characters are treated with equal importance: Jane's cheerleading friend Angela (Mena Suvari), Jane's new neighbor Ricky (Wes Bentley), and Ricky's homophobic ex-military father (Chris Cooper). This movie's ability to juggle and intertwine all of these characters without sacrificing any of their significance or treating any of them in too cursory a manner is amazing, and much of the credit must go to the excellent cast. Each character is immediately familiar to the audience, and yet completely unique. We may have never met anyone quite like Lester Burnham, but we know him after just the first few lines of the opening narrative.

The cinematography in this movie is wonderfully original and executed to perfection. The directing is superb, striking a perfect balance between style and accessibility. In fact, "perfect" describes nearly every aspect of this movie. More than anything, however, American Beauty's greatest accomplishment is the realness of its characters. Some scenes are hilarious and others are incredibly painful, but never does anything break the spell of believability.

Beyond providing us with so many colorful, intoxicating characters, American Beauty has a lot to say about American Culture. Materialism, homophobia, the innocence and non-innocence of youth, and the hypocritical nature of American ideals are all present, woven into the characters' internal struggles. The movie doesn't force any heavy-handed conclusions on the audience, however. Much of American Beauty's genius comes in its subtlety and complication; layers of commentary and implication reveal themselves to long after the movie has ended. Visual motifs and brilliant camera work strike multiple chords simultaneously, all supported by a collection of people you wish you could watch forever, you wish could live forever. The fragility of everything here is enough to make one cry; and that is precisely the movie's point.

See American Beauty. I promise you one of the most fascinating, fulfilling, unforgettable movie experiences you'll ever have.

Grade: A

COURTESY MEGA RELATIONS

Director Sam Mendes chats off-camera with his humble actors, creating another masterpiece in American Beauty.

You Aren't Living Unless You're With Arts and Living!

Duke Ellington Resounds at FAC

The Fine Arts Center in collaboration with WFCR's Jazz a la Mode will celebrate Duke Ellington with "Rockin' in Rhythm: The Small Band Music of Duke Ellington" — an extraordinary concert and national tour featuring many of jazz's greatest stars, this Wednesday, October 6 at 7:30 p.m. in the Concert Hall.

In the small group music of Duke Ellington, one encounters a very specific aspect of his skills as a composer, namely the ability to create themes simple enough to be the basis for improvisation, yet memorable enough to bear favorable comparison to his more complex pieces.

Ellington's music means so much to so many different people that it is sometimes difficult to get a handle on the enormity of his legacy. There are the hit tunes that established him as a prime exponent of the American popular song, the extended works that created a viable American alternative to the European symphonic form, and the instrumental miniatures whose formal perfection and artistic depth belie their length.

COURTESY UMASS FINE ARTS CENTER

Joe Lovano wails on his sax this Wednesday night at the Concert Hall as performers pay tribute to The Music of Duke Ellington. The evening also features Dianne Reeves, Nicholas Payton and the Lincoln Center Jazz Orchestra.

■ X-Ecutioners

continued from page 6

splitting instrumentation heard frequently at underground record stores? Furthermore, I am always extremely leery of anything (or anyone) who claims "fifth element" status (and I'm not talking about the Bruce Willis futuristic, cinematic romp). Over the years there have been various claims made for hip-hop's element number five, from fashion enthusiasts to Blaze magazine promoters, but Rahzel's ego-inflated claim virtually epitomized these assertions. To attribute an entire element to one lip-spouting mortal would seem a bit farcical wouldn't you think? Yes, beatboxing has a long, faint history in hip hop and its importance (not to mention craft) has been at least noted, if not notarized, but can the king of the beatbox legitimately attach that additional element to his title? Well... after witnessing the astounding exhibition on Thursday evening, it is at least debatable.

On the Roots second LP Do You Want More?!!?! , Rahzel kicked a riveting, multi-layered beat for the song "The Lesson Pt.1." Yet, in my disbelief, I remained cautious because the track was recorded in a studio where it is possible to manipulate and enhance almost any sound in any way. Four years later he became a figurehead on MTV's infamous "Hip Hop Week," battling DJ Scribble and whatnot, but I was still not convinced. And as a lyrical emcee, I was doubly not convinced.

So, with all of my critical pre-judgments (unknowingly) working against him, the Godfather of Noyze took to the stage. And after approximately five minutes I had forgotten everything about "noyze," elements and MTV. I was fully captivated watching him and his incredibly unheard-of-deejay Chaos One rip it up in unison. Then Rahzel took over. First helicopter noises accompanied by people running, panting, shrieking, lasers zipping, armies attacking and battling as each "noise" sounded three-dimensionally intimate and proximal yet simultaneously distant and removed.

Bringing us back to earth, he began spitting musical familiarities, humming the melody and controlling the beat and (when applicable) scratch phrases as if he had two, even three mouths. The results were truly phenomenal oral talent amplified by an ultra-sensitive mic and well-trained sound technicians.

The overwhelming feeling at evening's end was exuberant and medicinal for nearly everyone involved, especially for those anticipating another hip-hop headache.

The Nation's Premier Environmental Career Conference Right Here in New England!

1999 National Environmental Career Conference
Hartford Civic Center – Hartford, CT
October 22 & 23, 1999

Includes:
•2 days of educational sessions
•Career Fair with over 50 organizations

Gather a group and share expenses!

Call 617/422-0021 or visit www.eco.org for more information and to register!

The Environmental Careers Organization

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups 1999-2000

Come Out, Come Out Wherever You Are! A GLBT Support Group
Our goal is to create a setting for self-exploration and for making new connections with others. We plan to have fun in the process.
Monday, 3:35 - 5:00 p.m.

Stress/ Anxiety Management Group
Stress impacts all of us physically and psychologically creating various medical and emotional symptoms. This structured, 3-session group is designed to demonstrate effective ways to deal with stressful circumstances. We will use educational and behavioral methods to help members lessen their stress.
Session 1: 3:30-5:00 p.m.
Monday: 10/18, 10/25, 11/1
Session 2: 3:30-5:00 p.m.
Monday: 11/15, 11/22, 11/29

Women's Eating Issues Group
This is a group for women who are interested in changing negative eating patterns, decreasing food and weight obsessions and enhancing self acceptance. Members will have an opportunity to learn about the underlying dynamics contributing to eating issues, and to develop coping strategies.
Tuesday, 4:45 - 6:00 p.m.

Coed Self - Exploration Group for Undergraduates
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Tuesday, 2:30 - 4:00 p.m.
Other groups may be added throughout the year. Let us know of your interest.

Women's Self Exploration Group
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation, and other relevant concerns. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thursday, 9:00 - 10:30 a.m.

Coed Self Exploration Group for Undergraduates
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Friday, 1:30 - 3:00 p.m.

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!

Anyone interested in trying out for the Women's Tennis
Please Call Debbie Ginn at 545-3103 for details

$10.00 HAIR CUT
SHAMPOO & CUT
Valid in Amherst
9
Styles on Pleasant
586-6166

flower power

downtown Amherst

No O? Try no D in D.C.

George Wilbon
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – It's a wonderful thing to have an offense that can score 35, 30, 27 and 38 points in consecutive weeks. It's a tremendous advantage to have someone who can master the position of quarterback, who in turn has emerging stars at running back and wide receiver. The Redskins are 3-1 because they have the best offense in football, by a mile.

But you cannot seriously contend for a championship until you have a stingy defense and effective special teams, and the Redskins don't have either right now. Going into the bye-week, they've got one-third of a team. Don't get me wrong, nobody in the league is more exciting or more entertaining to watch. How many teams can blow a 21-point deficit in one quarter, then come back three weeks later and wipe out a 21-point deficit in one quarter? Every game is a cliff-hanger, the "Perils of Pauline." No lead is safe, no deficit too much to overcome. All hail to the offense! It's like watching BYU. Turn your heads, and it's a certainty you'll miss somebody scoring.

"The offense bailed us out today," defensive end Kenard Lang said. "After those first two runs by (Tim) Biakabutuka, I'm thinking, 'Man, we're horrible.' How many times was Steve Beuerlein back there just patting the ball, looking for receivers and we didn't get to him? We should have had more sacks. We've got a lot of improvement. We've got people who can make these plays. The athletic ability is there. Hey man, Dan Snyder and Norv Turner aren't playing this year. We gotta start playing like we're supposed to."

The special teams haven't been any better. They hold, they miss blocks, they don't take the proper angle of pursuit, they fumble returns. Special teams leave the offense needing to overcome poor field position. They put the defense back on the field because they commit turnovers.

Turner's volume rose noticeably when he was asked about special teams blunders. "We're coaching as hard as we can in that area," he said, laying it squarely in the lap of the players. "We've got some young guys ... feeling the heat from me and from LeCharls (McDaniel, the special teams coach). We've told them, 'Get your (butt) on a guy and block him.' Now, we've got to get blocks and not hold."

Asked about the penalties that three times Sunday saddled the offense with terrible field position, Turner said it puts the team, "in real jeopardy.... The guys who are doing it, we've got to get them better."

It doesn't help that the star of special teams around here for the past nine years, Brian Mitchell, fumbled away one kick return and needed a replay reversal to wipe out what had been called a fumbled punt return (at his own 19) that might have handed Carolina a victory. Mitchell, desperately trying to break away on the late punt return, said he was trying to make up for the early fumble.

DAN SANTELLI/AS KITTLES

Winny in Philly

The men's soccer team came to the forefront in the Atlantic 10 Conference, knocking off Temple and St. Joseph's this weekend in Philadelphia.

Warning: Warner on fire

By Bob Glauber
Newsday

The defending Super Bowl champions are 0-4.

The defending NFC champs are 0-4.

An unusual year so far? You bet.

But the news is not all bad in what has turned into the season of the unexpected: While Denver, Atlanta and the Jets have staggered to a collective 1-11 start, the other big surprise comes from a ne'er-do-well team and its unknown quarterback.

Say hello to Kurt Warner, the feel-good story of 1999.

Warner's stunning early-season success as the St. Louis Rams' quarterback offers a refreshing counterbalance to the disastrous developments in Denver, Atlanta and New York, not to mention Minnesota, where the 2-2 Vikings already have lost twice as many games as they did all of last season.

How surprising is Warner's performance so far? Consider that his resume includes an undistinguished career at Division I-AA Northern Iowa and stints for the Iowa Barnstormers in the Arena Football League and the Amsterdam Admirals of NFL Europe. Hey, the guy was so used to playing in the Arena League, where he threw a whopping 183 touchdown passes in three seasons, that he now refers to life in the NFL as playing on "the big field."

"I had to prove to people that I could compete on the big field, that I couldn't just do it in the Arena League," said Warner, 28, who kicked around football's version of the minor leagues since 1995 before getting a shot with the Rams as a backup in 1998.

"Playing indoors and in NFL Europe, the biggest thing is that I gained confidence. I was able to face a lot of different situations. In the Arena League, you have to score almost every time you get the ball, so you have the mentality that you have to make a play."

Even so, no one could have expected such early success from Warner, especially because he wasn't even asked to become the Rams' starter until Trent Green went down with a season-ending knee injury in a preseason game against San Diego on Aug. 28.

In fact, shortly after Green was injured, one team official was so convinced that his club was doomed that he slammed his fist on a desk and said, "We're cursed. We're cursed."

As it turned out, however, it might have been a blessing in disguise because Warner has made the transition from the Arena League's 50-yard indoor game of 8-on-8 to the 100-yard pastures of the NFL in almost effortless fashion.

"In the NFL, there are better athletes and technicians that you play against but you also have a lot more room and distance and some of the reads might not be as quick," said Warner, who never made more than $65,000 in any season in the Arena League. He now makes $234,000, rock bottom on the NFL quarterback pay scale.

"People always said we were playing in a little cracker box in the Arena League but you had to make your reads immediately," he said. "When you planted your back foot, you had to throw the ball and make a play. I just hope to keep making plays at this level."

Just how much longer Warner will make plays is anyone's guess. But at least he has injected life into a team that barely six weeks ago thought its season was over.

■ temple

continued from page 12

added Rudy. "Then they took the lead on a free kick, which was because of a silly foul by us."

From there, however, the Minutewomen rallied back. UMass had a host of corner kicks late in the first half, but couldn't translate those opportunities into a goal. In the end, though, those missed chances didn't hurt the Minutewomen thanks to those three second half scores.

Four different players scored a goal apiece for UMass, while goalkeeper Angie Napoli had a solid effort between the pipes.

"It always feels good to come in and contribute, but it's nice to know that we are finishing," Conover said. "Every goal was scored by a different person, and that's some good stuff."

Said Rudy of his team's ability to come back: "We focused very well at the half. There were some meaningful talks by our players that put us into the proper perspective."

One drawback to the victory was an ankle injury suffered by Smith midway through the second half. Although the setback did keep the UMass captain out of Sunday's game against St. Joseph's, it was not known at press time how long Smith will be out of action.

The Minutewomen also took on the Hawks on Sunday. Check out the related story to see how UMass fared against SJL.

■ atlantic

continued from page 12

ever, the most important scenario in the game came early in the second half with his team leading by a goal.

"They pushed a front-runner up when we had a one goal lead. Most teams would have added another defender leading by a goal on the road, but we didn't think," he said. "I decided that we were going to attack, and we ended up playing some pretty good balls behind their defense."

Other top defensive efforts included the play of Sarah Cook, Kate Webb and goalkeeper Stevens, who shut down the top SJL offensive threats.

"Kate did a wonderful job on Ellen-Carine Stenrud. She didn't defend her too hard or too soft but just right," Rudy said. "And we were saying Sarah for this game to shut down Mindy Spellman. She did such a good job that they [SJL] took Spellman out and put another player in the try to wear her [Cook] down. But Sarah took them both right out of the game."

"And with Robin [Smith] out our air game was diminished. But Cori did a great job through the air. She had four definitive boxes [on corner kicks]," added Rudy. "And that was their way back into the game."

The Minutewomen will take the field again this weekend when they hit the road again to face George Washington and Virginia Tech.

Attention Sports Writers!!!!

There is a mandatory meeting Thursday at 4:00 p.m. in the office. If you cannot make it, call Bryan or Brett at 545-0719

GET IN THE GAME

READ SPORTS

Good times between friends, great taste between classes.

Buy a Coca-Cola® classic from any specially marked on-campus vending machine and you could win a commemorative Coca-Cola® classic/NFL T-Shirt*.

*Specially marked packaging available in specially marked vending machines until 11/30/99 or while supplies last. No purchase necessary. Requests for free game piece must be received by 12/28/99. See specially marked vending machines for details or call 1-800-785-2653.

©1999 The Coca-Cola Company. "Coca-Cola" and the Red Disk Icon are registered trademarks of The Coca-Cola Company.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

APARTMENT FOR RENT

Alpine Commons 4 Bedroom, 2 Baths, Fully applianced kitchen, Private Balconies. All utilities included, perfect roommate living. Just 3 miles to Umass. Move-in special. 256-0741.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking "Best Buddies" to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

AUTO FOR SALE

91 Ford Festiva 5spd excellent condition 87,000 miles $1,850 or BO Must Sell 546-2216

Purchasing a used car? Having your car repaired? Do yo know your legal rights? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Honda Prelude SI, 1992 Excellent condition, silver 5 spd, power brakes/windows sun roof, AM/FM stereo additional snow tires 96k $8500 (413)665-0218

COMPUTERS

CELERON 333MHZ PC Tower with 128MB RAM, 4Gig HD, 4Meg Intel video card, 56!/.90 modem, 10/100 ethernet card, 24X CDRom sound card, 2USB Ports, 4ISA Slots, 3 PCI Slots, IAGP ($900) - Pentium II 233 Mhz w/128 Meg RAM, 6Gig HD, 4 Meg S3 video card, sound card, 10/100 ethernet, 3PCI, 3ISA, 1AGP, 24X CDROM ($700) - Both come with Win 98, Corel 8 and MS Office Call Peter 253-6665

EMPLOYMENT

Intern Needed - Toothless Productions, a Western Mass Music Booking and Producitotn Co. needs a part time intern, very flexable hours. Call 888-595-3122

Preschool Teachers Wanted work study positions and substitute positions available working with children ages 18 months to 6yrs. Cushman-Scott Childrens Center Call Ellen at 549-1167

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413-774-2281 (ask for Marty). AA/EOE

TEACHER/CHEMISTRY Part time for Senior High Please submit resume to Superintendent's Office, 170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01002 FAX 413-549-9883. An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

Paraprofessional Position Title I Math/provides in-class support for students working with teachers in the High School math department. Send resume to: Superintendent's Office, Amherst Pelham Regional Schools, 170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01002 An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Pays $60 to $120 per shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evenings and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact: Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

The Mullin Center Ice Rink seeks Zamboni drivers experience preferred but not necessary. Will train. Apply in person at the Ice Rink

EMPLOYMENT

TUTORS/TRANSLATERS Bilingual/for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Farsi, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Spanish, Tabetan, Vietnamese, Yoruba. Contact ESL Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

SCHOOL CROSSING GUARDS AM and PM elementary school duty. Please contact Maintenance Office, Amherst Public Schools (549-9855) An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Help Wanted Housekeeping 3 to 6hrs a week in home of Grad Student, single parent. 7.00hrly, more for larger tasks. Car a must. All cleaning supplies provided. Call Eves 367-9129

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

EMPLOYMENT

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

EMPLOYMENT

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

FOR RENT

Rental Problems? Questions about your lease/security deposit deductions? Questions about subletting/assigning leases? Questions about the condition of your new house or apartment? Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

CD-Rom/Soundcard External Software Inc. $150/BO. Kim 549-6856

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

FOR SALE

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space Is Limited

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On UMass Bus Rte Call 256-0364

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts 350/month + utilities Female preffered Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted 1bdrm in 3bdrm Apt behind Puffers Pond. Must be easy going. Big yard, parking $333/mo+utilities Call Bry/Joe 549-4055

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Aerial Photos of UMass Campus now available! On the web. www.airphotocollegecampus.com

Pregnant? Not Sure? For free pregnancy test and info call Alternatives 245 Main St. Northampton 586-3000 Greenfield 774-6010 our services are FREE and CONFIDENTIAL

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

Your Ad Could Fill This Space!!

Five College Community Calendar

TUESDAY, OCT 5

Fair – The Annual Engineering Fair will be held in the Guinness Student Center in Marcus Hall from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. All students from engineering and technical disciplines are welcome to attend. For more information call 545-6231

Plays – Mount Holyoke College will present a play, entitled "A Sense of Wonder" at 7:30 p.m. in Chapin Auditorium. The play is based on the life and work of Rachel Carson, author of Silent Spring.

WEDNESDAY, OCT 6

Auditions – The UMass Theatre Guild will be holding auditions for "A Decade of Memories: A Musical Revue Celebrating the UMTG from 1990-1999" at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Call Ari or Sarah at 545-0413 for more information.

Fair – The Annual Engineering Fair will be held in the Guinness Student Center in Marcus Hall from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. All students from engineering and technical disciplines are welcome to attend. For more information call 545-6251

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division-Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the Fall Semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096 or stop by the Craft Center.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SEND THE COLLEGIAN YOUR FYI ANNOUNCEMENTS

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,™ you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

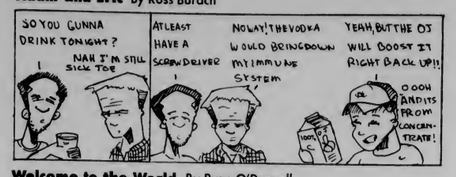
*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER

Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs



HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	16 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	18 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Gavel to Gavel
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Monge Ch.	23 Sundance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	26 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	27 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	28 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	29 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	30 Univision
14 International	31 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	32 Cartoon
17 WB/New Haven	33 Much Music
HSCN Programming

TUESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 5, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		Nova (In Stereo)		Frontline "Secrets of the SAT"		Independent Lens
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	JAG "True Calling" (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy "Victim Soul"		News	Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	JAG "True Calling" (In Stereo)		60 Minutes II (In Stereo)		Judging Amy "Victim Soul"		News	Late Show
WGVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Spin City	It's Like, You	Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WLVI	6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Buffy the Vampire Slayer		Angel "City Of"		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 1 — Teams to Be Announced.						News	Tonight Show
WTXX		Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Shasta Mc.	Shasta Mc.	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Carolins	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 1 — Teams to Be Announced.				News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Ally (In Stereo)	70s Show	Party of Five "Don't Let Go"		News		Friends	Frasier
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 1 — Teams to Be Announced.				News		Tonight Show
WGBY	1	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Scientific American Frontiers		News (In Stereo)		Frontline "Secrets of the SAT"		Charlie Rose	(In Stereo)
WGGB	40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Spin City	It's Like, You	Dharma-Greg	Sports Night	Once and Again (In Stereo)		News	Nightline
WSBK	38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Shasta Mc.	Shasta Mc.	Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager		Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS	72	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★★½ "National Lampoon's Loaded Weapon 1" (1993, Comedy)				★★½ "Robin Hood: Men in Tights" (1993, Comedy)		Cary Elwes,
A&E	69	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Cradle to Grave"		Biography "Robert Wagner"		Investigative Reports (R)		City Confidential (R)		Law & Order "Wager"
CNN	43	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand		Sports	Moneyline
COM	70	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★★ "The Toy" (1982, Comedy) Richard Pryor, Jackie Gleason.				Com.-Presents	Lizards	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Savage Wild		Inside Area 51 (R)		New Detectives		FBI Files "Cat and Mouse"		Inside Area 51 (R)
ESPN	51	Major League Baseball		Sportscenter		Wonderful World of Golf				Billiards		Sportscenter
LIFE	50	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Not Your Mother's		"Murder or Memory? A Moment of Truth Movie" (1994, Drama)				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	53	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	TRL Wanna	TRL (In Stereo)			Say What Krke	Real World 3	Downtown	Loveline
NICK	55	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeetar	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Maude
SCIFI	45	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sentinel (In Stereo)		Sentinel (In Stereo)		Sentinel (In Stereo)		Sentinel (In Stereo)		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	56	26 Home Again	Home Again	How'd They Do That?		Trauma: Life in the ER		UFOs Uncovered: Ara Aliens		UFOs Uncovered		Trauma: Life in the ER (R)
TNT	25	Due South "Call of the Wild"		ER "Point of Origin" (In Stereo)		★★★ "Fearless" (1993, Drama) Jeff Bridges, Isabella Rossellini.						★★½ "Children of a Lesser God" (1986, Drama)
USA	62	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG (In Stereo)		★★★★ "The Godfather Saga" (1977, Drama) (Part 1 of 3) Marlon Brando, Al Pacino. (In Stereo)						Baywatch (In Stereo)
HBO	30	(5:15) ★★½ "The X-Files" (1998) PG-13				Life Aftorlife (In Stereo)				★★ "Practical Magic" (1998) Sandra Bullock. (In Stereo) PG-13		Sex-and-City
MAX	60	(4:30) "Driver"		★½ "Freaked" (1993) Alex Winter. PG-13		★★½ "She No Evil, Hear No Evil" (1989) R				★½ "I Know What You Did Last Summer" (1997, Horror) R		Sex-and-City	Reverb
SHOW	65	★★ "Masters of Menace" (1990, Comedy) Catherine Bach. PG-13				★★ "Caught Up" (1998) Bokeem Woodbine. R		★★ "Act of War" (1996, Action) Jack Scalia. (In Stereo) NR				"Friend"

Adam and Eric By Ross Burach

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Something you usually do on your own can be shared with a friend or loved one today. As a result, a new and exciting form of communication will blossom.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – "Never" is a word you should avoid today, as you're entering a brief period of flux where almost anything is possible if you allow it!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're going to have to follow the rules today, but you'll be able to interpret them in a manner that suits your immediate needs.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You may be "reading into" things a bit much at this time, but soon your interpretation of certain events will be valuable to you, as well as others.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You're likely to figure something out in your head that others have been calculating for quite some time. You may have trouble proving it, however!

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Someone who loves you knows the truth about an issue that has been troubling you for some time. Today is the day to listen to what is in your heart.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You can create something today that will inspire you to go after something very special. Don't let your critics hold you back. Listen to the "voice."

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – You'll be able to see something in your surroundings today that others are missing. What you do with it will make all the difference.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Grant yourself a little more time to see things as they are today. Focus on what seems to "speak" to you most directly.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – The unknown will seem very familiar to you today. Put your faith in what seems "natural" to you. You actually hold all the cards right now.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Trust in your own talents today. There's no reason for you to be "forced" into doing something that seems strange or unclear to you.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You're going to have to pay for what you want today, but you may be able to get a bargain price. Later, you'll have a gift for someone.

Quote of the Day

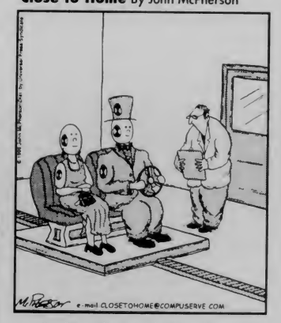
"Chlorophyll? More like Bore-o-phyll!"

-Billy Madison

Spunk By Mike LaRiccia

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Wheal By Clay Weatherford



Rose is Rose By Ray Brady

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Close to Home By John McPherson

Crash test dummies for luxury cars.

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Stew
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp
Hot & Spicy Pasta

Worcester

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Stew
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich
Vegetable Pot Pie

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp
Hot & Spicy Pasta
Ratatouille

Hampshire

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Stew
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp
Ratatouille

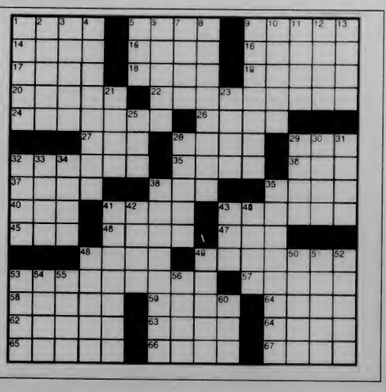
Berkshire

LUNCH
Minuteman Croissant Sandwich
Old Fashioned Beef Stew
Vegetable Croissant Sandwich
Tofu Pot Pie

DINNER
Roast Turkey
Fried Shrimp
Hot & Spicy Pasta
Ratatouille

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Seth Koenig
Photo Technition	Dan Santella
Copy Editor	Sam Wilkinson
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santora
Production Staff	Lowee Garg, Janine Tangney



ACROSS
1 Headliner
5 Society girls
9 Plane detector
14 Heal
15 Caspian feeder
16 Excuse
17 Early automaker
18 Latch —
19 Amorphous masses
20 Bread spreads
22 Israeli prime minister
24 Flimsy
26 Face part
27 Ice-T's music
28 Slap —
29 Frontiersman Carson
32 Munchies
35 Chops
36 Postal Creed word
37 Tempt
38 El — Heston role
39 Fillet a fish
40 Oklahoma town
41 Astonish
43 Nod off
45 Fido's doc
46 Stubborn one
47 Dine
48 Courageous one
49 Obeyed
53 Look like
57 Sandpiper
58 Type of pipe
59 Streetcar Bnt
61 Thought
62 Strainer
63 Lamb's pen name
64 Witnessed
65 Blackjopped
66 Transmit
67 Throw

DOWN
1 Go hastily
2 Bridal-veil stuff
3 Cosmetician Elizabeth
4 The library is a useful one
5 Pair
6 Sea eagles
7 Daily ritual
8 Didn't exhibit good posture
9 Cottontails
10 Diwan or Ankush
11 Designer Christian —
12 Swedish singing group
13 Jeopardy
21 Drench
23 Arab boat
25 FedEx rival
28 Glisten
29 Be aware
30 Charged bits
31 Elm or oak
32 Certain European
33 Naked
34 "I smell —!"
38 Female attire
39 Plant guru
41 Blurred
42 Domain
43 Poor grade
44 Cheers
48 Throw with effort
49 Type of wave
50 Home movie
51 Swords
52 College bigwigs
53 Recipe amt
54 Opera song
55 Ukraine's capital
56 Writer — Stanley Gardner
60 Angry

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

V	A	L	E		L	A	P	S	E		K	I	N	K
E	R	O	S		I	V	I	E	D		A	T	O	N
W	A	N	T		V	E	N	T	S		R	E	N	O
	B	E	E	P	E	R	S		T	A	R	O	T
		B	A	R	S		B	U	R	T
D	I	M	M	Y		P	A	T	I	E	N	C	E
B	O	D	E	S		R	E	H	E	M		O	V	L
A	G	E	D		A	E	G	I	S		R	I	C	K
A	G	A		C	M	E	G	A		A	I	S	L	E
S	O	L	I	G	H	T		R	U	P	E	E
		G	A	D	S		N	O	T	E
E	V	E	N	S		B	A	L	O	N	E	Y
D	E	L	T		A	V	A	I	L		I	S	I	S
G	I	L	T		C	A	R	V	E		N	A	P	A
E	L	S	E		E	N	D	E	D		G	U	S	T

10-5 99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, October 5,1999

UMass downs Temple, St. Joe's over the weekend

Minutewomen use diverse scoring attack to remain atop the Atlantic 10

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA - Trailing 2-1 at halftime of last Friday's game with Temple University, the Massachusetts women's soccer team needed to forge a second-half comeback if it wanted to start off a huge Atlantic 10 weekend on the right foot.

After the first half, the young, fearless Owls had the Minutewomen in a state of confusion - and also facing a one-goal deficit - as the teams took the field for the final 45 minutes.

However, the tides of the game took a huge turn in favor of UMass after the intermission. The Maroon and White struck for three second-half goals and dominated the play of the game en route to a 4-2 win over the Owls at Temple Stadium.

"We pulled together at the half. We all knew what we had to do, and we did it," said sophomore midfielder Martha Conover, who set up three UMass goals in the team's winning effort.

The Minutewomen (4-2-1, 2-0 in Atlantic 10) came out in the second half running on all cylinders. After a handful of scoring chances in the opening six minutes of the half, Brooke Bartlett netted the equalizer with 38:25 left in the game. The junior walked into the box from the right flank and buried a left-footed shot past Temple keeper Courtney Wostowicz.

From there, UMass continued to dictate the pace of the game, but came away with nothing to show for it until late in the contest. During one frantic rush, Emma Kurowski was robbed twice, first by Wostowicz, then by TU defender Jamie Valoris. Senior captain Robin Smith then headed a corner kick off the crossbar a few minutes later, and it appeared that the game might be heading for an extra session.

"I think that a lesser team would have folded. We got a ball saved off the goal line, hit the crossbar and were stopped on two one-on-ones," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "Those were four sure goals. Most teams would have just augured it in and said 'we're done', but we didn't."

UMass then tallied the game-winner with 13:03 left in regulation. Conover found Katelyn Jones in the middle of the field, and she fired alef-footed, 25-yard blast past Wojtowicz to put the Minutewomen ahead for good.

"My left foot wasn't working, but I soon as I got the ball, I decided that I was going to shoot it. I ended up ripping it into the back of the net," Jones said. "I guess it was a little redemption."

Senior Cindy Garceau eventually tacked on an insurance goal with 4:23 left to close out a 4-2 final.

"It was a good experience for the team. It was a small, bumpy field, but I felt that we battled well for 60 minutes," Rudy said. "And we kept plugging away."

In the first half, Kurowski scored the first goal of the game to put UMass ahead 1-0. However, the Owls bounced right back to take a 2-1 lead. Brenda Gore and Mary Mulvenna had the goals for the hosts.

"We got the first goal, and I thought that was good because they had a young team," Rudy said. "But Seamus [McWilliams, the Temple coach] has retooled his team with some young, enthusiastic players."

"They don't quit like some other teams did in years past. They came right back and got the first goal," Rudy said.

Turn to TEMPLE page 9

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Katelyn Jones scored a goal and added two assists as the Minutewomen took the road and came home happy with a pair of victories.

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

PHILADELPHIA - Sometimes fate works in twisted ways.

Last year, the Massachusetts women's soccer team was plagued by injuries all season long. As a result, four starters missed either all or most of the campaign due to setbacks.

This year, however, the Minutewomen were fortunate enough to see all of those players return to the lineup at 100-percent. Nevertheless, UMass found an eerie reminder of what can happen on the pitch at Finnesey Field in Philadelphia on Sunday.

The Minutewomen faced St. Joseph's in an Atlantic 10 matchup, winning by a 5-1 score. However, the Hawks lost more then just the game to UMass - they also saw leading scorer Lisa Benvenuto go down with a probable season-ending knee injury in a first-half collision with UMass keeper Cori Stevens.

"They [St. Joe's] suffered a terrible blow today, and their level had to go down when Benvenuto got injured. She is their physical and emotional leader," Massachusetts women's soccer coach Jim Rudy. "We recruited her to come here, and since then I've followed her career with great interest. But when she went down it hurt me like I was losing one of my own players."

At first, it seemed like the host Hawks were going to use the injury as motivation. It worked for a while, as Kim Dwyer, who ironically replaced Benvenuto in the lineup, scored with 17:37 left in the first half to put St. Joe's up 1-0.

From there, however, the Minutewomen (5-2-1, 3-0 in the Atlantic 10) took control of the game. A combination of nerves and the artificial turf field contributed to some sloppy play in the early going, but after Kara Green scored with 11:55 to play in the opening frame, UMass was on cruise control the rest of the way.

The visitors took the lead for good only three minutes after Green's tally. Katelyn Jones fed Martha Conover in the box, and the sophomore slipped a shot past Colleen Corocoran for a 2-1 lead.

"I think it was nerves in the early going [that hurt us]. When you're playing on turf, there's a lot of pressure to have good touches," said Conover, who finished with five points on the weekend. "But we pulled it together and got some good chances."

UMass took a 2-1 lead into halftime before adding three insurance goals in the second stanza.

The first goal came via a header from senior Cindy Garceau. The Upton native redirected a free kick from Jones into the back of the net for a 3-1 lead with 27:23 left in the game.

Senior forward Emma Kurowski then helped the UMass cause nine minutes later when she lobbed a shot over new Hawks keeper Christy Gane and into the back of the net. It was the tenth goal of the season for Kurowski.

Finally, with 15:55 left, Tarah Tokarchik closed out the scoring with a bouncing ball that Gane couldn't reach.

"I had some trepidations about today after watching St. Joe's play Rhode Island Friday night and after seeing our training session here on Saturday," Rudy said. "But once again our depth helped us today. I guess it was just our day to get the breaks."

According to Rudy, how-

Turn to ATLANTIC page 9

No. 1 Huskies outplay UM field hockey

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

There remains very little question as to why they're the top dogs of collegiate field hockey.

The No.1 Connecticut Huskies (11-0) employed a ferocious offensive attack in chewing up Massachusetts 4-1 on Sunday in Storrs, CT. UConn took advantage of a 17-5 penalty corner advantage and outshot the Minutewomen by a staggering 22-5 edge in the win.

The Maroon and White (3-6) entered the contest with renewed spirits, courtesy of a rousing 3-2 comeback win over Harvard last Wednesday. UConn presented UM with its seventh ranked opponent in its first nine games of the '99 campaign, and its sixth top-10 foe.

The Huskies, meanwhile, had shot to the top of the polls with nary a "paws" since downing then-No.1 Penn State on Sept. 17. Their most impressive win came at the season's onset, a sound 7-2 thrashing of No.18 New Hampshire.

The Minutewomen knew heading into Sunday's matchup that the outcome would hinge greatly on their offensive production. While the team's defense and goaltending thus far had been nothing short of spectacular, the UM offense had yet to truly discover its rhythm.

In its first eight games of the '99 slate, UMass tallied a meager five goals, while opposing teams racked up a whopping 24 scores against the Maroon and White.

The Huskies' high-powered attack was kept on a leash for the first 18 minutes of Sunday's game, as UM's midfield did a bang up job of containing UConn's dynamic scoring duo of Katherine Boyle and Laura Klein.

UConn forward Amy Herz opened the scoring at the 18:18 mark, on a feed from Connecticut native Alison Sharpe. Herz, who hails from Willow Grove, PA, was an All-American selection for UConn in 1998.

The Huskies were by no means ready to rest on their lead, as they continued to spray UM goalkeeper Zowie Tucker with a slew of hard shots. UConn took a 2-0 lead with 15:56 to play in the half, when junior midfielder Carrie Mahoney (southbury, CT) tucked away an unassisted goal.

The Maroon and White offense would finally wake up at the 8:48 mark, when back Anke Bruemmer nailed a penalty-corner shot to cut the UConn lead in half. Co-captain Lucy Koch and junior back Patty Robinson earned assists on the play.

The goal gave German native Bruemmer her eighth point of the season, vaulting her past forward Kristen Schmidt for the team scoring lead. She also leads UM in goals scored this season with four scores.

Robinson's assist moved her into a tie for seventh place on the UMass career assists list with 19. The Norwood native is deadlocked with Laura O'Neil ('80) and has her sites set on the sixth place mark of 20 assists, set by Julie McHugh between 1976 and 1979.

It looked as though the Minutewomen would head for halftime trailing by only one, until Herz got back into the act with an unassisted score with a mere 58 ticks remaining. The opportunity arose after a missed UConn penalty corner and ensuing melee in front of the UM net that screened Tucker from the ball.

It was the Upper Moreland graduate's third goal of the season, and her second unassisted score.

The Minutewomen stepped up their game in the second frame, trying to generate some offensive flow and take away the Huskies' transition game. Despite another onslaught of UConn shots, Tucker and the rest of the UM defense refused to yield until 17:10 remained in the game.

That's when UConn sophomore midfielder Katie Stephens cranked home the fourth Husky goal, effectively eliminating any chance of a Maroon and White comeback. It was the Hershey, PA native's sixth goal of the '99 season. Stephens holds the distinction of being the top scorer on the nation's top team, with 15 points.

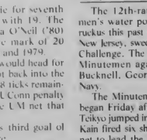
UMass saw one fantastic individual performance in the loss. Tucker, widely acknowledged as the premier keeper in college hockey, made a career-high 16 saves for the Maroon and White.

The Minutewomen will travel to Boston University on Wednesday to battle the No.14 Terriers. UM's eighth consecutive ranked opponent, UMass will then kick off its Atlantic 10 conference action by hosting the Rhode Island Rams at Richard F. Garber field on Saturday.

The Maroon and White will be out for blood against URI, which dealt UM its only conference loss of last season.

PAUL BELDEN / COLLEGIAN

Lindsay Abbott and the field hockey team battled valiantly, but fell 4-1 to top ranked UConn this weekend in Storrs.



UM sweeps tourney in NJ
Kain nets 14 over 4 wins

By Matthew Bencal
Collegian Staff

The 12th-ranked Massachusetts men's water polo team brought the rackus this weekend in Princeton, New Jersey, sweeping the North/South Challenge. The Challenge pitted the Minutemen against Salem-Teikyo, Bucknell, George Washington, and Navy.

The Minutemen's weekend sweep began Friday afternoon when Salem-Teikyo jumped into the pool. Senior Pat Kain fired six shots to the back of the net to lead the Minutemen to a 16-8 matinee victory. Sophomores Mike Foley and Adam Moore chipped in with 3 goals apiece to help put the game away. Richard Huntley was strong in the net with 9 saves. UM owns an all-time record of 2-0 against Salem-Teikyo.

Bucknell posed a challenge for the Maroon and White Saturday morning, but there was no upset in the cards this weekend, the Minutemen defeating the Bison 9-5. Bucknell struggled on offense, as Huntley made 10 saves in net. Foley, Kain and Moore scored two goals each. Timmy Troupis, Antonio Maldonando, and Rich Slingluff came up with timely goals. Bucknell was ranked 18th by the Collegiate Water Polo Association (CWPA). With the win, UM is 13-1 all-time against Bucknell.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Pat Kain

The second game of the day consisted of another battle, this time against the George Washington Colonials. Kain continued his scoring assault by firing 3 missiles into the GW goal, helping UMass to an 8-6 victory. Moore and Foley once again proved to be a strong supporting cast with a pair of goals apiece. The Minuteman defense made Huntley's job easy, holding the Colonials to just 10 shots on net. UM had beaten the Colonials earlier this season, 9-6, but GW rebounded to play the Minutemen tight.

The North/South Challenge concluded early Sunday with a Minuteman win over the U.S. Naval Academy. Navy posed a threat to UM as the only team in the tournament that held a winning record against the Maroon and White. Kain ended the tournament with the hot streak he had started with, scoring another three goals. Moore added a trio of goals of his own and Troupis threw two bombs to the inside the net to result in a 13-6 victory. Huntley added seven more saves to his collection, and UM came closer to evening out the all-time record, 10-9, owned by Midshipmen.

When all was said and done, the Minutemen drove home with four more W's and had outscored their tournament opposition by a score of 46-25. The senior from Ambler, Pa. (Kain) returned to Amherst with 14 new goals to his credentials, and leads the team in points scored with a total of 41. Huntley was like a brick wall in net over the weekend, rejecting 30 shots over the four-game span.

The Minutemen will need another strong week of practice in order to defeat St. Francis, whom they meet for the third time this coming weekend. St. Francis beat UM in early September, 12-7, but the Minutemen avenged that loss two weeks later with a 10-8 win. The Minutemen will also oppose Queens and Iona at the CWPA Tournament taking place in Bronx, New York.

UM track finishes in middle of pack

By Trisha Turcotte
Collegian Correspondent

Last Saturday the University of Massachusetts women's cross country team ran at Van Cordtland Park in New York at the Meet of the Champions. There were 17 teams at this event including the Minutewomen who placed eighth with 242 points. The top winner of the afternoon was Brown University with 52 points, followed by Boston University in second place with 67 points. Virginia and Boston College both tied for third place with 88 points and Purdue came in fifth with 122 points.

Leading the way for UMass was senior Nicole Way. She finished with a time of 18:41, which placed her 30th overall in this event. According to Coach Julie LaFreniere, "Nicole was leading us in her best cross country race ever." This race put Way in fifth place overall for UMass athletes on this course. LaFreniere said, "This was quite an improvement on last years time."

Finishing second for the Minutewomen was senior Sally Hirsch, who finished with a time of 18:56, and 44th in the meet. In the first two meets of the season Hirsch had helped to pace UMass with two top-ten performances. These performances had led her to a second place and third place finish.

Following close behind Hirsch was sophomore Kristin Cisowski. Cisowski finished with a time of 18:57, which placed her 45th in this meet.

Coach LaFreniere commented on Hirsch and Cisowski's performances, "I would like to see Hirsch and Cisowski run within two to three seconds of Nicole Way instead of 15 seconds. If we could them within two to three seconds of each other then they would be running real tight."

Rounding out the scoring for UMass was senior Lizzie Sheptyck who came in fourth for the team and 54th overall with a time of 19:10, and Senior Sharon Tillotson who came in fifth for the Minutewomen and 69th overall with a time of 19:24.

Overall, coach LaFreniere was pleased with Sheptyck's performance. "Lizzie is doing great," she said. "She is right where she should be."

Coming in sixth place for the team was Elizabeth Mitchell with a time of 19:35 and seventh for UMass was Sarah Thoms with a time of 19:40.

Future strategies for the team include pack running and moving closer together. As coach LaFreniere says, "Sharon Tillotson needs to run with Lizzie. The team would be stronger. Also, the pack of three runners Henderson, Aldrich and Elmore need to move closer to Tillotson. After her, this group needs to move."

LaFreniere feels that this meet was a big improvement from Vermont. She said, "Now they are running more like a team, but there is room for improvement."

According to LaFreniere, "There are three weeks until the Atlantic 10 meet. The goal is to get their running quicker and together."

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Volume CXJ Issue 21 — Wednesday, October 6,1999

Concealed weapon discovered at Christian Revival in Mullins

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

Two separate incidents of assault, an individual discovered to be carrying a concealed weapon, a car accident and continued discoveries of graffiti were reported by the University of Massachusetts Police Department over Homecoming Weekend.

Police were summoned to the lobby of Greenough Residence Hall last Thursday night at about 11:00 p.m. to respond to a report of a possible domestic dispute. Officers, according to UMPD Chief of Police John Luippold, indentified 19-year-old James H. French, a sophomore Arts and Sciences major. After investigation, officers ascertained that an assault and battery had occurred.

"Officers noticed injuries to the victim, and determined that the victim was involved in a dating relationship with Mr. French," Luippold said. "He was arrested and charged with assault and battery under the Massachusetts domestic violence statute."

While Luippold said he was unsure if a restraining order was issued against French, he did say that an emergency restraining order can be issued by a judge if courts are not open.

"Those types of restraining orders are issued on weekends and last usually until the next available day of court," Luippold said. "On that day of court, the specifics of the restraining order can be modified, vacated, or it can be left as it was originally set by the judge."

The name of the victim was not released.

An individual associated with Teen Mania has been charged with possession of a concealed weapon. The Christian Revival was at the Mullins Center over the weekend.

"An individual reported seeing someone with a gun in their waistband and reported it to an officer," Luippold said. "Upon investigation, the officer discovered that a man was carrying a .357 Magnum in his belt."

While the man was licensed to be carrying the weapon, it is illegal to have any weapon on a college campus. His name is not being released because he is still under investigation, but Luippold did say he was a 33-year-old member of the Teen Mania stage crew. He is a resident of central Massachusetts.

"His local police department will be notified of the charge," Luippold said. The police department of a certain area is responsible for giving out concealed weapon permits.

Luippold also reported concern over repeated incidents of graffiti in Patterson Residence Hall.

"This would make five incidents of sexual graffiti in that dorm this year," Luippold said. Sexual graffiti is, according to Luippold, drawings or descriptions of sexual acts.

"I don't have any conclusions as of yet, but we've assigned an officer to look into what's going on," Luippold said.

Officers reported to another assault over the weekend. On Saturday, while UMass was losing to Hofstra, an unidentified victim got into a verbal altercation with another individual.

"The altercation happened as a result of a parking dispute," Luippold said. "The victim was pushed by the assailant after words were exchanged."

The victim, a 19-year-old UMass student, reported the incident to police.

"He felt she had parked poorly," Luippold said.

The assailant, a 32-year-old resident of eastern Massachusetts, has not been identified because he is still under investigation. He also received a trespass notice from UMass, meaning that if he should come back onto campus, he can be arrested for trespassing.

"He hasn't been charged yet, but he has been summoned to a show charge hearing," Luippold said. "We are seeking charges of assault and battery."

Luippold also mentioned that there have been no new leads in reports of indecent exposure and no new information about signs posted near the Morrill Greenhouse on September 27, 1999, about the death of former UMass student Adam Prentice.

NICOLE GOTTWALD / COLLEGIAN

Study time on his birthday.

Although it's Joseph's birthday, the philosophy major finds time to read on the campus center.

Orchard Hill parking issue to be discussed

After a month of parking overflow in Orchard Hill, an open forum has been planned to discuss future options for a proposed purple sticker lot in the area. The forum will be held this tomorrow at 7 p.m. in the Grayson classroom.

Parking Services Director Michael Brennan, Student Government Association President Jeff Howe and Orchard Hill Governor Jefferson Smith are hosting the meeting.

Meeting participants will discuss the possibility of adding 50 new purple lot spaces, a possible 24-hour parking enforcement policy, and the increased costs of parking stickers.

Howe said that the new lot would immediately impact students in Orchard Hill in a positive way.

Smith said he aims to slow down the immediacy of the parking lot and wants to get students involved in the decision.

"I just want to make it public of the considerations being made," Smith said. "If we can get a consensus by the students on what proposal is best, then it would certainly make it easier for Parking Services to execute their plans in Orchard Hill Area."

Brennan said he hopes that student feedback will aid in better management of parking in the future.

–Jason Trenkle

Companies taking more liberal arts majors on staff

By Richard T. Cooper
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – As recently as three or four years ago, if you spent your college career burrowing into English literature or Picasso's paintings and then went looking for a job in business, you might have had trouble getting the time of day – let alone an appointment – with many top corporate recruiters.

Headhunters wanted to talk to business and economics majors, or techno-wonks from applied sciences departments. Liberal arts? Not the flavor of the day.

No longer.

In the super-tight job market of today's expanding economy, even companies on the cutting edges of technology cannot sign up enough computer science or electrical engineering or business majors to meet their needs. As a result, more businesses have broadened their recruiting efforts to include once-shunned liberal arts students. Latin majors are

Turn to STAFF, page 2

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

High Scorer

In college not only can one excel at academics, but video games as well.

Test Ban Treaty a Clinton priority

By Charles Babington
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – President Clinton suddenly given a make-or-break chance to achieve one of his administration's top priorities, Monday launched a full-scale campaign to ratify the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty in the face of extensive Senate opposition.

Clinton, who had dispatched the vice president and top aides to speak for the treaty over the weekend, personally took charge of the lobbying effort Monday, raising the stakes for an issue likely to be recorded as a major accomplishment or keen defeat for his presidency. He spoke to reporters assembled his national security team and said he will speak individually and in small groups with senators whose minds he needs to change if he is to gather the two-thirds majority needed when the treaty comes up for a ratification vote next week.

"This is very important to protecting our people from the danger of nuclear war," the president said at the White House. "It would be, in my judgment, a grave mistake not to ratify the treaty."

Much is riding on the outcome of next week's vote in both political and military circles. Clinton like previous presidents, argues that the treaty would preserve U.S. nuclear superiority and prevent proliferation in other countries. A Senate rejection would mark the first defeat of a major treaty proposal since the end of World War II, signaling a new willingness by Congress to challenge the executive branch on arms control matters in the wake of the Cold War's thaw.

"A victory will be an important part of [Clinton's] positive legacy; a defeat will be an important part of its negative legacy," said John Isaacs, president of the Council for a Livable World, a prominent advocate of the treaty. "It's a long shot."

Clinton acknowledged that he lacks enough votes in the Senate right now. While their leaders say all 45 Democrats support the treaty, only seven Republicans have come out in favor, leaving the White House 15 votes shy of the number it needs.

The White House scored a small tactical victory Monday when Senate Foreign Relations Committee Chairman Jesse Helms, R-N.C. – who had long refused to hold hearings on the treaty – reluctantly scheduled one for tomorrow, with

Turn to TREATY page 2

MCI-Sprint Monday merger largest in U.S. history

By Peter S. Goodman
Washington Post

The bidding war for one of the last major telecommunications catches left on the market came to an end Monday night, with MCI WorldCom Inc., claiming Sprint Corp. for more than $100 billion, despite a last-minute competitive offer from rival BellSouth Corp., according to sources with knowledge of the negotiations.

Sprint board members voted to accept the MCI WorldCom offer Monday afternoon and the company announced the offer yesterday in New York, while printing fact sheets for its managers on the future with MCI, a source inside one of the companies said. But the source cautioned that Sprint also made provisions to cancel the news conference should BellSouth pile more money on the table.

Wall Street buzzed with rumors that Deutsche Telekom AG, a 10 percent owner of Sprint, would deliver a bid of its own, but such a prospect appeared unlikely Monday night as Sprint accepted MCI's terms.

Because so many mergers have run through the telecommunications industry in recent months, deals that once would have seemed enormous now register like business as usual. MCI's purchase of Sprint, though, would tower above the field, amounting to the largest merger in U.S. history. The resulting company would be broad by any measure, able to sell local, long-distance and wireless service along with high-speed Internet access. The merger would cement MCI WorldCom's position among the handful of large players – such as AT&T Corp., Bell Atlantic Corp. and British Telecommunications PLC – expected to dominate global communications in the future by offering a full array of services in a "bundle" to businesses and consumers.

A pending merger between local phone powers SBC Communications Inc. and Ameritech Corp., whose approval by the Federal Communications Commission is expected this week, would amount to the latest entry in the ranks of the "supercarriers."

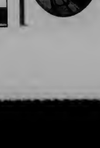
"Telecom is about scale, scale, scale," said Scott Cleland, an analyst with Legg Mason Precursor Group. "It's no longer a national playing field. It's a global playing field... The game is 'Clash of the Titans.'"

But while many analysts gushed about the consumer choices that would flow from supercarriers competing across the spectrum, skeptical consumer advocates suggested that such benefits would accrue only for the richest customers, who spend the most as they ship fat computer files across oceans while downloading stock quotes and electronic mail off cellular phones.

"It undermines competition," said Gene Kimmelman, of the Consumers Union in Washington. "There will be an enormous fight for the high-end customer, but the majority of the public will have little or no choice, with prices spiraling upward."

Analysts have come to expect that, in telecommunications mergers, the biggest pile of dollars claims the goods. But Sprint board members, who sources said gathered Monday in New York and approved MCI's offer, may have calculated that MCI stock has greater long-term value than a cash-stock combination with a higher immediate value from BellSouth – a reflection of MCI's highflying growth prospects.

MCI WorldCom has leveraged those prospects aggressively in building itself into a global power. Chief executive Bernard J. Ebbers has swallowed up more than 50 companies as he has expanded from his roots as a marginal long-distance competitor. "WorldCom has finally digested MCI and is ready for its next meal," Cleland said.



MCI is already the nation's second largest long-distance carrier. Sprint is third. Their combination would control about 30 percent of the U.S. long-distance market, second to AT&T, which has 48 percent of the market. And Sprint would fill a vexing gap in MCI's service offerings – wireless. Sprint PCS, an all-digital national cellular network, is growing furiously.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 60 LOW: 36	HIGH: 54 LOW: 34	HIGH: 56 LOW: 32

SOURCE: WWLP.COM

Drug Decisions

Supreme Court Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg is only one of the people responsible for deciding teachers may be tested for drug use. Read more about the court's decisions and deliberations inside.

PAGE 3

Ready to "Rock" UMass

The Bulry Bear Comedy Tour, featuring work by Chris Rock, rolls into Mahar tonight

PAGE 5

Becca Becca bo Becca

Rebecca Hasson had a career night, helping the UM volleyball team shoo Brown out of its Cage, defeating the Bears three games to none.

PAGE 10

Arts & Living 6
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

NICOLE HOTTARD / COLLEGIAN

Common Threads

Irem Cahkusu, and Paula Hodecker admire the works of three Conneticut women fiber artists at the Student Union gallery.

Supreme Court upholds drug testing for teachers

By David G. Savage
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – The Supreme Court cleared the way Monday for mandatory drug testing for school teachers, rejecting a constitutional challenge that called the program "an exercise in symbolism."

The justices turned down an appeal filed by the National Education Association, the largest teachers' union, which argued that educators should not be forced to undergo urine testing unless there is evidence of a drug problem on the faculty.

The court's action in the school case came on the opening day of its new term. It also refused to strike down a state tax credit for contributions to private and parochial schools and heard arguments in a death penalty case.

The day was highlighted by the return of Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, who had undergone surgery for colon cancer a little more than two weeks ago. But at 10 a.m. Monday, she emerged with her fellow justices and smiled broadly before the assembled lawyers.

And despite her ordeal, Ginsburg seemed in midseason form. She asked a dozen questions during the first hour of argument.

More than 1,600 appeals were turned down, most of them from prison inmates.

Several of them tested areas where the law is in flux, including government-mandated drug screenings.

A decade ago, the high court first upheld forced urine testing in cases involving train engineers and gun-carrying federal agents. These workers would pose a safety risk to the public if they were under the influence of drugs, the court decided. Therefore, mandatory testing was not an "unreasonable search" prohibited by the Fourth Amendment, the justices held on a 5-4 vote.

More recently, however, lower courts have extended the "safety" rationale to include for example, white-collar budget analysts in Washington, and now school teachers.

School board members in Knox County, Tenn., said that they had no evidence of drug use among their teachers but wanted to take a "firm stand" against drugs.

In 1984, the board voted to require urine screening for all new teachers. In addition, school employees who showed signs of impairment also could be forced to submit to a test. However, a federal judge blocked the policy from taking effect. Public safety was not at stake, the judge said.

But last year, a U.S. appeals court overturned that decision and allowed school officials to implement a testing program. "The public interest [in a drug-free school staff] clearly outweighs the privacy interest of the teacher not to be tested," the appeals court said.

Richard T. Beeler, a school board lawyer in Knoxville, said that he expects other districts to copy the policy now that it has been cleared by the high court (Knox County Education Association vs. Knox County Board of Education).

"We are the case that everyone has been watching," he said. In the first year, 10 applicants for teaching jobs were rejected because they tested positive for an illegal substance. "If they are that stupid, we don't want them teaching in our schools," he added.

The NEA's general counsel, Robert Chanin, said that he feared other districts would see the court's action "as a green light to go ahead with drug testing. In our view, it is a real stretch of the imagination to say teachers are like the guys running locomotives."

Meanwhile, in a second school case, the justices turned down a First Amendment attack on an unusual Arizona law that gives taxpayers a credit of as much as $500 for charitable donations to private and parochial schools.

Critics said that the state was funneling money to religious schools, in violation of the Constitution's ban on laws "respecting an establishment of religion." But the state supreme court upheld the law on a 3-2 vote last year and the justices refused to hear a further challenge (Kotterman vs. Killian).

Lawyers on both sides of the case downplayed the Arizona case as a First Amendment test because the Arizona law was unusual. The court is likely to show more interest in a voucher case where public money directly subsidizes religious schools, they said.

Inquiry ordered after horrific train collision

By Bill Glauber
Baltimore Sun

LONDON – British authorities ordered a public inquiry into yesterday's fiery collision of two packed trains that killed 26 people, injured more than 160 and shook an already beleaguered railroad industry.

Mangled and charred cars were overturned and a plume of black smoke hovered over the scene as the morning rush hour was transformed into a life-and-death struggle with rescuers attempting to free passengers.

A temporary morgue was established at the accident site, two miles west of London's Paddington Station.

Last night, as workers continued their search for bodies, the country was trying to come to terms with yet another horrifying crash on one of the country's busier routes, the main western approach to the capital.

It was the second fatal accident in two years along the same stretch of tracks to strike Great Western Trains. In September 1997, seven people were killed in a collision between a passenger train and a freight train, a crash that is still being unraveled in public hearings, though Great Western has been fined almost $2.5 million for "dereliction of duty."

After the crash, rail chiefs closed Paddington, which serves 85,000 riders daily, including travelers on a new high-speed service to Heathrow Airport.

Authorities said it was too early to determine the cause of the accident, which took place at 8:11 a.m. local time and involved a high-speed Great Western train heading eastbound and a westbound Thames Trains two-car local. More than 300 passengers were aboard the trains, authorities said.

The collision came in a junction area in the Ladbroke Grove section of London, apparently as the westbound local train was attempting to change tracks. Some unconfirmed reports said the Thames train went through a red light.

LEAH LANCI / COLLEGIAN

Street Artist

Local artist Bob Klem publically displays his paintings in Amherst center.

CA prison guards on trial for aiding in inmate's rape

By Mark Arax
Los Angeles Times

HANFORD, Calif. – The criminal trial of four Corcoran State Prison officers accused of setting up the 1993 rape of inmate Eddie Dillard opened Monday with state prosecutors alleging that the entire incident – from a rape to a cover-up – was a "play cast in hell" with no angels.

State Deputy Attorney General Vernon Pierson, in his opening statement, said the four veteran officers had every reason to believe that Dillard would be raped when they transferred him into the cell of Corcoran's so-called "Booty Bandit," a burly inmate with a history of sexual assaults. Dillard, a problem inmate who had assaulted a female guard at another prison, was transferred into the cell of inmate Wayne Robertson to "teach him how to do his time," Pierson told a Kings County Superior Court jury.

Not only was Robertson listed as Dillard's enemy in official prison documents, Pierson said, but the 120-pound Dillard pleaded with the officers that he would be in danger of sexual assault if put in Robertson's cell.

"None of the officers had any intentions of checking Dillard's claims," Pierson said. "If they merely could have looked inside his file they would have seen that they were in fact documented enemies."

Defense attorneys, in their own opening statements, questioned whether a rape ever occurred and added that if Dillard was indeed assaulted, the officers had no motive to have set it up.

■ staff

continued from page 1

hot. Career placement advisers are thrilled.

"In economic terms, you have a supply-and-demand situation. There's more demand than we have supply," said James McBride, director of career planning and placement at the University of Virginia in Charlottesville. When corporate recruiters bump against the shortage, "their first fall-back is business or commerce majors but the next fall-back is liberal arts."

When Arthur Andersen, the consulting company, took 15 graduates from UVA's College of Arts and Sciences this year, for example, there were economics and science majors among them, as well as students from art history, government and foreign relations.

To the surprise of some, such graduates are proving successful. "Our kids are trainable. They have the soft skills, the transferable skills," said Judy Fisher, director of the career development center at Occidental College near Los Angeles. "They are looking beyond content skills to the broader liberal arts skills – to writing, critical thinking and problem-solving."

Uneasy as companies may have been when they first ventured into liberal arts recruiting, McBride said, "Now, they are beginning to say, 'Wow, we've found a pot of gold at the end of this rainbow.'"

Matt Birnbaum, who directs the career center at Colorado College in Colorado Springs, said corporate recruiters have found that such "untapped majors" as biology, psychology, physics and chemistry develop qualities they need in business. Eleisha Abrams, for instance, graduated from Ursinus College, a small liberal arts school in Collegeville, Pa., near Philadelphia, last May with a major in politics. "I really wanted to do everything," in college, she said, so she began her higher education majoring in English, then switched to French before settling into political science.

Still, before graduation rolled around, she had nearly a dozen job offers in fields ranging from public relations to financial services and marketing. She took a job with the Vanguard Group investment company and now helps employees of the firm's corporate clients manage their 401(k) retirement accounts.

Though she received six weeks of training and help getting her license as an investment adviser, Abrams said that it is the communications skills she learned in her liberal arts classes that are crucial now. "It's managing words well," she said. "The investment community is full of a lot of crazy words and I have to bring them down to our participants' level."

Among Vanguard's new hires, her background seems typical. In her training class of 16, only three were business majors. The rest had majored in English, psychology and similar fields. There was even one elementary education major.

The pressures forcing corporations to cast a wider net are starkly revealed in national statistics on what Americans are studying in college. For the vast majority of young people earning bachelor's degrees now, it is not computer science or engineering or the other high-tech fields.

■ treaty

continued from page 1

Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright among the witnesses. The Armed Services Committee opened hearings yesterday.

But Helms and other Senate GOP leaders made clear their antagonism toward the treaty, accusing the administration of disinformation and arguing that the pact would prevent the United States from modernizing its nuclear arsenal.

"The Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty is dangerous and should be defeated when it comes to a vote in the Senate next Tuesday," said Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss.

The 1996 treaty has been signed by 154 nations, including the United States, but the U.S. Senate never ratified it. Only 47 nations have ratified it. Of the 44 nations that are capable of making nuclear weapons and whose approval is needed for the treaty to take effect, only 23 have ratified.

Russia and China are among those who haven't ratified it, and the White House said Monday they are looking to the United States for leadership on the matter.

Treaty proponents argue that the pact would lock in the nuclear superiority of the United States, which has the world's largest nuclear arsenal and stopped testing in 1992, in part because it can simulate tests with powerful computers. Opponents say the treaty would bar the United States from updating its nuclear weaponry while enemy states might secretly test weapons undetected.

The University of Massachusetts'

Something Every Friday

presents

"Jabali Africa"

"Jabali Africa" presents the music and dance of Kenya. This 4-person group, all former members of the Kenyan National Theater Troupe, have toured Europe and the United States and now come to the Bowker Stage.

Friday October 8, 1999
Bowker Auditorium, 8pm...FREE

The FREE movie "American Pie" will be shown in the Bluewall Cafe at 10 pm. The Movie will be shown again on Monday Oct. 11 in the Campus Center auditorium at 8 pm.

Visit us on the web:
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

This program is made possible by a grant from the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, UMass Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

TODAY

Isenberg School of Management

Undergraduate Placement Office

presents

SOM

CAREER DAY

1999

All Students Are Cordially Invited to Attend!!

Date: Wednesday, October 6, 1999
Place: Mullins Center
Time: Begins at 12:00 P.M. Ends at 5:00 P.M.

WHO WILL BE THERE?

•You (we hope) •About 1400 students •Eighty or more firms attending firms:

Advest
Team Aerotek
Alexander, Aronson & Finning
American Express Financial Advisors
Ames
Andersen Consulting
Arthur Andersen
Aspen Square Management
BDO Seidman
Black & Decker
Canby & Maloney & Co., Inc.
Cantor Fitzgerald
Carlin, Charron & Rosen
Carter Wallace
Chubb
Cigna Corporation
Cintas Corporation
CSC Consulting
DataViz
Deloitte & Touche
Edelstein & Co.
(EDS) Electronic Data Systems
EMC Corporation
Enterprise Rent-A-Car
ERC Wealth Products
Ernst & Young
Ferguson Enterprises
FDIC
First Data Investor Services Group
Feeley &Driscoll
Fidelity Investments
Filene's
Ford Motor Credit Corporation
Frito-Lay
General Electric
Great West Employee Benefits
Hannaford Brothers Co.
Hershey Foods
IBM
International Paper
Investors Bank & Trust
J.C. Penney Stores
J.H. Cohn
John Hancock
KPMG Peat Marwick
Liberty Mutual
MassMutual
MBNA New England
Northeast Utilities
Northwestern Mutual Life
O'Connor & Drew
Offtech
Olde Discount Stockbrokers
Osco Drug
Partners First
Pearson Education
Pepsi Bottling Company
Pratt & Whitney
Pricewaterhouse Coopers
Procter & Gamble
Putnam Investments
Raytheon
Reed Exhibition Companies
Reznick, Fedder & Silverman
Sands Brothers
Sentry Insurance
7-Eleven
Sherwin-Williams
Solutia
Staples
State Street Corporation Process Engineering
State Street Bank (Staffing)
Stop & Shop Co.
Sun Life
Teradyne
TJX Companies
Toys "R" Us
Travelers
Walgreens
Wallace, Inc.
Wolf & Co.

There will be a free shuttle leaving Haigis Mall for the Mullins Center every 20 minutes from Noon to 5:00 P.M.

Some helpful hints: (1) Bring a supply of resumes with you to leave with company representatives you meet. (2) Dress appropriately if possible. This means tie and jacket for men; dress or blouse and skirt for women. (3) Speak with corporate representatives of interest to you and ask for a business card, if available

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

Wednesday, October 6, 1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Segregated diversity: the UMass reality

"Blah blah blah, look at us, we're the University of Massachusetts and we're so unbelievably diverse it is just amazing."

That's the push anyway. That's the ...an, the statement, the general sort of advertisement ...t UMass likes to tell outsiders.

"We've got students from here and we've got students ...m there, and we've got students from everywhere, and ...s's why this campus is so diverse."

And that, technically, is true. We've got students of ...kinds of colors from all kinds of places who enjoy all ...rts of things. We've got Asian students and African ...dents and Anglo students and gay students and male ...dents and female students and black students and ...ite students and yellow students, and all of them can ...seen walking around the campus.

But for UMass to be talking this awfully big talk ...out "we're so diverse," and "we're so open," without ...tting up any of the necessary walk is not acceptable. ...is campus isn't diverse, and in fact it is segregated, not ...the administration, but by the students.

Sam Wilkinson

Classes.

That's what the students of this ...iversity share. Class time.

What's so hard about attending ...sses together? A student walks into the classroom, sits ...own, listens to the lecture, maybe talks in the discus...on, gets up and walks right on out the door. Nobody ...s to get to know anybody else. Nobody has to endure ...body else. Students just have to sit there.

UMass can't claim that this is a diverse campus ...ecause a whole lot of students who come from wildly ...fferent backgrounds attend classes together. It takes a ...r more than shared classes to create diversity. Students ...ed to eat together to make a campus diverse. Students ...ed to hang out together to make a campus diverse. ...tudents need to live together to make a campus diverse.

Currently, students don't do those things. After all, ...ost students get to be friends with at least a person ...on their floor, and most floors have students on them ...that are exactly the same.

"Blah blah blah, that is diversity. Allowing students of ...fferent backgrounds to live only with other students ...om similar backgrounds creates diversity."

No, it doesn't create anything like diversity. It does ...low for students to choose to segregate themselves. ...hat is why most floors in residential halls are as homo...eneous as can be and all residential areas of this campus ...n be stereotyped so easily.

The students in Sylvan are anti-social.

The students in Central are hippies.

The students in Southwest are the popular partying ...ids from high school.

The students in Northeast are Asian or gay or both.

The students at Orchard Hill are the smart ones.

Of course, within every stereotype, there are those ...at don't fit, but how is that diversity? How is it possible ...have diversity when a stereotype is so readily available ...every area of housing on campus?

It isn't possible to have diversity when everything is ...segregated, whether the case is that segregation is forced on students by the University of Massachusetts, which it isn't, or chosen by the students, which it is. It isn't possible to have diversity when the University offers everyone a way to stay apart from those who are different.

What this University has to do, so it can talk its talk, is walk the proverbial walk and force students from all kinds of different backgrounds to live together.

No more special programs for Asians.

No more special programs for smart kids.

No more special programs for Native Americans.

No more special programs for anybody.

Special programs encourage people to stay apart, and that is exactly what this University supposedly doesn't want. And if this University is so concerned with diversity, there's going to have to be some attrition.

That means students living with students who are different.

Students living with students who do things differently, speak differently, act differently, eat different foods, see different movies, go to different churches, and students who are, in general, different.

But beyond the difference, students are going to have to be housed at random. Nobody signs up to live in Orchard Hill, or Sylvan, or Central. Students are assigned.

It's going to be hard. Students won't be able to hand pick a roommate more or less to their tastes, nor will they be able to handpick where they live.

That would be diversity.

That would create the incredible world that UMass claims to have.

That would force all kinds of students to deal with all kinds of other students.

"We strive for diversity."

Why would a smart kid choose to live with those hippies down in Central? Why would a kid who hates to party choose to live in Southwest?

Taking a hands-off approach to supposed diversity is easy.

Letting students live with similar students is easy.

Letting students pick living areas where they can be with specific types of other students is easy.

After all, then the students are happy. They get to live with whom they want to and see, more or less, the people that they want to. That, in turn, means that students live isolated lives, living with students similar to them. And that isn't the diversity that this campus claims to have. That is allowing students to choose to segregate themselves.

Diversity, on the other hand, is hard.

Diversity is challenging, especially for the students involved who can't pick who they want to live with or where they want to live.

But if UMass wants to be so committed to diversity, UMass is going to have to start taking decisions away from students to create the diverse atmosphere that they strive for.

But right now? They're just talking.

Sam Wilkinson is a UMass student.

Puppet Nations

I went to the mall two weekends ago and stayed there for six hours. I've had more fun on the receiving end of a fluoride treatment at the dentist.

I've reached the point where I don't really like shopping all that much. I owe 50 percent of this to genetics because my dad hates to shop, and I owe the other 50 percent of my dislike to the college environment, which has robbed me of my money and inculcated in me the feeling that major corporations are controlling my whole life. I hate to think of myself as a puppet on a string.

Alexis Pushkar

What lies behind the control corporations wield over our daily lives is the basic human tendency to be materialistic. Or perhaps the human tendency is that we are competitive, and material objects are the way we show that we have won the competition. In any case, as Americans, we are mired in a society that is defined entirely by material objects. This would not be so bad if our rapacious appetites were not completely out of control at this point in human evolution. We spend most of the hours in our weeks, and most of the years of our lives working. We work to make the money that we use to buy things, which is how we use the rest of our days and weeks.

Production and acquisition of material objects appear to be one of the things that distinguish humans from say, tomato plants or polecats or blue green algae. Since leaving the trees, the primate line that led to humans has developed the facility to manipulate the environment in (as far as we know) an unprecedented way. We have taken the raw materials on and in the earth and turned them into amazing objects of beauty and practicality and entertainment and sheer pointlessness. Human evolution led to the development of civilizations, which became defined by the objects that people made such as pyramids, pottery, tapestries, shoes, hair brushes, sculptures and paintings.

However, humans make billions of products that are not absolutely necessary for existence and are encouraged to consume these products in greater numbers. Houses have multiple televisions and VCRs. People have 20 or 30 pairs of shoes and hundreds of CDs and 50 shades of nail polish and 40 different kinds of power tools.

And that's where my distaste for malls enters the picture, followed closely behind by my distaste for the advertising industry, which spends a mind-boggling and sickening amount of money to convince us that we must consume and consume and consume some more. We are told we need to own things that are bigger, better, faster, sexier, smarter, sleeker, and, above all, newer.

Malls and television commercials remind me of how our society exists, in the back pocket of businesses. Businesses in a free market system are only concerned with profits. A large profit equals a lot of money which equals winning the competition against other businesses and that means success. Success in our society is measured by money. There are some people who are recognized for other reasons, but they are overshadowed by the preponderance of individuals who are recognized for monetary success alone. Think about the brilliant professor who changed your life and made you a better person and think of Harrison Ford. Who is more successful according to the standards set by our society?

Although I can imagine an America in which success is not defined this way, I'm not sure if my vision could exist because of the limitations placed on us by human nature. What is apparent to me is that this country was founded on the very ideals that allow capitalism to have free reign. The government was set up, in part, to protect the rights of property owners and was founded on the principle that the rights of individuals are important. The United States was founded on principles that condone people's selfish desires.

The idea of selfishness provokes a negative reaction from some people. For example, Christian religions profess the idea that selfishness is wrong, that it is important to think of others before the self. In contrast, Ayn Rand, the twentieth century novelist, playwright and philosopher, was able to articulate the pitfalls of believing that selfishness is wrong and that each person should exist only to serve others. She portrayed her ideal human as inherently selfish, and she believed characters such as Howard Roark in The Fountainhead were working for the good of everyone only if they were working for themselves as individuals. Because America allowed individuals to pursue their own ends in a free market capitalist economy, America was "her model of what a nation of free men could be."

> "We are told we need to own things that are bigger, better, faster, sexier, smarter, sleeker, and, above all, newer."

Selfishness has a base in our biology because we are all hardwired to survive. For human beings, sometimes this means being completely selfish and serving our own interests, and at other times this means working in a group for the benefit of all. In this sense, we are capable of living under both altruism (communism and socialism) and selfishness (a free market democracy).

Many Americans believe that communism and socialism are evil because we were taught to believe that. The failure of communism in many places in the world during the last century is proof for many that it was wrong and a mistake. However, the question remains to be answered: are we really so much better off in the long run under capitalism?

The lifestyle of many Americans is comfortable, especially compared with the underdeveloped and developing world. We have striven to do away with most forms of social oppression. Our freedoms are written out in a Bill of Rights. We have a vast country with many advantages and opportunities.

And yet somehow we still have ended up as slaves to the almighty dollar, controlled by businesses that exercise a level of control over us that is moving closer to that of many tyrannical rulers. Businesses have significant control over our government because they have vast monetary resources, which they can use for lobbying. In addition, businesses compose the economy, and they wield considerable power over the lives of many American workers. They control what we see on television, the content and the commercials, both of which impact how we think. They control what we buy by providing us with products they have determined we need. Furthermore, they have provided us with a definition of success that does not fulfill people. Working hard fulfills people, but most people work to make money and be successful according to the standard of wealth attained, not work accomplished. Many of these people might be happier if they could work less and spend more time with families and friends.

I don't think that we should scrap the system that we have and start over, because that's just not feasible. I do think that the general population needs to think more critically about how we live and what this says about our civilization. The free market system which Ayn Rand believes so strongly in is consolidating power in the hands of a smaller and smaller number of people, but because this phenomenon is veiled behind ideals of liberty and individualism which we are taught are good, people are not questioning this as much as they should be. Instead of thinking critically about the country we live in, people seem to have fallen into a complacent lifestyle where the acquisition of material goods consumes their lives.

When the aliens land on Earth and excavate the remains of twentieth century American civilization, they are going to find malls, televisions and a whole lot of junk. Can you imagine what they might think?

Alexis Pushkar is a Collegian columnist.

Pimpin', UMass style

It is 8 a.m. on Saturday morning. It is raining and cold and I am cozy under my sheets dreaming of ... eh, that's a little too personal. Anyway, the phone rings in that distinctive double ring style that denotes an off-campus call. Thinking it is my mom calling to tell me something important that couldn't wait until 11 or 12 when I actually wake up, I spring out of bed. Unable to form sentences in my half-sleep, I grunt into the phone.

"Good morning. May I please speak to Anthou Fraschlaska?" says the strange voice, butchering my last name.

I grunt again, expecting the worst.

"This is Ice calling on behalf of GTE Visa. How are you this morning, sir?" says the overhappy caller.

Realizing during the long pause that he is supposed to wait until hell freezes over, or the universe realizes how ugly that new FAC lobby is, for me to answer the question, I reluctantly decide to answer. "Tired." I respond, demonstrating my collegiate mastery of the English language. I am hoping at this point that he realizes how much of a nuisance he is and that he has some inkling of morality or that he feels bad for disrupting my precious sleep.

"Sir, can I interest you in a Visa card?" No moralin here. Then I remember that he is a telemarketer. His world is a four by four cubicle with a headset and a paper in front of him. He probably makes a commission on every sucker he signs up.

"I already own a Visa card," I reply. What kind of company is Visa anyway? Don't they have records? They sure can keep track of all the purchases I make with their card, but they don't know I already have one? Don't they know that I use their card? Why do I need another one?

"But sir," he continues, talking at a speed that I thought was only reserved for people speaking Spanish on those stupid tapes you listen to in high school, he pretended not to hear my anger or comprehend my words. "Today is your lucky day, our GTE Visa is being offered at a special no annual fee and it is accepted worldwide, offering members unprecedented benefits, and now as part of our new exclusive partnership with American Airlines I can offer you up to 20 percent off on round trip airline tickets to any destination in the Continental United States and Canada if you sign up for a GTE Visa card today and your application is approved by our qualified trained staff ..."

"Do you understand English?" I interrupt. "Or do you just speak it? I already told you I have a Visa card. I don't want another one. I have absolutely no use for another one. I don't care about the benefits or American Airlines or anything else you could possibly say. I just want to sleep. Don't ever, ever call me again."

Ice, however, was resilient. I give him credit for that. What he lacked in morality and human compassion he made up for in persistence. He increased his pace to match my anger. "Our special pre-approved credit line..."

That was it. "Ice, I said no. Leave me alone." I hung up the phone. Now, I was angry and unable to sleep. It hadn't been a complete waste, though, this time I had meant business. I taught those telephone solicitors a lesson they wouldn't soon forget.

Monday morning, 8:05 a.m. The phone rings twice, signaling an off- campus call. My roommate takes his turn and grudgingly answers the disruptive phone.

"No I don't want another Visa card. I would rather practice autoerotophilia with my parents." (Look that one up, it's a doozy). Slight pause. "NO. I don't want a GTF Visa card."

He hung up the phone and crawled back into bed. Soon he was snoring loudly like before.

These two events got me thinking. Was this a strange coincidence? Was GTE contacting us randomly? No. They must have gotten our numbers from an outside force. It was a conspiracy perpetuated by some party that had obviously sold us out to GTE. An entity that would sacrifice its own reputation for a little extra cash. Who would do that? Who would want to pimp us out to a credit card company? Then it all became clear.

It is bad enough that we get calls, but I get more junk mail from those same companies than I get real mail. It comes with that code on it that all other University mailings say. I am not known as Matt Frascella to this school. I am known as Matt Frascella 01. My roommate is 02 on all our University mailings. Something, call it a gut feeling, tells me that those wonderful mailings aren't due to GTE's crack research that hunts down potential debtors. Ice might be good, but he isn't that good.

Once these companies get your name they haunt you forever. My friend said he was at home this summer when Discover contacted him about signing up for a card. Discover, the card that calls you back. I can see it now. I'll be 45 and GTE will still be calling me and mailing me exclusive offers. Enough is enough already. My bet is that the school gets a certain kick back from these credit card companies.

My advice is to stop this nonsense. If UMass wanted to pimp they should have done it the old fashioned way: solicited its best looking boys and girls. There are plenty of available men and women on this campus who could use a little extra cash. I am really good friends with a kid who would be a great male prostitute. The Castaway Lounge, which advertises in this fine periodical, is frequently looking for broke good looking girls. If UMass pimped its attractive students, the University would be way more profitable. I could care less about GTE. Forget them. With added funds we might even be able to afford housing for all our students. Pimping is proven and has a track record like no other. I also think it would be much more lucrative. We could adorn the whole campus in ugly black fences and could afford to give DC workers hairnets.

So ladies and gentlemen, if you want to stop those annoying early morning credit card calls, then do your part and help UMass raise some money. Maybe the Classics department could even give you three credits for studying the world's oldest profession.

Matt Frascella is a Collegian columnist.

"Bear"-ing fear

I am proud to say that over the three years I've attended UMass, I have taken many risks and laughed in the face of danger, but I am ashamed of the fact that, like others, I am afraid when I walk out of my room.

Having lived in Maine for the past 20 years of my life and being surrounded by trees, moose, deer and tree-hugging bears, the issue of safety never really occurred to me. Of course, the only thing I really had to worry about were my younger brother and sister who, jumping out and attacking me from obscure corners of my house, would tackle me like a rag doll. I always cared for my brother and sister because they knocked a lot of sense into me.

Jason Trenkle

If I could tackle all the students on this campus and knock some sense into their heads, I wouldn't hesitate to do so because, I don't know about you, but I would rather have someone playfully tackle me than be attacked during the night on campus by some unknown assailant.

As a 5'11" male with the build of Kevin Spacey, I am willing to admit that I am intimidated when walking through campus alone at night. I don't believe as students that we should be worrying about this when we decide to step out of our rooms.

But the safety of this campus remains a large concern for many, and it seems that absolutely no one is doing anything to address this issue.

Last night, I was traveling around my dorm when I spotted a tall male outside the fire exit door of my building. At first I figured he was waiting for someone, but then I realized that he was attempting to get into the building. I figured security had already alarmed these doors, but to my dismay, a student coming down the back stairwell opened the door for this stranger. And this stranger could very easily have entered into someone's room and attacked them.

This same incident occurred to a female student at Boston University. Someone was ignorant enough to leave a basement window wide open, enabling the rapist to walk right into the bathroom and attack her.

People need to wake up to the reality of what they're doing when they decide to open a door for someone they don't know. And this kind of thing is continuous. Last week, I was talking to a receptionist when a group of girls from Smith were outside my building screaming to be let in. However, the group of nine girls did not have anyone to sign them in. Instead, they seductively attempted to convince a "testosterone inhibited" male to sign them in. Right before my eyes, I watched as he and his roommate signed in these nine Smith girls, all of whom they did not know.

When you sign someone into your building that you don't know, you are signing your life away, because if that "stranger" commits a crime, you are the one that's going to be convicted.

Last year, a similar incident occurred while I was on duty, in my job as a Resident Assistant (RA). A resident from one of my buildings signed in a group of guys from another college. They spent some time in her room, but then the girl let the other guys roam the building unattended. Big mistake: these male friends, who this girl thought she could trust, walked into another woman's dorm room, and sexually assaulted her.

But what amazed me about this situation was that a small group of students wouldn't put up with this kind of behavior. They observed the incident and as the assailants attempted to leave the building, they cornered them at the entrance until the UMPD showed up. I believe these are the kind of students that we need here on our campus. I congratulate this group of people – and they know who they are – because never in my life have I seen such support in an incident of this sort.

So then, why isn't anything else being done? Continually, I witness people that walk into residence halls without even observing the person sitting behind the desk marked "Security." And more times than not, they will walk right into the elevator, and there is nothing security or anyone else can do to prevent it. So, maybe the University should hire a group of "bouncers" to patrol the entrances of each building, awaiting any "wrong-doers" attempting to get in. Or perhaps the solution starts right at our front doors, and people should be aware of who they let into their buildings.

Parking is another problem that is causing a safety concern. Last week, a girl on my floor had to park in the yellow lot at the Mather Career Center because all the purple lot spaces were filled. She called Parking Services because she was upset about not having a place to park, and according to her, Parking Services told her that she could just park in the yellow lot and walk back to Orchard Hill. I think this is absolutely ridiculous that a single female is forced to walk from the Career Center to Orchard Hill at night, all because there isn't a place to park in a lot for which she paid almost $60. There isn't any price in the world that is equivalent to a student's life and safety, and when I heard about this, I was beyond upset.

There is no doubt that this campus needs to focus its attention on the safety of its students, instead of spending so much time, money and effort on projects like the renovation of the library fence.

In about a week, the annual UMass Safety Walk will take place on campus and no price can be placed on the value of students' opinions and efforts in making this campus a much safer place. Besides, I would much rather stare down the faces of 10 Maine grizzly black bears than stare in the face of total ignorance.

Jason Trenkle is a Collegian Staff member.

Bald head, big bra

Hopefully you all have heard about the country's newest favorite political faux pas (that's a French word meaning mistakes made by bald headed ex-wrestlers): the lovely interview of Jesse "the unable to use his mind" Ventura. Now, if running for political office, as well as trying to cut funding for public radio, as well as his very existence, wasn't insulting enough to the American people, Jesse has gone out of his way to insult a whole bunch of other people by way of a Playboy Magazine interview.

Chris Collins

For example, he complained about fat people, and he claimed that those pilots involved in the Tailhook scandal were not responsible because the training they received from the government made them act that way. Overall, he came off looking like bigger fool and an ignorant whiner. Either way, the interview did not help his popularity one bit, but it could have been worse.

Now, as we all know, the Interviews that appear in magazines are edited versions of much longer and more in-depth interviews. Luckily, I – by accident, I assure you – have found some of the interview that was cut and therefore didn't appear in the world's most respected porn mag. (If you believe that, please give me a call, I have a bridge in Arizona I want to sell you.)

The following was cut after the honorable governor had complained that all fat people blame their weight on "gland problems."

Playboy: Mr. Ventura, seeing as you have just insulted the overweight of the country, I was wondering if you would like to insult the handicapped or maybe some other minority group.

Ventura: Yeah, I would, the handicapped are stupid, especially those with learning disabilities – why don't they just read, huh? They all like to say, "Oh, I was born with no eyes," like that's a reason. And I don't understand why minorities think they are special. I'm a minority; I'm an ex-wrestler – how many of those do you know? Think I use the fact that I'm an ex-wrestler as some sort of special status to get me things?

Playboy: Actually, governor, plenty of people would be willing to say that you have never actually won your election were it not for your status as an ex-wrestler.

Ventura: Look, you stupid magazine, I don't have to continue this interview with you. Stupid press.

Playboy: Sorry, Mr. Ventura, moving right along, you mentioned that you feel the followers of organized religion are "weak-minded." Would you like to make any other broad generalizations?

Ventura: Yeah, I think there's a problem with that stupid painting in New York; see everyone is so worked up about elephant dung. I have no problem with elephant dung, in fact, I like to eat elephant dung, and as a matter of fact, I think that the poor of our country would be much better off eating elephant dung. Hell, most poor people deserve to eat elephant dung. I remember a time when I would have loved to eat elephant dung.

Playboy: You said you would like to be reincarnated as a 36DD bra. Want color? Would it be lacy?

Ventura: I'm partial to combat fatigue color, but I also really like pink. As for lace, I enjoy lace a lot, so, yeah, I think that I would like to have a little bit of lace.

Playboy: What about an underwire?

Ventura: Sure, why not?

Playboy: I certainly wouldn't find any reason not to, especially considering that once we publish this interview you are going to be dead, if not actually, then politically, if you haven't been lynched by the large amount of people who subscribe to organized religion.

Ventura: I would love that; it would show how weak-minded they are.

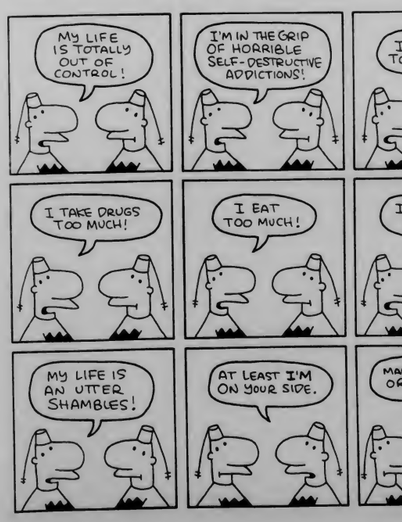
Playboy: And it would be good for your state.

Ventura: Hey. I think I'm doing a fine job running Michigan.

Playboy: Mr. Ventura, you do realize that you are governor of Minnesota, correct?

Ventura: Right, Missouri, where I live.

Playboy: Mr. Ventura, thank you for granting our fine publication an interview, we wish you the best of luck in the future because we think you will need it.



Ventura: Hey, are there any of those bunnies around here or what?

Playboy: Sorry, they, hmmm, left because they were more or less disgusted by your bald head, ridiculous temper and inability to appear as anything more than a bulky egotistical political mistake that will right itself next election.

Ventura: Oh, oh well, maybe when I come back I'll be worn by one of them.

Playboy: Yeah, right and maybe you have a shot at re-election, too.

Chris Collins is a Collegian Columnist.

Just relax

"Sad woman, take it slow, and it'll work itself out fine. All we need is just a little..." Question and answer session.

What annoys you? Is it that guy who decides to write a check ahead of you in line? Do you shift lanes in a traffic jam in hopes that you will get through it faster? Do you get pissed at the person who asks the question, "Oh, you mean that you can't count 45 cans of Friskies as one item?" in the two item or fewer lane? If you answered "yes" to any of these, then you are impatient. If you are waiting for me to get to my point, you are impatient, and probably will be let down.

Ken McDonald

We live in a very impatient society. Doctors spend more time prescribing medicine than diagnosing what is wrong with us. We find ourselves getting frustrated at a waiter that wants to talk with us for a minute, or a cashier. We mumble under our breath, "I have been standing here for 30 seconds; even Starbucks isn't worth this wait."

There is one invention that is responsible for America's obsession with impatience: the microwave.

Yes, that little box in your room that sustains life for the Ramen noodle and burrito-eating population of the world. In the sixties, do you know how they made popcorn? Stay with me on this one, because it may get a bit complicated. Our ancestors used to gather around what they called a "stove," and make something called "Jiffy-Pop," which consisted of a pan with corn kernels that was covered with tin foil. When the popcorn was ready, the foil would rise. The whole process would take about 10 minutes. Can you imagine, 10 minutes? In that time you could begin and end a career as a 17-year-old pop star (See: Tiffany).

Before, dinnertime was a family event. Everyone had to gather around the table at the same time, and eat a common meal. Schedules had to revolve around this nightly ceremony. Now everyone fits eating into a five-minute span between video games or commercials. Everyone has gotten used to having food now, not in 15 minutes. If I told the population of UMass that they would have to wait 20 minutes for every meal, I would be lynched by a mob carrying newly sharpened U-Cards within two.

As people adapted to this form of convenience, someone decided it was then proper to demand results for everything "now." Express mail came into service, so did drive through windows, ATM's and premature ejaculation.

There seems to be no immediate remedy, which is part of the problem. If you think about it. Ironic as this may be, it takes a long time to do things when you set a slow pace. To relax, you have to throw away the watch and take things as they come. Some people call this procrastination; I call it "recreational-time management skills." People who subscribe to this theory are oftentimes heard slowly muttering, "Eh, it'll get done eventually, don't sweat it."

Employers call this type of person lazy, but in reality when you take life in the slow lane the only people that pass you by are the ones who are rushing to the grave. There are always going to be 24 hours in a day, seven days in a week, really, trust me on this one.

Try this one tomorrow. When you go to lunch – if you do not have class for an hour or so – sit down and do nothing. It may be hard at first, but eventually you will see how ridiculous everyone looks running around to get there first.

When you walk by a lecture hall, notice all the people that are there 20 minutes before class starts. Do you know why they are there early? Because they run to get there now they are waiting impatiently for class to begin only to hope that it ends in the next three minutes. It is a vicious cycle that can only be broken by a person willing to slow down. Here I'll help with an overload piece of advice: take a deep breath right now, go ahead I'whale.

Feel good? If you're not, then enough you might feel vested in enjoying the world around you and maybe, just maybe, making popcorn on top of the stove.

Ah! the philosopher. Take it from the man who is home first in the slow lane as we speak patience is a virtue, and may even help you live longer – or at least a little happier.

Ken McDonald is a Collegian columnist

Do YOU have ideas? Write for ed/op.

Eating some humble pie

Some of you out there are going to really laugh when I tell you what I did with part of my summer after I got back from Africa. I worked for my town dump...erm...the transfer station, if you want to be technical. Yes, someone had to compact the trash, push the recycled bottles and cans through into their correct bins, and make sure that the newspapers and magazines were in their correct places. I know that this isn't the most glamorous job in the world but I actually liked it and no, I didn't reek of raw sewage and waste after the day was done.

Wes Wrightson

I ended up with this job after being turned down everywhere I went for internships and jobs because I came back from Africa too late in the summer. My dad suggested that I go down to the Town Hall and ask. I tried to think up any and every excuse in the book to give to my parents so I could avoid doing this for a month. But to put it bluntly, I just bit my lip, filled out the application, and was called for work the next morning.

First off, the Hollis Town Transfer Station is the place for the town gossip, and here I was stuck in the middle of it all. I was hearing a lot of trash coming out of people's mouths at the main trash spot. I mean, you should hear what came out of people's mouths as I was compacting the corrugated cardboard or pushing the cominglers (recycled bottles, cans, and plastics). When I wasn't doing all of that work, I was usually in the small shack watching crappy syndicated TV shows or talking on the phone.

I worked with a guy named Dickie. I didn't know his last name even though I worked with him for like a month. I do know this, though: he is an illiterate reformed alcoholic who spent 20-plus in the Big House because he had a shoot out with the Nashua Police. Dickie also had zero teeth in his mouth, so when he smiled (which was not often) it was all gum.

One would think I would have been embarrassed when one of my peers, or an adult I knew, came to drop off their trash and saw me standing there with a dumb grin on my face. Well, actually, I was really embarrassed at first, and that was why I wore my baseball cap down over my face and walked in the opposite direction of the people that I knew. I expected that I would get a lot of crap from my friends and peers for doing this sort of work, but no one gave me any crap.

> "One would think I would have been embarrassed when one of my peers, or an adult I knew, came to drop off their trash and saw me standing there with a dumb grin on my face."

The job paid decently (around $9 an hour), and the work itself wasn't hard at all. It was a real change from the summers I was used to, like the summers I spent on Martha's Vineyard. I guess I didn't really have a choice in the matter, though, because I needed a job and I couldn't find any other employment.

I think being forced into doing something that you really don't want to do because of some preconceived notion or whatever, is not all that bad; it builds character and forces you to deal with stuff headon and full-force. I had to deal with people coming up and asking me, "Wes, what the hell are you doing working here?" I would always send this mean always go into a detailed explanation of why I was at the dump.

But, after doing this job, I feel like I didn't owe anyone any explanation at all. My father would tell me to stop feeling sorry for myself, the work was easy, so I should stick it out and keep my head up. This was usually after I would come in the door and my mother would laugh at my face and say something in the order of "I'll dump-box, how was your day?" Parents always know what to say and when to say it.

This summer, my pasty-white days cleaning houses and nights working for UPS and trying to score a girlfriend in Oregon were a thing of the past, and yet I was relegated to working with Dickie at the town dump for the summer. I had a hard time there, there is a lot of shit there people, threw away that can be reused. I felt pretty bored relegated to sorting through newspapers, magazines, books and the latest magazines. Since Dickie couldn't read, he liked to take the nudie magazines home with him at night.

I think a wise man once said that if you want to get all the information you need on a certain topic, then head on over to the local watering hole. Well I beg to differ now.

Wes Wrightson is a Collegian columnist

A reminder for all interesed ed/op columnists: Photographs will be taken on the steps of the Student Union today at 5pm.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Guy, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor

Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor

Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor

Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1958. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, October 6, 1999

Dawson's Creek on Web

Internet Site of the Week: http://www.geocities.com/Tokyo/Field/4408/

I know what you're thinking, Martignetti, where are you sending us? On some interactive tour of Tokyo? Yawn. Well, as much as I wish that were true, this site is actually a shrine to my favorite show. That's right; it's a "Dawson's Creek" page. But it's not just any "Dawson's" site. It's the site.

It's got all the usual stuff: cast photos, press photos from the show, and various media clippings of all the cast members, but it's got tons of perks as well. Did you miss last week's episode? Can't remember that quote from your favorite episode? Well, this site has every episode in Real Player or Windows Media Player format. That's right, you can watch every single episode from beginning to end, including the TV trailers. If that's not enough, then the administrator has selected especially good scenes from each episode and put those in Quicktime/AVI format as appropriate.

Adam Martignetti

One of the most controversial aspects of "Dawson's Creek," other than the strong sexual overtones, is the music. Love it or hate it, the show is intimately tied to the current pop music scene. Well, this sight has every song featured from every episode in MP3 format (not that I encourage the illegal distribution of music).

In addition to all that, they've got a great episode guide, some cool downloadable Windows themes, and an interesting spoiler page with info. on the upcoming happenings in the Creek.

Moving on to other Web events. Other than being a truly unique movie in terms of its message, Three Kings, which opened last weekend, will have the first ever major film soundtrack distributed exclusively through the Net. On line retailer CDNow and MP3.com have teamed with the movie's producer, Warner Brothers, and Atlas Entertainment to make the venture possible.

In one of our favorite Internet areas, here's news from those wacky on-line businesses. A recent survey found that the majority of Internet users, 70 percent to be exact, will do some or all of their shopping online with Web-only merchants. The survey, done by Greenfield Online, found no department store or even mail order catalogue among the top spots for making purchases. Greenfield said its survey of 4,500 people found that the most popular online shopping destinations are Amazon.com, CDNow and Etoys. The only brick-and-mortar retailer in the top five was ToysRUS.com, mentioned by 28 percent of those polled. Of those surveyed, 60 percent believe they get the best price by shopping online.

Sticking with e-retailing, Fogdog Sports (www.fogdog.com) said it will be able to sell Nike products online beginning this holiday season. The online sporting goods retailer will be treated much the same as Nike's important brick-and-mortar retail accounts, said Nike CEO Phil Knight. He said this is the company's first, and for a limited time, only partnership with an online-only retailer. "All brands in our industry need to embrace this channel to allow the consumer to make a choice in their preferred shopping method," he said. "The business principle, 'innovate or die' has never been more applicable to commerce than it is in today's online environment." So, there it is. With regard to e-commerce, Knight says "Just Do It."

In the continuing effort to reclaim the top spot among Net search engines, Lycos has made a couple of key moves. Lycos recently said that it's teaming up with Fidelity Investment's new online brand, Powerstreet, for promotional purposes. Fidelity will include Lycos in its national advertising campaign scheduled for the fall. In return, Fidelity will also become an advertiser on Lycos' financial site. As part of the new service, Fidelity's Powerstreet customers will have access to the financial services offered by CBS.MarketWatch.com's "Market Pulse" service for four months.

In another announcement, the Lycos-owned online community and home page host, Tripod.com, said it will start rewarding members who build popular Web sites. A program called Builder Bucks will pay cash to members whose Web sites generate at least 100 page views per day. Members will be paid $.50 per 1,000 ad views.

In a move I find extremely ironic, ActFit.com Inc. announced today the launch of the first-ever Internet portal dedicated to the Active Lifestyle market. ActFit.com connects consumers to the largest single source of information, products and services for pursuing an active lifestyle, including fitness, health and sports. In the past year, ActFit.com has launched the Internet's first Virtual Health Club – a 3D, interactive, animated showcase and started a health page with over 7,000,000 page views each month. So, let me get this straight. You want to start a fitness site by getting people to sit in front of their computers and surf the Web. Ahh, brilliant.

Aspiring comedians at Mahar tonight

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Tonight, the Burly Bear Network brings its New York Comedy Film Festival Shorts Tour. This festival is the only one of its kind in North America and remains dedicated to uncovering young, up-and-coming talent and providing a forum for their craft.

Tonight's performance will feature short comedy videos created by Chris Rock ("The Chris Rock Show"), Conan O'Brien ("The Conan O'Brien Show"), Charles Stone (musical director of "The Roots"), Adam Goldberg (who worked on "Friends" as well as on the movie Saving Private Ryan), Steven Weber ("Wings"), Jeffery Ross ("Pulp Comics"), and members from MTV's "The State." In addition to these films, there will be live performances from stand-up comedians Tom Rhodes and Patrice O'Neal – both of whom have been featured on many network and cable programs.

Students who attend tonight's performance will be treated to a UMass tradition – lots of free stuff. The first 50 people in the door will receive a copy of "Saturday Night Live" cast member Jimmy Fallon's "I Hate this Place – The Pessimist Guide to Life."

Atlantic reissues jazz titles

By Charlie Apicella
Collegian Staff

Producer Joel Dorn and 32 Jazz have done a wonderful job of late in reissuing a number of stellar titles from the vaults of Atlantic Records, including some interesting four-album compilations by artists such as Rahsaan Roland Kirk, Yusef Lateef and David "Fathead" Newman. These recent reissue projects paint a picture of exciting, creative, and entertaining periods in the music of each artist. Among this catalog, pianist Ray Bryant's performance at the 1972 Montreux Jazz Festival is a luminary.

Bryant's virtuosity, rhythmic drive, and ease of execution are displayed in this solo piano performance. Ray confronts the challenge of performing solo with heavy doses of blues and boogie-woogie, and for the entire performance he has the pleasure of playing for a very enthusiastic Montreux crowd. He remains straight-ahead throughout the set, and surges forward with much rhythmic variation and harmonic complexity. His variety of ideas is always interesting, and sometimes surprising, as in his rendition of Hoagy Carmichael's "Rockin' Chair."

The greatest piano blues solo in the world, Avery Parish's "After Hours," follows and is given wonderful treatment by Bryant. He interprets this classic at a slow, solid tempo, which leaves a lot of space for long single-line flourishes.

All of the originals in the set, most notably "Cubano Chant" and "Slow Freight," are built on intricate rhythm patterns which illustrate Bryant's deep understanding of the subtleties of texture that are at the heart of solo improvised piano. He remains true to the roots of boogie-woogie piano, while at the same time integrating his own harmonic concepts to the blues base of the music, which is perfectly illustrated in the set's closer, a hard rocking version of "Liebestraum Boogie."

Bryant is quite at home as a solo pianist, and his ideas flow from a rhythmic point of origin, rather than a harmonic one. For him, harmonic complexity is not realized by embellished chord tones, but rather by the subtle tones he incorporates when resolving chords. He is a mid-range, rhythmically oriented player whose technique never reaches beyond his sense of musical taste.

Agassi, "Later," SNL

By Nick Pizzolato
Collegian Correspondent

Andre Agassi

Recently, Andre Agassi told the world that he and Steffi Graff are together as a couple. Now, you faithful readers are questioning my sanity. The question buzzing around you head is, "Isn't this an entertainment column? Why is this alcoholic, no talent hack writing about Andre 'I Have a Mean Backhand' Agassi?" First of all, I'm not an alcoholic. Secondly, Andre Agassi, in case you have forgotten, dated Brooke Shields (of the infamous The Blue Lagoon and the awful NBC sitcom "Suddenly Susan") making Andre fair game for any entertainment article. The co-founder of the All-Star Cafe stated that his and Steffi's relationship has been 10 years in the making. But wait, wasn't he engaged to Brooke Shields for like, eight years? And didn't the country coo when the two tied the knot a little over year or two ago. Of course the previously mentioned coo was followed by an "awww" when the two divorced half a year later. So, if he and Steffi have been building a relationship for the last 10 years, what does that make the recent U.S. Open winner? Well, that can mean only one thing, that Andre Agassi, the ladies' love of tennis, is a slime ball.

"Later Today"

When I first heard of NBC's plan for another "Today Show," I thought, "Great: another hour of America's favorite daytime news show – how could this be a bad idea?" Then I heard that none of the cast of the real "Today" show would be appearing on the spin-off. No Katie. No Matt. No Al Roker. No Willard Scott. Not even a Gumbell could be found on the new show. But still, it was optimistic, after all, this was NBC. That is, until I saw the first 10 minutes. The first warning sign about this show is that all the teasers for the show dealt with women's fall fashions, make-up, and women authors. The second warning sign was that Mrs. Brady herself, Florence Henderson, was one of the co-hosts of the show. The last warning sign was when the lead anchor asked Henderson and the other woman co-host, "What is up, girlfriends?" Girlfriends! It was at this time that I realized NBC's "Later Today" was the response to ABC's "The View." In case you didn't know, "The View" is Barbara Wawa's... oops, I mean Walter's, breakthrough idea for show about women, for women, by women. On paper it's a great idea, but in reality it's just Barbara quoting Will Smith and wearing leather pants (that's right, I said leather pants). What you have is one working mom breaking into TV journalism (which is the only decent host of the show), a veteran reporter (who can be pretty funny), a veteran activist (who is so unfunny it hurts as she makes her shameless plugs for her stand-up act), Barbara Walters herself, and, until recently, a new, hip woman just starting in broadcasting. Well, leave it to Barbara to pick the most energetic and exciting one, who is also a babbling idiot. Her name was Debbie Stegosaurus ... or something like that. She was half of a half-wit biker duo that gave all Gen-Xer's a bad name. She made Kathy Ireland look like a member of MENSA. I want to know why there can't be a guy morning show. For those stay-at-home dads or working fathers who just mope around until 10:00 and then turn on the television.

Saturday Night Live's 25th Anniversary

On Sunday the 26th, in the year of nineteen hundred and ninety nine, the once groundbreaking satirical skit show, "Saturday Night Live" celebrated it's 25th birthday. I would tell you, the readers, about it, but I was watching the FOX network. Although I didn't see it, I heard it was supposed to be very good. I guess a lot of past stars and writers came back and there were some original skits, as well as some of the classic moments of SNL. Don't get me wrong; I have always liked "Saturday Night Live" since I was first introduced to it over a decade ago. Despite the fact that the first 15 minutes are the only really funny skits, I am a faithful follower.

Brett Mauser on College Football

Big 12 could see Oklahoma on top step sooner than later

Just who do you think you are, Oklahoma?

A year after falling off the planet altogether, you somehow clawed your way back to respectability last season, finishing 5-6. College football was finished with you. The storied history of the 'Huskers/Sooners rivalry was put on hold, becoming a dead issue in the decade of the '90s, but after writing you off, all of a sudden a meeting in the Big 12 championship game does not seem completely farcical.

There were signs of a comeback late last season when Texas Tech officially bid farewell to a season of hope with a 3-point loss in Norman, the Sooners' second victory over a Bowl team (10-9 win at Texas Christian), but De'Mond Parker and Jermaine Fazande are long gone.

The balls seem to be dropping in favor of Oklahoma as its only loss has come outside its conference, while the Southern division's stalwarts have faltered early on. Texas A&M, Texas, Oklahoma State, predicted to finish 1-2-3 in the division, have each picked up a premature loss. Texas Tech, the villain to the Aggies' dreams of a perfect season, lost tailback Ricky Williams for the season before holding fort in Lubbock, knocking off A&M, 21-19.

...which leaves us with Oklahoma, unblemished at the top.

The Big 12 has found its Cinderella, its smile-inducing story of the season. A team expected to ride its defense to glory has stumbled upon an offense and a quarterback that has the Nonman campus buzzing for the first time since Barry Switzer walked the grounds. After all, Oklahoma hasn't won a league title since '87.

With Mike Leach, Tim Couch's mentor at kentucky, at the helm of the offense, junior Josh Heupel takes the schooner into battle. Boasting out five contenders in the spring, Heupel earned the right to take the snaps for the Sooners for its opener against Indiana State. Sixty minutes into the season, first-time coach Bob Stoops had his man. Heupel tossed for five touchdown passes, including three in the first half to rout the Sycamores.

Okay, so it's Division I-AA Indiana State, known for little beyond the humble home of Larry Bird. After knocking off Baylor, Heupel out-dueled Chris Redman, a strong Heisman Trophy candidate in Louisville, winning 42-21 on the scoreboard and 5-2 in the touchdown pass department.

On cloud nine and with fans talking postseason just three games in, Notre Dame finally grounded the Sooners, but not after a war. Padded by a soft schedule, Oklahoma entered as the nation's most high-powered offense. For a half it seemed it was no fluke. Heupel hummed his passes in, throwing for a pair of scores before fate took over. They were the Irish and Oklahoma was Oklahoma, a team that has gone bowless since 1994.

Scoring 21 unanswered points in the second half, including Tony Driver's second rushing touchdown of the day, which amounted to the difference in the Irish's 34-30 victory in South Bend. An early touchdown pass from Heupel to Brandon Daniels gave the Sooners a 30-14 edge, but that would be all, as the Notre Dame defense buckled down, holding Oklahoma to just 69 yards on the ground.

The roller coaster has just begun for the panhandlers, as Texas comes calling this week before taking on A&M and Colorado to round out the month of October.

Texas hardly expected to be looking peakward and seeing the Sooner Schooner clearing space. The season looked bleak when Major Applewhite and the Longhorn offense sputtered against North Carolina State on the opening week. Last Saturday it was Kansas State who foiled the boys from UT, chalking up 17 points in the final quarter to pull away from the Longhorns.

The common theme for the Texas offense in the two losses? The Longhorns' ground attack forced Applewhite into quick decisions in the face of numerous blitz packages, which added up to three interceptions and a season-high five fumbles on offense.

This time it is Heupel's turn to feel the pressure and he is certainly underqualified to fend off what could be the conference's top defensive line.

In reality, the biggest difference will be that running back Hodges Mitchell and the offensive line will give Applewhite all the time he needs. At the very least, Applewhite sees Heupel in his rear view mirror in what should be a great head-to-head match-up for the next two years. Third-and-longs should be at a minimum and Mitchell ought to have 100 yards by halftime, at that point the game being out of reach.

I'll take Texas, giving five, against the Sooners at Texas Stadium.

Last week: 1-4
Overall record: 11-8-1

This kid certainly isn't a believer in Minnesota, who entered the top 25 with a win last week at Northwestern. The Gophers host Wisconsin, who has to give a mere three points for this one. This baby's a cupcake; I'll take the Badgers.

In other action, I'll take Michigan State at home against Michigan, getting 2 1/2, and look for Clemson to handle the Wolfpack in Raleigh, giving a point.

■ downhill

continued from page 10

ness the phenomena that is our biking hegemony when the cycling team will be hosting our own event on campus. Bikers have put in considerable time and effort, with help from such supporters as Joe Lagasse, to construct a wicked course that will prove to be intense, fast and fun to watch. Cross-country will be racing Saturday morning in a tight path in the woods behind the observatory. The slalom begins around noon on the hill facing Orchard Hill. While it may not be as tricky as the Plattekill runs, for a campus race, it should be thoroughly intimidating.

The weekend was topped off by a huge dinner at the Bun 'N' Conc just down the mountain from the race. Riders from several different schools were in attendance to shovel in a few cheeseburgers and strawberry malts. Though these athletes compete against each other every weekend, their camaraderie surpasses their intensity in the race. Everyone was in agreement that the races went well and were excited for the upcoming UMass event.

■ hockey

continued from page 10

[All-Hockey East honorable mention selection Markus Helanen] and a great defense. Now if we can put some pucks in the net then we're going to have a great year."

Added Sell: "We're really optimistic. I see a lot of confidence out on the ice. We came back in good shape and did some extra work in the off-season, and it's showing already."

Top threats for the Minutemen this year include senior alternate captain Jeff Blanchard and junior alternate captain Jeff Turner, who were the team's top two leading scorers last season. UMass also boasts a talented junior class of forwards and a strong group of sophomore defensemen on its roster.

The Minutemen will open up their season on Friday night with a home game against Arcadia, a Canadian hockey squad. The regular season opener will take place on Saturday, Oct. 16 when UMass travels to Hamilton, NY to face Eastern Collegiate Athletic Conference foe Colgate.

After a solid campaign in '98-99, senior Jeff Blanchard returns to the Massachusetts ice hockey team as the squad's leading point scorer.

ATTENTION!!
The UMass Mens Basketball team will be holding walk-on tryouts on Tuesday October 29, 1999 at 7pm in the Mullins Center. In order to be eligible to tryout, you must:
1. Be a full-time student at UMass,
2. Have had a physical within the last year,
3. Have proof of health insurance.
If you have any questions, please call the Men's Basketball office at (413) 545-2610

Anyone Interseted in trying out for the UMass Women's Tennis team
Please Call Debbie Ginn at 545-3103 for details

Thai Corner
Featuring Daily Lunch Combinations
Monday - Friday 11:00am - 4pm
Take Out Available
• Curry Dishes
• Stir Fried
• Soups
• Salads
• Noodles
Welcome Back Students, Faculty & Administrators!
31 Boltwood Walk, Amherst, MA 253-1639
located down the alley from Antonio's Pizza
Hours: Sun 5-9, Mon-Wed 11:30-9, Thurs-Sat 1:30-10

All the Digital Power in the Palm of Your Hands
www.omniplayer.com

Great Reasons to use UHS Eye Care Services
1. Savings on eyeglasses from the new on-site Optical Service at UHS.
2. A great place to get contacts lenses.
3. Convenient hours and location.
4. FREE eyeglass adjustments and one year warranty on frames.
5. Savings on routine eye exams for students at UMass.
Frederick H. Bloom, O.D. Director, UHS Eye Care Services
University Health Services
For appointments or questions, Call 577-5244

Fly Wheels
SKATE ACCESSORIES
Free UMass deliveries!
Inline, Speed, Rollery Hockey
Outdoor Specialists

UMass Student Legal Services Office
FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

Wednesday Night is Party Night at Mike's
MIKE'S WESTVIEW CAFE
This week:
•Bud Promo: 16 ounce Bud, Bud Lite & Mick Lite $1.50
• Drink of the Week: Rum & Coke $2.00
Win Tee Shirts Register for Drawing
Lots of Great Prizes!!!

From your college class to world class.
You mastered theory in your college class. Now apply your knowledge at MBNA, the world's largest independent credit card lender. With ongoing educational development, comprehensive on-the-job education, and all the resources you need to succeed, it's no surprise that FORTUNE placed us among the top-ten best companies to work for in the United States!
People are at the core of our values.
ATTENTION SENIORS
Visit us at the Isenburg School of Management Career Fair Wednesday, October 6, 1999 12 noon-5 p.m.
And then be our guest at our Information Session after the Career Fair from 6-7 p.m., at the Faculty Club
We look forward to talking to you about the outstanding career opportunities MBNA has to offer. If you are unable to attend, please send your resume to:
MBNA New England
Attn: Personnel
One Hatley Road
Belfast, ME 04915
Fax: (207) 338-7820
www.mbnacareers.com
MBNA NEW ENGLAND
We're proud to be a voluntary Equal Employment Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer © 1999 MBNA America Bank, N.A.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?
YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-
NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888
• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

THE TIBETAN ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS & STUDENTS FOR A FREE TIBET ARE PLEASED TO PRESENT: THE 4th ANNUAL
TIBET AWARENESS DAY
Special Appearance by Dadon (starred in WINDHORSE)
TIBETAN CHILDREN DANCE GROUP FROM BOSTON
JOEL ZOSS • DEVOTION
KATE O'CONNOR & OTHERS
AMHERST COMMON
Saturday, October 9, 1999
11am - 5pm
PHOTO EXHIBIT • TIBETAN FOOD (MOMOS) • CARPET WEAVING ASTROLOGY & TIBETAN MEDICINE • TARA EXHIBIT • TIBETAN STONE MASONRY • TIBETAN TREASURES FOR SALE • ARTIFACTS • ART EXHIBIT AND DEMO BY MASTER THANGKA PAINTER KALSANG LODOE OSHOE SURPRISE SPEAKER APPEARANCE (TBA)
COME AND LEARN ABOUT TIBET.
EXPERIENCE THE RICH TAPESTRY OF THE ENDANGERED CULTURE OF TIBET.
IN CASE OF RAIN: THIS EVENT WILL BE HELD AT GRACE CHURCH (NEXT TO THE AMHERST COMMON)

Chance or Design
Don't take a chance on your career. Working at CIGNA is different. We don't try to force you into a job that doesn't fit your abilities.
What we do is find rewarding, challenging and (yes) fun opportunities for tomorrow's business leaders. Ones that take the kind of talent and hard work you've already shown in earning your degree.
That's not all. We're also just as interested in your personal fulfillment. Which is probably why we have made a habit of showing up on a lot of "best places to work" lists from Fortune to Working Mother.
CIGNA's built its success on hiring bright, creative individuals from all major backgrounds and helping them build careers filled with meaningful work that brings out their best. The result is more productive lives that benefit us as well as our employees.
With 43,000 employees worldwide and $93 billion in assets, CIGNA is a global employee benefits and financial services company. Beyond those numbers, we strive every day to live up to our reputation as "A Business of Caring."
One CIGNA: Many Opportunities.
CIGNA
A Business of Caring.
Visit us on the Web:
www.cigna.com/working/college
We're an equal opportunity employer. M/F/D/V. "CIGNA" refers to CIGNA Corporation and/or one or more of its subsidiaries. Most employees are employed by subsidiaries of CIGNA Corporation which provide insurance and related products.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking "Best Buddies" to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

AUTO FOR SALE

91 Ford Festiva 5spd excellent condition 87,000 miles $1,850 or BO Must Sell 546-2216

Honda Prelude SI, 1992 Excellent condition, silver 5 spd, power brakes/windows sun roof, AM/FM stereo additional snow tires 96k $8500 (413)665-0218

COMPUTERS

CELERON 333MHZ PC Tower with 128MB RAM, 4Gig HD, 4Meg Intel video card, 56I/.90 modem, 10/100 ethernet card, 24X CDRom sound card, 2USB Ports, 4ISA Slots, 3 PCI Slots, IAGP ($900) - Pentium II 233 Mhz w/128 Meg RAM, 6Gig HD, 4 Meg S3 video card, sound card, 10/100 ethernet, 3PCI, 3ISA, 1AGP, 24X CDROM ($700) - Both come with Win 98, Corel 8 and MS Office preinstalled. Call Peter 253-6665

EMPLOYMENT

The UMass Athletic Development Office is looking for a graduate student to assist in bookkeeping, data entry, and filing 20-25 hrs/wk starting at $8/hr

Intern Needed - Toothless Productions, a Western Mass Music Booking and Producintn Co. needs a part time intern, very flexable hours. Call 888-595-3122

EMPLOYMENT

Jobs At The UMass Annual Fund flexible evening hours earn $5.50/hr plus fantastic bonuses. Gain computer and communication skills. Come to the basement of Memorial Hall and apply today. Students only. 545-3509

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413-774-2281 (ask for Marty). AA/EOE

TEACHER/CHEMISTRY Part time for Senior High Please submit resume to Superintendent's Office, 170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01002 FAX 413-549-9883. An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

SCHOOL CROSSING GUARDS AM and PM elementary school duty. Please contact Maintenance Office, Amherst Public Schools (549-9855) An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME RESEARCH INTERVIEWERS Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for evenings and weekend shift Telephone Interviewers. We require minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact: Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514 Equal Opportunity Employer, M/F

TUTORS/TRANSLATERS Bilingual/for part-time, paid assistance during the school day to students speaking Amharic, Chinese, Farsi, Japanese, Korean, Portuguese, Spanish, Tabetan, Vietnamese, Yoruba. Contact ESL Office at 413-549-9857. Amherst Public Schools An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

EMPLOYMENT

Paraprofessional Position Title I Math/provides in-class support for students working with teachers in the High School math department. Send resume to: Superintendent's Office, Amherst Pelham Regional Schools, 170 Chestnut Street, Amherst, MA 01002 An Affirmative Action/Equal Opportunity Employer

Pays $60 to $120 per shift Flexible hours cool place to work Domino Pizza 256-8911

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

The Mullin Center Ice Rink seeks Zamboni drivers experience preferred but not necessary. Will train. Apply in person at the Ice Rink

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

EMPLOYMENT

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

DP Dough is Hiring drivers + kitchen help. Flexible hours. Apply at DP Dough downtown Amherst

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

RECREATION POSITIONS Amherst Leisure Services is hiring high-energy & enthusiastic workers for the following part-time weekend positions: Adult Volleyball Supervisor, Volleyball Officials, Youth Basketball Supervisors Officials, Facility Supervisors. Apply at Amherst Town Hall, 4 Boltwood Ave. For more information please contact: Mike Thomas, Sports Director at 256-4065

EMPLOYMENT

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

ENTERTAINMENT

Fridge Rentals Free Delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

CD-Rom/Soundcard External Software Inc. $150/BO. Kim 549-6856

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

American Ski Company Cheap student season passes! from $299. Call Mike @ 253-1187

GREEK AFFAIRS

Sigma Delt Tau would like to welcome their newest members Kara B, Devon, Lisa K, Liza, Alyssa, Lisa S, Lenie, Kara S, Melissa S, Melissa T, Jackie, Jen and Jenn. Congratulations!!!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

MART- Now that you finally get to celebrate your 21st...We hope it is a good one. Did anyone tell you that you are the BEST person in the world. Thanks for everything! We all love you! HAPPY BIRTHDAY! Love US

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space Is Limited

INSTRUCTION

Private Boxing Lessons by retired pro Djata Bumpus in Amherst. On UMass Bus Rte Call 256-0364

LOST & FOUND

FOUND 1 Pair of Keys on blue keychain near Holdsworth Lab call Ping at 253-0036

ROOM FOR RENT

Room in Townhouse Apts 350/month + utilities Female preffered Call Emilie and Patrick 549-6955

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted 1bdrm in 3bdrm Apt behind Puffers Pond. Must be easy going. Big yard, parking $333/mo+utilities Call Bry/Joe 549-4055

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

Aerial Photos of UMass Campus now available! On the web. www.airphotocollege-campus.com

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

TRAVEL

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

RUNNERS NEEDED! Competitive female distance runners needed for an important women's health study. Must be 18-25 and not on oral contraceptives. Free bone density and fat measurements. Free runners gifts. Call 1-877-RUN-BFIT. (1-877-786-2348)

Your Ad Could Be Right HERE!! Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 6

Auditions – The UMass Theatre Guild will be holding auditions for "A Decade of Memories: A Musical Revue Celebrating the UMTG from 1990-1999" at 7 p.m. in the Cape Cod Lounge. Call Ari or Sarah at 545-0415 for more information.

Fair – The Annual Engineering Fair will be held in the Guinness Student Center in Marcus Hall from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. All students from engineering and technical disciplines are welcome to attend. For more information call 545-0251.

THURSDAY, OCT. 7

Call backs – The callbacks for "A Decade of Memories: A Musical Revue Celebrating the UMTG from 1990-1999" will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 6 p.m.

Fair – The Annual Engineering Fair will be held in the Guinness Student Center in Marcus Hall from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. All students from engineering and technical disciplines are welcome to attend. For more information call 545-6251.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division-Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Send us your FYI announcements!!

please!

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 6, 1999

C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH 12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Everest-Mallory and Irvine		Great Performances: Carnegie Hall			City Life: N.Y.	Nova (In Stereo)
WFSB 3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Coaby	Work With Me	"As Time Runs Out" (1998, Suspense) Stephen Collins,			News	Late Show
WBZ 4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Coaby	Work With Me	"As Time Runs Out" (1998, Suspense) Stephen Collins,			News	Nightline
WCVB 5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20	News	Nanny
WLVI 6	Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo)		Reset Wing (In Stereo)		Law & Order "DNR" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WHDH 7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Carolina	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WTXX 4	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	7 Days "Pinball Wizard"		West Wing (In Stereo)		Law & Order "DNR" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WVIT 10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo)		Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 1 – Teams to Be Announced.			News	Friends
WTIC 61	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 1 – Teams to Be Announced.					News	Tonight Show
WWLP 22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Dateline (In Stereo)		West Wing (In Stereo)		Law & Order "DNR" (In Stereo)	Jules at Eight	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGBY 57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Everest-Mallory and Irvine		Great Performances: Carnegie Hall			News	Nightline
WGGB 40	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Two Guys-Girl	Norm	Drew Carey	Oh Grow Up	20/20	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WSBK 38	Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	7 Days "Pinball Wizard"		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS 46	Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Auto Racing: NASCAR Qualifying				"Smokey and the Bandit" (1977, Comedy) Burt Reynolds,		Smokey #"
AAE 45	Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Snatched"		Biography: Susan Hayward		Investigative Reports (R)		American Justice		Law & Order "Navy Blues"
CNN 23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today						Sports	Moneyline
COM 26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	"Ghost Upon a Crime" (1992, Comedy) John Candy,				South Park	Man Show	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC 24	Tour Her House (R)		Wild Discovery: Piranha		On the inside: Coast Guard		Shark Attack Files (R)		Science Mysteries (R)		On the Inside: Coast Guard
ESPN 49	Major League Baseball		Sportscenter	Sportscenter of the Decade: The 1970s (R)					PBA Bowling: AC Delco Classic, (Live)		Sportscenter
LIFE 50	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait	"Jenny Jones"	Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		"Never Say Never: The Deidre Hall Story" (1995) Deidre Hall,				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV 51	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Making-Video	TRL (R) (In Stereo)				Say What Krtie	True Life	Biorhythms	Laverne (In Stereo)
NICK 52	All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All In Family	Meade
SCIFI 53	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sliders (In Stereo)		Sliders (In Stereo)		Sliders (In Stereo)		Sliders (In Stereo)		Tales From the Crypt "Yellow"
TLC 54	Home Again	Home Again	How d They Do That?		Super Structures of the World		Super Structures of the World		Super Structures of the World		Super Structures of the World
TNT 55	Due South "Pilot"		ER "Rites of Spring" (In Stereo)		"Animal Farm" (1999, Satire) Voices of Kelsey Grammer,				Secrets	(R) "Ring Lost World" (1999) Patrick Bergin,	Baywatch "Princess of Tides"
USA 62	Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG (In Stereo)								Chris Rock	Oz (In Stereo)
HBO 301	(5:45) "Mouse Hunt" (1997) Nathan Lane,			Happily Ever	Arliss (R)	Sex and City	"Switchback" (1997, Suspense) Dennis Quaid,					Pleasure Zone
MAX 321	"The War of the Roses" (1989) Michael Douglas,				"Best Defense" (1964) Dudley Moore,		"Phoenix" (1998, Drama) Ray Liotta, (In Stereo)					Boogers
SHOW 340	"Air Bud: Golden Receiver" (1998, Comedy) Kevin Zegers,				"Scream 2" (1997, Horror) David Arquette, (In Stereo)				"Phantom" (1996) Ariod Walton,

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC–TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Syndance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WCCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	33	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

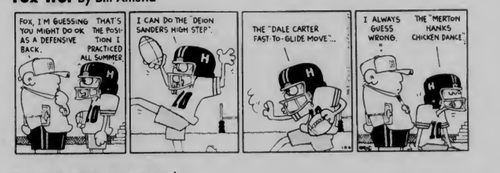
The Sean Thorp Show By Ryan Corbett & Sean Thorp

Not a Care in... By Pedro Gomez

Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Non Sequitor By Wiley

Fox Trot By Bill Amend



Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Fox Trot By Bill Amend

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Your life is about to change in a subtle manner, but you can bet that what you're about to embark on will take some time to perfect. It's going to be an adventure!

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Someone is willing to act as your own personal guide today, showing you how things work in a world you have only imagined in the past. Enjoy!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – A friend or loved one means well, but you must put your foot down when you feel that he or she is actually intruding on your privacy.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You may be grappling with some "large" issues today. It's important that you maintain an awareness of what is simple and straightforward.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You're going to have to be on the lookout today for something. You've received hints of, but nothing concretely sound. Keep your eyes and ears open.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – Now is the time for you to put your fears behind you and forge ahead at top speed. Take care, however, that you don't let yourself become careless.

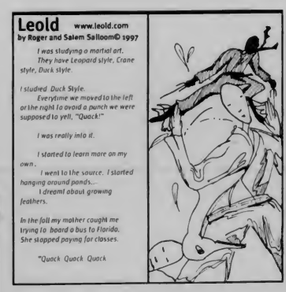
Aries (March 20-April 19) – You're going to find yourself in charge of others as well as yourself today. Be sure to set the "ground rules" as soon as you can.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – There's no need for you to take rash action today. There may be a problem to resolve after-hours, but you'll need to keep your wits about you.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Your alliances are in the process of changing at this time. You must tread softly lest you do something to cause suspicion and mistrust.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Other are likely to think that a "fluke" event is a serious matter, but you know that it's only a "smoke screen." Direct your attention to what's really important.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – A friend is likely to call on you to speak in his or her favor. You may know the truth, but you can put it in such a way to minimize any suspicions.



Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You can relive a prize experience today and learn from it simultaneously. Someone you've worked with before can enlighten you before nightfall.

Quote of the Day

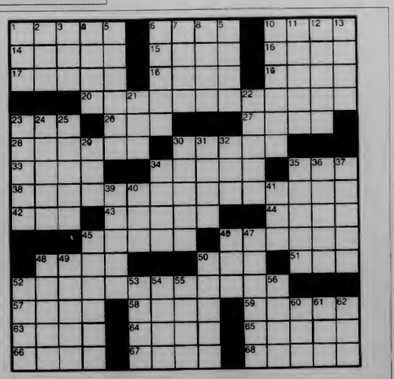
"We're going to turn this team around 360 degrees."

-Jason Kidd, upon his drafting to the Dallas Mavericks

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

ACROSS

1 Byword
6 Patron saint of sailors
10 Andy's sidekick
14 Snooped
15 Sightseeing trip
16 Tulip holder
17 Sharpened
18 Flexible tube
19 Bo Derek film
20 Figurative
23 Snow boot
26 — Diego
27 Scent
28 Sugarcane rodent
30 Whistles
33 Snares
34 Stevie Wonder's instrument
35 Princess' sleep disturber
42 Direct
43 Uses a hammer
44 Flimflam
45 Popular girl
46 Horse-drawn cab
48 At hand
50 Jaunty cap
51 Overhead trains
52 Carefree
57 Taj Mahal site
58 Lazily
59 Wild horse
63 The others
64 VIP's car
65 Cliffside home
66 Singer James
67 Slant
68 Marshy hollow



DOWN

1 Speed letters
2 Spanish gold
3 Metal in bronze
4 Abound
5 Weirdest
6 — Allen
7 Air-show maneuver
8 "— husky!"
9 Popular cookie
10 Shuns
11 Traveler Polo
12 Movie award
13 Zoo favorite
21 — chi: self-defense art
22 Generator part
23 Type of violet
24 Variegated stone
25 Snake charmer's partner
29 "— Today"
30 Deed
31 Dunderheads
32 Lennon's wife
34 Punxsutawney groundhog
35 Hesitate
36 Actor Flynn
37 John Q. —
39 Motionless
40 Liquid meas.
41 Colorless
45 Grand — Island
46 Derby, e.g.
47 One-celled animals
48 Dark period
49 Wading bird
50 Use a dressing room
52 Overdue
53 Slope
54 McClurg or Brickell
55 Soprano Gluck
56 Sketched
60 "Is that a yes — no?"
61 Nothing
62 Average grade

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

S	T	A	R		D	E	B	S		R	A	D	A	R
C	U	R	E		U	R	A	L		A	L	I	B	I
O	L	D	S		O	N	T	O		B	L	O	B	S
O	L	E	O	S		E	H	U	D	B	A	R	A	K
T	E	N	N	I	S	O	N	J	O	H	N
			R	A	P		S	H	O	T		K	I	T
S	N	A	C	K	S		H	E	W	S		N	O	R
L	U	R	E		C	I	D		B	O	N	E
A	D	A		S	T	U	N		D	R	O	W	S	E
V	I	E	T		M	U	L	E		E	A	T
		H	E	R	O		B	E	H	A	V	E	D
T	A	K	E	A	F	T	E	R		S	N	I	P	E
B	R	I	A	R		T	R	A	M		I	D	E	A
S	T	E	V	E		E	L	I	A		S	E	E	N
P	A	V	E	D		S	E	N	D		T	O	S	S

10 6 99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Thai Seitan

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Worcester

LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Thai Seitan
Carrot Onion Schine

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Hampshire

LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Beans and Rice

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Berkshire

LUNCH
Santa Fe Chicken Sandwich
Pizza Casserole
Thai Seitan

DINNER
Sicilian Stuffed Shells
Apple-Ginger Pork Chops
Burrito Bar
Baked Teriyaki Tofu

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ken Mc Donald
Photo Technician	Nicole Gottwald
Copy Editor	Tamar Carroll
Production Supervisor	Joylyn Lombard
Production Staff	Roberto Delgado, Melonie Thomas

Sports

Keep up to date with the WORLD OF sports.

Wednesday, October 5,1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Brown leaves Cage black and blue

Hasson hits career-high

By Seth Szilagyi
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team welcomed the Bears into its den, but it was the Minutewomen doing the roaring, as they ripped Brown, 3-0.

Coming off a positive road trip, which saw UM win two against conference foes, Duquesne and Fordham, the Minutewomen were poised to defend their home ground once again.

Game one was the longest and the closest of the match, as the women fought for the win against the Ivy Leaguers. UMass jumped out to an 8-4 lead when senior Kari Hogancamp smashed a kill in the face of a Brown defender and sparked the offense to take a 10-4 lead on the service of sophomore Lymarie Hovet. Brown battled back to make the score 10-6, before the Minutewomen began to ride the wave of junior outside hitter Rebecca Hasson, as she had a kill and a block to push it to 12-6 lead. The Bears came pounding back persistently, closing the gap until Hasson left the opposition in her wake, scoring two of the last three points, including the game-ending kill, 15-11.

UM hit a solid .349 percent in the first game with 29 kills on 63 attacks, while Brown reached their peak hitting .238 with 24 kills on 62 attacks.

In game two, the Bears weren't so lucky, as the Minutewomen only stumbled out of the gate to a 2-2 lead before they went off on a 12-0 run to bust open the game 14-2, which included numerous kills by both Hasson and Hogancamp. Brown only managed one more point in the match, on a rare error by the expert crowd Hogancamp, as UMass finished the game off on a kill by sophomore Jameen Demarte, 15-2.

The Minutewomen held their battled opponents to a .030 hitting percentage for the game, which saw their steady defense gel with a rising offense. UM hit a match-high .452 hitting percentage, while the Bears could only muster seven kills on a mere 33 attacks and a six error performance.

Game three started slowly, seeing the two squads fight back and forth, exchanging side outs, to a 4-4 tie. UMass broke the game open going on a 7-0 run, including three crushing kills by Hasson to up the lead to 11-4. Seeing stars, probably from Hasson's kills, Brown scored one more meaningless point, before the Minutewomen sealed it with a 4-0 run to take the game, 15-5.

UM continued its treinendous hitting percentage smacking .366 with 19 kills on 41 attacks, while posting dominating defense, holding BU to .095.

"Our offense was good tonight," said head coach Bonnie Kenny. "The sets were spread out and we transitioned very well between dig to kill."

Not surprisingly, Hasson set her career-high for kills with a total of 21 on 57 attacks, beating out her old high of 18. She led the way, registering a team-high .486 hitting percentage and three blocks.

"Rebecca was wonderful. She's working extremely hard on offense. Before she was primarily a defensive player, now she wants the ball and were more comfortable setter her as well," said Kenny.

Hogancamp tallied yet another double-double, notching 19 digs and 15 kills, along with a .375 hitting percentage on 32 attacks. Demarte narrowly missed a double-double, pitching in with nine kills and 17 digs. Sophomore Heather Holtsberg, who played the first two games, put up 41 assists, while she just missed tying her career-high for kills with two, junior Jennifer Drennan replaced Holtsberg in the third game hitting 15 assists of her own. As a team, the Minutewomen hit an impressive .378 for the match with 64 kills and 66 digs.

It was the fourth win in a row for the team and the fourth straight without losing a game. The Minutewomen, 9-6 on the season, will next host Atlantic 10 rivals Temple and Lasalle for a conference showdown. Temple plays on October 8 and Lasalle on October 9, both at 7 p.m. in the Curry Hicks Cage.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT/COLLEGIAN

Kari Hogancamp's 15 kill-19 dig effort helped the volleyball team plow through Brown in straight sets last night at the Cage.

UMass hockey squad picked 7th in HE poll

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

BOSTON – Don't always trust polls.

Last season the Massachusetts hockey team was predicted to finish in the cellar of Hockey East when the pre-season polls were released. When all was said and done in March, however, the Minutemen finished tied for sixth place and posted the best mark since the program was reinstated for the 1993-94 season.

Yesterday afternoon at the annual Hockey East Media Day, the league's coaches placed UMass in a tie for seventh place with UMass-Lowell in this year's pre-season poll. But if the Minutemen have anything to say about it, they are looking to once again prove that they are a better squad then the poll predicted.

"Polls are polls. Some teams look at them, and it will either put them up or down, but we see it as motivation," UMass senior captain Nathan Sell said yesterday at the Fleet Center. "You have to have some pressure on yourself, but you can't let it weigh you down. After all, even the No. 1 team in the country has to pressure themselves to remain No. 1."

Ironically, the No. 1 team in the conference, as well as in the nation, is Hockey East rival Boston College. It is a familiar spot for the Eagles, who lost in the national championship game two years ago and made the Frozen Four last year before falling to eventual national champion Maine. BC also started last season in the same position as they are in this year.

"Our strength is from the blue line back, but we also have good forwards," Eagles coach Jerry York said. "Basically we have the same team as we did last year, except we are more mature now. I think that we have a chance to be one of the top five or six teams in the country."

New Hampshire is slotted to finish second this year, while Maine is right on their heels in third place. Providence College, Boston University, Northeastern, the Minutemen, Lowell and Merrimack College round out the remainder of the poll.

"I think that we're going to be a very good team this year, but we are playing in a very tough conference," UMass hockey coach Joe Mallen said. "There's no telling what will happen. BC could be the No. 1 team in the nation, but UNH and Maine can't be that far behind them. BU is also going to be a good team, so there's a big logjam right now."

The Minutemen, who finished at 12-21-2, 8-14-2 in Hockey East, lost five players from last year's team, including captain Dean Stork. However, UMass returns nine of its top 10 scorers, five of its top six defensemen and both goaltenders. Add in a new freshman class, and the Maroon and White seem primed to better last year's mark.

"We're excited [about this year]. There comes a time to turn the page and start over again, and we're ready to go," Mallen said. "We're in a position where we have a great goalie

Turn to HOCKY, page 7

Field hockey hits road to tame cross-state canines

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

It's not the size of the dog in the fight, it's the size of the fight in the dog.

At least that's what the Massachusetts field hockey team will be thinking when they trek to Beantown tonight for a 7 p.m. showdown with the No. 13 Terriers of Boston University.

After a tough 4-1 loss to the top-ranked Huskies of Connecticut on Sunday, the Minutewomen (3-6) will welcome the challenge of getting back on the winning track against the premier program in the America East conference.

"Our spirits are up for this game; we're much more into it," said sophomore midfielder Jill Fantasia. "BU is a regional rival, so our emotions will definitely be high."

This contest will put the wraps on a hellish early season schedule for the Maroon and White, during which nine ranked teams tested UM's mettle over a grueling four week period.

Big games against perennial powerhouses Maryland, UConn, and North Carolina may have put somewhat of a dent in UM's record, but the team has now amassed the experience necessary to turn the corner and punish both their Atlantic 10 foes and regional rivals like the Terriers.

"Now that our conference games are coming up, we have to take it more personally," Fantasia said. "We have to get into it more. It's not like we haven't been into our last six games, but now the challenge has really come to do well in our conference, and throughout the Massachusetts region."

The Terriers (8-2, 4-0 America East) have enjoyed their best season in recent memory, outshooting their opposition 215-98 while holding a decisive 127-52 penalty-corner advantage.

BU has also found success by beating its opponents to the net; the Terriers have put home 25 first-half goals while allowing only 11 scores by their opposition in the first 35 minutes of play.

The Minutewomen, on the other hand, have encountered a great deal of difficulty in scoring goals over the first portion of their 99 slate. In the Maroon and White's six losses this season, the team has tallied a mere four goals to its opposition's 20. But the team has put in long hours of practice, and may have finally discovered the formula for increased offensive success.

"We were thinking too much, trying to make the little passes and circle," said sophomore forward Lindsay Abbott. "Now we're just going to hit the 23 and go to the goal, shoot earlier and more often, and try to score more."

That plan should pay off against the Terriers, who have yet to solidify their goalkeeper position. Senior Noreen Flanagan was the early season choice of BU Coach Sally Starr, but the New Jersey native has allowed 2.03 goals per game and prompted an increase in playing time for sophomore Susan Harrington.

Coach Starr will be orchestrating her 398th career game tonight, putting her on the verge of true skipper "stardom." Only UConn's Nancy Stevens (445 games) and Old Dominion's Beth Anders (413 games) have coached over 400 career games at the Division I level.

But unfortunately for Starr, the eve of her shot at coaching greatness has come against a UMass team hellbent on righting a turbulent season.

"We're going to step it up against BU, turn everything around, and get our heads back in the right places," Abbott said. "We've put a lot of things together as a team, and talked about what we need to do. We're going to win."

PAUL BEDDIE/COLLEGIAN

Jill Fantasia and the UM field hockey team will look to right the ship when they travel to Beantown to take on the 13th-ranked Terriers of Boston University tonight.

UM downhill sweeps the podium and wins it all at Plattekill Mtn.

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Correspondent

Somewhere in upstate New York, there is a little skiing town by the name of Roxbury. In this little town there is a mountain called Plattekill. On this mountain there is a life during the skiing off-season. This life is the heart palpitation of mountain biking.

This past weekend as the leaves began to change, Plattekill Mountain held an extreme biking event. Along with collegiate races hosted by Northeastern and BU was a hiking series drawing the East Coast's finest slalom, downhill and cross country riders of all ages.

People were camping out in the hills surrounding the ski lodge. Each of the gravel parking lots was lined with vans representing different bike companies and sports stores, creating a market-type feeling with everything from frames to tires and t-shirts being sold. Men and women clad in shin guards, helmets and chest protectors poured out of cars outfitted with bike racks and toolboxes.

Lining up for the chairlift were intense, suped up, hardcore, full suspension hikes ready to take on the steep, rocky course of an expert Plattekill trail. This course made the run in Vermont look flat. The bruises were plentiful after riders flipped, slid and soared off their bikes. These narrow paths were littered with broken roots, logs and jagged boulders demanding full force pedaling and the opportunity to catch some air at the ending double jumps.

The UMass downhill biking team road beside the expert, pro, semi-pro and sponsored riders in the expo. After a successful cross-country race on Saturday, with Donny Quimby and Tyson "Chickenman" Connor taking fourth and sixth in the class A race, the downhill team dominated the collegiate downhill, sweeping the podium with first, second, and third places in class A. Ken Avery, Clayton Harper and Marty Walsh rode hard, obliterating the competition with their speed and handling on this difficult run. In men's class B, Sean Boland rode ferociously and took 4th behind Northeastern.

Out of 10 teams present in the event, our bikers radiated maroon and white, eclipsing all the other colleges. This win was just another example of the Minutemen's strength and power over any mountain.

Next weekend's dual slalom and cross-country races will be an opportunity for the students of UMass to wit-

Turn to DOWNHILL, page 7

CATHERINE TURNER/COLLEGIAN

Ken Avery took top honors in the downhill at Plattekill Mountain this weekend as the Minutemen sliced through the rest of the field.

The Massachusetts

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVJ Issue XXJJ

Monday, October 7,1999

First SGA climbs mountains of issues

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The first official meeting of the semester for the Undergraduate Student Senate was held last night. Although the majority of the meeting was spent on appointing positions, a brief synopsis of the year was given. Following last week's elections, ties that resulted were broken through motions for Senators in four buildings. Seats were also appointed for multiple positions in the Student Judiciary. The judiciary will be active this semester, hearing cases from both last semester and this year.

In addition to the annual swearing in of the newly elected members of the Senate, both Trustee Seth Avakian and President Jeff Howe spoke on the work done over the summer and the pressing issues that will continue to be focused on throughout the year.

Cited by Avakian as one of the most important concerns was the alcohol notification issue. The referendum, which was voted down by students, states that parents could be notified of alcohol violations of students under the age of 21. "We are really against this idea and will fight to the bones to have as little affect as possible on UMass students," said Avakian.

His other goals for the year include working toward having better cable options for on campus students. This has become an issue of time and therefore, though attempts are being made for improvements next semester, most likely changes will not be made until the upcoming fall. Avakian also plans to work on placing an ATM machine in Southwest. An exact location for the ATM has not been determined.

The issue of privatization is one that remains a priority, as bids are presently being taken for the bookstore and University Store. No decisions will be made on the subject until after a committee has looked over the bids in early November. The SGA intends to remain involved and aware of the effects this may have on students.

President Jeff Howe, who spoke only briefly last night, wrote out a report informing all members of the Senate what he had already accomplished and was looking forward to completing this year.

This past summer Howe was successfully able to inform residents through Housing of their rights as they arrived back on campus. An ongoing project for Howe has been the parking issues that are occurring in the purple lot located by Orchard Hill. Presently, meetings and negotiations are taking place on whether to add additional parking spaces.

Howe, along with Avakian and Mikale Billard, has endorsed a plan to place cameras in the lot next to Alumni Stadium and near the Career Center. The cameras would function similarly to the ones located in the library and would work as increased security and cut back on vandalism.

He is also currently working with Enrollment Services to increase diversity in the Commonwealth College. Howe feels the lack of diversity within the College lies in the recruitment of the program.

Due to an early adjournment of the meeting, two motions were never reached. The first motion regarded the development of a system to notify parents for alcohol violations by the Board of Trustees. It is the SGA's primary responsibility to set standards for student behavior by the Wellman Document, therefore, they do not support this new policy.

The second motion involved the New Students Program. It was expressed that an overwhelming number of students were dissatisfied with the program, and that a review committee should be established to look at what can be done differently to make the experience better for the Spring of 2000.

Both of these motions will be presented at the next SGA meeting in two weeks, as well as a presentation of proposals to solve old issues by Howe and Avakian.

NICOLE KING/COLLEGIAN

Sewing

Carly Smith tailors a pair of pants in the craft center.

Mysteries Surround UM death

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

No services have been planned in the death of Arthur Rudolph, the University of Massachusetts senior that was found dead last Friday. No cause of death has been released by the medical examiner.

Locked in the backseat of a car, Rudolph was found by Amherst Police and Fire Departments who were dispatched to the scene and broke the windows of the automobile in order to gain access. Rudolph was a senior at UMass, and contrary to some rumors, was still enrolled at the University.

According to Javier Cevallos, Vice-Chancellor of Student Affairs, no one has been in contact with his office about possible services or memorial for Rudolph.

"Such an activity would be planned through my office, but we haven't planned anything as of yet as we haven't been contacted," Cevallos said.

Merle Ryan, Dean of Students at UMass, also reported no contact from Rudolph's family.

"At this point, no, we haven't been contacted, and of course they can contact [us] if they wish," Ryan said. She did add that roommates of Rudolph have had contact with her.

"I'm totally open to contact from any of the involved parties, but I have yet to receive a call," Ryan said

Assistant Dean of Students Paul Vasconcellos was contacted about the found body Friday afternoon.

"I then contacted the Amherst police, and while they wouldn't give me a name," Vasconcellos, "they were able to confirm that a body was found."

The Assistant Dean has contacted the professors of Rudolph's roommates, but reported that none of the deceased's professors had contacted him.

As for planning a possible memorial service, Vasconcellos said that, like others, he had no personal contact with the family about such a possible event.

"We've planned these things before, and if approached, of course we'd be totally willing to arrange such an event, but we haven't been contacted," Vasconcellos said.

But Rudolph's roommates have contacted Vasconcellos, and the Assistant Dean stressed that both his office and others were available to students affected by such a tragedy.

"It usually takes a few days for people to figure out what they need and how they are affected," Vasconcellos said. "I'm not really sure how long that group of individuals had been living together, but if they need something, we are going to try to help them."

For Vasconcellos, the death of a student was pause for reflection.

"The loss of any life, particularly a young life, is always very sad," Vasconcellos said. "I guess it's a reminder to all of us how life is more fragile than we generally consider it to be."

Time to market at UMass

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

This fall, students that are interested in learning about marketing have new opportunities at the University of Massachusetts.

For the first time in campus history, TIME magazine will be running an Industry-Education Partnership with the university. Through the marketing internship, students will be able to gain hands-on experience through their on-campus internship. UMass was chosen as one of five universities such as Northeastern, Bridgewater State College, University of New Hampshire, and San Diego State College. According to Sean Smith, manager of the TIME magazine program and of EdVenture Partners, the qualifications for choosing the universities were based on the number of students attending the college, the geographic area of each college, and the high caliber academic reputation of the each of the five schools.

According to Dr. Kathleen Debevec the head of the Marketing Department and faculty liaison for the project, this type of hands-on training is not unusual for UMass. Debevec explained that three years ago, students from UMass had participated in a program with General Motors that is similar to the program that currently exists with TIME magazine. Students who participated in the General Motors' campaign had an opportunity to compete with 109 other schools in the area of advertising and campaign ideas. UMass was the winner of the competition and ever since has had similar programs taking place at the university.

A total of 36 students will be taking part in this new program. According to Debevec the students are, "a diverse group of juniors and seniors" She went on to explain that the students come from many different backgrounds as far as their majors are concerned, and that they all contribute to different aspects of the campaign. The group has already begun work on their project and settled upon the name M2K promotions for their organization.

As part of the assignment, students will be interpreting and analyzing research in order to develop, present, and execute a strategy for TIME magazine. According to Debevec students were broken down into groups according to personal interest and expertise. Students were broken down into groups so that they could work more effectively and, "apply the skills that they learned in other courses," Debevec said.

The student groups involved in the project are promotions, public relations, a direct marketing group, and a group that is in the process of designing a website for the magazine. Currently, the organization is doing research and disposing a questionnaire in order to gauge student reaction to the magazine. They then plan upon acting accordingly as to the best way to promote student awareness for the magazine.

According to Smith this program is invaluable to both TIME and to the students participating in the internship. He explained that the internship would give students, "valuable business skills," and "world experience," that they will need to work in the world of marketing. While, the internship will benefit TIME magazine because it will help them to explore a new market and, "allow them the ability to reach college campuses," Smith said.

PAM FITZPATRICK/COLLEGIAN

Milk, it does a body good.

Freshman, Travis Gross, loads up on his calcium as he gets a glass of milk at the Berkshire Dining hall.

Cable outage hits Sylvan

By Andrea Peers
Collegian Staff

The on-going cable crisis in Sylvan residential area has left some 900 students without cable service. The problem began Monday morning when students from Brown, Cashin, and McNamara Residential dorms called the Telecommunications office, complaining about the cable. The cable outage left angry students with a quiet room, and no solution.

All of the 912 rooms in Sylvan are connected to a main feed, which provides the cable to all three buildings. The feed is used with a receiver, which is fed radio waves that then pick up the cable stations. There are two of these receivers on campus. One is Sylvan, and the other is located in Southwest. The cable outage, according to Dennis Bromery, who is the Telecommunications Manager for Housing, said it could have involved a number of factors. The company, which maintains the receivers is New England Digital. A contract with the University and New England Digital states that any maintenance to do with receivers is under the hands of the company.

Bromery said that a call was made to the Company on Tuesday. Workers arrived on campus yesterday after receiving the complaint, and ruled out all possible causes for the outage. After much work, the problem was solved. The receiver needed to be adjusted, and the amplifier was re-set. Bromery estimated that the cost of the repair would not exceed $1,000.

Telecommunications took measures to warn students in these buildings about the problem and made it a number one priority, according to Bromery. A general broadcast voice mail was sent to all Resident Assistants, Resident Directors, and Cluster Offices of each building in Sylvan, informing them in hopes that they would forward the message to all residents.

Despite the cable problem being solved, students are still angry about the lack of service and information they received during the crisis. One issue is the poor quality of cable stations 4 and 5, which are direct stations from Boston. Buildings across campus either receive a faded reception or nothing at all. Bromery said this is a concern, but money is a factor in solving the problem. Ann Mueller, a senior who lives in Cashin Residence Hall, commented on the situation.

"I never received a phone call about it. And we still don't get channels 4 and 5. It's never a clear picture. I'm from north of Boston, and I like to watch local news, but I can't," she said.

Mike Melillo, a junior who resides in McNamara was outspoken on the issue as well. "I'm sick of it. It's a poorly run system where technicians come after a 24-hour period. It should be an immediate service, and we're still paying for it," he said.

Melillo and his suite mate, Dan McCarthy, also said that neither of them received a voice mail concerning the problem.

Sylvan may have their cable back for now, but Telecommunications needs to work on other problems with student cable and service, in order to prevent another situation like this from occurring.

Students respond

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

In the past few days, a cable outage in the Sylvan Residential Area left 900 students without cable. Technicians began working on Brown, McNamara and Cashin dorms in an attempt to fix the problems yesterday.

Students that the Daily Collegian spoke to about the interruption in cable service were divided on the issue.

"Well, it works fine now, and to be honest, I didn't try to watch it when it was working," Laura Holle, a McNamara junior majoring in elementary education, said. "It doesn't really bother me if I'm not trying to use it."

Katie Miller, an undecided Freshman McNamara resident, said that her cable was out, but that it worked on Tuesday.

"It was annoying last night when we thought it didn't work and then it did," Miller said, "and this morning (Wednesday) it was going in and out."

Miller reported that she doesn't watch a lot of television anyway, usually not more than two shows a week.

For Samalid Madonado, a McNamara Freshman majoring in computer science, the cable outage was an annoyance for a person that watches both afternoon and evening television.

"I was so bored. After homework, I wanted to sit down and watch a movie, and I just couldn't do it," Madonado said. "It's working now, but last night, I was watching a film and the cable cut off right in the middle of the movie, and the rest of the channels cut out too."

In Cashin Dorm, Enzo Sulpizi, a Freshman computer systems engineer, wasn't as bothered by the outage

"It's back on now, and it was working for me last night," Sulpizi said. "But Monday night I wanted to watch the football game, and so I was a little ticked that we weren't getting cable then."

In Brown, Senior history major Vincent Flemming was disturbed by cable outage.

"Monday, we had no service, and Tuesday, we did. It was certainly disturbing, but I got through it," Flemming said.

Brown freshmen Jonathon Sho, an engineering major, reported that he didn't really care about the outage.

"Ours was out the past couple of days, but I was fairly busy both days, so that didn't really bother me," Sho said. "I don't really remember Monday at this point in the week anyway."

EXTENDED FORE: 357

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 56 LOW: 25	HIGH: 59 LOW: 38	HIGH: 66 LOW: 46

Baked Goods

A Umass Chef pulls his life together after a bout with the hard life. Read about it in Campus Profile.

PAGE 2

The Art Of War

This week's art cover looks at the games we play, and more specifically, the war games. Read Arts; you'll discover a whole new world.

PAGE 5

Clipping the Eagles' wings

Parsa Samii and the Massachusetts men's tennis team looked to beat Boston College yesterday at Boyden Courts.

PAGE 12

Arts & Living 5
Comics 11
Crossword 11
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 12

ON THE INTERNET

www.dailycollegian.com

Campus Profile

Campus redemption tale

Dining hall cook overcomes troubled past

PHOTO/PATRICK COLLEGIAN

Kosher Dining Hall cook, Nick DeRaleau.

By Natty Yagudin
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – Most students who eat at the Kosher Dining Hall at the University of Massachusetts would never guess that Nick DeRaleau, their popular cook, is a born again Christian who was once a drug addict.

Indeed, DeRaleau finds his place in the kosher kitchen most appropriate. "I believe that God has plan for all of us," he said.

Behind his rounded face and frequent smile hides a story of alcoholism, drug use, and finding spirituality later in life.

Rebellious Early Life

DeRaleau was born in West Springfield, during what he calls "the tail end of the baby boomers." He was the youngest of three children.

When talking about his family, DeRaleau is hesitant. "It wasn't like a storybook," he said. "There wasn't a lot of love, nurturing, and support."

He described his family as dysfunctional and alcoholic. His father, a blue-collar worker and a veteran of the Korean War, was an alcoholic. His brother was "into Rock n' Roll and drugs."

At an early age, DeRaleau was diagnosed as dyslexic. "I think it was a minor case of dyslexia. My problem was more emotional," he said.

DeRaleau defines his childhood as part of a strange and turbulent decade. "Everyone had an opinion about something," he said

The Addiction

"I went probably three to four years of real heavy drug use," DeRaleau said. "Mostly pot, LSD, downers."

At the time, it seemed for DeRaleau that everyone was doing drugs, and that was a common thing to do. "I always searched out the night life," he said.

After graduating from high school, DeRaleau spent the next four years working as a cook at different restaurants. "I never thought of going to college," he said.

Meanwhile, he continued to do drugs. As a drug addict, he bounced from one job to another because he couldn't keep a job. That fact, however, didn't stop him from spending most of his time consuming the illegal substances. The addiction, he said, was too strong.

"It was a real good escape mode," said DeRaleau. "Then it became a necessity."

The Recovery

When he was 24, DeRaleau's mother sought out help for him. She called the state representative for West Springfield, who convinced him to join a rehabilitation center. He then joined the center two days later, and stayed there for 30 days.

"I remember waking up the first morning and thinking, 'what the hell did I do?'" said DeRaleau. "But it was the best thing I did."

After spending a month at the center, DeRaleau moved to a halfway house in Northampton. He said he would probably dead, in jail, or on the street had it not been for his recovery.

The recovery marked the first time DeRaleau had to deal with the real world as an adult. He had to learn about things such as paying bills and keeping a checkbook.

"I was learning how to live life at 24. All of this was difficult to do and stay sober at the same time," said DeRaleau.

While living in the halfway house, DeRaleau started going to meetings of a local support group for alcoholics. The group became a significant part of his life.

"It was very much a community and a society within itself," said DeRaleau.

Going to College

After sobering up, DeRaleau decided that he wanted to go to college for the first time in his life.

"If I was gonna do this, I was gonna do it right," said DeRaleau of what prompted his decision to attend school later in life.

He was 30 when he registered at New Hampshire College's Culinary Arts School. He was shocked when he found out he was going to have to live with 18-year-olds. All of a sudden, he was thrown into an environment that resembled his early life: alcohol, drugs, and no responsibility.

DeRaleau, however, was determined not to let that factor destroy his attempts at building a new life.

"The thing that I made sure [was] not to subject myself around drugs," said DeRaleau.

After successfully graduating in May 1996, DeRaleau completed a yearlong internship at Recovery Hospital in Sees Hampshire. The institution functions as a recovery center for drug addicts. Later, he moved to Greenfield, Massachusetts and worked at a bakery shop for a few months.

He was then accepted for a part- time position at the Kosher Dining Hall at UMass. Due to the success of the dining hall, the position was later turned into a full-time job.

New found Spirituality

DeRaleau joined a born-again Christian church about two years ago, as part of a new- found spirituality. He also got engaged this summer.

As to his job at the Kosher Dining Hall, DeRaleau finds it ironic yet fitting for the life he has led so far.

Without being Jewish himself, he understands how important the Jewish food laws are because he himself is a deeply spiritual Christian.

"God has been looking out for me my whole life," said DeRaleau. "He takes care of people who can't take care of themselves."

Three indicted in Russian scheme

By Robert O'Harrow Jr.
Washington Post

NEW YORK – Federal prosecutors Tuesday unsealed the indictment of three people and three companies in connection with a sprawling probe of more than $7 billion in suspicious money transfers from Russia through accounts at the Bank of New York.

The charges are the first to be brought in the year-old investigation. Prosecutors are trying to determine whether the vast sums of money- which raced through the Bank of New York accounts to financial institutions throughout the United States and the world- were the product of a sophisticated money-laundering operation, represented Russian capital flight and tax evasion, or stemmed from other illegal operations.

Although authorities are a long way from determining who sent the money- or proving those transfers violated U.S.money-laundering laws- they hope the charges announced Tuesday will spur some of the key figures to cooperate with the investigation.

"Many questions about the various sources of the monies flowing through the accounts at the Bank of New York remain to be answered," U.S. Attorney Mary Jo White said in a statement, adding that "the ongoing investigation is very intense and broad, and it is likely to go on for some time."

Authorities believe some of the money came from organized-crime groups and corrupt Russian officials. The Bank of New York has not been charged with any wrongdoing.

Named in the indictment are Lucy Edwards, a former bank vice president who was fired in August; her husband, Peter Berlin, a Russian native (and now U.S. citizen) who authorities believe is the central figure in the case; and Alekesy Volkov, a business associate of Berlin's. The document also names three companies- Benex International Co., Becs International L.L.C. and Torfinex Corp.- that sources said held the accounts that handled most of the transactions.

The indictment charges that Edwards, Berlin and Volkov "conspired to illegally transmit funds and receive deposits" through the Benex and Becs accounts, officials said. It also charges the individuals and the companies with conducting an "illegal money transmitting business," as well as with "engaging in an illegal banking operation" by receiving deposits without proper state or federal authorization, officials said.

T. Barry Kingham, a lawyer representing Edwards, Berlin, Benex and Becs, declined to comment on the indictment, saying "we will respond at the appropriate time and in the appropriate forum." The couple lives in London, and federal law enforcement officials said it's not clear if they can be extradited for these charges.

Lawyer Michael G. Davies, who represents Volkov and Torfinex, said that both "deny having engaged in any wrongdoing whatsoever." Davies would not say where Volkov could be located. A lawyer who recently worked for Volkov, however, said he was in Russia.

The charges were filed under seal in federal court on Sept. 16 and only announced Tuesday. The indictment describes an alleged scheme in which Edwards helped Berlin and Volkov create companies and open accounts at the bank that were used to move enormous amounts of money.

In 1996 Berlin opened accounts in the name of Benex and Becs at a Bank of New York branch in lower Manhattan. His wife was a signatory with him on the Becs account, and Volkov was a signatory with Berlin on the Benex account.

From about February 1996 through July 1999, about $4.85 billion moved into the Benex account. During that same period, the Becs account received about $2 billion in deposits, according to the indictment. These deposits were made on almost a daily basis and then were transfered out within days to financial institutions around the world.

Torfinex, a company headed by Volkov, transfered the money under the direction of "individuals in Russia," the indictment said. "Typically, there were hundreds of wire transfers per day to and from the Benex and Becs accounts," the indictment said.

Authorities indicate that Edwards, the bank official, was not a passive bystander. The indictment alleges that in 1997 she once chided a Torfinex employee for "failing to execute certain wire transfers for Benex and Becs."

Edwards, like her husband a Russian emigre, started at the bank in 1988 and worked her way up from a job as a teller to a London-based posting as vice president of the bank's Eastern European branch. Company officials suspended her along with another executive in August when the investigation became public. Edwards was then fired for allegedly falsifying bank documents and violating internal policies. Bank Chairman Thomas A. Renyi acknowledged in testimony before Congress that bank officials did not pursue questions about her husband's activities because she was "well regarded."

The indictment also charges the three knew what they were doing was illegal and ignored an order from the New York State Banking Department to cease transmitting money.

Lewis D. Schiliro, assistant director in charge of the FBI's New York field office, said that by unsealing the indictment, investigators also can now share information with counterparts overseas. That's essential now that much of the probe will focus on determining who in Russia sent money to the Bank of New York, he said.

"We have to be able to share information with them," Schiliro said, adding that investigators are already working on the case with authorities in "a great many" countries. "This is the beginning of what we hope to be major inroads in this case."

Tuition increases cause concern

By Kenneth R. Weiss and Richard T. Cooper
Los Angeles Times

The rapid increase in college tuitions nationwide slowed this year, suggesting that the steep sticker price of private institutions may be straining the limits of what politicians and the public may tolerate, economists said Tuesday.

Tuition at private four-year colleges and universities rose 4.6 percent this fall, according to the College Board.

Although the increase was the lowest in 27 years, the break for parents and students is limited- tuition continues to rise at more than twice the rate of inflation.

But the change in the trend may be significant, experts say.

"There's a lot more pressure from alumni and the government. More people are saying, '$150,000 for four years? That's a lot of money,'" said Morton Owen Schapiro, the University of Southern California's vice president for planning and a higher education economist. "It's harder to say that you need a 6 percent increase in tuition, when the school has an endowment in the billions of dollars and it's increasing 20 percent a year."

With states more willing to increase subsidies, public colleges and universities across the country raised tuition and fees 3.5 percent on average, according to the College Board's annual survey of 2,700 institutions. Last year, public university fees rose 4 percent, and private tuition 5 percent.

The cost of enrolling in the nation's elite private colleges and universities soared to more than $30,000 or more.

Most students, however, do not pay the full sticker price, given the widespread tuition discounting and financial aid packages available to poor students and even middle-class students from families earning as much as $100,000 a year.

Patricia A. McGuire, president of Trinity College in Washington, said that 35 percent of her entering freshmen class has all of their costs covered by discounts, grants and loans.

"Colleges and universities are making a great effort to work with families," she said.

At the same time, most increases in financial aid are taking the form of loans, said Lawrence Gladieux, executive director of policy analysts for the College Board.

"More students," he said, "are paying for the cost of higher education out of future income."

Gaston Caperton, president of the College Board, defended the annual fee hikes, saying college expenses are too often exaggerated by a public, focusing on a select few elite schools.

The average tuition at four-year private institutions is $15,380 this year, he pointed out. Public universities average $3,356 and community colleges are cheaper still.

Furthermore, he said, there has been too much focus on the cost of college and too little on the lifetime returns for four years of investment.

Given that a college graduate today earns about twice that of a worker with only a high school diploma, he said, "a college education is worth about $1 million over a lifetime."

The cost of attending a four-year college has more than doubled since 1980, even after adjusting for inflation. This year's 4.6 percent increase among private four-year institutes again outstrips inflation, which is running about 2 percent, as measured by the Consumer Price Index.

David L. Warren, president of the National Association of Independent Colleges and Universities, was delighted that the average increases remained below 5 percent. He calculated that this year's increase among private institutions was the lowest rate in 27 years.

"It's a corner-turning moment for us," Warren said.

The University of Massachusetts'
Something Every Friday
presents

"Jabali Africa"

"Jabali Africa" presents the music and dance of Kenya. This 4-person group, all former members of the Kenyan National Theater Troupe, have toured Europe and the United States and now come to the Bowker Stage.

Friday October 8, 1999
Bowker Auditorium, 8pm...FREE

The FREE movie "American Pie" will be shown in the Bluewall Cafe at 10 pm. The Movie will be shown again on Monday Oct. 11 in the Campus Center auditorium at 8 pm.

Visit us on the web:
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

This program is made possible by a grant from the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, UMass Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

The Daily Collegian

Northampton's Favorite
Sports Bar and Dance Club
City Cafe
1 Pearl St. Northampton•584-4100

• 3 BARS - 2 Dance Floors• Gameroom - Pool table• 19 Tap Line
• Satellite Dish, NFL Ticket• KENO• U-MASS Alumnae Owned

NICOLE FURNA/ COLLEGIAN

Dinner Time

Rebecca Owens and Ashleigh D'Antonio prepare a meal of excellence in the Student Union kitchen.

East Timor Peace plan Ambushed

By Keith B. Richburg
The Washington Post

DILI, East Timor – Two militiamen were killed and two Australian soldiers were wounded Wednesday during an ambush on an Australian military convoy in the East Timorese town of Suai, in the first gunbattle of the 17-day-old international operation to bring peace to the violence-wracked territory.

The militiamen, armed with assault rifles, ambushed the Australians about 9.5 miles inside East Timor as they were returning from a trip to the border with Indonesian-ruled western Timor. The Australian peacekeeping troops had been repatriating western Timorese militiamen captured during an earlier sweep of Suai, according to the commander of the multinational intervention force.

In a press briefing late Wednesday night, Maj. Gen. Peter Cosgrove said that after the Australian convoy was ambushed, "they counterattacked," killing two militiamen. He said the two wounded Australians "would be fine," but may have to return to Australia for further medical treatment. "This is the first time that Interfet soldiers have been wounded," said Cosgrove, who heads the U.N.-backed mission known as the International Force for East Timor. Calling the ambush "a sneak attack."

Earlier in the day, Australian, British and New Zealand troops moved into Suai, a notorious militia stronghold, and threw a cordon around the town to search for weapons and militiamen. Cosgrove said militia trucks began leaving Suai rapidly as the international troops moved in, and when one truck tried to run a checkpoint, the foreign troops opened fire at the tires, slightly wounding two militiamen inside. He said two others in the truck suffered "scratches and bumps" from the truck's crash, and all the injured militiamen were flown to Dili for treatment.

Until Wednesday, the operation to secure East Timor, which was ravaged by Indonesian military and militia violence following the territory's vote for independence from Indonesia, had gone unexpectedly smoothly. There had been no engagements between the foreign troops and the militias. In every case where the peacekeeping troops have moved in, the militias have chosen to flee. But in an interview last week, Cosgrove had warned against complacency, predicting there would eventually be a shootout and that militiamen were likely to be killed by Australian or other foreign troops.

La Femme Nikitas

By Will Englund
The Baltimore Sun

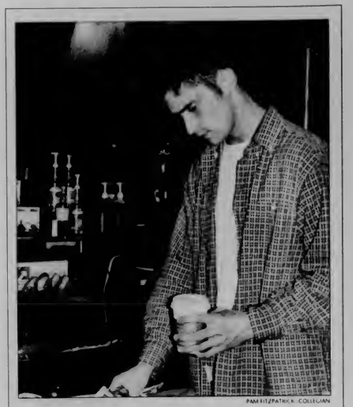
MOSCOW – It's an image guaranteed to send a shiver up the spine of any raw recruit.

The legendary Baltic female sniper has reappeared on the field of battle, with a report out of Dagestan on the front page of the newspaper Sevodnya over the weekend providing the "shocking details."

This is at least the fourth war within the former Soviet Union in which troops have spread stories about pitiless women- always fighting for the other side- taking aim with powerful weapons.

Sevodnya said that three female snipers had been detected in recent fighting in Dagestan. Two were killed, and in one of those little imperfections that make the story seem more real, one was found to be not from the Baltics but a Ukrainian. The third was caught by troops while she was holding someone else's baby, trying to pass herself off as a refugee. The newspaper said the soldiers became suspicious when they overheard her talking to the baby in a "non-motherly" way.

She's somewhere in detention, the newspaper wrote.



The article said it appeared that the women were former biathlon competitors, trained for years in marksmanship. They are said to be strictly mercenaries, paid per kill.

"It's nonsense," said Andrei Babitski, a radio reporter who has spent two years in Chechnya. "I've never seen anything of the kind."

"It is just absurdity and nonsense," said Alexander Tikhonov, president of the Russian Biathlon Federation, after checking with his counterparts in the three Baltic countries.

"It's a sexual legend," said Igor Rotar, military correspondent for the newspaper Nezavisimaya Gazeta. "It moves from war to war. Look, soldiers love to get together and talk about beautiful, tall women, blond, long-legged."

The only twist is that these beauties are killers. But the story never lacks for believers.

PHOTO/PATRICK COLLEGIAN

Coffee time

Senior psychology major Loren Lindsley takes time to treat himself to coffee and a snack.

Industry pioneer found dead

By Myrna Oliver
Los Angeles Times

Leonard S. Shoen, the seminal founder of the do-it-yourself moving industry with his creation of U-Haul International Inc. in 1945, apparently has committed suicide. He was 85.

Shoen drove his car into a wooden utility pole in Las Vegas shortly before noon last Wednesday. The Clark County, Nev., coroner's office said Tuesday that the multimillionaire died of blunt force trauma and that his death was a suicide.

The innovative businessman had lived in Las Vegas since U-Haul was wrested from his control more than a decade ago in a scandalous family feud that included litigation, fistfights and even the slaying of a daughter-in-law.

Shoen suffered another business reversal of sorts last May when he withdrew his application for a gaming license from a reluctant Nevada Gaming Commission. He had sought the license for his World Trade Center hotel in Las Vegas that he bought in 1996.

Headquartered in Phoenix since 1967, U-Haul has about 14,000 independent dealers and 1,100 company-owned moving centers. Despite the family feud and a judgment in the founder's favor that resulted in temporary bankruptcy, U-Haul remains the leading company in the truck and trailer rental industry, ahead of its major competitor, Miami-based Ryder System. U-Haul also is a major operator of storage facilities.

Born in McGrath, Minn., and educated at Oregon State University, Shoen was fresh out of World War II Navy service when he began building trailers on a ranch in Washington. Nicknamed "Slick" for his ability to wheel and deal, he already had tried medical school, operating motels and owning a string of barbershops.

Fueled by families' need to move in the postwar era, especially to the West, Shoen within two years established a thriving network of U-Haul dealerships at service stations along the Pacific Coast. A fast-talking dynamo, he frequently took to the road himself to inspect and repair the orange trailers that originally rented for $2 a day.

By 1949, the trailers were available for one-way trips from most cities in the United States.

Known as tightfisted from the outset, Shoen provided a flamboyant object lesson to his executives in 1970 about spending money that accomplishes nothing but makes them feel better. He threw $1,000 in bills ranging from $1 to $100 onto a downtown Phoenix street- quickly snarling traffic as passersby stopped to scoop up the bills.

The Shoen family and company battle began in the mid-1980s over diversification. Concerned about the closing of the many service stations that handled their trailers, Shoen and his oldest son, Samuel, tried to move U-Haul into general rentals.

Under the umbrella Amerco Inc., they formed a furniture moving company and A-Z Rentals offering everything from videocassettes to mailboxes to motor homes and Jet Skis. The experiment was a financial disaster, and the highly profitable company started losing money.

Two of Shoen's younger sons, Joseph and Mark, wanted U-Haul to focus on its core do-it-yourself moving business. So they sued in 1986, forcing their father into early retirement.

Calling themselves "the outsiders," Shoen and other family members subsequently won a $1.5 billion jury award that a judge reduced to $461 million. The company sought bankruptcy protection from the debt, but eventually paid up and weathered the business squall.

Shoen regularly watched his sons slug one another at stockholders' meetings. Shoen's lawyer claimed that opponents set fire to his house because he represented the founder.

MICHAEL'S BILLARDS SPORTS BAR
10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Located near the Colonial Village bus stop at the corner of Rte. 9 and S. East St.
8 9
Friday Night @ 10:00
"B.J."
Saturday Night @ 10:00
"The Basement Dwellers"
Single Ca$h Tournament
Every Thurs. Night
at 7:30pm
Double Elimination
$5.00/person
Best! 1998

KLEIN'S ALL SPORTS
OCTOBERFEST SALE!
SAVE UP TO 50% OFF
SELECTED SHOES FROM nike PUMA adidas SKECHERS & MORE
30% OFF ALL FOOTBALL & SOCCER CLEATS
(SOCCER SAVE 20%)
ALL Champion CLOTHING 25% OFF
ALL adidas CLOTHING 20% OFF
ALL SUBURBAN TOP & BOTTOMS skateboard clothing 30-40% OFF
PLUS FIND GREAT SAVINGS IN ALL DEPARTMENTS
Ladies Street Cleat or Street Sweet your choice $29.95 KIDS '21" SAVE $9.20
SKECHERS USA mens DUKE $34.95 SAVE $15
adidas mens or ladies POSEIDON $49.99 SAVE $20 adidas kids SAVAGE $29.99 SAVE $20
UNBEATABLE!
PLUS FREE STORE LOCATIONS IN BOSTON
www.KLEINSALLSPORTS.COM

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
New York Style scene in Downtown Amherst.
New and exciting place to eat, offering Mediterrainian Cuisine and outdoor patio.
Featuring upscale microbrews.
Monday Night Football
Wednesday and Thursday DJ Fooz
Friday and Saturday Retro Top 40
Sunday Spanish Night
63 N. Pleasant St. 256-1600

THE TIBETAN ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS & STUDENTS FOR A FREE TIBET ARE PLEASED TO PRESENT: THE 4th ANNUAL
TIBET AWARENESS DAY
Special Appearance by Dadon (starred in WINDHORSE)
TIBETAN CHILDREN DANCE GROUP FROM BOSTON
JOEL ZOSS • DEVOTION
KATE O'CONNOR & OTHERS
AMHERST COMMON
Saturday, October 9, 1999
11am – 5pm
PHOTO EXHIBIT • TIBETAN FOOD (MOMOS) • CARPET WEAVING
ASTROLOGY & TIBETAN MEDICINE • TARA EXHIBIT • TIBETAN STONE MASONRY • TIBETAN TREASURES FOR SALE • ARTIFACTS • ART EXHIBIT AND DEMO BY MASTER THANGKA PAINTER KALSANG LODOE OSHOE
SURPRISE SPEAKER APPEARANCE (TBA)
COME AND LEARN ABOUT TIBET.
EXPERIENCE THE RICH TAPESTRY OF THE ENDANGERED CULTURE OF TIBET.
IN CASE OF RAIN THIS EVENT WILL BE HELD AT GRACE CHURCH (NEXT TO THE AMHERST COMMON)

Editorial/Opinion

The views and opinions expressed on this page are those of the individual writers and do not necessarily represent the views of the Collegian.

The almighty Kid Rock

Dan Viens

The time that we spend at this university is one of the turning points of our lives. These four years are the crossroads, if you will. A student's four or so years at college are a time when he or she must truly buckle down. They must look at themselves in the mirror and say, "All right. I'm going to take this grand opportunity of higher education and prepare myself the best I can for the real world, that I will soon be thrown into like a bloody sardine is thrown into a tank of sharks."

However, at the same time that this ultimate responsibility must be taken we must also let loose and sow our wild oats. Let's face it; once we're out of here we probably won't have that many Wednesday to Sunday weekends anymore. This brings us (unless you're a dork and you never hung out or a slacker and you never do work) to a pretty big dilemma. There is a lot of pressure on us as students to do well enough in school to make our parents proud and get a quality job, yet at the same time have a fulfilling social life. This, combined with the ever-changing technological world we live in, can make life extremely overwhelming. In order to help you to deal with these stresses of life I am going to share with you some advice that my wonderful mother used to give to me when life and or "the man" was gettin' me down.

"Dan," she would say.

"Yes mom?" I would reply.

"Son, it appears to me that your trials and tribulations have got you down," she would answer.

I'd say, "Golly, mom, you sure are right. What should I do about it?"

She would say, "Do you remember what the Chinese would do in ancient times when they found themselves wary and confused?"

Then I would say, "Mom, are you telling me that I should read the teachings of Confucius?"

Mom would answer, "No, that crap is too difficult to understand, but you should look to a modern English speaking equivalent of Confucius."

It was then that I realized my mother in all of her glory was telling me to look towards the teachings of the great American Shaman Kid Rock. I couldn't believe that I had been so ignorant as to not immediately turn to Kid Rock The Wiser when my life started spinning. Growing up in a trailer in Detroit, Kid Rock began studying religion at a very early age. From Christianity to Buddhism and even to Scientology there wasn't a practice that he didn't get involved in. He moved from one to the other because he just felt that none of them really worked for him. He has proclaimed himself as the Goldylocks of religion. None of them fit him just right. He also delved greatly into the world of philosophy. As a youth he would spend most of his time studying Descartes, Plato, Aristotle, Hume, Socrates etc. Again though he could not find one philosopher who really hit home for him.

What you must understand about my life advisor, Kid Rock, is that even though he disagreed with many parts of these religions and philosophies he did not merely dismiss them, as a lesser man may have. Instead, he took from each of them small parts that have now become Kid Rock's mass of wisdom. Eventually after he had read enough for a thousand men he decided that he needed to rest. He slept for one full year. When he awoke he had long strands of hair and a thin, uneven goatee. During his sleep he had many visions. He emerged at the other end of his slumber having sorted out all of his thoughts and ready to spread his wisdom.

Kid Rock then set up a booth outside of his trailer that said, "Smartest Guy in the Whole Damn Trailer Park." He would trade people advice for liquor, weed and whores. Word spread like wildfire all over the country about this incredibly smart musician who was changing people's lives left and right. Eventually he gained the hugely famous and successful status that he now holds. Each of us should be thankful that there are humans out there with the amount of wisdom Kid Rock possesses. His mission in life is to heal and help the common man. If you don't believe me then you must read on. I will tell you how his various albums, books and self-help tapes have made my life easier.

My parents were divorced when I was young. As I grew to be about thirteen, I was having a tough time with the fact that I would never be able to remember my parents as a loving couple. The only thing I could do was look to Kid Rock. This is what his words told me: "Well your parents aren't married/ They got a divorce/ What you gotta' do is get some whore/ When you're done with that go get a beer/ You can always think better when your mind ain't clear/ Because the Bud makes you wiser/ Oh yeah the Bud makes you wiser." Once I listened to Kid Rock I knew that I would never worry about my parents divorce if I simply drank and had sex all the time.

Then there was a time in high school when I contracted athlete's foot from the locker room floor. My foot was very irritated and I was highly self-conscious. Again I looked to The All-Knowing Kid Rock. Here is what he had to say: "So you got some fungus/ Your foot really itches/ You best go down town and get some bitches/ You can't be a wimp/ You gotta' be a pimp/ Sell they bodies fo' money/ Go buy some Wild Turkey/ Step in the shower/ Take a pee/ Ain't nothin' better to make athlete's foot flee." After listening to kid rock I realized that all I needed to get rid of my athlete's foot fungus were bitches, liquor and urine.

Kid Rock has honestly changed my life in a way that has made me happier to wake up each and every day. I'm sure there are some of you out there who think that I am insane, or that I am stretching the truth. Well I'm not. Kid Rock has a wealth of knowledge and wisdom that is just waiting to be tapped by each and every one of us. He is a lot younger than any clergy member so he will be able to identify with your problems much better than any member of the cloth. He won't be as critical as your parents, but at the same time he won't beat around the bush. Lastly it is really easy to remember and follow his advice because it all rhymes.

You may be wary because it seems that all of his advice revolves around promiscuity and alcohol consumption. This couldn't be farther from the truth. A lot of his advice revolves around fighting, drug use and representin'. Please, if you make use of oil, coal and all the other natural resources then why not make use of our huge supply of Kid Rock's knowledge and wisdom. It can only make the world a better place.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

South Carolina Blues

Kathleen Kalls

Pardon me if you are from South Carolina. I guarantee that you will not be pleased with the following portrayal of your sunny state.

Two years ago I got the notion that I should either transfer to a state, which I had never been to before or go on exchange to check out another part of the country. After 19 years straight of the Massachusetts accent (you have never heard anyone in my family say the letter R outside of my last name), I didn't want to go abroad before understanding the United States. Though I have never been to Martha's Vineyard or Nantucket, I felt I was ready for a change.

Much discussion and research went into my decision at first, including earthquakes, weather, food, color of hair and sports. What it came down to was to be in a city at a large public college. I also wanted to wear shorts after the first of September. After submitting three choices, I got the University of South Carolina in Columbia, the state capital. The guidebook stated that it was the center of sports, arts and many fine restaurants and I couldn't wait for August to test my ability in the extreme heat. And for the first and only time in my collegiate life, I actually got all of my classes, including tennis.

My first indication that things would not go as smoothly as I had dreamed was the initial roommate conversation. Mine turned out to be a 26-year-old undeclared sophomore who was from the northern outskirts of Maine where a rock grew out of her kitchen floor. Did I mention that she was a manic-depressive, but didn't want to take her medication? I also forgot to mention that she wanted to pull the old "sheet divider between us" trick the day I moved in.

Our suitemates were two girls from small rural towns in the state, Bamberg and Hampton. Amy actually used "fixin'" in her daily diction and claimed the kids in her town enjoyed "possum-kicking" on Friday nights. I was excited, though, because I wanted to meet kids from the south and not just hang out with the exchange ones.

My second indication that maybe South Carolina was the wrong choice came when I drove by the state house, lined with ornately carved statues and palmetto trees. High atop the building was the Confederate flag. You know, the one on the General Lee in the Dukes of Hazzard. South Carolina boastfully announces that it is a part of their history and culture. Strangely enough, apparently SC is the only state of the Confederates, which feels this way, as it is the only state in the union that allows it to fly.

I was outraged. Apparently state officials don't care to appeal to more than half their state's population who don't reminisce about the past so dreamily. And I was even more outraged when a classmate of mine wore a Confederate flag belt to our Southern Studies class every Tuesday and Thursday. The more I discovered the city, the more disappointed I felt. Stuck in the past, Columbia raised enough money to salute John C. Calhoun and many southern Civil War leaders, but couldn't fill the bookshelves in their brand new city library!

As for college life, being a Gamecock was not all that it was cracked up to be. I saw one win for the hallowed football team that draws over 80,000 per game in Williams-Brice Stadium. In every single one of my classes, at some point in the semester, the quote "Football is life here" was mentioned by the professor. It just didn't sit well with me that an entire pullout section was compiled by the city newspaper, The State, after every game, but barely a mention was made of the men's soccer team when they downed defending national champs No. 1 UCLA or of the consistently powerful women's hoops Atlantic Coast Conference schedule.

A deeper gender division existed there that even carried over into intramural coed softball, where girls earn three outs while boys must produce with just two. Females never did anything to earn that extra strike, but were given it to compensate for their apparent inability to compete with males in intramural softball.

The one image that I will never forget for the rest of my life is of a beautiful yellow 19th century plantation-style building complete with the tall white columns and decorative eaves I passed by every day on my way to class. And the blacks either in their black dresses and suits with white aprons milling about or in garden gear, primping the landscape to perfection.

Of course I know that slavery has been abolished and many African Americans have made their way in America, as evidenced by my professors and classmates. But it was just so striking to never see a white face among them. Maybe it was just the time of day I went by (this column is not attempting to hint at greater issues.)

Embracing the culture that she was thrown into, my roommate discovered the life she had been searching for under the beautiful sunny skies. She even adopted a reason to support the Confederate flag's existence in time.

Maybe it was out of disappointment, but I began to miss the abrupt style of New Englanders, which opposed South Carolina's license plate motto "Smiling faces, beautiful places." Though I still don't always feel equal up here, at least others could see the wave of the future and don't want to revel in the past.

Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian Staff Member.

Meal plan mayhem

Finally, after nearly a month of chaos and confusion, the meal plan is back to the way it should be. On Wednesday, September 29, the meal plan was switched back to normal. Now, each meal used is subtracted from the grand total allotted for the entire semester, rather than the amount allowed per week. The previous plan of having the meals counted by the week was about as productive as Housing Services. To add to the problems of the meal plan, Dining Services failed to inform returning students about the change. As a sophomore, I had no knowledge that such a system ever existed. When I swiped my card for the first time, I just though they hadn't reset the system yet. If only I had been right. After being here at school for only two weeks, I hadn't used 5 of my meals for that week and the next week, and couldn't carry my meals over to the rest of the semester. They are going to tell me that I had already lost 10 meals?! I don't think so. I paid for them and if I want to use them, I will. According to director of Dining Services Ken Toong, meals would not be lost until the end of the semester. If that were the case, that's not the impression neither I, nor anyone else I know, was given. As far as I knew, those meals were long gone. One student went to eat and was told that he wasn't allowed to because he had already used all of his meals for that week. Well, the last I know, he had paid for that meal and should be able to use it whenever he wanted to. I guess Dining Services showed me again that I was wrong. The goal behind changing the meal plan was to prepare UMass for new and advanced technology. Well, I don't know what new technology can be brought to Dining Services, but that is an entirely different issue. On the topic of this meal plan, Mr. Toong said, "The students are not ready for this type of system." What exactly is that supposed to mean? That we as students are not smart enough to handle this new technology? That we are unable to handle this new, complex system? Well, I don't know about anyone else, but the last person I need to tell me what I am and am not ready for is the director of Dining Services.

If Mr. Toong is so dedicated to making Dining Services a top-notch operation I, along with some others, have a few suggestions. First of all, what is the deal with all of those Styrofoam cups? Styrofoam has been proven to be one of the worst substances for the environment. That, coupled with the plastic forks, knives, spoons and plates, pumps out more pounds of trash per year than the entire country of Canada. Second, try working on hiring some competent employees. The other day at one of the D.C.s for dinner, there were no glasses. I asked them much if they (there were three of them standing there, doing nothing) could bring out some more. I also heard at least three other people ask the same thing. I set my tray down before heading back to get some glasses, but to my dismay there were still none there. I then proceeded, with the thousands of other thirsty people, to hike to the other side of the dining hall to get my beverages, crowding that side so much that the people getting their food over there couldn't get their drinks; all because three lazy employees didn't feel like getting glasses. Third, work on speeding up the lines. Some of us that go to school here are actually busy. Not everyone has time to wait in line for 15 minutes. And fourth, do something about the food. It smells like horse manure and tastes like bacteria. I know one person who has lost 10 pounds since they've been here because all they do is take one bite and throw up. The list could continue, but I will not bother mentioning the countless other problems. So, Mr. Toong, if you want to "bring dining services to a new level," worry about making our dining experience enjoyable and let us worry about when we will eat.

Erik Peterson is a UMass student.

Ed/Op cannot print Letters to the Editor that are in response to other printed Letters to the Editor.

Racist graffiti in Gorman is cowardly

To the editor:

We are writing this letter in response to the recent incident involving racist graffiti scribbled on the walls of Gorman dormitory. To many of you reading this, this is all too familiar. Others of you reading this letter may be genuinely surprised that here at UMass today, these behaviors are still happening. To almost all of us, these are repugnant acts. To those who actually did this act, this letter is of little consequence. To the rest of us, however, we must again take a stand.

In a pluralistic society, it is a matter of basic civil discourse to be mindful of the physical and psychological security of others. After all, our own security, as well as that of others, rests upon this. When people feel insecure, they react to that sense of insecurity in many ways including seeking formal and informal ways of being "safe". Even today with the ethnic strife of Eastern Europe, Eastern Africa and Eastern Timor, the horrific consequences of ethnic and civil hatred are all too bloody to witness.

As staff members of the Mental Health Department of University Health Services, we see these cycles appear on campus again and must remind the community that the overwhelming preponderance of us find this behavior deplorable. We are sadly aware that underneath the political, social and economic motivations for this, that the roots to this behavior spiral into complex and disturbing emotional grounds. This brief letter is not placed to explore it. Needless to say, however, that merely because someone is emotionally compromised in his or her personal life around issues of race, color, security or sexuality, that does not give them license or liberty to play out their private pain and discomfort in the public space of shard community. Such behavior is cowardly, ethically unsound and illegal.

Simply, honestly and forthrightly take a stand about this issue and let it be known that this is repugnant to whom and what you stand for. Look around the world at the hatred, violence and mayhem going on. While the beast may sleep in every human heart, let it be known that it has no room to move around here.

The Staff at Mental Health Services
University Health Services

White vs. Black article was ignorant

To the editor:
I am writing this letter in response to your ignorant statements and overall stupid article of what it means to be white and what it means to be black.
First of all, I don't know you and you don't know me, so it would be wrong to pass judgment. What I can say is that the authors did not think very much before writing this article. In fact, if this was meant to, in any way, shape or form identify and help how races feel about one another, this isn't helping the situation at all. The only thing this does is add coals to the burning fire, and that will only lead to more controversy.
I was born and raised in Brooklyn, New York. I went to an all-Jewish elementary school from kindergarten to eighth grade, and then I went to one of the most diverse high schools in all of New York. I was involved in a Students Against Violence Everywhere (S.A.V.E.) program that dealt with prejudice reduction, conflict resolution and race education.
Throughout my high school life, I have prided myself on learning about all different religions, cultures and customs. Some of my most cherished memories of my high school career included the interaction that I have had with people of various ethnic backgrounds. Some of my great friends are of different religions and backgrounds. But enough about me, lets get back to the ludicrous article. Once again, I'm not sure who the authors think they are, but I know that they can't possibly read other people's minds. The first chance I had to read the article left me completely astonished at the nerve the authors have, making such broad generalizations about how both whites and blacks feel.
Whites and blacks, wow! That's a lot of people you are covering in those two categories. Are you really sure your generalizations are correct? The way this article sounds, every single black person feels "this way" and every single white person feels "that way."
I am white but hey... you know what's funny? I don't feel the way you described at all. I guess that proves your article wrong. Before the authors write articles about how these groups feel, they should check their sources and statements. There is no way that the authors are going to talk to every single person of that group and find out how each one feels.
The fact is that I am embarrassed for the authors. Did they think that anything positive was going to come out of this? I certainly hope not and honestly, they didn't really expect to get away with writing a heinous article that totally makes everyone involved look bad, did they?
I certainly hope I'm not the only person who has these feelings. I at least know that my roommate, the person who showed me the article, and my friend, who is standing right behind me, both support this letter. We feel that this article was wrong, insane, horrible, repulsive, awful, terrible, absurd and worst of all, ignorant.
Justin Levine
Southwest

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Maurer Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Jolyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Jolyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1950. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

ARTS & LIVING

October 7, 1999

GAMES

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

It's 1983, in the midst of the brat pack and the slew of teen flicks which would eventually make the decade memorable, a little talked about film opened amidst the Return of the Jedi hype. Wargames with Matthew Broderick and Ally Sheedy took the typical teen angst of the 80's coming-of-age film and escalated it to a national level. During a time when the power of computers was still untapped and when nuclear war appeared imminent, Wargames struck a very real chord for most people.

A kid hacks a mega government computer, because he thinks he's only playing a game, only to discover that the game is real and he is starting World War III. The film managed to capitalize on America's position in the Cold War, on our inherent fear of government, and on computers- the big unknown. Wargames paints America on the brink of ultimate destruction, ready for the smallest twinge to send us plunging into oblivion, and concludes powerfully that nobody wins in war... or tic-tac-toe.

In addition to providing a truly enjoyable movie, the film lent its name to all fighting games and inspired this Arts cover. So, with Wargames (think computers), I will look at the various computer and console war games that have taken their place in our culture.

Most of the games that we have come to know as "War Games" are first-person fighting games. That is, games in which the player has the perspective of some mega tough hero, trying to save the world from evil villains, while using a barrage of unthinkably powerful weapons.

While "Wolfenstein" was probably the first computer game to use this format, "Doom" brought the genre to a whole new level. BFGs, rocket launchers, and plasma rifles hooked us from the first time we played "Doom". The game was inherently simple, but we loved it all the more; we stayed up for greater portions of the night blowing fire-breathing monsters into a million pieces.

People were screaming for more, so logically, Id released a sequel, With "Doom 2" people realized, "wow, not only can we blow up evil aliens, but we can blow up each other as well." The term "deathmatch" came into everyone's vocabulary and gaming was forever changed.

Importance for the first person-fighters immediately shifted to the multi-player format and has remained that way ever since. The Doom series spawned a whole slew of copycats, some that people thought were better and others that were not. "Quake" had better levels, more powerful weapons, better graphics, faster acceleration, etc. It spawned two sequels, including the very popular multi-player extravaganza ("Quake III"), available for download now at the companies website. "Unreal" supposedly had better storylines, "Duke Nukem 3D" combined two of America's favorite vices, sex and violence. It was sleeker, smarter, and just plain "cool." Plus, it added the jump feature and flying to the format. Death through the idea had a certain appeal for us.

The most popular first-person fighter outside the computer realm is undoubtedly "Goldeneye"- Nintendo 64's adaptation of the James Bond film series. With the ability for up to four players, Goldeneye offered not only the regular blow 'em-up features, but also a new slew of fun perks. Paintball mode. Rockets only. Bombs only. License to Kill, where only one shot will put your opponent to rest permanently, or at least until they hit the start button. For a while, this was the only game college guys played and it still remains great fun.

The other type of "war game" available on the computer is the civilization type. That is, each player builds up a civilization of people, a.k.a. an army of warriors, in order to destroy the opposing player's city. While many people heralded "Command and Conquer" and its sequel "Red Alert" for being the premier games of this class, I still maintain "Warcraft II" was the best game ever in this genre.

Humans vs Orcs, the sequel Each player builds his city as fast and as efficiently as possible, so as to best eliminate his or her opponent. What made "Warcraft" so great was the perfection of different strategies. Whether you opted for the long drawn out battles with dragons and gryphons, or the quick rushes with hundreds of knights and ogres pounding each other into the ground, the game proved endlessly enjoyable time after time. There is still something very primal about blood-lusting Ogres and sending them into a defenseless city to wreak havoc. The

Turn to VIDEO | page 8

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

The room is dark. There is a thick layer of fog clouding your vision and the only sun to come to your aid is an eerie black light that makes the little color in the room glow like a neon sign in Las Vegas.

Your ability to hear is sporadic. Pounding through your head is quick bass-laden electronica that leaves your thought process stuck in minor. The stage is set.

If your head isn't on a swivel, you might not notice the people lurking behind the ominous barriers on the other side of the room. The people are waiting with ever so much patience for you to glance just the right way, giving them open shot at your temple.

This is the life of a laser tag junkie. Use the barriers, play the odds, shoot the other guy. Unlike in real warfare, or even some warfare games, like paintball, no harm is done. The guns emit a simple ray of light that is received by a sensor in the helmet, vest or gun of an opposing player. Once the beam is recognized by the unit, a very satisfying sound of some sort notifies the victim that he or she has been shot.

Being hit does not mean the game is over in most circumstances, but rather that you must take the extra time to revive yourself at your team's home base. The disadvantage to being shot in most scenarios is that the way the game is won is by tallying the number of hits by each team. In a nutshell, if you can't keep from being blown to bits every two seconds, your teammates will get very disappointed in you... unless, of course, you're the sort of techno gunslinger that takes the bad guys down with you in a blaze of glory.

In a fairly unique aspect of the game, laser tag contests tend to be timed. Although many war games are played unofficially and thus, by the rules of the respective players, rarely does live-action combat follow a clock.

You only have so much time to dart and roll and fire, so make your shots worth it.

Like many combat simulation games, laser tag is entrenching itself among popular culture. Feeding off of the short-lived 1980's cartoon "Laser Tag Academy" and a number of techno-thrillers that have hit the theaters in the recent past, from the Arnold to Total Recall, laser tag creates a cyber battle environment that's turning out to be all the rage. With convenient playing rooms, people from all walks of life can partake. From business-people to high schoolers to weekend warriors.

In the region, there is an opportunity to get involved – Laser Storm at the Hampshire Mall is the closest establishment available.

So get suited up and play tag.

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

It's a dog eat dog world out there, and if you don't watch your every step, you could get shot, and then your shirt would be ruined by paint.

A sport that has grown tremendously in popularity in recent years, paintball is a game that draws from some of our harsh natural tendencies and puts them to use.

Toting any number of CO2 powered, paint-spewing firearms, you take to the forest to hunt down members of the other team, usually signified by an arm band or a different colored vest. Watch out, though, because the trees have ears – if you're not accurate, there's a good chance that your shot will readily entrust to your location. If, that is, you aren't already in their sights.

The game field normally falls under two basic categories: forest or field. There are exceptions, like a small number of indoor paintball facilities in the nation, but most often you will be sifting through dense woodland or darting behind man-made barriers on a grassy plain. In either case, there are usually small, strategically placed walls or shacks to make things interesting for the gamers.

Once the game starts, you have one of a number of objectives. In a version of Capture the Flag, the point is to reach the enemy base (the location of which is usually determined by the enemy – don't expect it to be easy to find or infiltrate) and, well, capture their flag. The work isn't done there, though, and like the version of the game that you remember playing without guns as a youngster, you still have to return the enemy flag to your base. Once you've done that, you are the victor.

A variation on that game puts the flag at a central point on the playing field. There is a much shorter distance to go to get the desired rag, but the bad guys know just where you're going, and if the flag is at all elevated, then you can expect some welts on your ribcage. Yeah, getting hit leaves a mark if you're not well protected. While it's not going to kill you, getting hit in the bare skin will leave you with a nice bruise.

Some gamers disregard the flag altogether and are quite content just wiping out the other team completely. Called "All-out War", "Manhunt", "Last Man Standing" or my personal favorite, straight off a Metallica album, "Kill 'em All, the point is to shoot each and every member of the opposition. The team to finish off the last enemy wins.

As was alluded to earlier, paintball is not for the faint of heart. Getting [illegible] of some form or [illegible] is an ill-prepared player, and getting [illegible] of the paintball from a [illegible] effectively is important, we know from [illegible].

A standard paintball helmet, covering the eyes, nose, mouth and ears is a must. So not take the field without it. A hit in any of the aforementioned areas can permanently alter any one of them. Too many people have lost their sight and hearing being stupid on the course, so don't make that mistake. With a helmet, however, you are in no real danger.

To keep other shots from playing with your head, get creative with your gear. Assuming you don't have a full, regulation paintball uniform, work with what you have. Doubling up on flannels and/or sweatshirts will keep you a bit toasty, but that's the price you have to pay. A couple pairs of tough pants, perhaps denim, will defend your legs. For guys, it can be worth it to come equipped with an athletic supporter, for one off-target hit can have you singing falsetto for a month. Provided you can move adroitly enough, try a catcher's chest protector or some soccer shin guards.

If you have the killer instinct, only wear what will keep you from injury and retain your agility. If you're a "newbie", take the field looking like the Stay-Puff Marshmallow Man – people might scoff for a minute, but you'll be laughing when they're the ones with the flesh wounds.

For the serious player, there are tournaments held around the nation for teams of five and seven (every now and t.re sometimes is national exposure; paintball is being covered by a number of exclusive magazines, like Action Pursuit Games and Paintball International, and the cream of the crop who play in the World Championship are seen on ESPN and ESPN2.

Turn to PAINTBALL page 7

Design and Layout • Benjamin T. Ahmad

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Every Thursday!

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tonight Mars Nightclub, Springfield's latest addition to night life, spins Top 40, Hip-Hop and R&B. If you're heading to Boston for the weekend, leave a day early and check out a great double bill with The Samples and the latest college craze in the Pat McGee Band. Otherwise look for Linee to tear up the Iron Horse stage or an Evening of One-Acts, which runs through Saturday night at the Curtin Theater, to stimulate your mind.

If you make it to one hockey game this year, attend the team's exhibition match against Acadia. Since it isn't Hockey East or NCAA play, no sanctions may be charged against the team for disruptive behavior, so expect aggressive play out of UMass when they hit the ice this Friday night. A couple of years ago a bench clearing brawl lead to eight ejections.

Herbie Hancock makes his way into the Calvin Theater on Friday, while the Iron Horse hosts the 10,000 Maniacs for two shows. The Mitchells are at the Baystate on Saturday, and Almost Speechless performs at the Horse in a late show. Football plays Northeastern in a Band Day special with kickoff set for 1 p.m.

MixFest '99 is on Saturday and Sunday, with Foxboro Stadium hosting the second day. Year after year a remarkable show that displays talented artists shinning under Boston's lights amongst thousands of people that have stood outside for hours. But if you go, say forget it to Foxboro and witness acts like Ben Folds Five, Train, Duran Duran, Jude, and The Nields in the splendor of the city for free and no traffic delays.

Eartha Kitt takes up residency at the Horse for six shows beginning on Sunday, while Elton John is at the Fleet and Robbie Williams plays Avalon on Tuesday. Also, the magical progressive jam pop sounds of Rane open up for Tim Reynolds of the Dave Matthews Band at the Tune Inn in New Haven. Rane is coming off another remarkable performance at the Meadows Music Theater two weekends ago. It was the band's third time that they played the amphitheater this season, matching only DMB.

The twenty year-old, Australian born, Soho resident Ben Lee, who started his playing days at the age of 13 in a punk band titled Noise Addict and was soon after signed to Northampton resident and Sonic Youth guitarist Thurston Moore's label, sees action at the Iron Horse on Wednesday. Lee, now on Beastie Boy Mike D's label and the boyfriend of actress and Yale undergraduate Claire Danes, whom he lives with in a loft above Billy Corgan of the Smashing Pumpkins, seems to be building the connections necessary to ensure long term survival in the music industry. Expect some distinguished guests to make their way out to this show.

-Tom Sadlowski

WMUA's Sportsline, 5:30 p.m.

Thursday, Oct. 7

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
John Sheldon, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
The Samples, Pat McGee Band and Chris DiCroce, 6:30 p.m.
BAYSTATE
Driftwood plus Miss Fortune, 21+
IRON HORSE
Linee plus Zoe Lewis & Her Rubber Band, 7 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Los Fabulosos Cadillacs plus Shootyz Groove, 8 p.m.

Dance Clubs
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's KLS and M.I.C.

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.
CURTIN THEATER - UM
Evening of One-Acts with Our Man In Madras, Terminating, Tone Clusters, and How I Learned To Stop Working And Love The Bug, 8 p.m.

Sports
BLUE WALL
Softball vs Boston University, 3:30 p.m.

Karaoke
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Performing Arts
CURTIN THEATER - UM
Evening of One-Acts with Our Man In Madras, Terminating, Tone Clusters, and How I Learned To Stop Working And Love The Bug, 8 p.m.

Sports
MULLINS CENTER
Men's Hockey vs Acadia (exhibition), 7 p.m.
TOTMAN FIELD
Men's Soccer vs George Washington, 3:30 p.m.
CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs Temple, 7 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
BOWKER AUDITORIUM
Something Every Friday with "Jabali Africa", 8 p.m.
BLUEWALL
Something Every Friday with movie American Pie, 10 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 9

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Raider Eddie & the Skeltones, 10 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
The Mitchells, 21+
BOSTON CITY HALL PLAZA
MixFest '99 Day One with Duran Duran, Ben Folds Five, Train, Jeremy Toback, Jude, Vonda Shepard, NRBQ, The Nields, Ellis Paul and Thievery, 12-8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Festival of Gypsy and Hungarian Music: Okros Ensemble plus Kalman Balogh & the Gypsy, 7 p.m.
Almost Speechless plus the Warren Commission, 10 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Cumine, Superzero and Winefield, 7 p.m.
WORCESTER CENTRUM
ZZ Top and Lynyrd Skynyrd
WORCESTER PALLADIUM
George Clinton & The P-Funk Allstars

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.
MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Hush
PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m., 21+
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Performing Arts
CURTIN THEATER - UM
Evening of One-Acts with Our Man In Madras, Terminating, Tone Clusters, and How I Learned To Stop Working And Love The Bug, 8 p.m.

Comedy & Improv
CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Sports
UPPER BOYDEN COURTS
Women's Tennis vs UConn, 11 a.m.
Men's Tennis vs UConn, 11 a.m.
MCGUIRK STADIUM
Football vs Northeastern (Band Day), 1 p.m.
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Rhode Island, 1 p.m.
CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs LaSalle, 7 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 10

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Coreslave, 9 p.m., 21+
FOXBORO STADIUM
MixFest '99 Day Two with Blondie, Melissa Etheridge, The Pretenders, Natalie Merchant, Sugar Ray, Lmtrain, Angry Salad, Citizen King, Lunchbox Jackson, Tastebuds, Stupence None the Richer and Susan Tedeschi, 11 a.m.-11 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Eartha Kitt, 7 & 9:30 p.m.

Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Men's Soccer vs Virginia Tech, 1 p.m.

Monday, Oct. 11

Notices
Holiday - Columbus Day - No school

Music
IRON HORSE
Eartha Kitt, 7 & 9:30 p.m.

Sports
UPPER BOYDEN COURTS
Men's Tennis vs Boston University, 11 a.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
CAMPUS CENTER AUDITORIUM
Movie American Pie, 8 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 12

Music
AVALON
Robbie Williams, 8 p.m.
FLEET CENTER
Elton John, 8 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Eartha Kitt, 7 & 9:30 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Ten plus Styles of Beyond, 8 p.m.
PEARL STREET
John Paul Jones (of Led Zeppelin), 8:30 p.m.
TUNE INN
Tim Reynolds plus Rane

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports
CURRY HICKS CAGE
Volleyball vs Brown, 7 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 13

Notices
Monday class schedule will be followed.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+
IRON HORSE
Ben Lee, 7 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Art of Noise plus Moccan Worker, 8 p.m.

Dance Clubs
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing with DJ Jitterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.
THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Sports
GARBER FIELD
Field Hockey vs Providence, 3:30 p.m.

Film

Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455)
Buena Vista Social Club

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9 Hadley (584-9155)
Blue Streak, For the Love of the Game, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-5426)
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0280)
Blue Streak, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, For Love of the Game, Mystery, Alaska, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0959)
American Beauty, The General, My Life So Far, The 24 Hour Woman, The King of Masks

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (733-5131)
The Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, American Beauty, Blues Streak, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, For the Love of the Game, Jakob the Liar, Mumford, Mystery, Alaska, The Sixth Sense, Stigmata, Stir of Echoes, The Thomas Crown Affair, Three Kings

Tower Theatres
79 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
For the Love of the Game, Double Jeopardy

Outdoors & Trips

UMass Ski 'n' Board Club
154 Student Union (545-3437)
No events scheduled at this time.

Outing Club
922 Student Union (545-3131)
Rock Climbing every Wednesday meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps; Cabin Trip to Bethleham, NH on Oct. 8-10.

Other Activities

If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Pulfer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Art Galleries

Bridges and Boudaries: African Americans and American Jews
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670).
An exploration of relationships between African Americans and American Jews that combines scholarship, historical documentation, and fine arts. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m through October 22.

Primary Source
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670).
Participating artists Roger Ackling, Doug Bradshow, and Sandy Gellis collaborate with light, rainfall, and mineral compounds. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22.

Altered Space
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-5177).
Mixed-media works by New York-based African American artist Grace Williams. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. through October 19.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0680).
An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30.

Think Again
Hampden Film / Photo Gallery, Hampshire College (559-5447). An exhibit of print works by a collaborative team of two artists, S.A. Buchman and David Attyah, who create agitprop art with a political twist. Mon-Thurs 9-12 a.m., Fri-Sun 1-6 p.m. through October 29.

Documents
Hampshire College Main Gallery (559-5544). Paintings and drawings by Cynthia Gaash, Susan Nelson Rogers, and Danica Phelps (three Hampshire alumni) dealing with time, evidence, and the self. Mon-Fri 10:30-4:30 a.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 23.

Libraries

Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
214 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight

Turn to THE SOURCE, page 7

Bring it.

Where it matters most.

As one of the world's leading diversified technology companies, we're breaking new ground in everything from defense and commercial electronics, to aviation, to engineering and construction. As a Raytheon employee, you'll contribute to the development of exciting, revolutionary technology designed to make life better, easier, and safer throughout the world. Such as our STARS air traffic control system. And our award-winning NightSight™ technology.

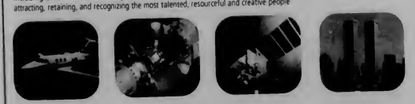
But it all starts with you. Your creativity. Your knowledge. And enthusiasm about the future. In return, we offer exceptional training and professional development opportunities. A supportive, down-to-earth work environment. And incredible benefits including flexible schedules designed to respect your quality of life.



So you can still show off all those great qualities of yours outside of work, too.

We'll be visiting your campus soon — contact your career placement office to schedule an interview. If you are unable to meet with us, please e-mail your resume to: resume@rayjobs.com (ASCII text only, no attachments), or mail to: Raytheon Company, Attn: National Staffing Data Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266. U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Opportunities are available for exceptional students with the following majors:

- Aeronautical Engineering
- Chemical Engineering
- Civil Engineering and Construction Management
- Computer Engineering
- Computer Science
- Electrical Engineering
- Finance/Accounting
- Human Resources
- Industrial and Labor Relations
- Management
- Marketing/Communications
- Math
- Mechanical Engineering
- Physics

Check out our Website at www.rayjobs.com/campus for further information including a calendar of recruiting events. At Raytheon, we strive to be the employer of choice for a diverse workforce by attracting, retaining, and recognizing the most talented, resourceful and creative people.

Bringing technology to the edge

Raytheon

安城中國餐店
AMHERST CHINESE FOOD
we do not use "MSG"
• HOME STYLE COOKING
• FRESH ORGANIC VEGETABLES FROM OUR OWN FARM
• NATURAL BROWN RICE/BUCKWHEAT NOODLE
• FULL LIQUOR LICENSE
• OPEN 7 DAYS
253-7835 • 253-2813
62 Main Street, Amherst

■ The Source

continued from page 6

Sat-Sun 10 a.m.- midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Lowrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2519)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2387)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts

VIPERHOUSE, GORDON STONE BAND
Oct. 14, Paradise Rock Club
TRICKY, DJ GENASIDE 2, STROKE
Oct. 14, Avalon
MIGHTY PURPLE, RANE
Oct. 15, Toad's Place
AGENTS OF GOOD ROOTS, DISPATCH, UNCLE SAMMY
Oct. 15, Middle East
LIVING DAYLIGHTS
Oct. 16, Iron Horse
VERTICAL HORIZON, ANGRY SALAD
Oct. 16, Paradise Rock Club
RESURRECTION TOUR
Oct. 16, Avalon
GODSMACK & REVEILLE
Oct. 16, Hampton Beach Casino
JIMMY PAGE & THE BLACK CROWES
Oct. 16, Worcester Centrum
INDIGO GIRLS
Oct. 16, Mullins Center
THE SHEILA DIVINE, SUPERDRAG
Oct. 17, Pearl Street
MARK ERELLI
Oct. 20, Club Passim
SQUEEZE
Oct. 20, Avalon
THE SHEILA DIVINE, SUPERDRAG
Oct. 20, Middle East
GOO GOO DOLLS, TONIC, JUDE
Oct. 20, Mullins Center
ELVIS COSTELLO, STEVE NIEVE
Oct. 21, Orpheum Theatre
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Oct. 23, Worcester Palladium
KID ROCK, POWERMAN 5000, DDT
Oct. 27, Tsongas Arena
FUEL
Oct. 27, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
JONATHA BROOKE & ANNE WEISS
Oct. 27, Amherst College Frontroom
BELA FLECK & THE FLECKTONES
Oct. 28, Calvin Theater
FUEL
Oct. 29, Avalon
THE PIETASTERS, SPRING HEELED JACK & THE PILFERS
Oct. 29, Amherst College Frontroom
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Oct. 29, Toad's Place
TYPE O NEGATIVE, PUYA
Oct. 30, Avalon
GUSTER, THE PUSH STARS, JUMP LITTLE CHILDREN
Oct. 30, Orpheum Theatre
COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Oct. 31, Orpheum Theatre
DROPKICK MURPHY'S, ANTI-FLAG, BLOOD FOR BLOOD, BOMBSHELL ROCKS
Oct. 31, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
"WEIRD AL" YANKOVIC
Oct. 31, Maine State Theater
IGGY POP
Nov. 1, Avalon
BEN HARPER & THE INNOCENT CRIMINALS, RAHZEL
Nov. 2, Avalon
MXPX
Nov. 2, The Webster
MEATLOAF
Nov. 2, Orpheum Theatre
MXPX, TOO BAD EUGENE
Nov. 3, Avalon
MIGHTY PURPLE
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium
MARK ERELLI
Nov. 11, Iron Horse
LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium
FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom
LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club
MICHAEL GLABICKI (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Nov. 13, Amherst College Frontroom
CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 13, Orpheum Theatre
INSANE CLOWN POSSE
Nov. 13, The Webster
311
Nov. 13, Worcester Palladium
BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum
GET UP KIDS, AT THE DRIVE-IN, ULTIMATE FAKEBOOK
Nov. 14, Amherst College Frontroom
LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre
VOICES ON THE VERGE: ROSE POLENZANI, ERIN MCKEOWN, JESS KLEIN AND BETH AMSEL
Nov. 18, Iron Horse
FILTER, STAIND
Nov. 20, Avalon
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater
STING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre
MOXY FRUVOUS
Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom
B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium

Venues

AMHERST BREWING COMPANY 36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8513)
BILL'S BAR 5.5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9678)
BUTTERFIELD RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)
CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-9898)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 9 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8336)
FLEETCENTER 1 Fleet Center, Boston (617-624-1000)
HOT CLUB 10-12 Stearns Square, Springfield (781-4509)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College, Main Street, Northampton
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL 239 Westminster Street, Providence (401-272-5876)
MARS NIGHTCLUB 350 Worthington Street, Springfield (746-8262)
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)
MULLINS CENTER UMass, Amherst (545-3001)
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS 17 New South Street, Northampton (584-7327)
ORPHEUM THEATRE Hamilton Place, Boston (617-679-0810)
PARADISE ROCK CLUB 967 Commonwealth Ave., Boston (617-562-8804)
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB 10 Pearl Street, Northampton (584-0610)
SOMERVILLE THEATRE 49 Davis Square, Somerville (617-625-4088)
THE GROTTO 25 West Street, Northampton (586-6900)
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (253-4400)
THE WEBSTER 31 Webster Street, Hartford (860-525-5553)
TSONGAS ARENA 300 Arcand Drive, Lowell (978-848-6900)
TT THE BEARS 10 Brookline Street, Cambridge (617-492-BEAR)
VAN METER RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
WORCESTER PALLADIUM 261 Main Street, Worcester (508-797-9696)
WORCESTER CENTRUM 50 Foster Street, Worcester (508-755-6800)
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN. 50 Conz Street, Northampton (586-3315)

General Information

All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-1361, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventcalendar@excite.com.

American Musical Theater's Company is a heavenly delight

By Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

A phone rings, a door chimes and it comes Company. At least for now at the Bushnell Theatre, located in the center of Hartford. Said with certainty, this is among the most impressive scores ever created, with music and lyrics by the forerunner of the American Musical Theatre, Stephan Sondheim. I am of the opinion that any production of this show is worth seeing, and I particularly advocate this one. It's virtually impossible to find any of Sondheim's shows produced without insufferable flaws, but this cast and creative team have come remarkably close.

Company follows Bobby, our protagonist who has a bunch of married or coupled friends, but for reasons never quite expressed (we can guess it's commonplace fear of commitment), he doesn't want to get married. But Bobby's not getting any younger (he's 35), and the pressure is ever increasing. Through non-sequential scenes, Bobby's pals try to set him up with girls, convince him that he's missing out, and eventually break through his internalized philosophy that there is nothing to gain from not being single.

What makes this musical exceptional—and according to some schools of interpretation, unbearable—is the absence of a happy ending. The finale doesn't include Bobby meeting the girl of his dreams, but it does see him resolve that marriage is just another, possibly favorable, part of "Being Alive."

Tom Galantich as Bobby is wonderfully consistent, has beautiful vocals throughout the show (particularly in his quiet soliloquies "Someone is Waiting" and "Marry Me a Little"), and glides across the stage with Harold Hill-esque grace and presence, donning a hat and cane in "Side by Side."

The rest of the cast shares a relatively equal amount of stage time, second to Bobby, and do all that they can to make you remember them. The casting board of this production deserves their own applause for finding such a refreshing, physically diverse group of people to fill their roles. Each individual and each couple has their own, notable look, aided by costume and make up (kudos to that portion of the artistic team), and never falter in their character. Their ensemble work is paramount, as seen most clearly in the energized opening numbers of both acts.

Such a pleasant, talented group designed this show that I left the theatre with only two significant complaints. One would hope that actress Shauna Hicks, playing the anxious and adorable Amy, isn't responsible for her ridiculously indicative version of "Not Getting Married." Her vocals and acting throughout the length of the show were just as commendable as the rest of the cast, but her pointed gestures during the expected highlight of her performance really lowered the quality of effect. She relied on rather amateur techniques to support her singing; for example pointing to her watch while saying "quick" and sticking out her leg as she said, "kick." Minor details, yes, but magnified in a night of theatre that was otherwise brilliant.

Additionally, the casting board might have re-examined their choice for one significant role, Joanne, who failed to bring to the stage any kind of physical presence. Now, it's just fine to cast a short female in this role, but as one who is familiar with the work may agree, the more celebrated aspect of Joanne is how she looks on the stage. When she enters completely unimposing at 4'11 and 75lbs, there is problem. For all of her very respectable work, actress Emily Zacharias could never quite compensate for where she (well...) fell short. Still, she showed exactly the kind of perspicacity that an actress needs to deliver "Ladies Who Lunch", and that's all anyone can ask of Joanne.

In the grand tradition of Sondheim, this show lacks any hummable tunes and the kind of entertainment a crowd typically anticipates from a musical. Sondheim is tinifamous for provoking thought and stuffing his scores with rich, always substantial lyrics and perfectly accompanying melodies.

Company won't sing and dance you away from reality to a world full of orphans or chorus boys, but it will as one who is familiar with the work may agree, the more celebrated aspect of Joanne is how she looks on the stage. When she enters completely unimposing at 4'11 and 75lbs, there is problem. For all of her very respectable work, actress Emily Zacharias could never quite compensate for where she (well...) fell short. Still, she showed exactly the kind of perspicacity that an actress needs to deliver "Ladies Who Lunch", and that's all anyone can ask of Joanne.

In the grand tradition of Sondheim, this show lacks any hummable tunes and the kind of entertainment a crowd typically anticipates from a musical. Sondheim is tinifamous for provoking thought and stuffing his scores with rich, always substantial lyrics and perfectly accompanying melodies.

Company won't sing and dance you away from reality to a world full of orphans or chorus boys, but it will as one who is familiar with the work may agree, the more celebrated aspect of Joanne is how she looks on the stage. When she enters completely unimposing at 4'11 and 75lbs, there is problem. For all of her very respectable work, actress Emily Zacharias could never quite compensate for where she (well...) fell short. Still, she showed exactly the kind of perspicacity that an actress needs to deliver "Ladies Who Lunch", and that's all anyone can ask of Joanne.

In the grand tradition of Sondheim, this show lacks any hummable tunes and the kind of entertainment a crowd typically anticipates from a musical. Sondheim is tinifamous for provoking thought and stuffing his scores with rich, always substantial lyrics and perfectly accompanying melodies.

■ paintball

continued from page 5

On the other hand, if you're just getting started, take it easy and gather some friends up to rent equipment. At the disposal of UMass students is a registered organization, the Paintball Club, with an affordable semesterly fee and even more affordable rental rates for members - the group is said to also have its own playing field, so go nuts.

Oh yeah, and the paint washes off, so don't worry about really ruining your shirt.

■ video

continued from page 5

game simply never got old and to this day, I will still play.

For a while, before Quake emerged as the dominant Net game, "Warcraft 2" was the game, thanks to Kali. Gamers world-wide ignored most of the outside world, and more specifically showers, in order to gather on Kali every day and play "Warcraft." While the gaming community might never return to the magical simplicity of these days, the release of "Warcraft III", next February holds tremendous promise. So, let the "War Games" live on.

Movie Reviews • Theater Reviews
CD Reviews • Concert Reviews
Book Reviews • Fine Arts Reviews
Arts Groups • Television • Radio
Movie Review Deadline

WRITE FOR *ARTS

BUB'S BAR-B-Q

'Pig Out In Style'

VOTED BEST BAR-B-Q AND BEST RIBS 15 CONSECUTIVE YEARS BY THE ADVOCATE

•(413) 548-9630•

Approved by

4 out of 5

college students.

The fifth was a loser.*

www.greekcentral.com

nothing captures greek life more completely

For a free CD, go to our website, or call 1-888-GREEKSS

*that we asked in a totally unscientific study

Are you interested in a career in Clinical Social Work?

Join the Smith College School for Social Work

at the

Alumni Symposium

Past, Present and Future of Clinical Social Work

Saturday, October 9, 1999
9:30 a.m. to 3:00 p.m.

Seelye Hall, Room 106 on the
Smith College Campus
Northampton, Massachusetts
Seating is limited. Please call (413) 585-7960 to RSVP

Meet with the Admission Director

at the
Graduate and Professional Schools

Information Day

Wednesday, October 27, 1999
10:00 a.m. – 3:00 p.m.
Student Union Ballroom on the University of Massachusetts, Amherst Campus

Six "Friends" get what they deserve

It looks like the "Friends" are going to get their money after all. NBC reported earlier this year that, for some un-known reason, they stupidly gave the six stars of the hugely successful sitcom a contract for less time than the show is scheduled to run. It seems that Courtney Cox, Matthew Perry, Matt LeBlanc, Lisa Kudrow, Jennifer Anniston and David Schwimmer were all slated to begin contract negotiations at the end of this year, even though the show has a guaranteed two years left under contract. Whoever made this decision is clearly stupid; however, it appears that the problem is resolved.

The cast members had asked for a record contract that would say that they would each receive almost 2 million dollars per episode starting in September of 2000. When NBC first reported this, they stated that there was no way in hell that any of the actors would get that much money, but the network must have realized how valuable the series actually is to them. The controversy was sparked even further last August, when Robin Quivers announced on the "Howard Stern Radio Show" one morning that all three female actors have decided that this would be the last year for them, leaving NBC with a huge problem. How would the show ever continue if half the cast left, and the constant plot line was completely destroyed?

Now that the problem is solved, NBC will need to jack up prices for advertisers to take out a 30 second or one minute commercial during the half hour that "Friends" is on, only to deal with the fact that they are shelling out more than 12 million dollars per episode to the actors. This is truly sick! Why must greed overcome the entire entertainment world? The fact is that no one does anything for any reason other than money nowadays. and that's just sad.

Perhaps the trend started earlier this decade, when Jerry Seinfeld became the first person to earn one million dollars per episode. Perhaps the trend started even earlier than that, when Oprah became the most influential force on television, simply because she had so much money. Or even better, perhaps this trend began when Ted Turner decided to colorize classic movies just to flaunt his wealth. The truth is that people on television are greed:

There's no way to get around the fact that even though you think you're watching TV for entertaining purposes, you're actually watching a revenue producing monster, complete with deceptive images and manipulating characters.

The truth is that some people on TV simply do not deserve the money they're being paid. The idea that someone like Tom Greene is given any compensation for running around and being a complete moron is absurd. MTV thinks that in order to gain an audience of fifteen-year-old degenerates, they need to find the most lowlife loser possible, and then expose him to everyone and anyone whom he can possibly piss off. Apparently this is funny. The truth is that Tom Green shouldn't be paid to do stand up comedy at the Blue Wall on Friday night, but MTV thinks he's worth some ridiculous dollar amount.

It always makes me wonder where some of these actors and actresses come from, and even more mystifying, where they go after everyone realizes that they're not worth a nickel. Does anyone know where Jesse Camp or Tina Youthers are hiding out right now?

The most prolific example of a "Where are they now?" actor (as VH1 calls them) is everyone's favorite Different Stroker, Gary Coleman. Well to answer the question of his whereabouts, I found him. Last week, I was watching "Extra" some piece of junk tabloid show at around 1am. One of their stories was about Coleman, and how he has no source of income because no one will pay to see him act. You could never guess, in a million years, what good old Gary is up to now. Much like many people in the US, Coleman has decided to use the Internet for personal gain. It seems that he finds the best way to make money is to set up his own web page where he encourages people to send him money, because we "owe it to him."

Now, please humor me, as you're reading this column, say it out loud! "What 'cha talkin' 'bout, Gary!" Is this guy out of his mind? This is just one more example of how a crazy, egotistical star, who has been given things his entire life, can't comprehend the idea of work. The reporters on "Extra" tried to reason with him (and you know how moral the reporters on "Extra" are: their only ethical rule is, "don't sink as low as the people on "National Enquirer TV"). However, you couldn't reason with Gary, he just kept spitting out tons of reasons why we all owe him money, and if we don't send him hard earned checks, out of the goodness of our hearts, we're just plain evil.

Gary Coleman may be crazy, but he's not alone. He lives in a world of people that, in general, have no idea of how a real working family operates. Think about it: how many last names has Roseanne actually had? The one thing that I've learned about the world of television in the past three years is that it's not just a rat race; it's a race fully of dirty, dirty rats. The people who live their lives as so called "role models" simply don't cut the mustard any more.

Last week, Scottie Pippen and Charles Barkley, two of the most famous names in all of sports, had a public fight with each other that ended with Barkley saying "Hey, you all know that I carry a gun with me at all times, so if he mouths off again, and ends up murdered, you'll know what happened." I know Chuck, you're not a role model, but you just sound so stupid and egotistical. Even though it's a joke, he's implying that he's above the law, and no one should dare mess with Sir Charles.

After all of this whining, it still gets us nowhere. In fact, I'm sure it's going to get worse, so here is my suggestion. Take out your checkbook, and mail me a check for as much money as you can. That was I can start living my dream of being on television today. Hey think about it, you owe me!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian Columnist.

One Acts hit Curtain

Kristi Ceccarossi
Collegian Staff

Don't make plans this weekend. And if you already have, cancel them. Otherwise you might miss your opportunity to catch the Theatre Department's selections of One Acts this fall. This collection of short pieces is an annual occasion at UMass. Each portion of the program is directed by a UMass undergraduate, featuring our very own peers as actors, too.

Presented in the Curtain Theatre, An Evening of One Acts opens with Our Man in Madras, written by Gert Hoffman. It's an intimate production, with only two characters. During a "normal" workday, Jim and Jane slowly reveal their feelings about the value of human life. The second installment of the night is Terminating, written by esteemed author Tony Kushner. Like the bulk of Kushner's work, this play addresses thorough human relations.

Student director Naomi Bennet describes the piece: "Sexuality, gender roles, body image: society has a set of expectations of how we should look, feel, and act towards others and towards ourselves. But most people do not conform to these roles. I chose Terminating, because it shows the inner conflict created when people are so ingrained with society's perfect image that they cannot accept who they are."

Terminating is followed on a slightly more absurd and lighter note with Joyce Carol Oates's Tone Clusters. Here we watch parents struggle to keep hope and control after their son is charged with rape and murder. This play pushes its actors and its audience to energy levels rarely imagined. "We had a four hour rehearsal every night, which included at least 45 minutes of physical and vocal warm-ups. I never expected it to be so rigorous and at the same time, to get so much out of it," said Jordan Zolan, one of the five actors in the play.

The production will close with 12:01, a piece one should be particularly eager to see, as it has been written and directed by UMass student Nick Keenan. 12:01 takes place in the final moments of the millennium. Author and designer Keenan says, "It's been an amazing experience to see the words and your life transferred to the stage."

Undoubtedly this event has the potential to reach a variety of emotions and ideas and the collaborative effort deserves your attention. An Evening of One Acts will be performed tonight through October 9, at 8pm in the Curtain Theatre. Tickets are only $4 for students and are obtainable through the FAC box office at 545-2511.

KARA STOKES / COLLEGIAN

Anya Zilberstein and Art Goyette star in "Terminating," one of four one-act plays being performed through October 9th at the Curtain Theater.

New movies now playing at a theater near you...

Three Kings
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Three Kings is the story of four soldiers who find an Iraqi map leading to stolen Kuwaiti gold. There desire for wealth serves as the metaphor to explain U.S. involvement during the Gulf War. Director, David. O. Russel manages to mix the strong themes of his screenplay with some truly impressive scenes resulting in a part action movie and part art house film. The movie is not only well-written, well-directed, and very entertaining but also extremely relevant. It calls into question our past and demands a closer examination. A- (Adam Martignetti)

American Beauty
Playing at Pleasant St. Theater

American Beauty takes a fascinating look at the afflictions to be found in middle class culture, the neurotic human drama that potentially plays out behind every white picket fence in America. Beyond providing us with so many colorful, intoxicating characters, American Beauty has a lot to say about American Culture. Materialism, homophobia, the innocence and non-innocence of youth, and the hypocritical nature of American ideals are all present, woven into the characters' internal struggles. A magnificent script is brought to life by wonderful directing and a flawlessly talented cast; this is truly one of the best films of the year. A (David Troupes)

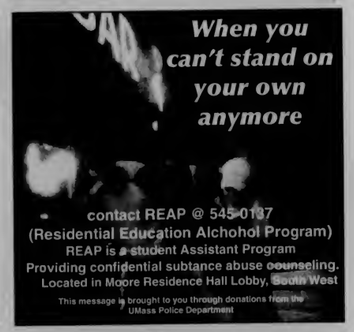
Blue Streak
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Martin Lawerence plays Miles Logan, a jewel thief who has just stolen a fifteen million dollar diamond. Two years later, Logan is released from prison and goes to where he hid the diamond. To get access to the diamond, Logan forges documents to become a police officer. The humor is tedious and redundant; wait until this one is on the UMass movie channel. D (Nick Pizzolato)

For Love of the Game
Playing at Mountain Farms Theaters

Kevin Costner plays a pitcher facing what might be the last season of his career, ultimately having to choose between his love of the game, and his love of a woman. For Love of the Game is the victim of one thing and one thing only: bad writing. Costner and Kelly Preston each give fine performances, despite the shallow treatment of their characters. C (David Troupes)

Double Jeopardy
Playing at Showcase Cinemas, Springfield



Double Jeopardy takes its incredibly lame-sounding name from the legal institution by which someone cannot be tried for the same crime twice. Except for a few instances of humor and a handful of scenes that approached being suspenseful, this movie is barely worth the $3.50 for a Blockbuster rental. Instead, stare at an Ashley Judd poster for a while, and then watch U.S. Marshalls. C- (David Troupes)

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE
- Complete Bartending Course
- Near Campus
- For a Fraction of the Cost of other Schools
- National Certification Available
- Hands on Pouring Labs
- Tips to get a Fun, High Paying Job

Classes Start
Wednesday, October 13th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Act Now, Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

We Sell
BEER & WINE
on SUNDAYS
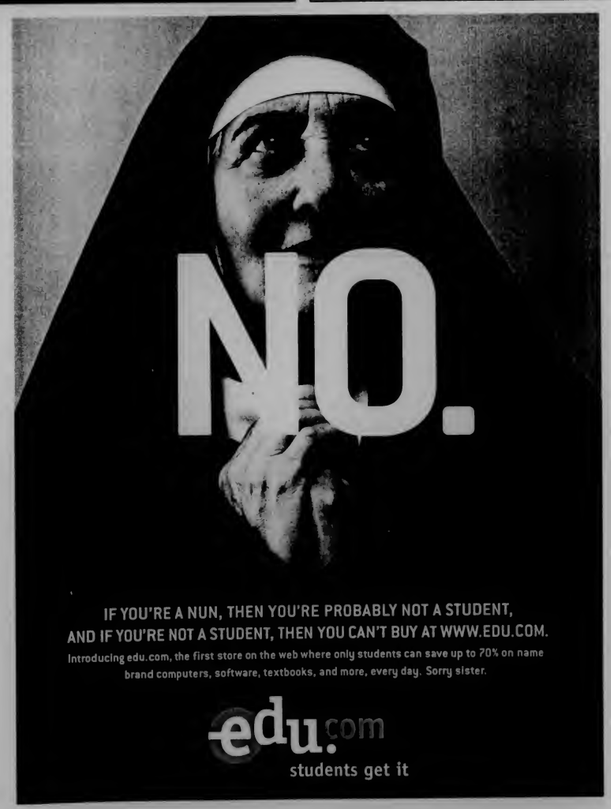
12 NOON - 9 PM
MONTAGUE MINI MART
We accept Visa & Mastercard
367-9551
60 Main St. Montague Center
10 Mins. from Campus

When you can't stand on your own anymore
contact REAP @ 545-0137
(Residential Education Alchohol Program)
REAP is a student Assistant Program
Providing confidential subtance abuse counseling.
Located in Moore Residence Hall Lobby, South West
This message is brought to you through donations from the UMass Police Department

DISCOVER A WORLD OF GREAT DEALS AT LIQUORS 44!
LIQUORS 44 Don't Drink and Drive
Everyday pricing
1/2 KEGS BUD, BUD LIGHT, BUD ICE, MICHELOB, LT, AMBER BOCK, LITE, ICEHOUSE, RED DOG, COORS LT, COORS, ROLLING ROCK $39.99 +DEP.
1/2 KEGS ICE, NATURAL, NATURAL ICE, MILWAUKEE'S BEST $34.99 +DEP.
1/2 KEGS BERKSHIRE BREWING STEEL RAIL, PORTER, TRADITIONAL, I.P.A. $82.99 +DEP.
COORS & COORS LIGHT 30 PACK CASE OF 30-12 OZ. CANS $15.99 +DEP.
MILLER HIGH LIFE GENUINE DRAFT & GENUINE DRAFT LIGHT CASE 30-12 OZ. CANS 30 PACK $11.49 +DEP.
CORONA 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.49 +DEP.
HARPOON 12 PK. BOTTLES $9.99 +DEP.
PABST BLUE RIBBON CASE 24-12 OZ. BAR BOTTLES $8.99 +DEP.
WOODCHUCK CIDER 6 PK. BOTTLES $4.99
WINE OF THE MONTH
FETZER VINEYARDS SUNDIAL CHARDONNAY, VALLEY OAKS CABERNET SAUMGNON, EAGLE PEAK MERLOT 750 ML $7.49
ALMADEN CHABLIS, BLUSH, WHITE GRENACHE, BURGUNDY, GOLDEN, RHINE, ALFRESCO RED 5 LT. BAG $6.99
INGLENOOK ESTATE CELLARS CHARDONNAY, MERLOT, CABERNET SAUMGNON 1.5L $6.49
RENE JUNOT RED & WHITE 1.5L $5.99
SUTTER HOME WHITE ZINFANDEL 1.5L $6.99
SEAGRAM'S COOLERS 4 PK. $2.99 +DEP.
POPOV VODKA 1.75L $10.99
BACARDI LIMON RUM 750 ML $9.49
BOMBAY SAPPHIRE GIN 750 ML $14.99
FLEISCHMANN'S PREFERRED WHISKEY 1.75L $11.99
CANADIAN MIST 1.75L $12.99
KAHLUA COFFEE LIQUEUR 750 ML $13.99
ABSOLUT MANDRIN VODKA 750 ML $14.99
Discounts Available on Cases of Wine & Liquor. Ask For Details.
AT THE STOP & SHOP PLAZA
HADLEY 253-9344 NORTHAMPTON 586-3007 HOLYOKE 534-4555
SALE PRICES THURS. 10/7/99 THRU WEDS. 10/13/99
NOT RESPONSIBLE FOR TYPOGRAPHICAL ERRORS

CRAZY AL'S HAUNTED HAYRIDE
at the LONG HOLLOW BISON FARM
ROUTE 9 • HADLEY • (413) 584-4550
The Area's Newest Halloween Attraction
"Experience it... if you dare!!"
FRIDAY SATURDAY SUNDAY
October 1st through 31st
Continuous Rides Begin at 7 pm
A 30-minute narrated haunted hayride through the Corn Fields of Death, The Dark Forest, plus screams & chills around every corner. Look for the 24-Foot Ghost!
AGES 8 YEARS AND OLDER REQUIRED
—Not suitable for Young Children—
For Information & Directions, call
(413) 584-4550



NFL Week Five	Las Vegas Spread
	Note: Selections to be used strictly as entertainment and not for betting purposes	Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief	Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor	Kathleen Ralls Women's Affairs Editor	Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor	Adam White Sports Associate
Last Week (Overall)		7-7 (24-32)	9-5 (27-29)	6-8 (26-30)	6-8 (24-32)	8-6 (25-31)
New England @ Kansas City	K.C. by 2 1/2	New England	Kansas City	New England	New England	New England
N.Y. Giants @ Arizona	Arizona by 3	Arizona	Arizona	Arizona	NYG	NYG
Pittsburgh @ Buffalo	Buffalo by 6 1/2	Buffalo	Buffalo	Buffalo	Buffalo	Pittsburgh
Cincinnati @ Cleveland	Cincinnati by 3	Cleveland	Cleveland	Cincinnati	Cincinnati	Cincinnati
Dallas @ Philadelphia	Dallas by 9 1/2	Philadelphia	Philadelphia	Dallas	Dallas	Dallas
San Diego @ Detroit	Detroit by 3 1/2	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego	San Diego
Tampa Bay @ Green Bay	Green Bay by 6	Green Bay	Green Bay	Tampa Bay	Tampa Bay	Green Bay
Miami @ Indianapolis	Indianapolis by 2	Indianapolis	Miami	Miami	Indianapolis	Indianapolis
Chicago @ Minnesota	Minnesota by 13	Chicago	Minnesota	Minnesota	Chicago	Minnesota
Atlanta @ New Orleans	New Orleans by 7 1/2	Atlanta	New Orleans	New Orleans	New Orleans	Atlanta
Denver @ Oakland	Oakland by 7	Oakland	Oakland	Oakland	Oakland	Denver
San Francisco @ St. Louis	St. Louis by 1 1/2	San Francisco	St. Louis	San Francisco	St. Louis	San Francisco
Baltimore @ Tennessee	Tennessee by 7	Tennessee	Baltimore	Tennessee	Tennessee	Tennessee
Jacksonville @ N.Y. Jets	Jacksonville by 3	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville	Jacksonville

Come to the sports staff meeting, today at 4 PM. Call 5-0719 if you can't come.

All the Digital Power in the Palm of Your Hands
www.omniplayer.com

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

VALLEY MOTORSPORTS
413/584-7303
800/649-9965
Rt. 5 Northampton, MA 01060
• Sales • Service • Parts • Mass. Inspection
HONDA Kawasaki YAMAHA DUCATI Husqvarna KTM
10% discount on parts/accesories/clothing with this ad and a valid student ID

IF YOU'RE A NUN, THEN YOU'RE PROBABLY NOT A STUDENT,
AND IF YOU'RE NOT A STUDENT, THEN YOU CAN'T BUY AT WWW.EDU.COM.
Introducing edu.com, the first store on the web where only students can save up to 70% on name brand computers, software, textbooks, and more, every day. Sorry sister.
edu.com
students get it

It's a jungle out there.

Giraffe by 9 & Co.
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Need Community Service? We're seeking "Best Buddies" to be friends with people labeled as disabled. For more info call Renee @ 285-0152 and leave a brief voice message.

APARTMENT FOR RENT

1987 VW Jetta New clutch, rear struts, rear brakes, e-brake cables, battery, tires. Needs shift linkage to run. Fix it or good for parts car. $250 or bo 253-9140

91 Ford Festiva 5spd excellent condition 87,000 miles $1,850 or BO Must Sell 546-2216

COMPUTERS

CELERON 333MHZ PC Tower with 128MB RAM, 4Gig HD, 4Meg Intel video card, 561/90 modem, 10/100 ethernet card, 24X CDRom sound card, 2USB Ports, 4ISA Slots, 3 PCI Slots, IAGP ($900) - Pentium II 233 Mhz w/128 Meg RAM, 6Gig HD, 4 Meg S3 video card, sound card, 10/100 ethernet, 3PCI, 3ISA, 1AGP, 24X CDROM ($700) - Both come with Win 98, Corel 8 and MS Office preinstalled. Call Peter 253-6665

EMPLOYMENT

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT For teenage bicycle-touring program. Partime until late spring; then full-time through August. Call 800-343-6132 Student Hosteline Program Conway, MA

EMPLOYMENT

Candy Company looking for full time apprentice. Artist/graphic designer must be familiar with Quark, Illustrator, Photoshop - benifit. Cartoon art skills a big plus. Contact Tom Martin 1-888-556-5599

Cashier Wanted self-service station weekends. Must be honest, reliable, good at math. Apply in person Northampton Citco 54 E. Hampton Rd. Rt 10

The UMass Athletic Development Office is looking for a graduate student to assist in bookkeeping, data entry, and filing 20-25 hrs/wk starting at $8/hr. 413-545-4290.

Jobs At The UMass Annual Fund flexible evening hours earn $5.50/hr plus fantastic bonuses. Gain computer and communication skills. Come to the basement of Memorial Hall and apply today. Students only. 545-3509

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS diploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for Permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413-774-2281 (ask for Marty). AA/EOE

EMPLOYMENT

Intern Needed - Toothless Productions, a Western Mass Music Booking and Produciotn Co. needs a part time intern, very flexable hours. Call 888-595-3122

Get Paid to Surf the internet and other easy ways to make money on the web for free. Visit www.cyber100+.com

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

EMPLOYMENT

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

Needed for residential treatment program and school program serving emotionally-distrubed 8 to 19 year olds. Get the training and experience you need to obtain work in the field. Future opportunities for regular positions. All shifts, includings days, evenings, weekends and nights. Must be 21 or older. $6.50 to $7.50 per hour. For consideration, send resume or complete application. Search UMR, NCCF, 78 Pomeroy Terrace, Northampton, MA 01060. AA/EOE

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ Fooz is booking for fall semester. Date parties, formals, + house parties. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR SALE

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Belated Birthday Laura Love Sue, Andrea, Fran, Mara, and Scott

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space Is Limited

LOST & FOUND

FOUND 1 Pair of Keys on blue keychain near Holdsworth Lab call Ping at 253-0036

WANTED

Roommate Wanted 1bdrm in 3bdrm Apt behind Puffers Pond. Must be easy going. Big yard, parking $333/mo+utilities Call Bry/Joe 549-4055

Roommate Wanted to share 3 bedroom house on route 116. 10min commute. $285+utils per month. (413) 493-1777

SERVICES

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

TRAVEL

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

TRAVEL

EARN FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 CANCUN JAMAICA For 10 years Class Travel International (CTI) has distinguished itself as the most reliable student event and marketing organization in North America Motivated Reps can go on Spring Break FREE & earn OVER $$$$$$10,000!$$$$$ Contact Us today for details! 800/328-1509 www.classtravelintl.com

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

RUNNERS NEEDED! Competitive female distance runners needed for an important women's health study. Must be 18-25 and not on oral contraceptives. Free bone density and fat measurements. Free runners gifts. Call 1-877-RUN-BFIT. (1-877-786-2348)

Do you wish your Ad could be right HERE??

Don't wish DO!

Call 545-3500!

Stuck in a Jam?
Looking for that perfect Roommate?
Need some cheap car parts?
Or maybe you are just looking for a new job?

Why haven't you been looking here?
This is the place to be!

Check out The Collegian Classifieds!

All that you ever needed to know!

Five College Community Calendar

THURSDAY, OCT. 7

Call backs – The callbacks for "A Decade of Memories A Musical Revue Celebrating the UMTG from 1990-1999" will be held in the Student Union Ballroom at 6 p.m.

Fair – The Annual Engineering Fair will be held in the Guinness Student Center in Marcus Hall from 10 a.m.-3 p.m. All students from engineering and technical disciplines are welcome to attend. For more information call 545-6251

Demonstration – The Office of Waste Management will hold a demonstration in front of the Student Union from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. to illustrate the effects of recycling on campus. Games and prizes are also part of the planned activities

SATURDAY, OCT. 9

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center

SUNDAY, OCT. 10

Reception – The opening reception for "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America" will be held from 2-5 p.m. in Wheeler Gallery in Central Residential Area

NOTICES

Talk – There will be a talk by the curator of "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America" at 4:30 p.m. in the Wheeler Gallery in Central Residential Area

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division- Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Got something to say? Your ad could fill this space!

BOOKBUCKS™ From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks," you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER Just another way that WE GIVE 100% We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/ New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

THURSDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 7, 1999

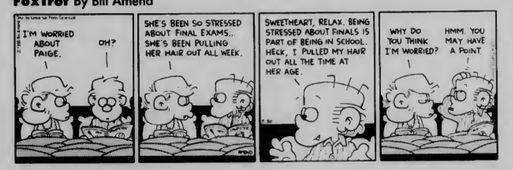
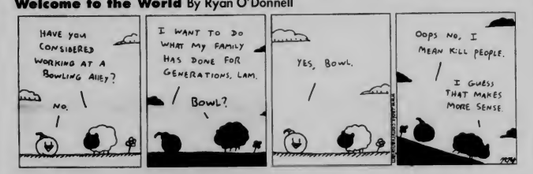
	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Positivity Conn.	City Life	Mystery! "Second Sight" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)		Being Served	Wait for God	This Old Hse.
WFSB	3	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		48 Hours "Why Did Josh Kill?"	News	Late Show
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Diagnosis Murder (In Stereo)		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		48 Hours "Why Did Josh Kill?"	News	Late Show
WCVB	5	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Wasteland "Pilot"		20/20 Downtown	News	Nightline
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	Popular "Under Sege"		Charmed "Morality Bites"		News	Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Last Rites" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTXX		8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)				News	Carolina Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT		10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Friends	Jesse	Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Last Rites" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WTIC	9	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Major League Baseball Playoffs (Divisional Round Game 2 -- Teams to Be Announced.					News	Friends
WWLP	10	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Chicago Hope		Frasier	Stark Raving	ER "Last Rites" (In Stereo)	News	Tonight Show
WGBY	11	6	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		This Old Hse.	Drs. on Call	Mystery! "Second Sight" (In Stereo) (Part 2 of 2)		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)	Charlie Rose
WGGB	12	29	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	Whose Line?	Whose Line?	Wasteland "Pilot"		20/20 Downtown	News	Nightline
WSBK	13		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Ottawa Senators. (Live)						WWF Smackdown! (In Stereo)
WTBS	72		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Wrestling		Wrestling		Chimp	Wrestling (R)	Wrestling (R)
A&E	43		Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Conspiracy"		Biography: Peter O'Toole		Investigative Reports (R)		Inside Story (R)		Law & Order "Trust"
CNN	44	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	45	26	Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Shim's Money	8:29 "Married to the Mob" (1988, Comedy) Michelle Pfeiffer,				Saturday Night Live	Daily Show	Shim's Money
DISC	46		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery "Jurassic Reef"		On the Inside "Wall Street" (R)		Great Siberian Explosion (R)		Beyond Bizarre (R)		On the Inside "Wall Street" (R)
ESPN	47		Major League Baseball		Sportscenter	Gamesnight	College Football: Syracuse at Pittsburgh. (Live)					Sportscenter
LIFE	48		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait "Judith Light"		Chicago Hope (In Stereo)		It's "The Lady Forgets" (1989, Suspense) Donna Mills,			Here Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	49		Global Groove	True Life (R)	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Celebrity	Tom Green (R)	Loveline (In Ste.so)
NICK	50		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Skeeter	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family Maude
SCIFI	51		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		8:00 "Batman" (1966, Science Fiction) Leif Erickson, Kevin Allen,				Here "Boy" (1965, Comedy) Tom Harris, Elizabeth Perkins,				Boy! (1965)
TLC	52	28	Home Again	Home Again	How'd They Do That?		Nature's Rage-Warning		Nature's Rage: Killers		Nature's Rage: In Harm's Way		Nature's Rage-Warning
TNT	53		Due South "Pilot"		ER "Power" (In Stereo)		8:00 "Baby Boom" (1987, Comedy) Diane Keaton, Sam Shepard					"Animal Farm" (1999) Voices of Kelsey Grammer,
USA	54		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG "Blindside" (In Stereo)		8:00 "The Godfather Saga" (1977, Drama) (Part 3 of 3) Marlon Brando, Al Pacino, (In Stereo)					Baywatch (In Stereo)
HBO	55		(5:20) 8:00 "The Apostle" (1998,	Robert Duvall	Random Heart		8:15 "Devil in the Flesh" (1997)	Rose McGowan,	"Shaolin Fighter" (1999) Costas Mandylor,			Inside the NFL (In Stereo)
MAX	56		(5:45) "Sphere" (1998, Science Fiction) Dustin Hoffman,		PG-13		8:00 "Why Do Fools Fall In Love" (1998, Biography) Halle Berry,				"Blackheart" (1998) Richard Grieco,		"Other Men"
SHOW	57		"Looking for Lola" (1997, Comedy) Merk Krassenerkaum,		PG		8:15 "The Last Days of Disco" (1998, Drama) Chloe Sevigny,				"Blackheart" (1998) Richard Grieco,		Linc's



Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Drabble By Kevin Fagan



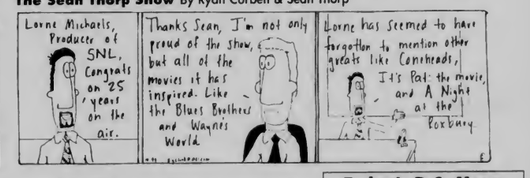
FoxTrot By Bill Amend

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert By Scott Adams



Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Wheel By Clay Wetherford

The Sean Thorp Show By Ryan Corbett & Sean Thorp

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Your friends are likely to be far more important to you than expected at this time. You may want to do things on your own, but teamwork is invaluable.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Share what you are thinking with those around you today, and before you know it, your ideas are likely to result in something tangible.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – You're in no mood for something casual and transitory at this time. You're far more interested in what can become "long-term."

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – You can put an end to the sort of rumors which have been passed back and forth lately with surprising abandon. Stick to the truth at all times.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – Someone you know quite well, but haven't spoken with in some time is eager to talk to you today. Make yourself readily available.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – The pursuit of pleasure and self-gain is likely to lead you down an unexpected path before the day is out. Pay attention to unspoken warnings.

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You may be proud of your ability to see problems on the horizon, but something complicated is likely to take you by surprise today.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – You may be making a series of rash judgments at this time, upsetting the friends and loved ones around you. Take the time to think things through.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Familiarity is something that can actually serve you well today, despite your preference for things that are novel. You'll have a chance to relax.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – Someone you're working with at this time may express certain reservations after hearing of your plans. It's time to make your pitch in person.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – Someone may be waiting for you to make the "first move" today. Are you willing to put it all on the line? In reality, risks are few.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – It's a good time for you to stick up for someone who did you a favor in the recent past. You'll realize that you can work wonders together.

Quote of the Day

If it's not a 'du' over 'u' or a 'u' to the 'n du', then it must be an inverse trig function!

–Mathmatical theorum as stated by Coach William Foresta

Leold www.leold.com by Roger and Salem Salloom© 1997

Lowell and I were walking down the street and I thought this girl was waving at me but she was actually fanning her face from the heat.

I almost said, "Hi."

I'm a jerk.

I told Lowell, "We're losers. We have nothing going on in our lives."

Lowell said, "Yeah, we're losers."

Then I said, "Actually, I'm not a loser, Lowell, but you are."

I said, "Really, Lowell, you can't be a loser. It's virtually impossible because you have a beautiful new mountain bike."

Lowell said, "Thanks, Leold, I forgot I had the bike."

I said, "Yeah, no problem.....loser."

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Fried Clams
Tamale Pie
Savory Spinach &Rice Casserole

DINNER
Chicken Fingers
Sweet Potato Quesadilla
Ginger Black Beans

Worcester

LUNCH
Fried Clams
Tamale Pie
Savory Spinach &Rice Casserole
Tofu with Snow Peas

DINNER
Chicken Fingers
Sweet Potato Quesadilla
Ginger Black Beans

Hampshire

LUNCH
Fried Clams
Tamale Pie
Savory Spinach &Rice Casserole

DINNER
Chicken Fingers
Sweet Potato Quesadilla
Ginger Black Beans

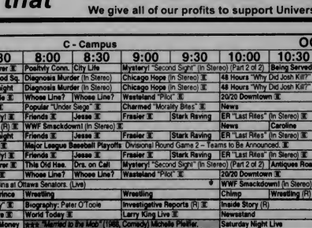
Berkshire

LUNCH
Fried Clams
Tamale Pie
Savory Spinach &Rice Casserole
Tofu with Snow Peas

DINNER
Chicken Fingers
Sweet Potato Quesadilla
Ginger Black Beans

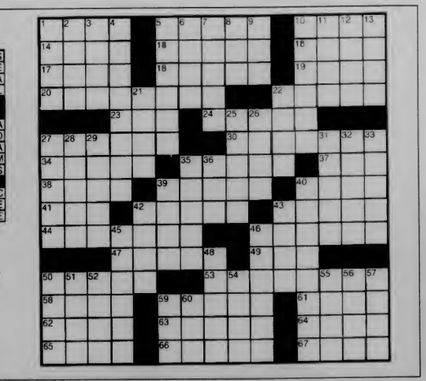
Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam Martignetti
Photo Technition	Pam FitzPatrick
Copy Editor	Adam White
Production Supervisor	Lisa Metcalf
Production Staff	Dan McGuinness-Rossi, Brian McDermott



ACROSS

1 Curved entrance
5 Sockets and Bartletts
10 Home of the Jazz
14 Mideast strip
15 Must
16 Zero
17 Spoken
18 Bay window
19 Heal
20 Comic strip cat
22 Fresh
23 Throng
24 Roof parts
27 Millionaire's property
30 Small change
34 Vice —
35 Large bags
37 Dine
38 Mine entrance
39 Easterners, in the West
40 — spumante
41 Smidgen
42 Linoleum pieces
43 Blue and yellow mix
44 Foes
46 Flashy
47 Like beer in bars
49 Fabled bird
50 Blues singer Waters
53 Happy sounds
58 Chills and fever
59 "Bullets Over Broadway" star
61 Egyptian river
62 Classes
63 Clean the slate
64 Turkey's neighbor
65 No, to Ivan
66 Outdoes
67 Fender damage



DOWN

1 Eager
2 — avis
3 Autocrat
4 Flag position
5 "Friends" friend
6 Warren or Hines
7 Put — save up
8 AAA suggestion
9 Sun, in Marbella
10 Reveal
11 Stocking parts
12 Beatnik and Reinking
13 Actress Lamarr
21 Whit
22 Min. divisions
25 Starts the poker pot
26 Competes
27 Escape cleverly
28 Family car
29 Related group
31 Curvy letters
32 Swinged instruments
33 Like a porcupine
35 Oklahoma city
36 Lync verse
39 Reduce
40 Spider, for one
42 Little
43 Sailor's drink
45 Plain, in a way
46 Beasts
48 Earnest requests
50 Might's partner
51 Menacing, as the weather
52 British noble
54 Helper, abbr.
55 Car part
56 Vivacity
57 Monthly expense
59 Surfing spot?
60 Anger

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

10-7-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Thursday, October 7, 1999 / Page 12

Bad News B's get "F" for start

Would somebody please tell Byron Dafoe and Harry Sinden that? Once again, the Bruins management is stuck in a contract squabble with one of their star players.

The latest victim is Byron Dafoe. The Bruins refuse to pay a goalie who finished second to Dominik Hasek in the race for the Vezina trophy last year.

If not for Dafoe, the Bruins might not have even made the playoffs. Dafoe was brilliant down the stretch, carrying the Bruins into the second round of the playoffs, before eventually succumbing to the Sabres.

Well, so much for proving your worth to the Bruins brass. This current stalemate between Dafoe and the B's management is a bit different. Athough, Dafoe, to his credit, had an unbelievable year, it was also a breakthrough year. Before last season, Dafoe was a mid-grade goalie at best, now after one amazing season he wants $4 million a year, a pay raise of 600-percent.

James Murphy on the NHL

You can understand where Dafoe stands- if you look at the contracts of the league's other top goalies, but then again those goalies have had more than one solid season.

Despite my previous Sinden bashing, I have to side with the king of the misers on this one. Dafoe should sign a short-term deal and if he continues his stellar play, use it as a bargaining tool for a higher contract.

The Bruins have had a steady, rapid improvement over the last two seasons, and have unbelievable potential that is ready to be fulfilled. Many, including Sports Illustrated, have picked the Bruins to either be in the Eastern Conference finals or even advance to the Stanley Cup Finals.

So Dafoe, if he is smart, should sign now and maybe in two to three years he can wear a big, fat ring on his finger. Then he will receive a big, fat contract from the Sinden/Iacobs brigade.

The Ottawa Senators are also involved in a contract stalemate. Center Alexei Yashin, who was due to receive $5.5 million this season, the last one on his contract, is holding out now and asking for a new contract, which would pay him $8-to-$10 million a year, starting this season. Well, Yashin is finding out that not only is Ottawa management refusing his proposal, but so is a large group of Senator fans.

An Ottawa real-estate lawyer has organized a group of 11,000 season ticket holders, who are now suing Yashin and his agent for $27.5 million for breach of contract. The basis for this figure: Senators season ticket holders paid an average of $4,000 per season with the belief that Yashin would be in the opening night lineup.

Did anyone happen to see Anaheim's Ruslan Salei take a cheap shot on Mike Modano last weekend? If Salei isn't suspended for at least 10 games, then NHL disciplinarian Colin Campbell is basically telling all the goons in the league that if you want to beat the Stanley Cup Champions just take out their best player.

Here's Murph's 1999-2000 NHL preview.

Eastern Conference

Northeast

Toronto- Cujo's bark is louder than ever, as the leafs ring in their first season at the Air Canada Centre with a division title and the President's Trophy for the best regular season record.

Atlantic

Philadelphia- Yes, even though they will choke again in the playoffs, the Broad St. phonies will look unbeatable in the regular season.

Southeast

Florida- "The Russian Rocket", Pavel Bure finally takes off from Cape Canaveral, Carolina, "we have a problem".

Western Conference

Central

Detroit- This year won't be a runaway though as the wheels are getting slower and older in Hockeytown. Watch out for Chicago and St. Louis.

Northwest

Vancouver- The Canucks step up and win the division title over the Avs.

Pacific

Dallas- The defending Stanley Cup Champions roll through the regular season. Beware of Sharks, though.

Final Thoughts

Eastern Conference Champ: Boston

Western Conference Champ: St. Louis

Stanley Cup Champion: Boston.

The Bruins in a late season move, sign Markus Helanen. After leading the Minutemen to their first Hockey East title, Markus leads the Bruins to their first Cup in 28 years! Boston's City Hall breaks out in chants of "Markus, Markus!"

UMass men's tennis team having success

Minutemen prepare to take on Connecticut this weekend

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

Life is pretty good for the Massachusetts men's tennis team these days.

One should look no further than the events of last week for proof. The squad chalked up its first dual match victory of the season with last Wednesday's resounding 7-0 domination of Vermont.

Only days later, the team traveled to Hamilton, NY, where it placed a respectable second in last weekend's four-college tournament. Only Colgate bested the Minutemen, who placed ahead of both Boston University and Fairleigh Dickinson.

However, the squad cannot afford to bask in the glory for too long. On the cusp of what may prove to be the defining weekend of the season, the fall edition of the Maroon and White looks to christen Upper Boyden Courts today with a dual match victory over Boston College. And this may be the squad's toughest challenge yet.

Coach Judy Dixon realizes that BC will prove to be a more menacing foe than UVM. Last season, the Minutemen were trounced by the Eagles on enemy territory, 5-2.

This year, however, Dixon hopes that a deeper line-up, coupled with home-court advantage, will prove to be the remedy for last season's subpar performance.

"You have to give them the slight edge, having beaten us last year," Dixon said, "but the fact that we're playing at home is really good for us."

The match to watch will be a No. 1 singles showdown between sophomore Steve Prisco and BC's standout senior Anand Annigieri. Prisco, who returns to the line-up after a brief illness, has faced Annigieri before, but never at the collegiate level. The match should prove to be a battle of differing styles, with Prisco utilizing his classic serve and volley tactics against the BC baseliner.

Meanwhile, senior Parsa Samii will return to the No. 2 spot after a brief stint at first singles where he subbed for the ailing Prisco last week.

At No. 3 singles, freshman Will Shaw looks to reiterate the poise and maturity he has thus displayed in his rookie year. Junior Fabien Rabanal will play at the No. 4 spot, with sophomore Todd Champeau and junior Bill Greener rounding out the singles line-up.

In doubles action, Prisco and Shaw will pair at the No. 1 spot. Second doubles will feature the tandem of Samii and Rahanal, while the duo of Champeau and senior Marco Casesa will see action at the third slot.

Today's match-up will be the first of the only three home games for the Minutemen this semester. On Saturday, UConn will travel to Amherst, followed by a Monday showdown with BU.

Dixon feels that the ramifications of this weekend likely will be enormous for the squad.

"[Last season], Boston College and UConn were sort of defining moments of our year," she said. "And I would say that these two matches coming back-to-back are again going to test the strength and intensity of our team."

COLLEGIAN FILE PHOTO

After taking on Boston College yesterday, the UMass men's tennis team will be back in action this weekend against UConn.

The Curse looms large as Bosox lose ace, opener against Tribe

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

No one wanted to face playoff menace Boston in a short series. But take away the ace, and the menace is just a bunch of men.

With all the talk surrounding Pedro Martinez this week, it seemed as though the Red Sox were sending a one-man team into last night's playoff opener against the Indians. But when the Cy Young took left after the fourth inning with a muscle strain in his midback, it was up to the rest of Jimy Williams' overachieving club to pull out a win in frigid Cleveland.

And the Sox may have lent even more merit to Martinez's quest for MVP honors, dropping a tough 3-2 loss without their staff star.

Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove, criticized earlier in the season after allowing Nomar Garciaparra to single-handedly dismantle his pitching staff, apparently had not learned his lesson going into last night's action.

The Boston shortstop used his patented short stride to turn a Bartolo Colon fastball into yard work and a 1-0 Sox lead in his first at-bat, then doubled and scored on a Mike Stanley single in the fourth to make it 2-0.

After Martinez's untimely exit, Tribe nemesis Derek Lowe trotted out from the bullpen to the loudest applause of the night by the sold out Jacobs Field crowd. The sinkerball specialist took over right where Pedro left off, sitting down five Indians in a row before an error by Sox third baseman John Valentin put Manny Ramirez on, with two out in the sixth and Jim Thome stepping in.

It may as well have been the Bambino himself.

Thome needed exactly one pitch from Lowe to deposit the two-run equalizer into the right field seats and erase any momentum the Sox had built up behind Pedro.

The swat snapped a 1-for-39 drought that the Tribe had weathered against the 26 year-old righthander this year.

Colon, meanwhile, was making the most of his sudden status as the most dominant Dominican hurler in the contest. The 24 year-old Altamira native consistently topped 98 m.p.h. and worked all parts of the zone in striking out 11 Sox through his eight innings of work, including Jason Varitek and Brian Daubach three times apiece.

The Indians weren't having much more success against Lowe after the Thome clout, going down on strikes four times. Lowe yielded to southpaw Rheal Cormier after plunking Ramirez to open the bottom of the ninth, which smacked equally of doom for the Tribe: Cleveland had managed an abysmal 1-for-17 against Cormier in '99.

The "curse whisperers" resumed when Hargrove sent ex-Sox Wil Cordero to bat for DH Harold Baines, bringing to mind the fateful homer by former Boston backstop Tony Pe_a that won the 13-inning game one marathon in the '95 playoffs for Cleveland.

Cordero singled through the hole into right, chasing Cormier and putting Ramirez into scoring position for pinch-hitter Richie Sexson. Sox reliever Rich Garces then proceeded to walk Sexson on four pitches, juicing the bases for veteran Travis Fryman.

The collective groans began to echo across Red Sox Nation.

After barely fouling off the first offer from Garces and flailing wildly at strike two, it appeared as though the twelve-year veteran might indeed succumb to the high leg kick and sweeping delivery of the rotund Venezuelan.

But the 1-2 high heater flung next by Garces ended up mashed into left field by Fryman, and Ramirez crossed home plate to the roars of the elated home crowd. Boston had lost its ace and its opener, 3-2.

"It was huge. After the game Bartolo threw, it was a shame not to get him some runs," Fryman said. "I had a dismal at-bat, but I was able to get on top of one."

Several key questions now loom for the boys from Beantown. Can the Sox recover from dropping their game one "gimmie" and eke out a win in game two, behind the glass shoulder of two-time Comeback Player of the Year Bret Saberhagen? And more importantly, has the Tribe seen the last of Pedro in this oh-so-short series?

But for last night at least, the hanging heads of Boston fans everywhere were filled with only one real question.

What will it take to break this godawful curse?

Sox hurlers have been a mix of ups and downs

By Jen Cormier

You can never have too much pitching.

This should be the first and foremost, numero uno adage of baseball. All owners and general managers should have it tattooed across their foreheads.

Want proof? Look no further than the '99 Boston Red Sox. At the start of the season, nearly every hardball expert was singing the praises of the Sox pitching staff (with the exception of Peter Gammons, who knows better — he's not called the Commissioner for nothing).

They had a pretty convincing argument. Seasoned veterans. Promising newcomers. Pedro. Flash. Sure, the Sox could use another bat in the line-up, but pitching...well, that's under control.

Or so we thought.

Consider the starting rotation that was supposed to guide the Sox through the season - Pedro Martinez, Tim Wakefield, Bret Saberhagen, Mark Portugal, and Pat Rapp.

Now, fast-forward a couple of months. Wakefield's role has been expanded from starter to closer/reliever/starter/whatever. Saberhagen's pesky shoulder has resulted in multiple trips to the DL. Portugal is unemployed, and Rapp has sunk deep into the abyss of mediocrity.

Minus Pedro, the combined record of the original starting rotation is a dismal 29-36.

You can never have too much pitching.

Lest we forget, it was only one year ago that management was faced with Closergate - Tom Gordon and Dennis Eckersley were both vying for the position.

What a difference a year makes. Eck has since retired, and Flash succumbed to an elbow injury earlier this season. The result has been a revolving door of makeshift closers including Wakefield, Derek Lowe, and Rod Beck.

One minute, the Sox have an All-Star closer, the next, they are sending a (gulp) knuckleballer to the mound to close out the ninth.

You can never have too much pitching.

For Brian Rose, it was a season of should-as, could-as, and would-as. When he rocketed to a 4-0 start, everyone thought that this would be the New Bedford native's breakthrough year. But it all went downhill from there.

First, there were the embarrassing gaffes that revealed his inexperience (i.e. forgetting to cover home). Next came a string of dreadful starts. Soon, it seemed that the local boy couldn't even make it into the fifth inning. The outcome was a sub-par 6-5 record with a 4.93 ERA.

You can never have too much pitching.

Jin Ho Cho and Tomokazu Ohka may represent the future of the Sox pitching staff, but for now, they are little more than rookies who aren't ready for the big leagues. Cho went 2-5 with a 5.72 ERA. Ohka was even more disappointing, failing to capture a major league win despite his estimable minor league record.

You can never have too much pitching.

Of course, with Martinez on the mound, the Sox have as good a chance as anyone in a best-of-five series. But the fact that they even have a shot at a post-season run is unbelievable.

Jen Cormier

Exactly how inconsistent was Red Sox pitching this season? Gammons recently pointed out that the Sox utilized the same five-man rotation twice in a row only three times this season. That is one heck of a statistic. Also consider the fact that the Sox have used 13 starters this season.

Take a look at the starting rotation for the playoffs: Martinez, Saberhagen, Ramon Martinez, and Kent Mercker. Only Martinez and Saberhagen are among the original five starters, and keep in mind that Saberhagen is still a question mark. It remains to be seen whether or not the war-torn veteran's shoulder can remain durable.

The fact that the elder Martinez is a game three starter is an incredible streak of good luck. But his situation is just as fragile as Saberhagen's. And just think -if Mercker hadn't been acquired by GM Dan Duquette, who would be the fourth starter?

If it weren't for Martinez, the pitching staff would have been the laughing stock of major league baseball. Other than Martinez, none of the original starters improved or even equaled their records from last season. Let's be honest, the notion of facing Pat Rapp does not strike fear into the hearts of the Derek Jeters and Bernie Williams of the world.

Thus, we must hold the following pitching truths to be self-evident. First, a pitching staff is never as deep as it seems. What you see is never what you get. Injuries and inconsistencies are bound to be plentiful.

Second, a handful of 10-game winners and an untested, but promising minor league crop does not a good pitching staff make.

Third, unless a team's starting rotation includes Sandy Koufax, Cy Young, and Martinez, a GM should never stop looking for more pitching. Finally, in an era of long ball legends and shrinking strike zones, consistent quality pitching is harder to come by than ever before.

ATTENTION!!!

The UMass Men's Basketball Team will be holding walk-on tryouts on Tuesday, October 19th, 1999, at 7 PM in the Mullins Center. In order to be eligible, to tryout you must...

1. Be a full time student at UMass.
2. Have had a physical within the last year.
3. Have proof of health insurance.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

Volume CVI Issue 23 — Friday, October 8, 1999

Forum explores parking issues

By Anna Faktorovich and Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

During an open forum last night in Grayson Residence Hall, University of Massachusetts Parking Service Director Michael Brennan said "nothing gets done until it becomes a problem. The system doesn't work until people get ticked off and speak up."

Students expressed that it has gone beyond just that.

For the past three weeks, Student Government Association (SGA), Orchard Hill Area Government (OHAG) and Parking Services have been meeting to discuss a solution to the unavailability of parking.

Some possible solutions discussed included a 24-hour parking enforcement policy during the weekday to regulate illegal parking. Several students claimed that Brennan hasn't enforced such policies in the past.

"The only reason I wouldn't do something is if somebody from the top would stop me," said Brennan.

Roy Rosamin, a non-grad student and a Vietnam veteran has petitioned for a space but never received one. Brennan would not comment on the situation surrounding this claim.

Many students expressed their concern on coming to a conclusion on the parking lot, but Brennan said the event serves more as a way for him to take student's feedback into consideration. The majority of the students, led by Asif Sayani, a senator in Orchard Hill, were against building a new lot. Brennan, however, felt that the parking space would act as an immediate solution to the parking situation in Orchard Hill.

Senator Sayani argued that building a parking lot in a beautiful recreation area "is a problem for all students." He also argued that "the same problem appeared before but it is still not fixed." Senator Sayani made a survey of the lot during the day and at night, and said that there was a large quantity of cars parked in purple lots without stickers or with yellow stickers. Senator Sayani's argument was clear: "I would like to see the problem resolved."

Student Government Association President Jeff Howe argued that as winter and snow covers the grassy area that students currently park on, the mud and ice would cause "cars to start sliding off the hill." Overall, his argument was that come winter, students are going to demand a new lot. According to Howe, the solution is to track, ticket and create new spaces. Howe said that this is like the song that never ends- as if "you get rid of one very bad food product another ten more are going to come up."

There were several other issues that were brought up during the meeting. One of the concerns that students voiced was the safety issue of parking in the yellow lot by the Mather Career Center. Brennan said he understood the concern. He claimed that if he were female, he too would be parking closer to the dorms, even if it did mean illegally.

"I wouldn't expect a girl to park in a place I would not want to park in," Brennan said.

Another student claimed that the only reason she climbs up the hill is because it is a beautiful and pleasant place to live. According to several students and senators, the new parking lot would destroy the "only recreation area they have," causing them to turn to other places such as the Bowl.

Brennan told students that an immediate action will be enforcing parking 24-hours, 5 days a week, and would handle other considerations in the future. While an agreement wasn't met in regards to the new lot, most students were pleased that their concerns were being listened to.

"I think this is the kind of thing students want," Howe said. "I think it's something a lot of administrators need to learn from and hear concerns from students on a first hand basis."

A follow up meeting is tentatively scheduled for next week.

This jam-packed lot is indicative of the widespread parking problems in Orchard Hill and many other parts of campus.

It only takes a minute, man.

UMass races towards the millennium by kicking off "Recycle Umass 2000" yesterday in front of the Student Union.

Astronaut alum Coleman to speak at Northampton Inn

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

In honor of the 72 Science, Technology, Engineering and Mathematics Teacher Education Collaborative (STEMTEC) scholarship winners, Astronaut Catherine "Cady" Coleman will address the group tonight at the Inn at Northampton.

Coleman, a university alumna has flown on two space shuttle missions for NASA and will discuss her most recent mission. She was a mission specialist on the STS-93, which flew last July and STS-73 in 1995. After completing her two missions, she has over 500 hours in space. Coleman is also a lieutenant colonel in the U.S. Air Force in addition to her service as a NASA astronaut.

During her speech, she will talk about the importance of hands on experience and the use of NASA and space science materials in the classroom. "Coleman is someone who is very exciting and will be an encouragement to the students," Sharon Palmer, Student Services Director said. The collaborative attempted to have Coleman speak last Spring, but school rules prevented such a meeting and therefore they are extremely delighted to be able to have her here this year.

The scholarship awards are students from throughout the five Colleges who are pursuing the teaching of math and science as a career. The recipients, including 23 UMass students were chosen on the basis of their academic excellence and their promise as future teachers. "All of these students have great potential. This scholarship is a very prestigious award, a great honor. We hope it will also help them to consider teaching math and science as a career option," said Morton Sternheim, an UMass professor and the lead principal investigator of the STEMTEC grant.

The funding for STEMTEC comes from a $5 million, five year grant from the National Science Foundation and collaborates UMass with Amherst, Hampshire, Smith and Mount Holyoke colleges; Greenfield, Holyoke and Springfield Technical community colleges; and several school districts in the area. The collaborative's main goal is to reform science and math education. It hopes to encourage science and math majors to look into teaching at the same time that it better educates future teachers in those same fields. The collaborative is looking for diversity and to assure that everyone is given the opportunity to study within the fields of math and science. Days like this, offering such scholarships, will become a reality.

This is the second year that scholarships have been able to be awarded to deserving scholars, while the grant is currently in it's third year.

Students build focus

Groups celebrate Tibetan culture

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

Tibetan students at the University of Massachusetts may be over 1000 miles from their native home, but a group of students are celebrating their culture through the fourth annual Tibet Awareness Day this weekend.

The event will take place Saturday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the Amherst Common and is sponsored by the Tibetan Association of Western Massachusetts and Students For A Free Tibet.

Thondup Tsering, a graduate education major and member of UMass Students For A Free Tibet, said the current condition of Tibet is one of oppression and persecution of the Tibetan people.

"The purpose is to think about a general situation inside occupied Tibet and also to take a glimpse of Tibetan culture," Tsering said. "It will be like a 'mini-Tibet' and this is a wonderful opportunity to be a part of it."

Tibetan students from Hampshire College will be focusing on the plight of the young Penchen Lama, who was placed on house arrest by the Chinese government in 1995 at the age of eight.

"Since then, nobody knows where he is or even the condition of the child or even his family," Tsering said.

Another focus will be the imprisonment of a Tibetan "Fullbright Scholarship" student from Middlebury College in Vermont. He was sentenced to 18 years in prison because he revisited Tibet to record and document traditional dance and music, an act that violated the occupied Tibetan law.

The day will be marked with a guest appearance by Dadon, a Tibetan movie star and actress who starred in the movie Windhorse. Tsering said she recently fled from Tibet and the movie focuses on her life.

"She fled from Tibet because of the continued oppression and persecution of Tibetan people," Tsering said.

The day will also include a photo gallery exhibiting pictures of Tibet at different stages of political control. The photo exhibit will be coming to Amherst for the first time.

For Tsering, the event marks a special time for Tibetans of the five-college area, and resembles a much larger nationally recognized movement.

Library to honor Latino heritage

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The W.E.B Du Bois Library will be celebrating its third annual Latino Heritage Month during October, which includes both exhibits and guest speakers.

According to Isabel Espinal, an Outreach Librarian in charge of the event, there are many items of interest on the agenda for the month. Currently, there is an exhibit of photographs on the main floor of the library by Peruvian photographer Vincente Revilla. The exhibit is entitled "Qoyllur Rit'i: In Search of the Lord of Snow Star" and depicts scenes from an annual festival that takes place annually in the Southern Andes. Both Revilla, and Professor Donald Proulx of the UMass Anthropology Department will speak about the exhibit on Tuesday, October 12th at 5:30 p.m. Also, Peter Stern, Librarian for Spanish, Portuguese, and Latin American Studies will speak about the current collection that the library possesses in the Pauline P. Collins Latin American Collection. Following the speakers, there will be a reception that includes Peruvian music performed by Communications professor Henry Geddes.

Also included in the festivities for the month is a lecture-demonstration from Peruvian ceramic artist Polo Ramirez regarding pre-Hispanic Andean ceramic techniques. This will be held on Thursday, October 14th at 4:00 p.m. in the library.

On Friday, October 22nd at 10:00 a.m., Latin American author and illustrator Lulu Delacre will speak to students about her popular children's stories. Delacre writes her books on the subject of Latin American children's cultural traditions, and then illustrates them.

According to library representative Emily Silverman, the Latino Heritage Month is being held in part to, "highlight the Latino collection" which is the 3rd largest in New England. Another reason why the library is running this program is to, "outreach to Latin American students and the community at large," Silverman said.

Espinal explained that one goal of the program is to, "emphasize the cultures of the people we represent."

She illustrated the need for positive information about people of Latin American heritage. "More needs to be done throughout schools about the accomplishments of Latin Americans," Espinal said.

The Latino American Heritage Month is only one in a series of themes to spread awareness about other cultures and ethnic backgrounds on the university campus. This event is open to anyone interested in Latin America or in art, Espinal said.

Jesse "The Body" Ventura wins over Harvard

By Ellen Gamerman
The Baltimore Sun

CAMBRIDGE — Jesse "The Body" Ventura met Harvard "The Mind" University Wednesday - the anti-politician coming to the land of the brainiacs in an encounter that left both sides mildly bemused, if not enlightened.

Bashing the media at every opportune moment- his aides said he would hold a news conference only if he left "in the mood"- the governor of Minnesota did not quite squelch talk about his inflammatory comments in Playboy magazine.

But his visit certainly changed the subject for a moment.

There was Ventura, like an overgrown pre-frosh, eating pizza with undergraduates, pep-talking with the football team, soaking up knowledge from the big shots on the faculty, toting a Harvard tie.

"If you'd have asked me at any point in my life, would I be at Harvard talking politics I would have laughed very loudly," Ventura told 70 students, winners of a campus lottery for hotly contested seats at a question and-answer session for undergraduates. "I hope I don't disappoint you."

At first, some students sniped about him.

"I wanted to witness the embarrassment firsthand," said Teresa Bechtold, a sophomore from Blackduck, Minn.

But they seemed a little more star struck after seeing the former bouncing, trash-talking professional wrestler

Turn to VENTURA page 3

Arts & Living 5
Comics 9
Crossword 9
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 10
ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Saturday	Sunday
HIGH: 59 LOW: 37	HIGH: 66 LOW: 46	HIGH: 63 LOW: 44

SOURCE: CNN.COM

Campus Safety

Look inside for a swell campus perspectives look ing at campus safety.

PAGE 2

Juliana, Jimmie, and some Maniacs

Jimmie's Chicken Shack chats with the Collegian, and Juliana Hatfield lands in Northampton. Also check out this week's video pick.

PAGE 5

Conference Call

Brooke Bartlett and the Minutewomen soccer team travel to George Washington and Virginia Tech for two crucial A-10 games this weekend.

PAGE 10

Campus Perspectives

Compiled by Andrea Peers • Photos by Becky Reddick

Do you feel safe on campus?

"I don't feel safe at night. There is no transportation to Orchard Hill late at night, and no lights on the walkway."

Surya Prakash
Computer Science
Freshman

"I'm always walking home from the Campus Center at night. I feel safe."

Mairead Maheigan
Natural Resource Studies
Sophomore

"Absolutely. I've always felt safe on campus. I've never felt threatened. But at the same time, I protect myself to be safe."

Ethan Henerey
Undeclared
Freshman

"I'm never really on campus after 9:00 p.m., but I'm not scared."

Bindu Prasanna
Molecular and Cellular Biology
Graduate Student

"I don't always feel safe at night."

Chelsea Cabral
Chemistry
Junior

Jury grants child killer death sentence

By Tom Perry
Los Angeles Times

SAN DIEGO — A Superior Court jury Wednesday granted the wish of remorseless killer Brandon Wilson to be sentenced to die for murdering a 9-year-old boy in a beach-front restroom.

Wilson, 21, a drug-taking drifter from Wisconsin who testified he killed Matthew Cecchi under orders from God, showed no emotion when the verdict was read.

"If ever there was a case that deserved the death penalty, this was it," said Foreman Gene Wick, his voice close to breaking, said later.

Judge John Einhorn must decide whether to affirm the jury's decision or reduce the penalty to life in prison without the chance of parole. The six-man, six-woman jury last week rejected a plea of insanity entered on Wilson's behalf by his attorney.

Defense attorney Curt Owen said Wilson "is at peace with the verdict. He is quite pleased. It is what he wanted."

Owen said Wilson had asked his mother and other family members not to plead with the jury to spare his life.

Owen said his client enjoyed the attention the trial gave him to "tell his story" about taking LSD and having visions from God.

During five hours of deliberations, jurors asked to see a videotape of a laughing, grinning Wilson re-enacting the crime for a police detective soon after his arrest.

Jurors also asked to review Wilson's testimony when he had said he had no remorse and wanted to be executed. "My whole purpose in life is to destroy your society," Wilson had testified.

Deputy District Attorney David Rubin told jurors to remember the grisly details of how Wilson grabbed Matthew from behind, slit his throat and stabbed him in the back.

"It was sadistic, it was cruel," Rubin said. "He (Wilson) got pleasure from that agony."

During the penalty phase of the trial, five of Wilson's former teachers testified that he was a smart but moody youth who appeared traumatized by his parents' divorce. Wilson testified that he considered killing his mother when he was a teenager.

Cecchi, a Little League player and straight-A student who lived in Oroville, was killed Nov. 14, 1998, during a family gathering in Oceanside. Wilson said he chose Matthew as his victim because he was small and easily overpowered.

Matthew's father, Lou, a hospital worker, did not attend the trial, explaining that he would have found it impossible to restrain himself from attacking Wilson.

JARET BARR / COLLEGIAN

Hey man, one more minute.

The Office of Waste Management is trying to make a difference, I suggest you pay attention.

The University of Massachusetts'

Something Every Friday

presents

"Jabali Africa"

"Jabali Africa" presents the music and dance of Kenya. This 4-person group, all former members of the Kenyan National Theater Troupe, have toured Europe and the United States and now come to the Bowker Stage.

Friday October 8, 1999
Bowker Auditorium, 8pm...FREE

The FREE movie "American Pie" will be shown in the Bluewall Cafe at 10 pm. The Movie will be shown again on Monday Oct. 11 in the Campus Center auditorium at 8 pm.

Visit us on the web:
http://www.umass.edu/events/calendar.htm

This program is made possible by a grant from the Student Affairs Cultural Enrichment Fund, UMass Auxiliary Services and the Vice-Chancellor for Student Affairs.

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SHEDULE

Pick-up Date	Sport	Date of Game/Opponent
Tue., Oct. 12, 1999	Hockey	Oct. 23, 1999 vs. Boston College
Mon., Oct. 18, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 3, 1999 vs. California All-Stars
	Hockey	Nov. 5, 1999 vs. UMass-Lowell
Tue., Oct. 26, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 10, 1999 vs. Converse All-Stars
Mon., Nov. 8, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 19, 1999 vs. Connecticut
Mon., Nov. 15, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 23, 1999 vs. Vermont
	Men's Basketball	Nov. 29, 1999 vs. Marshall
Mon., Nov. 22, 1999	Men's Baketball	Dec. 2, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Hockey	Dec. 3, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Dec. 6, 1999 vs. Villanova
Mon., Dec. 13, 1999	Hockey	Jan. 2, 2000 vs. St. Lawrence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 6, 2000 vs. st. Bonadventure
	Hockey	Jan. 7, 2000 vs. Providence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 8, 2000 vs. Fordham
	Hockey	Jan. 11, 2000 vs. Maine
Mon., Jan. 10, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 15, 2000 vs. Northeastern
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 20, 2000 vs. Dayton
	Hockey	Jan. 21, 2000 vs. Merrimack
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 22, 2000 vs. Rhode Island
Mon., Jan. 17, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 26, 2000 vs. Providence
Mon., Jan 24, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 1, 2000 vs. Temple
	Hockey	Feb. 4, 2000 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 5, 2000 vs. Texas
Mon., Jan. 31, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 6, 2000 vs. UMass-Lowell
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 9, 2000 vs. La Salle
Mon., Feb. 7, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 19, 2000 vs. St. Joseph's
Mon., Feb. 14, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 25, 2000 vs. Boston College
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 29, 2000 vs. George Washington
Mon., Feb. 21, 2000	Hockey	March. 4, 2000 vs. New Hampshire

PICK-UP & GAME DATES SUBJET TO CHANGE. VALID U... STUDENT ID CARD NEEDED TO PICK-UP TICKETS. AUX... FEE SHOULD HAVE ALREADY BEEN PAID.

BECKY REDDICK/ COLLEGIAN

Pizza, pizza, pizza pie...

Who doesn't love Antonio's scrum-diddely-umptious pizza pie?

■ ventura

continued from page 1

in the flesh.

"I love him! I love him!" said B.J. Novak, a junior and an editor at the Harvard Lampoon.

His friend Jackie Newmyer agreed: "He's genuinely curious- he's happy to be at Harvard and around bright minds."

Even Bechtold had a change of heart. "I liked him better than I thought I would," she said. It was not clear whether Ventura was student or teacher here.

He brought some advisers with him to take notes while he met for more than an hour with economists, government professors and civics theoreticians at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government.

Ventura, who does not have a college degree, mingled perhaps a tad conspicuously in this ivy-walled environment, his signature head-bobbing and deep chin dimple, not to mention the sheer size of him, easy to spot in all the tweed.

Ventura seemed pleased with the very fact of his visit: "The American dream lives because Jesse Ventura is at Harvard!" he said at a news conference (he did, indeed, get in the mood).

And he seemed delighted with the way the Harvard crowd received him.

JARET BARR / COLLEGIAN

Pool is cool

Senior HRTA major Joe Chang did some hustlin' Paul Newman-style in the Student Union Game Room yesterday afternoon.

THE TIBETAN ASSOCIATION OF WESTERN MASSACHUSETTS & STUDENTS FOR A FREE TIBET ARE PLEASED TO PRESENT THE 4th ANNUAL

TIBET AWARENESS DAY

Special Appearance by Dadon
(starred in WINDHORSE)
TIBETAN CHILDREN DANCE GROUP FROM BOSTON
JOEL LOSS • DEVOTION
KATE O'CONNOR
& OTHERS

AMHERST COMMON
Saturday, October 9, 1999
11am 5pm

PHOTO EXHIBIT • TIBETAN FOOD (MOMOS) • CARPET WEAVING
ASTROLOGY & TIBETAN MEDICINE • TARA EXHIBIT • TIBETAN STONE MASONRY • TIBETAN TREASURES FOR SALE • ARTIFACTS • ART EXHIBIT AND DEMO BY MASTER THANGKA PAINTER KALSANG LODOE OSHOE
SURPRISE SPEAKER APPEARANCE (TBA)

COME AND LEARN ABOUT TIBET
EXPERIENCE THE RICH TAPESTRY OF THE ENDANGERED CULTURE OF TIBET

IN CASE OF RAIN, THIS EVENT WILL BE HELD AT GRACE CHURCH (NEXT TO THE AMHERST COMMON)

WOMEN IN SPORTS MANAGEMENT,
THE UMASS ASSOCIATION OF STUDENT SPORTS MANAGERS
AND THE ASSOCIATION OF SPORT MANAGERS OF COLOR INVITE YOU TO THE

POUND-FOR-POUND CHALLENGE COLLEGE TOUR

HOSTED BY The HEART & SOUL of BOXING HBO
AND
ESPN THE MAGAZINE

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 13,
12-4PM
AT THE LIBRARY LAWN
(RAIN DATE FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15)

JOIN HBO AND ESPN THE MAGAZINE
AND PARTICIPATE IN A SERIES OF BOXING WORKOUT EXERCISES,
INCLUDING SLAM MAN SHOWDOWN, HEAVY & SPEED BAG WORKOUTS, AND MORE.

PICK UP FREE MERCHANDISE
PLUS REGISTER TO WIN FREE TICKETS TO AN UPCOMING WORLD CHAMPIONSHIP HBO FIGHT!

www.hbo.com/boxing ©1999 Home Box Office, a Division of Time Warner Entertainment Company, L.P. All rights reserved.

R-E-S-P-E-C-T

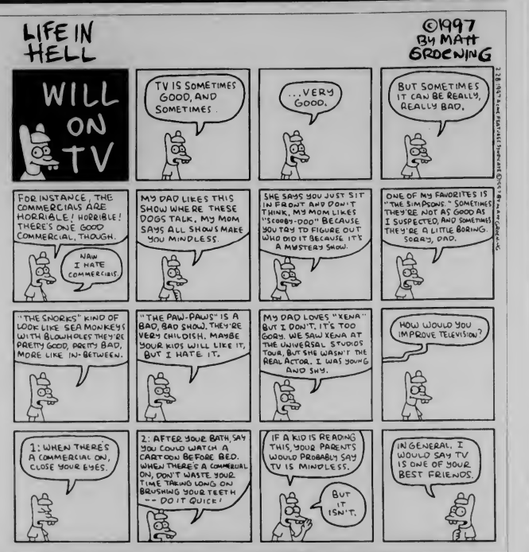
Laura Siciliano

Ask the average UMass student from in-state why they are going to school here, and there is a good chance that their answer will involve the word "cheap". In fact, I would probably answer the same way if I were asked. Going to school here is without a doubt less expensive than attending, say, Bostog University or Amherst College. There is no arguing that UMass is a good value, because an education at $10,000 a year is always a good value when compared to the tuition at many private colleges and universities that start at thirty grand a year.

An out-of-state student is about 10 times more likely to say that they are at UMass for the academics or even just because they like the school. How often do you hear someone from, for example, Newton say that they are at UMass because it was his or her first choice? Not very often. I am sure that there are people from Newton who are not here because it is cheap or because they could not get into their first choice schools – there just are not that many. It stems from the fact that a stigma exists throughout Massachusetts about attending this university.

As a old student in high school, my guidance counselor seemed disappointed that I would be attending UMass. She seemed to think that I was selling myself short. From others, I got the usual "Zoo Mass" comments. People assumed that I was only going here because it was my least expensive option. While attending UMass is certainly a bargain for me compared to going to one of the private schools I applied to, I am not here for that reason only. When it came right down to it, I liked UMass. I could see myself walking across campus. I actually chose to be here, and it was quite unnerving to have people think that I was not going to a good school, because UMass is a very good school.

While the University is far from perfect, UMass is a much better place than Massachusetts residents give it credit for. We are attending a major research university with professors who are experts in their fields and renowned around the world. Despite the enormous size, the school works hard at not letting students get lost in the crowd through the RSOs, living environments and the surprisingly low percentage of classes with over 100 people (only 9%!). We have varied and distinct choices in campus housing. The variety of classes and majors is staggering. UMass is one of the more diverse campuses in the Northeast. We have a n d Northampton, two college towns that are unrivaled anywhere else. There are more things to learn, do and experience here than there are in most of the small private colleges around Boston.



Yet, somehow, the state of Massachusetts always seems to think that UMass is not as good as those schools back east. There is an incredibly foolish stereotype that the only kids going to school here are party animals. The "serious" student cannot attend school here, because all we do out here is keg stands, smoke pot and throw humans and washing machines out of the 22nd floor windows in Southwest. I have been asked the same questions countless times: "UMass is a party school, isn't it?", "People never sleep in those towers, do they?", and "Is it still ZooMass out there in Amherst?"

I give the same answers every time. Yes, UMass is a party school. But so is Amherst, B.C., Emerson, UNH, URI, UNC... People in college party. Some people party more than others do, but no matter where you go to school, you can find a round robin if you want to. Secondly, people do sleep in the towers. I slept better when I lived in IA than I do know that I live in Grayson. Finally, ZooMass is really just a creation in the minds of Massachusetts residents. There have been some crazy times at UMass, but there have been a lot more important academic discoveries and innovations than there have been wild frat parties.

People also view UMass as a secondary academic institution because it is public. However, to out-of-staters, UMass is not a "good public university" but a plain old "good university". Many residents of other states see that being private does not necessarily make a sound academic institution. It does, however, make a more expensive academic institution. With all of the prestigious colleges and universities in Massachusetts, it is easy to get caught up in the aura of M.I.T., Harvard and Holy Cross. Prestigious names do not make a better education, however. Calculus is calculus wherever it is taught. Massachusetts residents seem to think that math is better taught for a higher price. However, in national rankings, UMass consistently is marked a better academic value than Harvard, because it gives more bang for the buck.

The cheaper price tag of UMass is a great advantage to attending this school. It is, however, about time that the people of Massachusetts realize a few things and start showing their state university some respect. Students should want to come here for the school itself, not just because of the goods, like financial aid. First of all, a lower cost education does not mean a lower quality education. Secondly, there is no shame in attending a public university. Thirdly, UMass is no more a party school than the next. Finally, students from other states are clamoring to attend this University because of its strong academic reputation. Massachusetts needs to respect this university and the fact that it is one of the finest academic institutions in the state. After all, a diploma from UMass is worth just as much as a diploma from some of those private colleges in the east.

Laura Siciliano is a UMass student.

Letters to the editor

You know nothing about "being white"

To the editor:

I am responding to the "White Bashing Extravaganza" that appeared in Tuesday's Multicultural Affairs page. Hey, Dawn and Sandra, it must be touch being an "African American" on this campus. And you're right, I wouldn't know anything about it. You know why? I'm white and I'm guessing that either one or both of you are African-American, which is fine with me. I have no problem with that. I like all kinds and colors of people and don't feel better or worse than any of them. I will tell you where I have a problem though. It bothers me that you know so much about being white (enough to write a column about it) when you are not white yourself. A bit contradictory, don't you think?

So what you're saying is I, the white person, can't say anything about being African-American (which is fine with me) because I'm not African-American and don't know anything about it. But since you are African-American and you have your own section of the paper devoted to only "Black" affairs, you can say all you want about how easy it is to be white? A bit of a double standard, wouldn't you say? What I want to know is where is the section of the paper devoted to only "White" affairs?

And I mean real issues and not Abercrombie and Fitch, Limp Biznutz and MTV because that's la-la land. If I wanted to start a White Affairs section of the Collegian, I would be rejected and dubbed a racist. Agreed? That itself is a double standard because there is a Multicultural Affairs section and a Black Affairs section. If I wanted to start my own newspaper just for white issues for the white community, it would be called "hate literature!" Again, I'd be dubbed a racist. See what I'm getting at?

You're upset because you don't see "one African-American student on campus" and you're "surrounded by white teachers and students" and "your counselor is white and you don't trust him/her because he/she doesn't understand you."

The only thing I can say about that is look where you go to college... in the middle of New England. If you want more African-American counselors, advisors, teachers and faces, you should have gone to a place like Grambling or Howard University. You would fit in at those places because they've got plenty of people there that hate "white folk" also.

And my parents got wealthy off the sweat and pain of your parents? My father died of a heart attack working 75 hours per week so I could be here to learn. Do we owe that to you, too? Do you think college is cheap for white families? You think my eyes are closed to today's problems with "Institutional Racism"? Everyone is oppressed! Nothing is a handout! Maybe you'll be happier knowing that.

I don't say anything about how it is to be African-American because it is not my race. I would encourage you to do the same and practice what you preach. And by the way, I lived in Southwest for 2 years and (unfortunately) never heard one Rolling Stones song or Doors tune. It was probably due to the fact that I was forced to listen to Puff Daddy, Notorious B.I.G., Wu Tang and Tupac, which was blaring at maximum decibel level from almost every room.

Also, to the other white people who read Dawn and Sandra's assault on you and thought nothing about it or didn't even read it because it was in the Multicultural Affairs page, why don't you wake up?! Speak your mind. What, just because the Black Affairs page says you're a racist, you accept it to be true? Step up and defend yourself.

Ken Appell
Amherst

More funding for education

To the editor:

Increasing funding for student aid is one of the best investments Congress can make in America's future. By giving more students the ability to afford a college education, we build a stronger workforce and expand opportunity.

Unfortunately, our elected officials have not heeded this advice in the past. Over the past two decades, student aid funding has not kept pace with inflation or rising college costs.

The Pell Grant is one good example. The largest of student aid programs, the Pell Grant, currently supports over 5.7 million students in their educational endeavors. In the late 1970s, the maximum Pell Grant a student could qualify for paid for three-quarters of the average cost of attendance at a four-year university and one-third of the cost of a private university. Due to poor funding over the years, those figures have dropped precipitously. Today, the maximum Pell Grant pays for only one-third of the average cost of attendance at a public university like UMass, and one-seventh of the cost of a private university.

With federal budget surpluses looming, there is no reason for this situation to continue. Representative Olver should do everything possible to give student aid the funding increase it needs. Raising the maximum Pell Grant that a student can qualify for by $400 would be a good start.

This week, students working with MassPIRG have flyered the dorms with "locks", essentially locking students out of college. The lock flyers have the Alliance to Save Student Aid phone number: 1-800-574-4AID. Students, faulty and staff are encouraged to call this toll-free number and leave messages for representative Olver to stop the raid on student aid. Show Congress that you care about your future and the future of this country.

Joey Stevenson
MassPIRG

Doonesbury

Life as an RA

Ryan Benharris

Allow me to answer the question that's been driving those of you who live in the dorms nuts. Yes, I admit it, I'm going to defy housing as well as all of my bosses, and tell you what the poster that says, "What could you have in common with all of these people: Hillary Clinton, Wesley Snipes, and Sheryl Crow." actually means. If you thought the answer was "the next three people to speak out against carbon monoxide poisoning," you're wrong. Another common response to this question is "I don't care," or my personal favorite, "take this Hillary Clinton" as someone proceeds to rip the poster off of the wall. The actual answer to this question is: they were all Resident Assistants." So, if you became a Resident Assistant, you could have something in common with Hillary Clinton, Wesley Snipes and Sheryl Crow.

I myself am an RA, and after putting this poster up on my floor and asking my Resident Director for the answer, I began to do some thinking. First of all, I began to imagine these three people as RA's. I began to wonder what it would be like to live on their floors, and how it would be to have to follow their rules. Can you even fathom being able to tell people "I lived on Hillary Clinton's floor," or "I used to jam with Sheryl Crow in college?" Those stories would rule!

Now, of these three, who would be the best RA? Of course, without a doubt it would be Wesley Snipes (By the way, I'm not trying to take any props away from LL Cool J, because we all know that he can kick Snipes' ass any day, but LL wasn't an RA). I'm sure that on Wesley Snipes' floor, the rules were followed, and that's all there is to say. Common responses to things like "hey, wanna drink in the dorm," would be something along the lines of "no way man, we're under age, and Wesley said you can't drink unless you're 21, and we better listen to him, cuz he kills vampires." That's right, no one forgets to flush the toilet, or is loud after quiet hours, because the obvious fear that Passenger 57 himself would uphold the law in the way that only a Demolition Man can. So in other words, don't piss Blade off, or you'll get more than just written up.

The most "talented RA ever" award definitely cannot go to Wesley Snipes. No, Sheryl Crow has to take the prize on this one. Down the hall in the lounge, you could hear her with her guitar spraying out terrific verses such as "we are sitting at a bar at noon on Tuesday." Followed up by "If you have a problem with alcoholism, please speak to a different RA that's not me."

Finally, the scariest RA of these three has to be the First Lady. Now, I'm not talking scary as in, "she's going to write us up scary." I mean scary as in, "think about who she was dating in college, scary." That's right, if you lived on Hillary's floor, big bad Billy would be stopping by to make booty calls to your RA every night at 2a.m. How could you stomach the thought of these two going at it in the room next to you, and every once in a while hear Bill yelling, "that's right baby, daddy's gonna be President someday." That's just plain offensive. I would think that after about a week, all of the residents would move off of the floor.

With all kidding aside, the real reason that this poster was hung up, was to accompany another poster showing times and places that you could go to become a Resident Assistant. For me, this has been the most positive experience in my three years in college. I lived in the dorms for two years, and met many great RA's. However, the two RA's that ran my floor were such terrific people that for them, I have nothing but the utmost respect. Gina, my RA freshman year constantly had her door open, and made a first year student's adjustment to college, much easier. My sophomore year, my RA became, and still is, one of my closest friends.

The fact that Rich was more interested in being a friend as opposed to being an authority figure is something so eccentric and special, that I cannot forget the things that he has taught me about being an RA, as well as being a person. The reason I applied for the job in the first place single like everyone thinks) is the idea that I could be another student what Rich and Gina were to me. If I had that kind of impact on another person, I would consider that a major accomplishment.

Something else you are taught in this job is how to really work on a team. My co-workers are the greatest, and I feel more than fortunate to work with these people. To all of the RA's on this campus, you are truly awesome.

If you have the slightest interest in doing this job, I suggest you go out there and see what it's like. You could influence people in ways unimaginable, and you could learn some great skills for life while you're at it. It's a wonderful experience, and hey, you never know, maybe someday you could use these skills to lop a vampire's head off!

Ryan Benharris is a Collegian columnist.

Come down to the Collegian and write for ed/op.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Alan Fortescue Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

Film festival tour hits UM

By Ryan Benharris
Collegian Staff

The New York Comedy Film Festival Shorts Tour made its first stop at Mahar Auditorium Wednesday night. UMass was the second stop on the tour, the first being Tuesday Night at Emerson College. The comedy festival, which is produced by the Burly Bear Network and sponsored by Snapple, Nintendo, Adam Films, and Riffage.com, presented 11 short comedy films that were created by some very influential people in the world of humor. The NYCFF is also the only film festival in North America dedicated entirely to comedy filmmaking.

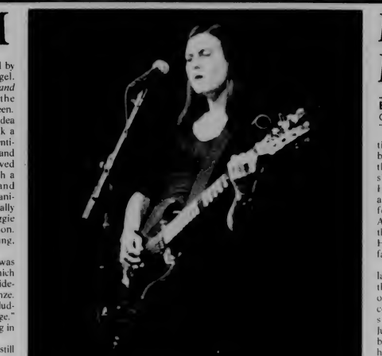
Nicholas A. DeNinno, manager of program development and acquisition for Burly Bear Network, said that he sees the program as a "proving ground for very talented people who can't been seen anywhere else." DeNinno's primary example was of the decade old series "Kids in the Hall," which despite being ingeniously funny, was a little too much for most networks to handle, and thus it had trouble getting aired. Kids..." landed mostly on cable stations such as HBO and Comedy Central.

The Burly Bear Network is owned by the extremely powerful Lorne Michaels, who is most known for his production of "Saturday Night Live". DeNinno sees Burly Bear Network as a "continuation of Saturday Night Live," because "SNL takes all the best talent from all over and makes them into 30 million dollar actors." DeNinno is also very optimistic about the possibilities that this company of becoming an influence in amateur film production. He hopes that someday, it will be a place where all young filmmakers will turn when they want to exhibit their talents. He also points out that no one involved in the New York Comedy Film Festivals Shorts Tour is over 30 years old.

Besides the films, there were also two featured comedians. One of the comedians, Patrice O'Neal is a Massachusetts native and attended Northeastern University. O'Neal stated that he enjoys coming to college campuses because the audience is young. However, he doesn't like how politically correct everyone is, and that "people are still coming into their own." Thus, he prefers performing in clubs. His stand-up act proved to be a hilarious one, in which he made light of his own weight as well as things such as paranoia and race division. He said that the films are excellent, and that of all the producers, Chris Rock was his favorite. The other comedian, Tom Rhodes, was equally as funny. His humor was more oriented around sex and relationships.

The true stars of the festival were the films themselves. One film that was included was a step-by-step instructional video on how to see every movie in the multiplex, written and produced by Conan O' Brien and Robert Smigel. Chris Rock's video from his Bigger and Blacker record, "No Sex (in the Champagne Room)" also hit the screen.

The films did not stray from the idea of the gross-out. The festival took a walk on the edge with three films, entitled "Embrasse," "Billy's Balloon" and "Doggie Porno." "Embrasse" showed an elderly couple making out, with a close up shot of their mouths and tongues. "Billy's Balloon" was an animated short of children being brutally beaten by sadistic balloons. "Doggie Porno" simply needs no explanation. Though these films were disgusting, they were extremely funny.



The final piece of the evening was entitled "How They Got There," which refers to a pair of sneakers on a sidewalk, and was directed by Spike Jonze. Jonze's past directing experience included the Beastie Boys' video, "Sabotage." He can also currently be seen staring in the marvelous film, Three Kings.

DeNinno said that Burly Bear is still working on getting their television network seen in a variety of different places. But for now, the absolute best place to see all of the films shown is at www.burlybear.com .

The film festival was a unique and enlightening experience on campus, and it would certainly be terrific if the Burly Bear Network were to make a stop at Umass again sometime in the future.

COURTESY BURLY BEAR

Cornbread... ain't nothin' wrong with that!

MICHELE MCDONALD/COLLEGIAN

Juliana Hatfield gave an intimate performance last night at the Iron Horse.

Hats off to Hatfield

By Becky Reddick
Collegian Staff

One of my favorite dreams of all time was the one where I was the backup singer for Juliana Hatfield at the Paradise in Boston. Last night, she played the ultra-intimate Iron Horse Music Hall in Northampton to a tiny, albeit eclectic, audience of fewer than seventy-five fans. Although the coffee wasn't great, for those who have never been, the Iron Horse is the place to see one of your favorite performers.

One woman and one guitar translated into one amazing performance that, though I have had the pleasure of seeing Juliana five times previously, completely blew me away. After a six-month stint in Los Angeles, Juliana is back in Boston and seems to be happy with her decision to come home. She interacted with the audience a great deal between songs, encouraging us to "talk amongst ourselves" as she tuned her guitar strings, something she did often which she explained is "what happens when you change your strings five minutes before you are about to play." When she was satisfied with her tuning, she promptly told us to "shut up" and listen. And we were delighted to.

Juliana satisfied both old and new school tastes last night, playing a wide variety of her favorites. Selections from Hey Babe, Become What You Are, Universal Heart, and Bed were represented, along with five gems from her new album slated for a February 2000 release. In this reporter's limited experience, I have never seen Juliana have so much fun playing before. Her classic lounge anthem "Ugly" was delivered with a matured sense of irony and was later coyly referenced in one of her unreleased songs. Much to my surprise and pleasure, she played "a song that one of [her] friend's wrote," mimeh Evan Dando's gorgeous "Ride with Me." Newer, autobiographical songs such as "I think I might be in Love with You" and the follow up "When You Loved Me" were delivered in a

Turn to HATFIELD page 6

The shack's still shakin'

By Michael Delano
Collegian Staff

Most people identify Jimmie's Chicken Shack with the video "High," from their 1997 major-label review Pushing the Salmonella Envelope. It received regular airplay on MTV, which led to brisk record sales. The pounding, heavy metal riff in the song and the chaotic pace of the video seemed to place Shack as a metal band. But upon listening to the entire record, one finds that there are a lot of other styles at play, including funk, alternative, and some strong acoustic work. The follow-up effort, Bring Your Own Stereo, was released in August and brings an even greater variety of styles, to the point where you might wonder if it's the same band from track to track.

This type of variety is to the liking of Shack vocalist/guitarist Jimi Haha, who recently spoke to the Collegian about the new record as well as the band's tour, which is now in progress. He claims that "music should stretch people a little bit," and "people who want to her the same thing record after record are going to realize that we're not the band for them." Haha feels the fans will appreciate the range, even though "after the first record, people were expecting another hard record."

And while there are heavy parts to Bring Your Own Stereo, they are not the majority of the album, and Haha admits that he has always felt "Do Right," the first single off the album, was a pop song.

The diversity of styles will also translate into a different live setting for the band. Whereas there was a lot of

Turn to JIMI page 6

Attention: STATE KAISER MEMBERS!

RELAX!

We've taken the worry out of choosing a health plan. In addition to our already extensive network of local providers like, Franklin Medical Center, Health New England has added:

COOLEY DICKINSON HOSPITAL
Northampton

PERMANENTE MEDICAL GROUP
Amherst, Greenfield & Florence

And that's only the beginning! We anticipate adding even more providers in the coming months. Let's chat some more about the areas only local health plan and what we can do for you. Stop by our booth at these health fairs and talk with us in person.

UNIVERSITY OF MASSACHUSETTS (UMASS)
September 28 from 11 am - 4 pm

GREENFIELD COMMUNITY COLLEGE
October 5 from 11 am - 4 pm

If you are not a State employee or retiree, have your employer or broker call Health New England at

1-800-842-4464

and ask for the Sales Department.

Health New England
An affiliate of Universal Physician Health Care

Mp3, the king of online music

By Mike Musgrove and Robert Thomason
The Washington Post

A year or two ago, listening to downloaded music on your computer was pretty simple, but often illegal. If you knew a thing or two about digital music, you were aware of Mp3 files and you'd heard of the Winamp program; by poking around on the Internet, you could find and download just about any song you wanted to.

Problem was, you hadn't paid for the song. Nor had any of the dozens or hundreds of folks who downloaded the same song or went on to post the song on their own Web sites. The record companies eventually caught on to how many people were doing this, figured out how much money they could be losing to piracy, and started placing legal demands on anybody running Web sites that offered Mp3 copies of copyrighted music. For months, the recording industry's big plan for dealing with downloadable music was to try to keep the technology away from the coveted hit songs. But that didn't work.

So the recording industry had to come up with Plan B. Knowing that there is no way to "fix" the Mp3 file format to make piracy impossible, tech types and deep thinkers associated with the recording industry have instead spent most of the year coming up with something else.

This is how a consortium called the SDMI- the Secure Digital Music Initiative- came to be. An organization of record executives, software developers, hardware manufacturers and lawyers, representing 120 companies and organizations, SDMI has been meeting in closed sessions since February to develop a protocol, or set of rules, that could be applied to any of the digital music formats out there.

Here's how it will work, the consortium's representatives say: Starting sometime in the coming months, when you buy a CD, every track will have a "watermark" embedded in it, a thread of non-audio data that identifies it. Don't worry- you'll still be able to play watermarked CDs on your stereo without any problems. the SDMI folks assure. Pop that CD into a computer, though, and that watermark will be noticed by SDMI-compliant software. Instead of being able to make as many copies of a track as you like, for example, you'll be restricted to making four copies at a time. You'll also be able to transfer that digital copy onto a portable music player, along the lines of Diamond's Rio series and Creative Labs' Nomad. But if that digital music file didn't come from your own CD or an authorized Web site, neither the SDMI music player nor the SDMI software will let you play it. (This can't, however, stop you from using your pre-SDMI Diamond Rio player or Winamp software.)

■ Jimi

continued from page 5

"jumping around and physical action" during their tour for the first record, as songs are introduced into their live set from the recent release, "people are listening now."

"I'd rather not have a crazy mosh pit," Haba explains. "I want people to be dancing together at our shows."

And the band is no stranger to touring. Haba notes that they have "always been a live band, doing around 200 shows a year." The recent tour with Fuel is going strong, and Haba is confident of his group no matter whom they are playing with.

We will always manage to win people over. We play with all kinds of different bands, and it always works no matter what styles they are."

As for the live set, fans can expect a mix from all of the Shack's material. "We start off with one or two old tracks, then bring in some of the new stuff." But to be sure to catch them on a headlining slot, as Haba explains that a "forty-five minute set is too short. We have to play like an hour and a half to get in all the stuff we want to."

As for the future of Jimmie's Chicken Shack, it is mostly a lot of touring. Haba reveals that he would love to tour with Foo Fighters in the future, as well as another tour with 311. With a full touring schedule ahead of them and the "Do Right" video getting some airplay on MTV, there is the potential for a whole new wave of fans to shack up with Jimmie and the Company.

■ Hatfield

continued from page 5

straight forward and touching way, with a tear wiped from her eye when the latter was concluded. Her latest songs are clear with eloquent lyrics and finely played pieces of a new mindset most likely influenced by her time in L.A. and the fact that she is currently unsigned by a label. From the fan's point of view, this is a nice move away from the darker, more muddled album Bed, which contains writing that evidences the frustrations of an artist caught in the red taped, beaurocratic world of record executives and corporations.

Only sipping her bottle of water twice during the long 1 hour and twenty minute set, Juliana spent the majority of the night filling the small coffeehouse with her achingly effortless lyrics and simply gorgeous guitar playing. After a quick break, she encored with the widely requested crowd pleaser "Spin the Bottle" and ended with "Nirvana." Then she did something I have never seen her do before- she stuck around after the show to sign autographs and pose for photos with her fans.

Her slight frame was stylishly graced by a sheer black... sleeve top with a black bra underneath and her requisite black pants and boots but her lauded emotional voice filled what space her body left empty.

No written words can aptly translate the beauty of Juliana's voice in such a pristine setting. If you missed her this time around, be on the look out for Juliana in the early spring of 2000, when she will be fully backed and touring with a new band.

Video pick Labyrinth is a timeless fairy tale

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

I wish the goblins would come and take me away right now. Raise your hand if you know what I'm talking about. Thank goodness, I thought I was the only one. For the rest of you, those fateful words were uttered by an angry, resentful teenager named Sarah, who had no idea what was about to happen to her.

Welcome to the mind of Jim Henson, late beloved puppeteer and storyteller extraordinaire. And welcome to Labyrinth, a children's fantasy world populated by fairies, goblins, monstrous brutes, mischievous imps, and Jareth (David Bowie), the most glamorous Goblin King you've ever seen. Sarah, played by a young Jennifer Connelley (Inventing the Abbots, The Rocketeer), is left home to watch her baby brother Toby. When the child won't stop crying, she begins to tell him a story about a man called the Goblin King. Lo and behold, the real Goblin King shows up and whisks Toby away to his castle at the center of an enormous labyrinth, leaving Sarah with precious little time to retrieve him before Toby becomes a goblin forever.

Labyrinth is a testament to Henson's gift for bringing fairytales to life in a way both young and old can appreciate. This isn't a silly movie that adults will yawn at, and it isn't too real or too frightening for younger audiences. David Bowie is excellent as the wicked Goblin King, and displays enough subtle wit and humor to offset the evilness of his actions. And, of course, he also lends the movie some amazing music. Connelley portrays Sarah with a commendable amount of maturity and realism, adding to Labyrinth's age-defying appeal.

Some of the puppets may pale to modern movie creature effects, but viewers with any sense of childhood fascination will find themselves drawn into the undeniable charm and beauty of Henson's creations. The sets are lavish and fanciful, and the characters far more memorable than any of the recent computer-generated monstrosities we've encountered. Scenes like the Escheresque room and stairs and arches, and the masked ballroom where Sarah and the Goblin King dance, are breathtakingly dreamlike.

Labyrinth is one of the most enchanting, captivating movies ever made, a children's story for all ages. Anyone who hasn't seen it should do so immediately, if only to remind themselves what it means to indulge the imagination. And those who have seen it, if they're anything like me, will want to revisit the magic and beauty of a childhood memory.

COURTESY JIM HENSON HOME ENTERTAINMENT

Jerith warns Sarah about the dangers of the Labyrinth. "And don't forget to check out my new album 'Hours'," adds the Goblin King.

COURTESY MICHAEL MCLAUGHLIN

Life after Natalie
10,000 Maniacs plays the Iron Horse tonight at 7 PM.

Another sorry SNL film

By John Anderson
Newsday

The funniest moment on the recent Saturday Night Live anniversary show belonged to comedian Chris Rock. "Wow," he said, "25 years. Four of 'em funny." He then made the nervy if not particularly novel observation that SNL alumni had been responsible for some of the worst movies ever made.

Chalk up another. Superstar, in which SNL regular Molly Shannon brings her love-hungry Catholic schoolgirl Mary Katherine Gallagher to the big screen, pining for one big kiss, will have you pining for another Butabi Brothers movie. As SNL and Superstar producer Lorne Michaels certainly knows, and certainly doesn't care, making a feature-length film out of the kind of TV sketch that overstays its welcome at five minutes requires a lot of filler. If Superstar were meatloaf- and that would be an improvement- the recipe would be four pounds breadcrumbs to three ounces sirloin. Make that chuck.

It's tough to get too indignant about the Mary Katherine character, in her too-short plaid skirt, unflattering glasses and impossible dreams, because she lacks the aggressive imbecility of, let's say, the late Chris Farley, or Adam Sandler in some of his more profitable moments. But she's equally dishonest, since her purpose is to provoke both derision and pity for a character too pathetic to live, but who ultimately triumphs because ... well, because it's her movie.

Directed by former Kid in the Hall Bruce McCulloch, Superstar has a few funny moments- the off-handed comments of Mary Katherine's crush, high-school hero Sky Corrigan (SNL's Will Ferrell), are often hilarious, though largely inaudible. A sequence in which Mary Katherine and her special education classmate Helen (Emmy Laybourne) fantasize a supermodel documentary is also a lot smarter than the rest of the movie, which chronicles Mary Katherine's pursuit of that Hollywood-style kiss, her audition for the talent show and her excruciating abuse at the hands of the vapid but beautiful Evian (Elaine Hendrix) and her cohorts Summer and Autumn (Karyn Dwyer, Natalie Radford).

Glynis Johns is MKG's grandmother, proving, once again, that the only time an actress over 60 gets into one of these movies is so she can say the F-word and drive the audience into a frenzy. Do popcorn counters sell hemlock? They should think about it.

Write for Arts!!!

Fly Wheels
SKATE ACCESSORIES
Bel-Aire Town, MA
(413) 323-5300
Free UMass deliveries!
Inline, Speed, Rollery Hockey
Outdoor Specialists

Season Special
Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 253-4756

Experience A Manicure	Experience A Pedicure	Refill	Full Set of Acrylics	Manicure & Pedicure
$9.00 (Reg. $10.00)	$16.00 (Reg.$18.00)	$ 13.00 (Reg. $15.00)	$23.00 (Reg. $25.00)	$23.00 (Reg.$25.00)
Not valid with any other offer Expires 10/31/99	Not valid with any other offer Expires 10/31/99	Not valid with any other offer Expires 10/31/99	Not valid with any other offer Expires 10/31/99	Not valid with any other offer Expires 10/31/99

MARY KATHERINE GALLAGHER
SUPERSTAR
DARE TO DREAM
MOLLY SHANNON WILL FERRELL
STARTS FRIDAY, OCTOBER 8TH
SHOWCASE CINEMAS NEW EASTFIELD MALL STADIUM STYLE SEATING 543-6000-ALL DIGITAL SHOWCASE CINEMAS WEST SPRINGFIELD I-10 733-5131-ALL DIGITAL

THE JEANS TRADITION
mavi
TODD OLDHAM JEANS
Silver JEANS
STEVE MADDEN
ZANNA
downtown Amherst

SUNDAY BRUNCH
5 Brunch Platter Meals
$4.99
Saturday • Sunday
10 a.m. - 3 p.m.
Applebee's
Neighborhood Grill & Bar
Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 116, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

10A Belchertown Road
Amherst, MA 01002
256-8284
Located near the Colonial Village bus stop at the corner of Rt. 9 and S. East St.
Friday Night @ 10:00
"B.J."
Saturday Night @ 10:00
"The Basement Dwellers"
Best! 1998
"Everyday from 3-7pm
$4.00 hour pool"

UM takes on Lady Jeffs

By Eric Soderstrom
Collegian Correspondent

If the Massachusetts women's tennis team hadn't calmed the Red Storm of St. Johns down to a sprinkling sun shower in their last match, it would have been quite difficult to remember the last time they actually picked up their tennis rackets.

Since that 8-1 win, the next scheduled match versus nationally ranked Dartmouth College has already been postponed on three different occasions, most recently on Wednesday.

The team has yet to play a match during the month of October and is foaming at the mouth to get onto the courts again. Fortunately, they will be able to shake off the rust as they go against cross-town rival Amherst College today, in a match previously postponed in early September.

"One of the team's goals this year is to beat Amherst College," head coach Judy Dixon says. "We have had some unbelievable matches against them in the past few years. So we are looking for a tightly contested match. Hopefully, we will get a big push from the crowd."

If the proximity of the two schools isn't enough to get the juices flowing, Coach Judy Dixon's team has plenty to get excited about. Since the annihilation of St. Johns, the team has gained an enormous amount of momentum, and is setting out to prove itself to the tennis world. Their next step is today, against the Lady Jeff's, who are coming off a 20-0, 1998-99 campaign, that saw them capture Amherst's first-ever Division III NCAA National Team Championship.

Not only do the Minutewomen hope to up their overall record to 2-1, but they also plan to avenge last year's 5-4 loss. The battle found Annie Hamilton with the lone victory in singles play while all three doubles teams threw out respectful victories. Amherst leads the series 3-0.

In arranging the lineup for this match, Dixon will most likely stay with what has been most effective. Ola Gerasimova will stick with the first singles position, with Helena Horak, coming off plenty of rest from her forearm injury, at second singles. All but two players remain undefeated this season in singles play. Senior Gerasimova, sophomore Hamilton and freshman Katie Stammen stand at 2-0 this season. In doubles, the tandem of Stammen and sophomore Horak are 2-1, while the pair of Gerasimova and Hamilton are 2-0 in the first doubles slot during the 1999 campaign.

With each win, Coach Dixon becomes that much closer to the century mark for career victories at UMass. She is currently nine wins away at 91-48, and hoping to close within seven by weeks end. The Minutewoman will host the Connecticut Huskies on Saturday at eleven o'clock at the Upper Boyden courts.

Listen to UMASS vs. Northeastern on WMUA 91.1 FM
Play: Matt Feato
Color: Aaron Saykin, Mike Kobylanski

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Ayi just know we're gonna win!!
Kole Ayi has been a solid defensive stopper for the Minutemen this season.

UM tennis downs Eagles

By Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

The Minutemen sent Boston College packing yesterday, when they grounded the Eagles 3-2 after losing badly to them last year. UMass got their momentum going after they seized a point in doubles competition. After that, the Minutemen dominated Boston College by winning all but two of their singles matches.

Sophomore Steve Prisco defeated senior Anand Annigeri of B.C. after dropping the first set. He finished strongly, winning 2-6, 6-4, 6-3.

Freshman Will Shaw defeated sophomore Marc Lucero of B.C., 6-4, 6-2 in another singles match. In the numher four and five slots, Fabien Rahanal and Bill Greener also won their matches.

UMass men's tennis coach Judy Dixon was excited about her team's comeback.

"We lost to this team last year. I asked them what the difference was and they said 'we had huge heart', and every single match today whether we won or lost, every single guy on the court was hugely intense, you could feel it," Dixon said. "Everybody wanted to win, they chased down every single ball, there wasn't a loose point played."

The Minutemen went into their matches visibly determined and full of energy compared to their Eagle counterparts, whose performance lacked energy and appeared to be flat. B.C.'s lackluster effort afforded UMass the opportunity to set the pace.

"I think the biggest match here was Will Shaw's because he's a freshman and he's playing very high up," Dixon said. "If he won, I thought the rest of them would follow like dominos."

The Minutemen's next match will be at home this Saturday at 11 a.m. against UConn, their biggest rival, and then again, on Monday at 11 a.m. against B.U., also at home.

The UConn game is perhaps the one that has been most eagerly awaited by the Maroon and White due to the budding rivalry between the two teams.

"UConn is our biggest rival," said senior Parsa Samii. "Last year we lost badly, partly due to injuries. We're looking to get a lot of revenge on our home turf. I think it's going to be big for us, we're going to come fired up," he continued.

The significance of the game is also detected by Dixon, who is looking forward to the match-up as much as her players are.

"Now we're looking at Uconn, who destroyed us last year," Dixon said. "Last year I made them sit on the tennis court and listen to UConn celebrate that they just killed UMass. I think that they've been waiting for this match for 364 days, because they really couldn't stand that moment."

But whether or not the Minutemen come up with a win on Saturday against UConn, it promises to be a thrilling match-up.

Ray Miller a casualty of underachieving O's

By Dave Sheinin and George Solomon
The Washington Post

Ray Miller's two-year tenure as manager of the Baltimore Orioles ended Wednesday when the Orioles chose not to exercise their contractual option to retain him within 72 hours of the conclusion of the season, informed sources said Wednesday night.

Miller's two-year contract, signed on Nov. 11, 1997, contained a clause that stipulated that by choosing not to use their option to retain Miller, the Orioles effectively ended their managerial association with him, these sources said.

If the Orioles wanted to retain Miller for a third year they would have had to inform him within 72 hours after Sunday's final game. By not doing so, according to the contract Miller signed, the club is free to seek his successor. Under terms of the contract, the Orioles will pay Miller $100,000 by Dec. 1.

Miller was paid $600,000 for each of the two years of his tenure. He had incentives of $50,000 had he won the American League East title; another $50,000 for winning the Al. championship; and $100,000 had he won the World Series.

The Orioles are expected to begin their search for a new manager Thursday. Owner Peter Angelos and General Manager Frank Wren, according to sources, have a list of potential candidates, including former Milwaukee Brewers manager Phil Garner, former Colorado Rockies manager Don Baylor, former Chicago Cubs manager Jim Riggleman and Orioles' director of player development Tom Trebelhorn, who once managed the Brewers.

Garner and Riggleman are not employed and can be interviewed immediately. To interview Baylor, the hitting coach for the Atlanta Braves, the Orioles would need the Braves' permission. Sources said the Braves are willing to grant such permission.

The Orioles do not have a timetable for naming Miller's successor, sources said.

Miller, who on Tuesday said he planned to drive Thursday from Baltimore to his home in New Athens, Ohio, could not be reached Wednesday. However, he previously has indicated he was not interested in another job within the organization.

A 78-84 record this season left Miller, 54, with a two-year record of 157-167. He previously said that if the Orioles do not bring him back for a third season, he plans on staying at home and doing "normal things."

Unclear for now are the fates of the Orioles' coaches. Only hitting coach Terry Crowley and pitching coach Bruce Kison are signed through 2000, and only Crowley seems likely to be retained.

First-base coach Mary Foley and third-base coach Sam Perlozzo, both of whom have minor league managing experience, are expected to receive interviews to succeed Miller. But the Orioles have made clear their intention to hire someone with major league managing experience.

Miller, who pitched in the Orioles minor league system in the 1970s and served as their pitching coach from 1978 to 85 and again in 1997, remained close to Angelos during his managerial tenure, despite two disappointing seasons.

Miller spoke to Angelos several times during the final week of the season, when it appeared Miller would not be brought back. Monday went by without any contact between them, but on Tuesday Miller and Angelos had a meeting that did not produce an announcement.

In the season's final days, Miller presented a defense of his regime, pointing out the roster shortcomings, pitching shortages and lack of team speed that often handcuffed him as a manager. Miller said he believed the team's 42-33 record in the second half of the season proved he is capable of winning in Baltimore, given a functional roster.

However, the overall failure of the team to do better despite its $84 million payroll was more than Miller could overcome. The Orioles finished 15-34 within their division, and despite outstanding individual seasons from a half-dozen players, fell out of contention for good after a 10-game losing streak in late June and early July after missing the playoffs in 1998.

In August, Wren said he had a "difficult time justifying" how a team that finished first in the Al in defense, fourth in pitching and sixth in hitting ended up in fourth place in its division.

Wren has labeled both this season and next as "transition" years and has set about building a healthy farm system. Under Wren, the Orioles have stockpiled young pitchers, and successfully signed their first 15 picks from this June's amateur draft. Sources said Wren was not satisfied with Miller's performance.

Last week, Miller said "This team has tremendous direction right now. For the first time there's a little light under the door."

Payton tells all; FSU to face Miami

By Kelly Whiteside
Newsday

Walter Payton buried his tears in his son's embrace during an emotional news conference last February, when the former Chicago Bears running back and Hall of Famer told the world that he has a rare liver disease. Though the wait for the transplant he needs continues, Payton's health has improved from that time, which is why his son, Jarrett Walter Payton, a freshman running back at Miami, is playing with a lighter heart.

"With things with my father I wasn't ready to get in the mix," he said. "Coach Davis didn't want to throw me into the fire. But now my time has come. I'm ready right now. As my father said, it's like I'm a corked bottle ready to explode."

On Saturday, the No. 19 Hurricanes face their greatest challenge of the season against No. 1 Florida State. Because tailback Najeh Davenport is out for the season with a knee injury suffered in the opener and a high ankle sprain has hobbled star runner James Jackson, Payton and fellow freshman Clinton Portis are expected to play larger roles.

Payton says he can handle the responsibility given that his father's health has improved. Jarret- who is known as NutraSweet, a twist on his dad's nickname, Sweetness- has gone home to Arlington, Ill., twice this season to see his father. "Worrying about my father is what set me back. Now since he has more energy and he's able to get out and do more stuff and has gained some weight back, my mom says I don't have to worry about it so much."

"There's no question that his father's health has been on his mind," Davis said. "But he tries to focus on football and the task at hand even though he has an awful lot on his plate. But he probably has made as much improvement as anyone since he has had father to come."

Like his father, Payton began playing football his junior year in high school. Before that, he was a standout soccer player. His father didn't want him to play football but Jarrett thought that he needed a new challenge. He was so good that Penn State, Notre Dame and Wisconsin also offered him a scholarship.

At 6-2, 205 pounds, Payton, who has rushed for 45 yards on 12 carries in two games thus far, describes himself as a scatback with power. "We're so similar," he said of the family running style. "It scares my mom all the time."

Though Walter hasn't been able to attend a game, his son says he hopes to later this month. Needless to say, when the NFL's career rushing leader watches his son play, he is always the critic. "After the East Carolina game I was on the phone with him and he said he liked the way I ran. I said, 'Is this my dad?' When I hung up the phone I told some teammates and they were like 'Yeah so what?' He never talks about us plus like that. Woooh. It was a real compliment since he was the best.

If not for the Russian accent, you would think Wisconsin kicker Vitaly Pisetsky was born and raised in Big Ten country. You would never imagine that he didn't know the difference between a Hawkeye and a Buckeye just seven years ago when his family immigrated from Moscow to Washington Heights.

When he talks about the Badgers' 47-17 win over Ohio State last week, the Buckeyes' worst loss at the Horseshoe since 1967, he says his team wasn't intimidated by OSU's past dominance because the Badgers weren't playing "the ghosts of Archie Griffin or Andy Katzenmoyer."

Against the Buckeyes, Pisetsky had the finest game of his career scoring 12 points, including field goals of 42, 23 and 27 yards, a performance that earned him Big Ten special-teams player of the week honors.

When he talks about this week's game against No. 23 Minnesota, he offers a history lesson about the series. It is the longest-played rivalry in college football and the winner receives the Paul Bunyan Ax, he explains.

When he arrived at Kennedy High School in the Bronx in 1992, Pisetsky, a former member of the Russian junior national soccer team, entered the athletic director's office knowing only a few words of English. He asked about joining the soccer team. Once it was discovered that he could kick a football 50 yards and more, he was persuaded to switch sports.

With his NFL-caliber leg strength, he has made 8 of 10 field-goal attempts, including a career-long 53-yarder against Ball State, the third-longest kick in school history. He is 16-for-17 on PATs and the account starting field position after his kickoffs is the 20.8-yard line which tops the collegiate mark of his idol former Badger and current Jet John Hall (22.7).

The senior has come a long way from the time when he was a scrawny freshman who didn't know a Golden Gopher from a Bucky Badger. He's 10-226 pounds now. His teammates fondly call him the tattest kicker in the league and he knows as much about the traditions of the Big Ten as anyone.

Marshall has only been in Division I-A for three years but is the No. 15 team in the country. QB Chad Pennington is a big reason why, as the darkhorse Heisman contender is closing in on throwing for 11,000 yards and 100 touchdowns a mark that only five players in any division have done. Nine of last week's Top 25 teams lost on Saturday, leaving 15 teams in I-A with perfect records. Of those 15, the only team not in the Top 25 is Boston College (4-0).

The Wally Pipp award of the week goes to Texas Tech senior running back Sammy Morris, who ran for 170 yards on 35 carries in Tech's 21-19 upset of Texas A&M. Morris filled in for Ricky Williams, the former Heisman hopeful who is out for the season with a knee injury.

Joe Holtz/Gamecock Lament of the Week: "Any time we try to play physical, we have guys drop out like it's a death match."

Holtz's 0-5 team is decimated by injuries.

1 WEEK UNTIL MIDNIGHT MADNESS

■ fan

continued from page 10

Another fielder looked up and heaved another ball up to us. We smiled and shouted our thanks, and then my friends Kjell, Arhan, and I took the ball down to the bus. He looked at us and smiled and we told him he could have the ball.

We didn't need another one we told him.

The boy clutched on to the ball and thanked us, and then the father did too. We said sure and took our seats again. A half hour later, the father returned, beer in hand. He thanked us for giving his son the ball and gave us the beer. The three of us thanked him and split the Iron City.

The game went on and the Cubs, predictably, lost. I cheered when a Pirates replacement hitter smacked a homerun in the sixth inning and whenever the Cubs did anything right.

After the game, as we headed back to the car, we saw the small boy still clutching the practice ball, looking at it and walking away with his father.

No, the Cubs didn't get to the playoffs, or even come close, but that, for a Cubs fan, isn't really what baseball is about anyway.

GO UMASS!

Entertainment, Food, & Giveaways
AMHERSTONLINE.COM
Bookmark It!™

THE ASIAN DANCE AND MUSIC PROGRAM PRESENTS
FESTIVAL OF LIGHTS
A TWO-DAY INDIA CULTURAL FEST
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 15 Sarod & Tabla Concert
Buddhadev Dasgupta & Nayan Ghosh
"One of the most brilliant sarodiyas of our time, Pandit Buddhadev Dasgupta was in his element when he held the two-thousand strong audience in total suspense, awaiting each phrase. After tabla wizard Pandit Nayan Ghosh joined in, it was sheer magic— a concert to cherish for a lifetime."
—INDIAN EXPRESS, BOMBAY. 1998
Bowker Auditorium 8pm
General Admission $12, Students & Children $6
Presented in collaboration with Hampshire College World Music Program
SATURDAY, OCTOBER 16
Pooja: The Five Elements in Prayer
A new work by choreographer Ranjanaa Devi, depicting the creation of the universe. A juxtaposition of dance, theater, sculpture, poetry and narrative. Pooja will reach and touch the organic core of each being, making for a transformational and unforgettable experience.
Bowker Auditorium 8pm
General Admission $12, Students & Children $6
The Fine Arts Center
For reservations and information call 545-2511

amc
There is a Difference!
Silence is Golden
No child under 6 in any PG-13 or R rated film after 6PM.
Mt. Farms 4 • Mt. Farms Mall
584-9183
SIXTH SENSE
Today at (4:50 @ $3.25) 7:40 10:30
Sa l& Sun at 2:00 (4:50 @ $3.25) 7:40 10:30
Mon at 2:00 (4:50 @ $3.25) 8:00
Tue - Thurs at (5:50 @ $3.25) 8:40
BLUE STREAK
Today at (5:00 @ $3.25) 7:50 10:30
Sat & Sun at 2:10 (5:00 @ 3.25) 7:50 10:30
Mon at 2:10 (5:00 @ $3.25) 8:10
Tue - Thurs at (6:00 @ $3.25) 8:40
RANDOM HEARTS
Today at (4:30 @ $3.25) 7:20 10:10
Sat & Sun at 1:40 (4:30 @ $3.25) 7:20 10:10
Mon at 1:40 (4:30 @ $3.25) 7:40
Tue - Thurs (5:30 @ $3.25) 8:20
THREE KINGS
Today at (4:40 @ $3.25) 7:30 10:20
Sat & Sun at 1:50 (4:40 @ $3.25) 7:30 10:20
Mon-at 1:50 (4:40 @ $3.25) 7:50
Tue - Thurs (5:40 @ $3.25) 8:30
AMC Hamshire 6
Thanks to all our Loyal Patrons for 20 great years! We'll be changing the way you see movies with... 16 New Screens fall '00
$3.00 'Twi-lite' Show Daily!
* Special Engagement
No Passes or Coupons

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

1987 VW Jetta New clutch, rear struts, rear brakes, e-brake cables, battery, tires. Needs shift linkage to run. Fix it or good for parts car. $250 or bo 253-9140

COMPUTERS

CELERON 333MHZ PC Tower with 128MB RAM, 4Gig HD, 4Meg Intel video card, 561/.90 modem, 10/100 ethernet card, 24X CDRom sound card, 2USB Ports, 4ISA Slots, 3 PCI Slots, IAGP ($900) - Pentium II 233 Mhz w/128 Meg RAM, 6Gig HD, 4 Meg S3 video card, sound card, 10/100 ethernet, 3PCI, 3ISA, 1AGP, 24X CDROM ($700) - Both come with Win 98, Corel 8 and MS Office preinstalled. Call Peter 253-6665

EMPLOYMENT

Earn $500 Weekly distributing phone cards. No experience necessary. Full or part time. Call 1-800-572-3361

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT For teenage bicycle-touring program. Partime until late spring; then full-time through August. Call 800-343-6132 Student Hosteline Program Conway, MA

EMPLOYMENT

Candy Company looking for full time apprentice. Artist/graphic designer must be familiar with Quark, Illustrator, Photoshop - benifit. Cartoon art skills a big plus. Contact Tom Martin 1-888-556-5599

Cashier Wanted self-service station weekends. Must be honest, reliable, good at math. Apply in person Northampton Citco 54 E. Hampton Rd. Rt 10

The UMass Athletic Development Office is looking for a graduate student to assist in bookkeeping, data entry, and filing 20-25 hrs/wk starting at $8/hr 1-413-545-4290

Jobs At The UMass Annual Fund flexible evening hours earn $5.50/hr plus fantastic bonuses. Gain computer and communication skills. Come to the basement of Memorial Hall and apply today. Students only. 545-3509

Intern Needed - Toothless Productions, a Western Mass Music Booking and Produciotn Co. needs a part time intern, very flexable hours. Call 888-595-3122

EMPLOYMENT

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

Local Company Needs strong, flexible and reliable laborers. Valid drivers license. Start at $9.00/hour. 323-4868

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ Fooz is booking for fall semester. Date parties, formals, + house parties. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR SALE

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

GREEK AFFAIRS

Alpha Chi Omega would like to welcome our new members: Alexis, Latoya, Becky M,. Becca, Jen, Shannon, Becky A., Orlee, Katelyn, Cara, Lesley, Stephanie, Melissa, Amy, and Andrea. Congratulations guys!

LOST & FOUND

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

Black Male Cat, yellow eyes. Responds to Casey. Missing since 9/23. Any information call ASAP. No questions asked 549-1373

ROOMMATE WANTED

Roommate Wanted 1bdrm in 3bdrm Apt behind Puffers Pond. Must be easy going. Big yard, parking $333/mo+utilities Call Bry/Joe 549-4055

SERVICES

Know you rights! Do you have questions about your rights? Do you think your civil rights have been violated? Find out! Contact the Student Legal Services Office, 922 Campus Center, 545-1995

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

STEREO EQUIP

AIWA NSX 3500 3CD Dual tape deck remote 4 speakers as is $50 or B/O

TRAVEL

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

TRAVEL

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

RUNNERS NEEDED! Competitive female distance runners needed for an important women's health study. Must be 18-25 and not on oral contraceptives. Free bone density and fat measurements. Free runners gifts. Call 1-877-RUN-BFIT. (1-877-786-2348)

Need a new job?

Look no further!!

The Collegian Classifieds has the job of your DREAMS!!

Are you looking for that perfect roommate?

Do you need to find another place to stay?

You will find them HERE!

Place an Ad TODAY!! 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

FRIDAY, OCT. 8

Service – There will be a Shabbat service at 6 p.m. in the Hillel House. A free Shabbat dinner will follow.

TUESDAY, OCT. 9

Comedy – MISSION IMPROVable, the UMass improvisational troupe, will perform at 8 p.m. in room 163 of the Campus Center.

SUNDAY, OCT. 10

Reception – The opening reception for "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division: Prison Art in America" will be held from 2-5 p.m. in Wheeler Gallery in Central Residential Area.

Talk – There will be a talk by the curator of "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division: Prison Art in America" at 4:30 p.m. in the Wheeler Gallery in Central Residential Area.

NOTICES

Art – The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division: Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art – The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.

Crafts – The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

Send in your FYI announcements.... NOW!!

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks,* you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN Housing Services Cable Network

2	HSCN Bulletin Board	18	The Learning Channel
3	CBS/3 Hartford	19	UVC-TV19
4	CBS/4 Boston	20	ABC/40 Springfield
5	ABC/5 Boston	21	Gavel to Gavel
6	PBS/57 Springfield	22	NBC/22 Springfield
7	HSCN Movie Ch.	23	Sundance
8	UPN/20 Hartford	24	Bloomberg Financial
9	Weather Channel	25	CTN
10	NBC/30 New Britain	27	TBS
11	Fox/61 Hartford	28	BET
12	PBS/24 Hartford	29	TV Land
13	WOCH & HSCN	30	Univision
14	International	31	Comedy Central
15	UMass Academic TV	32	Cartoon
16	WB/New Haven	33	Much Music
17	HSCN Programming

FRIDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 8, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	2	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	As We Tell Stories		Africans in Connecticut		Puerto Rican Passages
WFSB	3	3	News ⓒ	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Now and Again "Over Easy" ⓒ	Nash Bridges (In Stereo) ⓒ	News		Late Show ⓒ
WBZ	4	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Kids-Darndest	Love & Money	Now and Again "Over Easy" ⓒ	Nash Bridges (In Stereo) ⓒ	News		Late Show ⓒ
WCVB	5	5	News ⓒ	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ⓒ	Hughleys ⓒ	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Odd Man Out	20/20 ⓒ		News ⓒ Nightline ⓒ
WLVI	6		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends ⓒ	Nanny ⓒ	Mission Hill ⓒ	Jamie Foxx ⓒ	Steve Harvey	For Your Love	News ⓒ		Friends ⓒ Nanny ⓒ
WHDH	7		News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 3 – Teams to Be Announced. ⓒ				News		Tonight Show
WTAX		8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ⓒ	Real TV (R) ⓒ	ss's "Batman Returns" (1992, Adventure) Michael Keaton. ⓒ				News	Caroline	Change-Heart Change-Heart
WVIT		9	News	NBC News	Extra ⓒ	Ent. Tonight	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 3 – Teams to Be Announced. ⓒ				News		Tonight Show
WTIC	8	61	Simpsons ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Friends ⓒ	Shocking Behavior				Hervé Reign "Pilot" ⓒ	News	Friends ⓒ Frasier ⓒ
WWLP	9	22	News ⓒ	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ⓒ	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Divisional Round Game 3 – Teams to Be Announced. ⓒ					News ⓒ	Tonight Show
WGBY	10	8	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ⓒ		Wash. Week	Wall St. Week	State We're In	Time Goes By	Chef!	Red Dwarf	Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ⓒ
WGGB	11	40	News ⓒ	ABC News	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	Hughleys ⓒ	Boy-World	Sabrina-Witch	Odd Man Out	20/20 ⓒ		News ⓒ Nightline ⓒ
WSBK	12		Judge Judy ⓒ	Judge Judy ⓒ	Seinfeld ⓒ	Frasier ⓒ	ss's "Batman Returns" (1992, Adventure) Michael Keaton. ⓒ				Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		Blind Date Ricki Lake ⓒ
WTBS	22		Roseanne ⓒ	Roseanne ⓒ	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	ss's "Days of Thunder" (1990, Drama) Tom Cruise, Robert Duvall.						s's "Student Nanny" (1991) Bruce Willis.
A&E	23		Simon & Simon		Law & Order "Night and Fog" ⓒ		Biography: Montgomery Clift		L.A. Detectives (R) ⓒ			Sherlock Holmes Mysteries (R) ⓒ	Law & Order "Good Girl" ⓒ
CNN	24	29	Worldview ⓒ	Moneyline News Hour ⓒ			World Today ⓒ		Larry King Live ⓒ		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline ⓒ
COM	25	26	Saturday Night Live ⓒ		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	ss "Repossessed" (1990, Comedy) Linda Blair, Leslie Nielsen.				Saturday Night Live ⓒ		Saturday Night Live ⓒ
DISC	26		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Dolphins		On the Inside "Picpockets" (R)	News		Discover Mag.	Storm Warning! (R)		On the Inside "Picpockets" (R)
ESPN	27		Major League Baseball		Sportscenter		Auto Racing: NASCAR Craftsman Truck Series – Kroger 225.				50 Greatest	100 Greatest	Sportscenter ⓒ
LIFE	28		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait		Chicago Hope (In Stereo) ⓒ		ss "The Client" (1994, Suspense) Susan Sarandon.				Once and Again (In Stereo) ⓒ
MTV	29		Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	News	True Life (R)	Say What Kris	Say What Kris	Say What Kris	Real World ⓒ	Real World ⓒ	Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	30		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! ⓒ	Angry Beavers	You Afraid?	Allen Strange	Brady Bunch	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons ⓒ	Sanford & Son	All in Family Meude ⓒ
SCIFI	31		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Poltergeist: The Legacy ⓒ		Periscope (In Stereo) ⓒ		Sliders (In Stereo) ⓒ		First Wave (In Stereo) ⓒ		Poltergeist: The Legacy (R) ⓒ
TLC	32	28	Home Again	Home Again	How'd They Do That?		Dangerous Pursuits (R)		Ancient Prophecies III (R)				Dangerous Pursuits (R)
TNT	33		Due South "Fire Willy" ⓒ		ER "Responsible Parties" ⓒ		ss's "Comic, Cortina" (1994, Comedy-Drama) Whoopi Goldberg, Mary Lin...						s's "Fatal Beauty" (1987) Whoopi Goldberg.
USA	34		Xena: Warrior Princess (R) ⓒ		JAG "The King of the Flies" ⓒ		ss's "The Godfather, Part III" (1990, Drama) Al Pacino, Diane Keaton. (In Stereo) ⓒ
HBO	35		(5:00) ss's "Gremlins" (1984) ⓒ		Inside the NFL (In Stereo) ⓒ		ss's "Titanic" (1997, Drama) Leonardo DiCaprio, Kate Winslet. (In Stereo) 'PG-13' ⓒ						Three Kings Chris Rock ⓒ
MAX	36		(4:45) ss's "Naked Gun 33 1/3: The Final Insult" (1994)				ss's "Savior" (1998, Drama) Dennis Quaid. 'R'		ss's "The Negotiator" (1998, Action) Samuel L. Jackson. (In Stereo) 'R' ⓒ
SHOW	37		ss's "Hot Pursuit" (1987) John Cusack. 'PG-13'		Movie News		ss's "The Big Lebowski" (1998, Mystery) Jeff Bridges. 'R' ⓒ				Stargate SG-1	Outer Limits "Deja Vu" (R) ⓒ	Total Recall

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Wheel By Clay Weatherford

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Rose Is Rose By Pat Brady

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) - You may have trouble justifying some of your own behavior today, particularly in the eyes of someone who is one of your direct superiors.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – All the efforts you make today will be appreciated by those who benefit from them, and you can be sure you'll be asked for a repeat performance.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – Similarities are far more interesting to you and others today than differences. It's time to focus on things you and a rival can do together.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) – There is not reason to pretend you are fearless today. Doing so could prove dangerous, and you have much to protect at this time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may be too interested in showing off in some way today, and you may miss the mark as a result. Get back to the basics as quickly as you can.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You may become involved in a conflict between those who serve and those whom they serve today. It may be up to you to arrange a possible solution.

look back over the past few days and months should reveal to you the answer to a long-asked question which wasn't really that tricky.

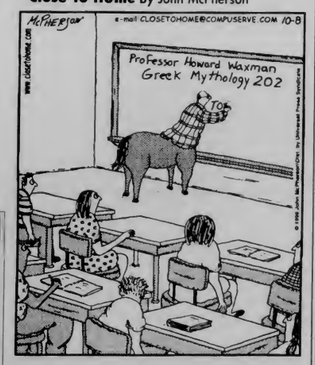
Cancer (June 21-July 22) – It's important that you know whether you're dealing with the "real thing" today, or just a clever imitation. Stay sharp!

Aries (March 20-April 19) – You must re-establish contact with someone from afar who was once an important and influential part of your creative team.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Your own sensitivity may get the better of you today, as issues arise which demand a new and increased level of honesty and insight.

Gemini (May 21-June 20) – A

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – On rare occasions in the past, you've enjoyed a clear vision of what lies in store for you in the future. Today, you'll have such an opportunity.



Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You may be quite restless today, and eager to prove yourself in some new fashion. Take care you don't get too far away from your roots at this time.

Quote of the Day

"All right brain. I don't like you and you don't like me. So just get me through this exam and I can go back to killing you slowly with beer."

–Homer to his brain

Close to Home By John McPherson

Today's D.C. Menu

Call 545-2626 for more information.

Franklin

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chicken Pepper Casserole
Grilled Chese on Multigain Bread

DINNER
Beef Stroganoff
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Brazilian Black Beens

Worcester

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chicken Pepper Casserole
Grilled Chese on Multigain Bread
Vegetarian Paella

DINNER
Beef Stroganoff
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Brazilian Black Beens

Hampshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chicken Pepper Casserole
Grilled Chese on Multigain Bread

DINNER
Beef Stroganoff
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Brazilian Black Beens

Berkshire

LUNCH
Grilled Cheese Sandwich
Chicken Pepper Casserole
Grilled Chese on Multigain Bread

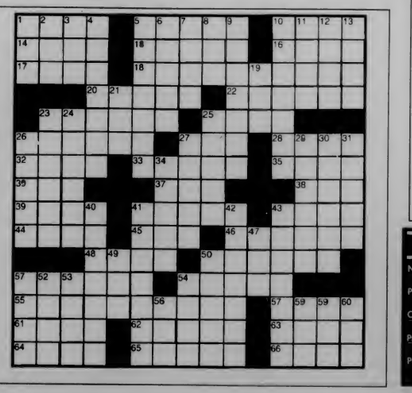
DINNER
Beef Stroganoff
Cheese Spinach Strudel
Brazilian Black Beens
Vegetarian Paella

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Adam White
Photo Technition	Becky Reddick
Copy Editor	Kevin Monahon
Production Supervisor	psychedelic Katie
Production Staff	groovy Jim Gilbert, volotile Vlad Zakoshansky

ACROSS

1 Freight boat
5 Faulty
10 Pedro's house
14 "That hurt!"
15 "Sixth Sense," for one
16 Pub brews
17 Big Foot's cousin
18 Waker-upper
20 Giant
22 Spots in the ocean
23 Jogger
25 Fascinated by
26 Alaska's capital
27 — roll (winning big)
28 Ballpark officials
32 Glimpse
33 Stair-step part
35 Dry
36 Sharp — tack
37 Bite
38 Unused
39 Scratch
41 "Golden Boy" playwright
43 Comic Martha
44 Rice wine
45 Prickly seedcase
46 Put
48 Pass for Tiger Woods
50 Oozed slowly
51 Small firearm
54 Cut a wide —; impress
55 Dispense (justice)
57 Can. province
61 Hint
62 Window cover
63 Viewed
64 Asian holidays
65 — up, excited
66 Go first



DOWN

1 Type of sauce
2 Actor's prompt
3 Fall mo
4 Gin inventor
5 Hobbyist
6 Grinding tooth
7 Novelist Turgenev
8 Title for Galahad
9 Conference
10 Unfeeling
11 African lily
12 Cull
13 Invitos
19 Iowa hrs.
21 "— minute!"
23 Yeltsin's country
24 Empty the suitcase
25 Clumsy
26 Casual wear
27 Willow
29 Threaten
30 Hunted for food
31 Fixed a tear
34 River of Pakistan
40 Money pools
41 Cleopatra's Needle, e.g
42 Harpooned
43 Renaissance painter
47 — up: abate
49 Long time
50 Stockholm native
51 Treaty
52 Doing nothing
53 Plant disease
54 Remain
56 Feminine pronoun
58 Caustic solution
59 Afternoon social
60 Find the sum of

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

ARCH PEARS UTAH
GAZA HASTO NONE
ORAL ORIEL MEND
GARFIELD SASSY
MOB EAVES
ESTATE NICKELS
VERSA TOTES SUP
ADULT DUDES ASTI
DAB TILES GREEN
ENEMIES BRASSY
ONTAP ROC
MUDDY LAUGHTER
AQUIE MIESI NILE
TIKS ERASE TRAIN
NYET BESTS DENT

10-8-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Friday, October 8, 1999

UM defense looks to turn it up against Northeastern

Struggling Minuteman offense looking to improve on red zone efficiency

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Mathematically speaking, the Northeastern Huskies might be just what the Massachusetts football team needs to get back on the winning track.

The last eight times the two schools took to the field in Amherst, the Minutemen won, giving them a clear-cut advantage according to the law of averages. All-time, UMass can boast a certain dominance in the series, holding a 20-7-1 advantage.

Perhaps the numbers are a hidden foretelling of the future. Nine of the last 15 contests between the teams were decided by a touchdown or less, suggesting that the game will fall right into the Minutmen's hands; Massachusetts was 6-3 in such games last season.

Of course, the overly optimistic UMass fan would also remind us that according to a very recent and short pattern, the Minutemen should also be right on course to take home this year's National Championship, too.

Truth be told, the only number that matters in Saturday's game at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium between Massachusetts and Northeastern is 1999.

This year, both teams have identical 1-3 records, with each dropping a decision against a tough, Division I-A opponent. Toledo hosted and defeated UMass two weeks ago, 24-3, while Boston College took down the Huskies last week by the score of 33-22. In the conference, Massachusetts holds a one-game edge, 1-1 to 0-2.

The respective records are deceiving, though. Northeastern, while two games under .500, has been putting up 462.5 yards a game, including a solid 279 through the air. The Minuteman defense must be particularly wary of the two Husky quarterbacks, Jason Quinlan has recorded 628 yards and five scores in the air this season, while Fred Vallett has added 433 yards and five touchdowns of his own.

"On offense they are being aggressive," UMass coach Mark Whipple said. "They have two really good quarterbacks. I think they are going to come off the B.C. effort and feel really good about where they are as a football team. I expect a great football game. The team that comes out of it is going to fell pretty good about themselves. We just need our guys to get a little bit more mentally tough and stay confident."

Regardless of who's throwing the ball, a very likely receiver is Dave Klemic, with season totals of 29 catches for 339 yards and three touchdowns.

FOOTBALL
UMASS VS N.EASTERN
SATURDAY, 1:30
91.1 FM-WMUA
MATT FEATO-PLAY
MIKE KOBYLANSKI-COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

Aside from the opposing players, though, the biggest problem UMass seems to have is, quite simply, bad luck. Most recently, in the squad's homecoming matchup with Hofstra, the Minutemen were on the low side of a highly debated call in which UMass punt returner DeShon Hardy collided with a small handful of Flying Dutchmen and Minutemen, and the ball bounced from the 30-yard line to the one-yard line off the helmet of a Hofstra defender. UMass, with its back to the end zone, subsequently turned the ball over – quarterback Todd Bankhead was intercepted by Robert Thomas, who returned the pick 15 yards for the score – to break a 7-7 tie.

"The guys were thinking that bad things were going to happen," Whipple said. "We practiced at the stadium last night, and bad things are going to happen in a football game, it's how you handle those things. I think we're going to be a completely different football team this weekend against Northeastern."

Offensively, Massachusetts has been going through tough times without the help of the supernatural. Bankhead, who rocketed to the top of the school career lists in nearly every passing category in just over a season of play, has struggled early this season. Against Toledo in week three, the signal caller tallied only 97 yards in the air, and on the year he has as many interceptions, five, as he does touchdowns. In the past three weeks' losses, Bankhead has one score and four picks.

The Minutemen have been relying on tailback Marcel Shipp for much of their movement on the gridiron. The junior runner has run for over 100 yards in each of the past 16 weeks. This year he has 538 yards and four touchdowns on the ground, while catching 22 passes for 124 more yards and another score.

Huskies Brian Hayden and T.J. Hill will be leading the effort to stop Shipp's rushing streak. The linebacker and defensive back have registered 29 and 28 tackles, respectively.

In comparison, UMass linebacker Kole Ayi has 61 tackles, 46 unassisted.

This weekend, with the brass of the bands blaring, both the Northeastern Huskies and the Massachusetts Minutemen will try to get off their respective slumps and back on the winning track.

"We just have to get a win," Whipple said. "That would solve a lot of problems. As a coaching staff, we have to become a little more positive with our players. I think we were really hard on our kids last week. We can not have that anymore. I'm going to have to play walk-ons if I keep banging them like I have been. We just have to get back to basics and have some fun at UMass. If we do that, I think we will be alright."

Paul Bolden and the UMass defense will be looking to stop the passing attack of Northeastern.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

The home fans hope to see a better performance from All- America candidate Adrian Zullo.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Women's soccer travels to GW

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

This weekend may go a long way in determining whether or not the Massachusetts women's soccer team will win the Atlantic 10 title this year.

UMass (5-2-1, 3-0 in the A-10) currently sits all alone in first place in the conference as the only unbeaten team. However, a host of teams are one game back, and the rest are all two behind the Minutewomen, who will head south to face George Washington and Virginia Tech.

To put it simply, two losses this weekend for UMass could put them in the cellar – but two wins could give the Maroon and White a comfortable lead atop the league.

"This is a big, big weekend. If we do well, then I think we go into the driver's seat. I don't feel that we are there just yet," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "Right now I think we are amongst everyone else because a lot of teams are in striking distance."

The Minutewomen will first head to our nation's capital today to face GW. The Colonials (2-9, 2-1 in A-10) played a difficult non-conference schedule in which they went winless, before starting out the league slate by winning two of three.

"GW played a national caliber non-conference schedule, but they have rallied to start the A-10 season 2-1, and they have beaten Virginia Tech," Rudy said. "They are a feisty, angry side…but their 2-9 record doesn't phase me. We have to be focused and composed."

On Sunday, UMass will be in Blacksburg, Va. when it takes on the Hokies in a 1 p.m. match-up. Va. Tech is 6-3 on the year to date, and is also 2-1 in the A-10.

"They have their best team ever and have two outstanding goal scorers to go with what was always a pretty good team," Rudy said. "Joy Nsubuga was one of the leading junior college scorers in the nation last year and Wendy Kotwas was also a top junior college player in New Jersey."

To date, Kotwas leads the team with seven goals, while Nsubuga is right on her heels with five.

"We have to go down there and play on a huge field. Anything can happen," Rudy said. "From the scouting report that we have on them they are built like trees. We're probably going to be outsized."

On the UMass side of things, senior forward Emma Kurowski leads the squad with 10 goals and 21 points on the season. Kara Green is the team's second leading scorer with 11 points, while sophomores Katelyn Jones and Martha Conover each have seven points.

Goalkeepers Angie Napoli and Cori Stevens have both played well in net for UMass. Napoli is 3-1 thus far, while Stevens has posted a 2-1-1 mark.

Being a fan of the South Side is tough

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

We ended up where we belonged, at the bottom, in the basement… again. A paltry 67-95 record meant that once again, my Cubs weren't going to make it into the playoffs. We weren't even going to get water for the teams that did.

It's a hard life being a Cubs fan. When I was younger, I started every baseball season expecting the best from my Cubs. The playoffs, and maybe, finally, getting to the World Series, a joy that no Cubs fan has felt since 1945, I aged, and I learned.

This season, my hopes were high. With Kerry Wood's 20 strikeouts, Sammy Sosa's 66 home runs and a wild card berth fresh in my mind, I dreamed, a faint dream. Maybe those playoffs weren't so far away.

It's funny how quickly dreams can die.

Bang. Wood is out for the season, needing Tommy John surgery to repair a destroyed shoulder. We had no pitching. Apart from Sosa and the ever-consistent Mark Grace, the team barely had hitting. Our bullpen was a joke. The team started slow and ended the season at a stop.

But I'm still a Cubs fan, and I still wear my hat with pride. They're a great team to be a fan of, and whether or not they win championships, every year I take with me a few more memories.

In all my years of being fan, I've been relegated to watching only the occasional game on WGN or Fox, and, for two seasons now, I've made a point of seeing the team play the Pirates at Three Rivers Stadium.

It's a mammoth stadium, all concrete and really ugly. The fans know that their home team is going to grind it out every year and always come up just a bit short. The fans are blue collar, and it's baseball the way it should be.

Hot dogs with relish. Cokes. Games under the lights.

I had already seen the Pirates play the Milwaukee Brewers this past year, a game in which I got to see the once future star pitcher of the Mets, Bill Pulsipher, pitch against a bona-fide future star of Pittsburgh, Kris Benson.

The Pirates won 9-4, and after the game, there was a huge fireworks display. It was beautiful, and all of the fans stayed in their seats, getting both the hometown win and the fireworks on half price night.

Two weeks later, in late August, a few days before I came here to school, I went with friends to see my beloved Cubs play the Pirates. My team lost 3-5, but I won't remember a disgusting pitching display from Terry Mulholland. I'll remember batting practice.

Sosa was taking his cuts and all the fans had turned out early to shag home runs. The runner-up in last year's home run battle came up short for the fans, but they clapped and cheered anyway. We were in the uppermost of the upper decks, and I was wearing my Cubs hat, a hat that I had owned for 5 years. The bill was duct-taped. The inside was cut out so that it would still fit. Cubs players were milling about in the outfield, shagging down fly balls and ground balls.

My friends and I were calling to the outfielders, begging them to toss a ball up to the top deck so that those of us who were cheap fans could get a ball to take home. So was a very small kid down the aisle from us. There weren't too many people who were up there, so we saw him looking down at the field with his dad. After repeated shouts for ten or fifteen minutes, one of the guys who didn't get to play that often heaved a ball to us. We shouted our thanks and held on to the ball.

The kid was still shouting for a ball, and so we started shouting again.

Turn to FAN, page 7

Field Hockey reeling after OT loss

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Dropping a tight one-goal game in overtime to a ranked team looks pretty good on paper for the Massachusetts field hockey team. After all, every game is supposed to be a learning experience.

But after Wednesday's 2-1 defeat at the hands of No.13 Boston University, the Minutewomen (3-7) may have finally reached the point in their '99 season when all the team is learning is how to lose.

The Terriers (9-2) headed into the evening matchup with a so-so 8-8-3 all-time record against UMass. Coach Sally Starr's troops were coming off an emotional 5-3 win over Richmond on Sunday, and were looking to continue a brilliant '99 campaign that has them perched atop the America East conference.

The Minutewomen went into Boston having just dropped a closer-than-expected 4-1 contest at No.1 Connecticut. The team had been plagued by offensive woes for much of the early season, scoring only two goals over a four game losing streak from September 12-26.

UM coach Patty Shea had used the practices leading up to the BU brawl to focus on increased offensive output, mainly by employing more aggressive forward play and more frequent shooting. The Maroon and White had been outscored 22-12 over its first nine games.

All that practice seemed to pay off in the opening frame of Wednesday's war, as UMass jumped out to a 1-0 lead at the 18:36 mark. The goal came courtesy of team scoring leader Anke Brueminer, who blasted home the score off of a UM penalty corner.

It was Brueminer's fifth goal of the year, giving the German native 10 points and putting her on pace to shatter her team-high 12 goals in '98.

UM's Lucy Koch and Patty Robinson earned assists on the play, giving them five and six on the year, respectively. Robinson moved up a notch to join Julie McHugh ('79) at sixth place on the school's career assist list with 20.

The Maroon and White defense, meanwhile, fought valiantly to stave off a flurry of Terrier attacks and preserve the lead. Koch and backfield mate Kerry Ann Jaggassar did a splendid job of clearing the ball, keeping BU's put-back chances to a minimum.

UMass trotted off the field at half-time still up by a goal, no doubt thankful for keeper Zowie Tucker's stellar job between the pipes. BU could not have been pleased, having led at the half of seven of their first eight games.

The Maroon and White lead evaporated in the second frame, however. BU senior back Samantha Stuart (Bridgton, ME) drilled the equalizer less than 10 minutes in, off an assist from midfielders Kerry Carney and Jaclyn Mele.

The goal was Stuart's third of the year, her first since BU's 4-1 win at Delaware on September 26.

Neither team could gain the upper hand over the final 25 minutes, forcing the sudden death extra set. It was the second overtime contest of the year for the Minutewomen, the first for BU.

Despite an admirable fight from the Maroon and White, the extra set truly belonged to the Terriers. BU senior forward Danielle DeCoste put the exclamation point on a strong overall performance by notching the decisive goal 6:18 into overtime.

It was DeCoste's sixth goal of the year, giving the Fall River native 19 points in the '99 campaign thus far.

In a stat that seems alarmingly familiar, the Maroon and White was out-shot 14-3 over the length of the contest. The Terriers also enjoyed a staggering 15-2 penalty corner advantage over UMass.

And once again, the one stat that the Minutewomen could take away from the loss was the amazing goal prowess of Tucker. The Welsh native racked up 11 saves amidst the swarm of BU shots, giving her a whopping 76 on the year.

Shea and her ranks will try to turn things around on Saturday, when they kick off the Atlantic 10 portion of their schedule by hosting the Rhode Island Rams. Game time is slated for 1 p.m.

Sports Schedule

Today:

Women's Soccer:
at George Washington 3 p.m.
WOMEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Amherst College 3 p.m.
MEN'S SOCCER (Totman Field):
vs. George Washington 3:30 p.m.
VOLLEYBALL (Curry Hicks Cage):
vs. Temple 7 p.m.
FOOTBALL (Alumni Stadium):
Band Day
vs. Northeastern 1 p.m.
FIELD HOCKEY (Garber Field):
vs. Rhode Island 1 p.m.
VOLLEYBALL (Curry Hicks Cage):
vs. LaSalle 7 p.m.
Men's Water Polo:
at St. Francis 8:30 p.m.

Saturday:

WOMEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Connecticut 11 a.m.
MEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Connecticut 11 a.m.

Sunday:

MEN'S SOCCER (Totman Field):
vs. Virginia Tech 1 p.m.
Women's Soccer:
at Virginia Tech 1 p.m.

Daily Collegian

New England's Largest college daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, October 12, 1999

Red Sox playoff win whips UMass campus into frenzy

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

After the Boston Red Sox came from behind to defeat the Cleveland Indians 12-8 in pivotal Game Five of the American League playoffs, students started to show their Red Sox support.

At least 1,000 students, according to one unidentified police officer, gathered in Southwest to celebrate the victory. From there, students moved to the Southwest Horseshoe and back to Southwest before heading to Central, up to Orchard Hill, Sylvan and Northeast before finally heading back to Southwest.

An officer in Orchard Hill at 12:45 a.m. reported that he was monitoring the celebration.

"We don't want fights or vandalism," the UMass officer said.

Students were running by his parked vehicle at 12:45 a.m. to catch up to the group of students who had, by that time, moved to the trail connecting Orchard Hill and Sylvan. Some students who weren't joining the crowd stood in their dorm patios to cheer on the students including groups of students on all balconies of Dickinson facing Sylvan.

Mounted on horses, at least two more officers watched the crowd in Orchard Hill and slowly followed the entire group of students, although one officer later described the task as "unfortunate."

Brief flames could be seen in the snaking line of students lazily headed towards Sylvan. The group picked up speed at the first sight of street lights and came off the trail in a run. Some students slammed their fists into a road sign. One unidentified student described his role in the slow march from Orchard Hill to Sylvan as "kind of like participating in a peace march from the 1960's."

According to Katheryn Johnson, an undecided sophomore, students had been chased by police in Southwest before moving towards Central.

Turn to RIOTS, page 2

Excited students celebrate Red Sox' victory by following a crowd of roughly 500 people through campus last night.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Tibet awareness celebrated in festival in center Amherst

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – In a culture of oppression and totalitarianism, many Tibetans escaped from the Chinese government to come to the United States. The fourth annual Tibet Awareness Day took place Saturday on the Amherst Commons and was a day of celebration for a culture once silenced, but now "speaking out" on the freedom of sharing the identity of a Tibetan culture.

The event was sponsored by the Tibetan Association of Western Massachusetts and Students for a Free Tibet chapters. Additional sponsors included Bread and Circus, Coca-Cola, Econo-Lodge, Jeffrey Amherst Inn and Collective Copies.

Dawa Gyaltsen, an education graduate student at the University of Massachusetts, said the day featured the display of Tibetan handicrafts and individual businesses that showed up to display cultural pride and help fight the Tibet's suppression by the Chinese government.

"It's a feeling of suffocation, frustration and anger because your country is shamed by other people," Gyaltsen said. "All job opportunities are taken from you and you have no job choices."

Approximately four years ago, the Tibetan Chinese communist government arrested the 11 year-old Panchen Llama, a religious figure deemed responsible for determining the next Dhali Llama.

Students like Geoff Barstow, a junior Buddhist studies major at Hampshire College, said it is very important they find the whereabouts of the Panchen Llama and that the government's actions were unwarranted.

"After the arrest, the Chinese government assumed that they had the religious authority to determine who the next Panchen Llama would be," Barstow said. "That idea is preposterous."

Barstow and the Hampshire Students for a Free Tibet collected 176 signatures on a petition to be sent to Senators John Kerry (D-Ma.) and Edward Kennedy (D-Ma.). In addition, 500 postcards were signed and will be sent to the Chinese government demanding the release of the Panchen Llama.

"In terms of this event, the importance is just for people to get involved at whatever level they can and to educate themselves," Barstow said.

The event was also marked by a guest appearance by Tibetan movie actress and singer Dadon Dawadolma. Her songs are reminiscent of her past life in Tibet and of those still living in Chinese-occupied Tibet.

"It's important for me to be here and sing and talk about what's happened in Tibet and to be able to meet with other Tibetans and talk about what we can do," Dawadolma said.

As a professional artist aspiring to live in a free Tibet, Dawadolma fled Tibet in 1992 and came to the United States because she was informed that her singing would not be acceptable in the occupied country.

"It feels terrible to have our freedom taken from us," Dawadolma said. "Especially as a singer, I want to speak from my heart, but it's a terrible feeling not being able to express myself to my listeners."

It is a tradition to praise the Dhali Llama through songs and tales, but she said this is not possible in Tibet because the Chinese government frowns upon any mention of the religious figure. Tibetans aren't allowed to possess pictures of the Dhali Llama. She said the Chinese government won't tolerate freedom of expression and will arrest any Tibetan that goes against the code.

"It's terrible," Dawadolma said. "We cannot speak out from our hearts – we have to say something we do not want to say and if we did [speak from our hearts] we'd be arrested."

According to Dawadolma, she has found the kind of life she wants to live. Her only hope is that the people in Tibet will someday achieve freedom and will live a life of happiness and

On the water…
A single leaf floats on Puffer's Pond.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Crosswalk accident lands asst. professor in hospital

Ruth A. Abrams, a visiting assistant professor of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies at the University of Massachusetts, was listed in serious condition Friday, after she was struck in a crosswalk by a vehicle late Thursday afternoon.

The accident occurred about 5:30 p.m. as Abrams was walking in a crosswalk located on the westbound side of Massachusetts Ave. between the Whitmore Administration Building and the Visitors' Center.

Abrams, 33, of Somerville, was taken to Baystate Medical Center where she received medical attention.

The driver of the vehicle has been identified as UMass student Michael Palica, 22, of Marshfield. No charges are being filed against the driver until further investigations are made.

Last night, Barbara O'Connor, deputy chief of the UMass Police Department, said Abrams' current condition has not been released, but O'Connor said she believes Abrams' condition has been upgraded to fair.

O'Connor and the UMPD are working with the State Police Reconstruction Team to assess the incident. She said pedestrian safety is becoming a big concern for the police department.

"It's the fourth pedestrian we've had struck in a crosswalk," O'Connor said. "It's becoming a big concern for us."

O'Connor said the UMPD is investigating another incident which occurred last week in which witnesses reported a woman being struck by a vehicle on Commonwealth Avenue. The woman was able to walk from the scene of the incident. The investigation remains open until the police are able to identify who the pedestrian was. If anyone has any information regarding the incident, please call the UMPD at 545-2121.

Jason Trenkle

Population milestone gets attention

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students involved in the population committee of the Pioneer Valley Sierra Club will be spreading the word as the world population is expected to hit the six billion mark today.

According to Anita King, Chairperson for the Sierra Club's New England Chapter of the population committee, the organization has recently been setting up files, sending out mailings, assisting in developing workshops for school teachers, showing and discussing videos with school age children and trying to educate the public about the dangers of unlimited population growth and its effects on the environment as a whole. King explained that there are many problems related to the increase in population.

"Fresh water scarcity is a major problem," King said.

Some other important issues that the organization deals with are top soil erosion, the rights of women and issues involved in food production.

King said the organization was established in 1992, and was intended to "focus mainly on the five-college population." She went on to say that many students within the five-college population will "make the decisions important in the future."

The population committee is organizing "Population Awareness Week." According to Christophe Courchesne a member of the group, the organization will hold a coffee and dessert meeting in Hadley as a commemoration of the six billion people born. In addition, the group will set up tables at each of the five colleges during the week.

According to the United Nations Population Fund, the world's population has doubled since 1960 and continues to increase rapidly per year by 77 million people. The population may grow to as much as nine billion people by 2050, and most of the increase is projected to take place in the world's poorest and least economically prepared countries.

One of the speculated reasons for the population increase is the increase in life expectancy. Since 1950, the number of deaths per year has been cut in half. More healthy pregnancies, more infants that receive the proper health care and the proper nutrition, the better protection of health by the elderly and the avoidance of health risks with responsible behavior also contribute to the population surge.

In order to spread the word about rapid population increase, the United Nations organized a conference in Cairo, Egypt in 1994. Almost 180 countries agreed to contribute one million dollars to the education of students about the population increase. As of the five-year review, only a small number of countries are doing as they promised. Groups such as the Sierra Club continue to try to improve the problem with population control but, "there is still work to be done," Courchesne said.

Safety walk to explore UM campus

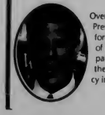
By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Examining the current state of campus safety, the campus community will join the University of Massachusetts police tonight for the annual Safety Walk.

The group will walk around campus in order to evaluate different locations based on lighting, accessibility of call boxes and the conditions of paths and landscape safety. Along with lighting and call box evaluation, the group will look at areas where trees may need to be cut down or back. The group will be subdivided into smaller groups in order to cover the five or six different routes.

In the past, both students and administrators have felt that the Safety Walk was a success. It has prompted the University to increase the number of call boxes around campus. At last year's third walk, one of the major areas of concern was the hill leading from the Orchard Hill/Central Residential Areas to the purple parking lot, although no changes have been completed. After each walk, a report illustrating the group's findings is presented, though due to insufficient funding, not everything pointed out on each walk can be improved. One major project finished by the Physical Plant was the lighting of the path from Sylvan to Orchard Hill.

"It's great how the walk brings together the students, faculty, staff and administration in order to see what needs to be done to make the campus safer," said Jeff Howe, President of the Student Government Association (SGA). Howe said the SGA, which helped to organize the Safety Walk, thinks it has a positive impact on the campus and is planning to hold a walk each semester.

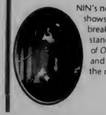


The campus community is encouraged to attend the walk tonight in order to help make the campus safer. The group will meet at 7:30 on the steps of the Student Union.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 61 LOW: 36	HIGH: 68 LOW: 41	HIGH: 59 LOW: 37

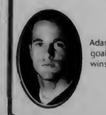
SOURCE: CNN.COM



All the Gorey details

Over the weekend, Vice President Al Gore accused former Sen. Bill Bradley of failing the Democratic party. Read more about the race for the presidency inside.

SALEM PAGE 3



More of the Same?

NIN's new LP The Fragile shows potential, but fails to break the band's angsty standards. And An Evening of One Acts sees less rises and more falls. Check out the reviews in Arts.

ARTS PAGE 6

Fade to Black

Adam Black scored two goals in two Minuteman wins this weekend

SPORTS PAGE 14

Arts & Living 6
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusettes Daily Collegian

Friday, October 8,1999

UM defense looks to turn it up against Northeastern

Struggling Minuteman offense looking to improve on red zone efficiency

By Seth Koenig
Collegian Staff

Mathematically speaking, the Northeastern Huskies might be just what the Massachusetts football team needs to get back on the winning track.

The last eight times the two schools took to the field in Amherst, the Minutemen won, giving them a clear-cut advantage according to the law of averages. All-time, UMass can boast a certain dominance in the series, holding a 20-7-1 advantage.

Perhaps the numbers are a hidden foretelling of the future. Nine of the last 15 contests between the teams were decided by a touchdown or less, suggesting that the game will fall right into the Minutmen's hands; Massachusetts was 6-3 in such games last season.

Of course, the overly optimistic UMass fan would also remind us that according to a very recent and short pattern, the Minutemen should also be right on course to take home this year's National Championship, too.

Truth be told, the only number that matters in Saturday's game at Warren P. McGuirk Alumni Stadium between Massachusetts and Northeastern is 1999.

This year, both teams have identical 1-3 records, with each dropping a decision against a tough, Division I-A opponent. Toledo hosted and defeated UMass two weeks ago, 24-3, while Boston College took down the Huskies last week by the score of 35-22. In the conference, Massachusetts holds a one-game edge, 1-1 to 0-2.

The respective records are deceiving, though. Northeastern, while two games under .500, has been putting up 462.5 yards a game, including a solid 279 through the air. The Minuteman defense must be particularly wary of the two Husky quarterbacks. Jason Quinlan has recorded 628 yards and five scores in the air this season, while Fred Vallett has added 453 yards and five touchdowns of his own.

"On offense they are being aggressive," UMass coach Mark Whipple said. "They have two really good quarterbacks. I think they are going to come off the B.C. effort and feel really good about where they are as a football team. I expect a great football game. The team that comes out of it is going to fell pretty good about themselves. We just need our guys to get a little bit more mentally tough and stay confident."

Regardless of who's throwing the ball, a very likely receiver is Dave Klemic, with season totals of 29 catches for 339 yards and three touchdowns.

FOOTBALL
UMASS VS N.EASTERN
SATURDAY, 1:00
91.1 FM-WMUA
MATT FEATO-PLAY
MIKE KOBYLANSKI-COLOR
WEEKEND PREVIEW

Aside from the opposing players, though, the biggest problem UMass seems to have is, quite simply, bad luck. Most recently, in the squad's homecoming matchup with Holstra, the Minutemen were on the low side of a highly debated call in which UMass punt returner DeShon Hardy collided with a small handful of Flying Dutchmen and Minutemen, and the ball bounced from the 30-yard line to the one-yard line off the helmet of a Holstra defender. UMass, with its back to the end zone, subsequently turned the ball over – quarterback Todd Bankhead was intercepted by Robert Thomas, who returned the pick 15 yards for the score – to break a 7-7 tie.

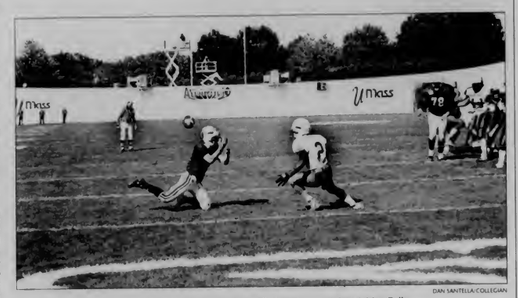
"The guys were thinking that bad things were going to happen," Whipple said. "We practiced at the stadium last night, and bad things are going to happen in a football game, it's how you handle those things. I think we're going to be a completely different football team this weekend against Northeastern."

Offensively, Massachusetts has been going through tough times without the help of the supernatural. Bankhead, who rocketed to the top of the school career lists in nearly every passing category in just over a season of play, has struggled early this season. Against Toledo in week three, the signal caller tallied only 97 yards in the air, and on the year he has as many interceptions, five, as he does touchdowns. In the past three weeks' losses, Bankhead has one score and four picks.

The Minutemen have been relying on tailback Marcel Shipp for much of their movement on the gridiron. The junior runner has ran for over 100 yards in each of the past 16 weeks. This year he has 558 yards and four touchdowns on the ground, while catching 22 passes for 124 more yards and another score.

Huskies Brian Hayden and T.J. Hill will be leading the effort to stop Shipp's rushing streak. The linebacker and defensive back have registered 29 and 28 tackles, respectively.

In comparison, UMass linebacker Kole Ayi has 61 tackles, 46 unassisted.



This weekend, with the brass of the bands blaring, both the Northeastern Huskies and the Massachusetts Minutemen will try to get off their respective slumps and back on the winning track.

"We just have to get a win," Whipple said. "That would solve a lot of problems. As a coaching staff, we have to become a little more positive with our players. I think we were really hard on our kids last week. We can not have that anymore. I'm going to have to play walk-ons if I keep banging them like I have been. We just have to get back to basics and have some fun at UMass. If we do that, I think we will be alright."

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Paul Bolden and the UMass defense will be looking to stop the passing attack of Northeastern.

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

The home fans hope to see a better performance from All- America candidate Adrian Zullo.

Women's soccer travels to GW

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

This weekend may go a long way in determining whether or not the Massachusetts women's soccer team will win the Atlantic 10 title this year.

UMass (5-2-1, 3-0 in the A-10) currently sits all alone in first place in the conference as the only unbeaten team. However, a host of teams are one game back, and the rest are all two behind the Minutewomen, who will head south to face George Washington and Virginia Tech.

To put it simply, two losses this weekend for UMass could put them in the cellar – but two wins could give the Maroon and White a comfortable lead atop the league.

"This is a big, big weekend. If we do well, then I think we go into the driver's seat. I don't feel that we are there just yet," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "Right now I think we are amongst everyone else because a lot of teams are in striking distance."

The Minutewomen will first head to our nation's capital today to face GW. The Colonials (2-9, 2-1 in A-10) played a difficult non-conference schedule in which they went winless, before starting out the league slate by winning two of three.

"GW played a national caliber non-conference schedule, but they have rallied to start the A-10 season 2-1, and they have beaten Virginia Tech," Rudy said. "They are a feisty, angry side...but their 2-9 record doesn't phase me. We have to be focused and composed."

On Sunday, UMass will be in Blacksburg, Va. when it takes on the Hokies in a 1 p.m. match-up. Va. Tech is 6-3 on the year to date, and is also 2-1 in the A-10.

They have their best team ever and have two outstanding goal scorers to go with what was always a pretty good team," Rudy said. "Joy Nsubuga was one of the leading junior college scorers in the nation last year and Wendy Kotwas was also a top junior college player in New Jersey."

To date, Kotwas leads the team with seven goals, while Nsubuga is right on her heels with five.

"We have to go down there and play on a huge field. Anything can happen," Rudy said. "From the scouting report that we have on them they are built like trees. We're probably going to be outsized."

On the UMass side of things, senior forward Emma Kurowski leads the squad with 10 goals and 21 points on the season. Karer Green is the team's second leading scorer with 11 points, while suphomores Katelyn Jones and Martha Conover each have seven points.

Goalkeepers Angie Napoli and Cori Stevens have both played well in net for UMass. Napoli is 3-1 thus far, while Stevens has posted a 2-1-1 mark.

Being a fan of the South Side is tough

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

We ended up where we belonged, at the bottom, in the basement... again. A paltry 67-95 record meant that once again, my Cubs weren't going to make it into the playoffs. We weren't even going to get water for the teams that did.

It's a hard life being a Cubs fan. When I was younger, I started every baseball season expecting the best from my Cubs. The playoffs, and maybe, finally, getting to the World Series, a joy that no Cubs fan has felt since 1945. I aged, and I learned.

This season, my hopes were high. With Kerry Wood's 20 strikeouts, Sammy Sosa's 66 home runs and a wild card berth fresh in my mind, I dreamed, a faint dream. Maybe those playoffs weren't so far away.

It's funny how quickly dreams can die.

Bang. Wood is out for the season, needing Tommy John surgery to repair a destroyed shoulder. We had no pitching. Apart from Sosa and the ever-consistent Mark Grace, the team barely had hitting. Our bullpen was a joke. The team started slow and ended the season at a stop.

But I'm still a Cubs fan, and I still wear my hat with pride. They're a great team to be a fan of, and whether or not they win championships, every year I take with me a few more memories.

In all my years of being fan, I've been relegated to watching only the occasional game on WGN or Fox, and, for two seasons now, I've made a point of seeing the team play the Pirates at Three Rivers Stadium.

It's a mammoth stadium, all concrete and really ugly. The fans know that their home team is going to grind it out every year and always come up just a bit short. The fans are blue collar, and it's baseball the way it should be.

Hot dogs with relish. Cokes. Games under the lights.

I had already seen the Pirates play the Milwaukee Brewers this past year, a game in which I got to see the once future star pitcher of the Mets, Bill Pulsipher, pitch against a bona-fide future star of Pittsburgh, Kris Benson.

The Pirates won 9-4, and after the game, there was a huge fireworks display. It was beautiful, and all of the fans stayed in their seats, getting both the hometown win and the fireworks on half price night.

Two weeks later, in late August, a few days before I came here to school, I went with friends to see my beloved Cubs play the Pirates. My team lost 3-5, but I won't remember a disgusting pitching display from Terry Mulholland. I'll remember batting practice.

Sosa was taking his cuts and all the fans had turned out early to shag home runs. The runner-up in last year's home run battle came up short for the fans, but they clapped and cheered anyway. We were in the uppermost of the upper decks, and I was wearing my Cubs hat, a hat that I had owned for 5 years. The bill was duct-taped. The inside was cut out so that it would still fit. Cubs players were milling about in the outfield, shagging down fly balls and ground balls.

My friends and I were calling to the outfielders, begging them to toss a ball up to the top deck so that those of us who were cheap fans could get a ball to take home. So was a very small kid down the aisle from us. There weren't too many people who were up there, so we saw him looking down at the field with his dad. After repeated shouts for ten or fifteen minutes, one of the guys who didn't get to play that often heaved a ball to us. We shouted our thanks and held on to the ball.

The kid was still shouting for a ball, and so we started shouting again.

Turn to FAN, page 7

Field Hockey reeling after OT loss

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Dropping a tight one-goal game in overtime to a ranked team looks pretty good on paper for the Massachusetts field hockey team. After all, every game is supposed to be a learning experience.

But after Wednesday's 2-1 defeat at the hands of No.13 Boston University, the Minutewomen (3-7) may have finally reached the point in their '99 season when all the team is learning is how to lose.

The Terriers (9-2) headed into the evening matchup with a so-so 8-8-3 all-time record against UMass. Coach Sally Starr's troops were coming off an emotional 5-3 win over Richmond on Sunday, and were looking to continue a brilliant '99 campaign that has them perched atop the America East conference.

The Minutewomen went into Boston having just dropped a closer-than-expected 4-1 contest at No.1 Connecticut. The team had been plagued by offensive woes for much of the early season, scoring only two goals over a four game losing streak from September 12-26.

UM coach Patty Shea had used the practices leading up to the BU brawl to focus on increased offensive output, mainly by employing more aggressive forward play and more frequent shooting. The Maroon and White had been outscored 22-12 over its first nine games.

All that practice seemed to pay off in the opening frame of Wednesday's war, as UMass jumped out to a 1-0 lead at the 18:56 mark. The goal came courtesy of team scoring leader Anke Bruemmer, who blasted home the score off of a UM penalty corner.

It was Bruemmer's fifth goal of the year, giving the German native 10 points and putting her on pace to shatter her team-high 12 goals in '98.

UM's Lucy Koch and Patty Robinson earned assists on the play, giving them five and six on the year, respectively. Robinson moved up a notch to join Julie McHugh ('79) at sixth place on the school's career assist list with 20.

The Maroon and White defense, meanwhile, fought valiantly to stave off a flurry of Terrier attacks and preserve the lead. Koch and backfield mate Kerry Ann Jagassar did a splendid job of clearing the ball, keeping BU's put-back chances to a minimum.

UMass trotted off the field at half-time still up by a goal, no doubt thankful for keeper Zowie Tucker's stellar job between the pipes. BU could not have been pleased, having led at the half of seven of their first eight games.

The Maroon and White lead evaporated in the second frame, however. BU senior back Samantha Stuart (Bridgton, Me.) drilled the equalizer less than 10 minutes in, off an assist from midfielders Kerry Carney and Jaclyn Mele.

The goal was Stuart's third of the year, her first since BU's 4-1 win at Delaware on September 26.

Neither team could gain the upper hand over the final 25 minutes, forcing the sudden death extra set. It was the second overtime contest of the year for the Minutewomen, the first for BU.

Despite an admirable fight from the Maroon and White, the extra set truly belonged to the Terriers. BU senior forward Danielle DeCoste put the exclamation point on a strong overall performance by notching the decisive goal 6:18 into overtime.

It was DeCoste's sixth goal of the year, giving the Fall River native 19 points in the '99 campaign thus far.

In a stat that seems alarmingly familiar, the Maroon and White was out-shot 14-3 over the length of the contest. The Terriers also enjoyed a staggering 15-2 penalty corner advantage over UMass.

And once again, the one stat that the Minutewomen could take away from the loss was the amazing goal prowess of Tucker. The Welsh native racked up 11 saves amidst the swarm of BU shots, giving her a whopping 76 on the year.

Shea and her ranks will try to turn things around on Saturday, when they kick off the Atlantic 10 portion of their schedule by hosting the Rhode Island Rams. Game time is slated for 1 p.m.

Sports Schedule

Today:

Women's Soccer:
at George Washington	3 p.m.
WOMEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Amherst College	3 p.m.
MEN'S SOCCER (Totman Field):
vs. George Washington	3:30 p.m.
VOLLEYBALL (Curry Hicks Cage):
vs. Temple	7 p.m.

Saturday:

WOMEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Connecticut	11 a.m.
MEN'S TENNIS (Upper Boyden Courts):
vs. Connecticut	11 a.m.
FOOTBALL (Alumni Stadium):
Band Day
vs. Northeastern	1 p.m.
FIELD HOCKEY (Garber Field):
vs. Rhode Island	1 p.m.
VOLLEYBALL (Curry Hicks Cage):
vs. LaSalle	7 p.m.
Men's Water Polo:
at St. Francis	8:30 p.m.

Sunday:

MEN'S SOCCER (Totman Field):
vs. Virginia Tech	1 p.m.
Women's Soccer:
at Virginia Tech	1 p.m.

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Tuesday, October 12,1999

POOR ORIGINAL

Red Sox playoff win whips UMass campus into frenzy

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

After the Boston Red Sox came from behind to defeat the Cleveland Indians 12-8 in pivotal Game Five of the American League playoffs, students started to show their Red Sox support.

At least 1,000 students, according to one unidentified police officer, gathered in Southwest to celebrate the victory. From there, students moved to the Southwest Horseshoe and back to Southwest before heading to Central, up to Orchard Hill, Sylvan and Northeast before finally heading back to Southwest.

An officer in Orchard Hill at 12:45 a.m. reported that he was monitoring the celebration.

"We don't want fights or vandalism," the UMass officer said.

Students were running by his parked vehicle at 12:45 a.m. to catch up to the group of students who had, by that time, moved to the trail connecting Orchard Hill and Sylvan. Some students who weren't joining the crowd stood in their dorm patios to cheer on the students including groups of students on all balconies of Dickinson facing Sylvan.

Mounted on horses, at least two more officers watched the crowd in Orchard Hill and slowly followed the entire group of students, although one officer later described the task as "unfortunate."

Brief flames could be seen in the snaking line of students lazily headed towards Sylvan. The group picked up speed at the first sight of street lights and came off the trail in a run. Some students slammed their fists into a road sign. One unidentified student described his role in the slow march from Orchard Hill to Sylvan as "kind of like participating in a peace march from the 1960's."

According to Katheryn Johnson, an undecided sophomore, students had been chased by police in Southwest before moving towards Central.

Turn to RIOTS, page 2

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

Excited students celebrate Red Sox' victory by following a crowd of roughly 500 people through campus last night.

Tibet awareness celebrated in festival in center Amherst

By Jason Trenkle
Collegian Staff

AMHERST – In a culture of oppression and totalitarianism, many Tibetans escaped from the Chinese government to come to the United States. The fourth annual Tibet Awareness Day took place Saturday on the Amherst Commons and was a day of celebration for a culture once silenced, but now "speaking out" on the freedom of sharing the identity of a Tibetan culture.

The event was sponsored by the Tibetan Association of Western Massachusetts and Students For a Free Tibet chapters. Additional sponsors included Bread and Circus, Coca-Cola, Econo-Lodge, Jeffrey Amherst Inn and Collective Copies.

Dawa Gyaltsen, an education graduate student at the University of Massachusetts, said the day featured the display of Tibetan handicrafts and individual businesses that showed up to display cultural pride and help fight the Tibet's suppression by the Chinese government.

"It's a feeling of suffocation, frustration and anger because your country is shamed by other people," Gyaltsen said. "All job opportunities are taken from you and you have no job choices."

Approximately four years ago, the Tibetan Chinese communist government arrested the 11 year-old Panchen Llama, a religious figure deemed responsible for determining the next Dhali Llama.

Students like Geoff Barstow, a junior Buddhist studies major at Hampshire College, said it is very important they find the whereabouts of the Panchen Llama and that the government's actions were unwarranted.

"After the arrest, the Chinese government assumed that they had the religious authority to determine who the next Panchen Llama would be," Barstow said. "That idea is preposterous."

Barstow and the Hampshire Students for a Free Tibet collected 176 signatures on a petition to be sent to Senators John Kerry (D-Ma.) and Edward Kennedy (D-Ma.). In addition, 500 postcards were signed and will be sent to the Chinese government demanding the release of the Panchen Llama.

"In terms of this event, the importance is just for people to get involved at whatever level they can and to educate themselves," Barstow said.

The event was also marked by a guest appearance by Tibetan movie actress and singer Dadon Dawadolma. Her songs are reminiscent of her past life in Tibet and of those still living in Chinese-occupied Tibet.

"It's important for me to be here and sing and talk about what's happened in Tibet and to be able to meet with other Tibetans and talk about what we can do," Dawadolma said.

As a professional artist aspiring to live in a free Tibet, Dawadolma fled Tibet in 1992 and came to the United States because she was informed that her singing would not be acceptable in the occupied country.

"It feels terrible to have our freedom taken from us," Dawadolma said. "Especially as a singer, I want to speak from my heart, but it's a terrible feeling not being able to express myself to my listeners."

It is a tradition to praise the Dhali Llama through songs and tales, but she said this is not possible in Tibet because the Chinese government frowns upon any mention of the religious figure. Tibetans aren't allowed to possess pictures of the Dhali Llama. She said the Chinese government won't tolerate freedom of expression and will arrest any Tibetan that does against the code.

"It's terrible," Dawadolma said. "We cannot speak out from our hearts – we have to say something we do not want to say and if we did [speak from our hearts] we'd be arrested."

According to Dawadolma, she has found the kind of life she wants to live. Her only hope is that the people in Tibet will somedas achieve freedom and will live a life of happiness and

DAN SANTELLA/COLLEGIAN

On the water...
A single leaf floats on Puffer's Pond.

Crosswalk accident lands asst. professor in hospital

Ruth A. Abrams, a visiting assistant professor of Judaic and Near Eastern Studies at the University of Massachusetts, was listed in serious condition Friday, after she was struck in a crosswalk by a vehicle late Thursday afternoon.

The accident occurred about 5:30 p.m. as Abrams was walking in a crosswalk located on the westbound side of Massachusetts Ave. between the Whitmore Administration Building and the Visitors' Center.

Abrams, 53, of Somerville, was taken to Baystate Medical Center where she received medical attention.

The driver of the vehicle has been identified as UMass student Michael Palica, 22, of Marshfield. No charges are being filed against the driver until further investigations are made.

Last night, Barbara O'Connor, deputy chief of the UMass Police Department, said Abrams' current condition has not been released, but O'Connor said she believes Abrams' condition has been upgraded to fair.

O'Connor and the UMPD are working with the State Police Reconstruction Team to assess the incident. She said pedestrian safety is becoming a big concern for the police department.

"It's the fourth pedestrian we've had struck in a crosswalk," O'Connor said. "It's becoming a big concern for us."

O'Connor said the UMPD is investigating another incident which occurred last week in which witnesses reported a woman being struck by a vehicle on Commonwealth Avenue. The woman was able to walk from the scene of the incident. The investigation remains open until the police are able to identify who the pedestrian was. If anyone has any information regarding the incident, please call the UMPD at 545-2121.

Jason Trenkle

Population milestone gets attention

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Students involved in the population committee of the Pioneer Valley Sierra Club will be spreading the word as the world population is expected to hit the six billion mark today.

According to Anita King, Chairperson for the Sierra Club's New England Chapter of the population committee, the organization has recently been setting up files, sending out mailings, assisting in developing workshops for school teachers, showing and discussing videos with school age children and trying to educate the public about the dangers of unlimited population growth and its effects on the environment as a whole. King explained that there are many problems related to the increase in population.

"Fresh water scarcity is a major problem," King said.

Some other important issues that the organization deals with are top soil erosion, the rights of women and issues involved in food production.

King said the organization was established in 1892, and was intended to "focus mainly on the five-college population." She went on to say that many students with in the five-college population will "make the decisions important in the future."

The population committee is organizing "Population Awareness Week." According to Christophe Courchesne a member of the group, the organization will hold a coffee and dessert meeting in Hadley as a commemoration of the six billion people born. In addition, the group will set up tables at each of the five colleges during the week.

According to the United Nations Population Fund, the world's population has doubled since 1960 and continues to increase rapidly per year by 77 million people. The population may grow to as much as nine billion people by 2050, and most of the increase is projected to take place in the world's poorest and least economically prepared countries.

One of the speculated reasons for the population increase is the increase in life expectancy. Since 1950, the number of deaths per year has been cut in half. More healthy pregnancies, more infants that receive the proper health care and the proper nutrition, the better protection of health by the elderly and the avoidance of health risks with responsible behavior also contribute to the population surge.

In order to spread the word about rapid population increase, the United Nations organized a conference in Cairo, Egypt in 1994. Almost 180 countries agreed to contribute one million dollars to the education of students about the population increase. As of the five-year review, only a small number of countries are doing as they promised. Groups such as the Sierra Club continue to try to improve the problem with population control but, "there is still work to be done," Courchesne said.

Safety walk to explore UM campus

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Examining the current state of campus safety, the campus community will join the University of Massachusetts police tonight for the annual Safety Walk.

The group will walk around campus in order to evaluate different locations based on lighting, accessibility of call boxes and the conditions of paths and landscape safety. Along with lighting and call box evaluation, the group will look at areas where trees may need to be cut down or back. The group will be subdivided into smaller groups in order to cover the five or six different routes.

In the past, both students and administrators have felt that the Safety Walk was a success. It has prompted the University to increase the number of call boxes around campus. At last year's third walk, one of the major areas of concern was the hill leading from the Orchard Hill/Central Residential Areas to the purple parking lot, although no changes have been completed. After each walk, a report illustrating the group's findings is presented, though due to insufficient funding not everything pointed out on each walk can be improved. One major project finished by the Physical Plant was the lighting of the path from Sylvan to Orchard Hill.

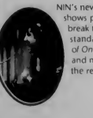
"It's great how the walk brings together the students, faculty, staff and administration in order to see what needs to be done to make the campus safer," said Jeff Howe, President of the Student Government Association (SGA). Howe said the SGA, which helped to organize the Safety Walk, thinks it has a positive impact on the campus and is planning to hold a walk each semester.

The campus community is encouraged to attend the walk tonight in order to help make the campus safer. The group will meet at 7:30 on the steps of the Student Union.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Wednesday	Thursday
HIGH: 61	HIGH: 68	HIGH: 59
LOW: 36	LOW: 41	LOW: 37

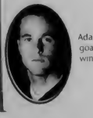
SOURCE: CNN.COM



All the Gore-y details

Over the weekend, Vice President Al Gore accused former Sen. Bill Bradley of failing the Democratic party. Read more about the race for the presidency inside.

NEWS PAGE 3



More of the Same?

NIN's new LP The Fragile shows potential, but fails to break the band's angsty standards. And An Evening of One Acts sees less rises and more falls. Check out the reviews in Arts.

ARTS PAGE 6

Fade to Black

Adam Black scored two goals in two Minuteman wins this weekend

SPORTS PAGE 14

Arts & Living 6
Comics 13
Crossword 13
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 14

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

BARBARA BRADBURY/COLLEGIAN

S.T.R.I.D.E.

Students enjoy a conference put on by the Springfield Teacher Recruitment to Increase Diversity in Education.

Clinton requests delay on test ban treaty vote

By Charles Babington and Michael Grunwald
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – With the Senate poised to reject a nuclear test ban treaty as early as today, President Clinton formally asked for a postponement yesterday, preferring inaction to the outright rejection of a pact he considers an administration priority.

While some senators welcomed the request as an effort to break the political impasse over the issue, GOP leaders also want assurances that the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty won't reemerge for consideration before 2001. Neither the White House nor Senate Democratic leaders would make such a promise, and lawmakers said they would proceed toward a vote in which all sides agree the treaty would be soundly rejected.

Still, there appears to be a political way out for those Republicans who are wary of being accused of killing the treaty and those Democrats who would rather see it lie dormant than be voted down. Some senators said they would push for a procedural vote on whether to postpone a ratification decision indefinitely. A simple majority could approve such a move, whereas ratification of the test-ban treaty requires a two-thirds vote, or 67 senators.

The treaty is thought to have fewer than 50 Senate backers, mostly Democrats, but a number of Republicans who oppose it have said they do not want to see it defeated in a vote that could embarrass the United States around the world.

Clinton long has argued the importance of the treaty, which would prohibit all tests of nuclear bombs and establish monitoring stations and sanctions throughout the world. But the White House appeared to be caught flat-footed last month when Senate GOP leaders suddenly scheduled a debate and vote on the pact, which Clinton had signed in 1996.

Unable to attract more than a couple of Republicans, who hold 55 of 100 seats, Clinton last week began urging the chamber to postpone action and allow for weeks or months of debate. Yesterday he

Turn to Clinton page 3

■ riots

continued from page 1

"Trashcans were knocked over," she said, before turning back toward the departing crowd. Other students gathered in Sylvan reported that Yankees paraphernalia, the next team the Red Sox would face in the American League Championship Series, had been burnt in Southwest at the start of the incident. There were also reports of thrown beer bottles. Fireworks exploded to the left of students who came down from Sylvan towards Northeast and one student sounded an air horn.

Students were chanting, "Let's go Red Sox," as they ran down the hill. The group then stopped in Northeast at roughly 1:15 a.m. and gathered to cheer before turning in the direction of the Campus Center and leaving.

Mike Stephan, a freshman music performance major, estimated that 500 students were gathered in Northeast. On their way to Northeast, a Green Honda Civic parked across the street from Morrill had a front passenger window broken. Students scattered after the window was busted, some heading down the road towards North Pleasant Street and others heading to the left side of Morrill.

Both groups rejoined at the Campus Center and headed back towards Southwest. A police car met students at Fine Arts Center and the group turned towards Richard F. Garber Field. Five students seemed to lead the following students away from the police.

Mike Antolini, a sophomore school of management major, ran barefoot towards the front of the pack.

"This was started in Southwest and now we're here," he said. The five students shouted at students not to break anything, but trashcans were pushed over and orange fencing was torn down.

Police officers arrested one unidentified individual near Hertier Hall as students headed towards the tunnel underneath Massachusetts Avenue. Scott Castanopolous, an undecided freshman, ran towards the tunnel barefoot and shouted that his feet were bleeding. Students discovered, after a brief chant in the tunnel, anti-Yankee graffiti in chalk on walls in Southwest, including a "Jeter's Gay" scribbling that some students howled at in approval.

Students, numbered at close to 500, gathered in Southwest. Students took photos of the groups as the chanted "Wait till Wednesday" in reference to the first game of the Red Sox-Yankees matchup. The students stalled at 1:30 a.m. and by 1:40 a.m. had broken up. As stragglers left, UMass police arrested at least one more individual.

DAN SANTILLA/COLLEGIAN

Symmetry

The North Congregational Church in North Amherst stands nicely on Columbus Day.

TELL US MORE ABOUT YOURSELF ON OUR

ONLINE CAREER PROFILE

AND START YOUR JOURNEY TOWARDS A GREAT CAREER.

www.pwcglobal.com/ocp

PRICEWATERHOUSECOOPERS

Join us. Together we can change the world.℠

© 1999 PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP. PricewaterhouseCoopers refers to the U.S. firm of PricewaterhouseCoopers LLP and other members of the worldwide PricewaterhouseCoopers organization. We are proud to be an Affirmative Action and Equal Opportunity Employer.

■ Clinton

continued from page 2

put the request in the form of a letter to Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., and Minority Leader Thomas A. Daschle, D-S.D.

"I firmly believe the treaty is in the national interest," Clinton wrote. "However, I recognize there are a significant number of senators who have honest disagreements. Accordingly, I request that you postpone consideration of the Comprehensive Test Ban Treaty."

Clinton says ratification is essential to secure the United States' nuclear arsenal superiority and to prod other nations – including Russia and China – into ratifying. Fifty-one nations have ratified the treaty, including 26 of the 44 nuclear-capable nations whose ratification is required before the treaty takes effect. Supporters say detection would be sufficient to halt virtually all nuclear testing, which the United States voluntarily ended several years ago.

DAN SANTILLA/COLLEGIAN

Sun shines down.

The early morning sun shines over this cartful of pumpkins.

Come write for news! You can chase riots around campus at 2:00 am on a Monday morning!

Protein researcher wins Nobel prize for medicine

By Thomas H. Maugh II
Los Angeles Times

A German-American researcher who discovered how the body puts addresses on individual proteins so that they arrive at the correct location has been awarded the 1999 Nobel Prize for medicine or physiology.

Dr. Guenter Blobel of the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at Rockefeller University in New York City found that each of the one billion protein molecules in a single cell bears a short address tag. The tag indicates that it belongs in the nucleus, the cell membrane, the cytoplasm or elsewhere, or that it should be secreted outside the cell.

With such tags, the cell runs like a well-organized factory. Without them, it would be like an earthquake-damaged warehouse with cellular components scattered uselessly about.

The discoveries have helped scientists unravel the causes of several genetic diseases, including cystic fibrosis and familial hypercholesterolemia, according to the Nobel Foundation citation. When proteins are sent to the wrong location by a defective tag, they cannot perform their customary function and can produce disease.

The findings have also contributed to the development of a more effective use of cells as protein factories for the production of important drugs.

Blobel's "work has led to an explosion of knowledge on the [movement] of proteins in the cell, and even on the way some kinds of drugs may be introduced into cells," said Marvin Cassman, director of the National Institute of General Medical Sciences in Bethesda, Md.

DAN SANTILLA/COLLEGIAN

Three little windows

These three windows look over a market in Sunderland.

Gore accuses Bradley of failing Dems

By Jules Witcover
Baltimore Sun

DES MOINES, Iowa – Vice President Al Gore accused former Sen. Bill Bradley Sunday of failing the Democratic Party in its two "most defining moments of the last 20 years" by voting for Reaganomics and then leaving Congress in Republican control instead of staying and fighting.

Gore told reporters that his foe for the Democratic presidential nomination supported President Reagan's "slushing budget cuts" in 1981 that deepened child poverty.

"That was the single most defining vote for Democrats of the last 20 years," Gore said. "I voted against it. I fought against it. Some folks felt that in order to survive politically they should vote for it."

The second most defining moment, he said, "has been what the reaction was when Newt Gingrich tried to solidify the Reaganomics approach, and each of us was called upon either to fight against it with everything we have or not." Asked if he was saying the former New Jersey senator had quit, Gore replied: "I have not used that word; others have."

The vice president did not mention Bradley by name, but his comments were in response to a question about their differences. He voiced the allegations in the context of repeating his challenge to Bradley to debate him, calling this time for weekly debates on a range of subjects from farm policy to the environment, and specifically their positions on Reaganomics in the 1980s.

Bradley's communications director, Anita Dunn, responded that the senator had voted against the Reagan tax cuts in committee and on the Senate floor but did vote for spending cuts in the Reagan budget on final passage. Rather than leaving the party, she said, Bradley campaigned for scores of Democratic candidates after retiring from the Senate and led a project training young activists to work in Democratic campaigns.

Gore's remarks came as he and Bradley were in Des Moines for the state Democratic Party's annual Jefferson-Jackson dinner.

Bradley's improving standing in polls outside the state, coupled with signs of disarray in Gore's moving his headquarters to Nashville, Tenn., and his call for a series of debates, put sharp focus on their visits to Iowa.

In his dinner speech, Bradley made no reference to Gore or to the attacks the vice president had made, other than to call for a positive competition between the vice president and himself to lift the tone of campaigning. Bradley focused most of his remarks on his standard appeal to Americans to involve themselves in politics, starting with campaign finance reform to limit the influence of money.

Bradley capped two days of campaigning in the Des Moines area by walking a local precinct where Iowa Democrats will gather to voice their preference between the two on caucus night.

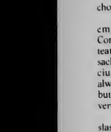
Early polls in Iowa have put Gore comfortably ahead.

FUEL

EDU.COM PRESENTS FUEL WITH SPECIAL GUESTS. OCTOBER 29TH AT AVALON. GO TO WWW.EDU.COM AND ENTER TO WIN FREE TICKETS!

 V.I.P. PARTY BEFORE THE CONCERT FOR EDU.COM TICKET WINNERS ONLY!

AVALON WBCN 104.1 FM



edu.com students get it™

Mind your manners

"This," says Jenny, "is the teat."

Jenny's not sexually harassing me. Well, at least I think Jenny's not sexually harassing me. I guess you never know. However, the main reason why Jenny is telling me about the teat is because she is my boss, and I am her employee, and I am being trained in the Dining Common arts.

I guess it was kind of inevitable that I would end up working in the DC. Since my only marketable skills are the ability to reflect light off of my head and making snide comments about strangers in newsprint, I really wasn't going to obtain employment doing anything meaningful. Of course, it's not that I can't find meaning in scraping dishes; I simply choose not to.

Rob Schulze

So, I began my time as a student employee at the Worcester Dining Commons, which brings me to the teat. The teat is that little white tube thing on the milk sacks that you must cut in order for the calcium goodness to flow free. I personally always referred to the teat as "The Nipple," but that's probably just because I'm a pervert.

Not that I spend all my DC time slashing nipples, oh no siree. I also scrape dishes, which is an art form all unto itself. There's this thing back in the bowels of the DC known as the bowl, probably because it's basically a bowl with a constant stream of water flowing around it leading down to the Whirring Blades of Doom, from which no Stone Willy's Pizza has ever returned. It's kind of hypnotizing, being on the bowl, watching the water swirling, swirling, always in the same direction, with the same smooth motion, you are getting sleepy, yes, very sleepy, you are falling face first directly into the blades, there is nothing you can do, and always the swirling, and then Bam; Becky hurls a plate at you and you wake up and wash it. At least that's how it works with me.

Then, there's the music. Constantly with the music. I began my employment at the DC as a solid rock 'n' roll guy, equally comfortable with Six Feet Under as with Slayer, and truly believing that Ricky Martin should be placed in the stocks for public humiliation. About a month later I am able to sing, word for word, note for note, the entirety of "No Scrubs." I discover to my horror that I am humming "Mambo Number Five" during my boring lecture classes. It's a travesty. I haven't gone all the way, though; I still have the pact I made with myself that if I ever catch myself saying "Ole, ole, ole" I will hurl myself into the dishwasher and be steam cleaned straight to hell.

The DC job is actually not that bad. I'm not just saying that because I don't want to get fired; I am saying that because I really don't want to get fired. I mean, I'm not saving the planet or anything, but the work isn't really that hard. ("You want me to sort spoons? So they're all facing the right way? Who do you think I am, frickin' Einstein?") The people are cool, especially Jenny, who is really not going to fire me for writing this article, maybe. The real problem with the Dining Commons job is all the people who go there and are not wearing aprons and listening to "Genie in a Bottle," namely, you.

Yeah, I'm talkin' to you. You know who you are. You are the person who thinks it's great fun to make a scale model of Mount Rushmore out of the vanilla pudding and carefully placing it on the chair next to you for some poor schlub to sit in. You are the guy who just has better things to do than bus your tray, deciding to leave it on the table because that is a much better thing for someone of your caliber to do. You are the person who at least has the decency to bring his tray up to the window, but then, exhausted by the energy required to perform this miraculous feat, cannot summon up the strength to put the damn silverware in the damn bucket. Just who the hell do you think you are, anyways?

It's so disgusting. I mean, we cook for you, we serve you, we clean up after you, we wash your dishes, but it's just not enough. You want more. "Excuse me," you would like to say to the apron that happens to be walking by, "I have to go do some Number Two. You shall wipe my ass for me, and if the toilet paper isn't silky and smooth, than may God have mercy on your soul." You would do this, if we were to let you. You are never satisfied. This is your right, you say, because the food sucks. All right, listen – I'm not about to defend the DC food. Sorry, guys who work in the kitchen and are about to formulate plans to stick me in the Mega Boiler, but I gave up on the DC food a long time ago. All I've ever eaten since the second semester last year is turkey sandwiches and Stone Willy's Pizza, along with generous glasses of Cherry Coke. I really have no clue what the food is like now; it could be monkey crap or five star cuisine for all I know.

But let's just assume that the food is bad, just for the sake of argument. That still gives you no excuse to be lazy and cause those of us who have nothing to do with food preparation headaches and fits of unfocused aggression. It's just total irresponsibility and lack of respect for those of us who have the dubious privilege of serving you. I mean, without us, what would you do? Would you scrape your own dishes? Carve your own teat? I highly doubt it.

I'm actually one of the more serene employees when it comes to this. If you leave your silverware on the tray when Tim is around, he will kill you. You will be picking fragments of that fork out of your sensitive bodily areas for months. Just keep that in mind – if you're nice to us, we will be nice to you, and the DC will be a happy place, albeit a bit heavy on the Stroganoff.

And if you aren't nice to us, well, we control the pizza. I think we all know where the power lies in this relationship.

Rob Schulze is a Collegian columnist.

A license to…?

Sorry to disappoint you guys, but I'm still not in a serious enough mood to write about some big, important issue. It'll happen next week. I promise.

A license to drive, one to marry, another to become a doctor, a different one for almost any profession that a person could choose. This includes beautician (I know some beauticians who should have their license revoked), a plumber, a teacher, etc. Yet, there is no license for one of the world's most challenging jobs: to be a parent. If you need a license for virtually everything else, you should need one for this.

Emily Vacanti

A lot of people disagree with this and say that we would be giving the government way too much power. Who is the government to say that a certain couple or single adult should or should not be able to have a child? It would be wrong to force birth control on everyone until they are mature and responsible enough to have a child, right?

Stay with me on this one. Think about all of the children who would not be abused, malnourished, homeless, education-less, and love-less if a license to procreate was required. You probably know someone who did get pregnant at a young age. She had her child between ages 15 and 19. Her parents are supporting her and her child. She has no hopes of a future. Her boyfriend either insisted that it wasn't his, or ran away from her when her belly started to swell. She spent her pregnancy alone. Her child will not benefit from Mr. Macho not wearing a condom. As much as I'm against government regulation (I think that at a certain maturity level, people should be let free to fly like birds, not held captive in the system like rats and used for experimentation), someone needs to intervene to reduce the number of unwanted pregnancies, teenage or otherwise.

No, abortion is not the answer, and it is not a form of birth control. I personally am pro-life, but pro-choice where others are concerned. Women should be able to make their own decisions once they get pregnant. Other people just have to understand that abortion is not birth control. It's a last resort.

I'm going to tell you a very short story now. This is not about me. If you know me, then you know for a fact that this story is not about me. Once upon a time, there lived a young Catholic girl. She had several brothers and sisters. Her family was somewhat loving, but was definitely not there for her when she most needed them. As she grew up, she became a mother figure to her brothers and sisters, feeding them and taking care of them. Her mother proved to be better as a friend than as a mother. As time passed, she grew up to be a very beautiful young woman. Through her high school years she dated different boys and screwed around a lot. She was very popular with the boys, but not in a good way.

When she turned sixteen, she met a very attractive basketball player who was "goo-goo ga-ga" over her. He would look at her and sigh. So she decided to try dating him for a while. The story says that they waited for one year before they started to have sex, but different, more accurate sources say that they hopped into bed much sooner than that. She tempted him with her forbidden fruit, and he couldn't resist. She was never worried about anything, having been taught by her mother about the fun of a carefree life, so they never used any protection at all and, you guessed it: she got pregnant.

At seventeen years old she was pregnant, with no clues as to where her life was going. She ended up marrying the basketball player who now works at Telemarketing at night and goes to school in the day. She was a waitress for a while, but quickly quit that job, mainly because it meant that she had to get off of her beautiful little butt and work. She currently is in Nursing School.

Now you are probably thinking, "So what's so bad about that? She got pregnant, they got married, and they are both in school. They are obviously working toward something better." How they deal with the baby is what is wrong. They ignore the poor little guy. The father's mother takes care of him most of the time because neither parent will take responsibility. I was told by a very dependable source that she puts more effort into her tan than taking care of her baby.

This true story is why the government should be able to regulate pregnancy. And this is not the only time I've seen it happen. I saw several people from my high school be surprised with an unplanned pregnancy, many of them because they didn't use condoms or didn't want to get on the pill because they were too worried about forgetting to take it. Little details change from story to story, of course. The mother may be very book-smart, but also very unattractive. She may be a smoker, or she might not even know who the father is. Some stories are about the father being abusive, even though he insists that he still loves her. He could be a dead-beat dad with no intention of ever paying for the child that he took part in creating, or even worse: he could claim that the child is not his. It's the same story retold over and over again. And the one to suffer the most is the child.

I was discussing this with my mother and she says that the government has no right to regulate pregnancy. Instead, there should be parenting classes: this is how you change a diaper, feed, clothe, teach your child as he/she grows, love your child. I agree with her on this. There should be parenting classes so you learn to be the best parent possible before the child even comes into this world. But how many teenagers want to go to even more classes about something that was completely unintentional? I don't know many.

So, do we need the government to impose a license on those of us who want to have children? We as a society are not quite ready for this step, and probably won't be for years, or even decades. The government already does regulate a hell of a lot. But eventually, in order for our children to grow up happy and healthy, I think yet another license would not be a bad idea. In fact, if we could decide together what would be necessary to obtain this license, possibly through voting, I think it would be a great idea. But in time. Not now, in time.

Emily Vacanti is a Collegian columnist.

Write for ed-op!

Small risk, big payoff

I have become part of the newest American craze, (besides Latin musical stars) On-line investing. I plunked down 200 of my hard earned dollars in an on-line investing account, so I can try to make some big bucks. I realize that 200 clams isn't much, but if you buy the right penny stock at the right time, all hell could break loose. It seems that every American has the same unending quest to be rich. I am trying to achieve this goal in the easiest and least messy way: through pure laziness.

Brian Lohnes

On-line investing used to actually require people to invest; you needed stockbrokers and other people who dressed in suits worth more than some small countries. Now all you need is a PC (or a Mac, man you guys are touchy about that) and you are off. The Internet allows an incomprehensible amount of information to be available at your fingertips. Previously, you had to pay for stuff like this, now it's like they can't give it away fast enough. Seizing this opportunity to become a knowledgeable investor, I went and looked at some charts, projections, and "industry news" and discovered I had no idea what I had gotten myself into.

That's when I hopped on the phone to call "dear old dad" and get some of the advice I needed. After I asked him a few questions, it soon became apparent to him and me that I might as well have set my money on fire, because at least then I would have been able to see it disappear in front of me. To his credit, he didn't discourage me or tell me I had made a mistake (although I know he wanted to), but he wished me the best and off I went.

I narrowed my search to an industry I wanted to look at. Being a car nut, I looked at the automotive industry. Since stock in "real" or even "reputable" companies is expensive, I went looking for the cheapest little stock out there. I found a few that were in my price range, which is about 2 bucks a share max. These were all looking promising until I found what I was really looking for: a penny stock. Ah yes, the golden egg of investing, buy a whole crap load of this little faltering company and when they get their act together watch you money multiply like horny rabbits. The only problem with the penny stock is that they are also high risk because if they really bottom out, they are taken off the market and your money will be ancient history. I can't say that I am frightened by this prospect because it's not like the Lohnes' family fortune is in my control, but I will still be pretty pissed if my 200 bucks goes the way of the Titanic.

I think that my personality type is perfect for this sort of venture. I don't get rattled much except when I am involved in things that concern the Republican Club or Parking Services. Basically, if you come by my room, the odds are I will be watching Jenny Jones rather than the Dow Jones. I am in no danger of flinging myself off the second floor balcony of my building or going on any kind of rampage, unless you count a whining and pouting fit as a "rampage." If we have a "Black (Insert your favorite weekday here)" I'll sleep in, end of story.

The thought of striking it rich is what draws many people to the stock market these days. The thought of "striking it a few bucks ahead" is my main goal. Getting rich seems to be the theme of the late 1990s, and I don't really believe in it. If someone wants to "get rich" they should buy the, "Carlton Sheets Guide to Real Estate" that is always on TV infomercials and swindle some people out of their hard earned money. It is one thing to invest and make a conscious informed and somewhat researched decision, but it is another to lie and cheat your way into money.

I have had only a very limited experience with the stock market, and most of my expertise comes from an economics class in high school where we had to chart a few stocks. Peter Lynch I am not, but even I've had to start somewhere. I am not a gambling man. I have lost every bet except for one in my entire life, and that is not an exaggeration. That's why I am not putting a lot of stock in my stocks.

Investing isn't gambling unless you are completely uninformed about what you are doing, and that is the one thing I have going for me right now. I know the companies I am investing in: where they are, what they make and how much money they have lost over the past few years. Lost is the key word in that last sentence. My money is going into losers in the hope that they will come back, for a small time investor like myself or other people our age it's really the only way to fly. It is pointless to buy one share of Amazon.com for one hundred and fifty bucks because the money is in the little guys.

I strongly urge you to check this stuff out and maybe even try to make some money. Sure there is a risk, but hey, you eat at the D.C. every day and that is one hell of a risk. There is a great opportunity at this time in history to try to get a piece of the pie, why not dig in?

Brian Lohnes is a Collegian columnist.

Doonesbury BY GARRY TRUDEAU

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majcrowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Fridays during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

PAM FITZPATRICK / COLLEGIAN

Earning the daily bread

A student enjoys a dinner at the Kosher Dining Hall.

Finding Modesty in a sex-crazed world

Sex. Torah. Relationships. Modesty. Study. Singing. Leadership skills. Listening skills. Meetings. Ruach (soul, spirit). Other people. Ourselves. This is just a slight sampling of the experiences offered at the 1999 Schusterman Hillel International Student Leaders Assembly.

Approximately 400 Jewish student leaders came from across the world, from as far as Berlin and Siberia, to participate in this conference.

Personally, I found this to be one of the most powerful, self-enlightening weeks I have had the opportunity to treasure. Yes, I learned all the things that are expected from an organization's leadership conference. There was so much more, though.

We were addressed by many speakers from a variety of backgrounds and ideologies, such as Wendy Shalit, the author of A Return to Modesty.

Shalit spoke about looking at modesty not as prudery, but as a natural instinct which preserves our identities and the romance in our world. Whether or not I agree with her is not the issue, but she certainly forced me to think.

As a member of the college community I am continually bombarded by images and talk of sex. Not to say this is bad, but it is a factor of life which must have some type of effect on me. What does it mean when getting dressed up means putting on the skimpiest shirt we have in order to reveal as much as possible? Just something to think about.

"The Bible wants husbands and wives who lust after each other. The real reason that God commands us to dress modestly is so that the natural power of the human body to attract remains intact," is how Rabbi Shmuley Boteach, another speaker, discusses modesty in his book, Kosher Sex: A Recipe for Passion and Intimacy.

So how does all of this relate to me and to Hillel, which is the organization that put this all together? I have learned that my world, my life, is composed of religious and secular elements. So how do I find a happy medium? How do I dress to impress, but maintain my modesty? How do I attend classes, meetings, and social events all day and still find time to pray?

This is what I have been wondering since I left the conference. I have realized that part of being a leader is figuring out where I stand, not just on how to pray, but how to live.

Rebecca Russell is a UMass Student.

Intervention: where do we draw the line?

By Jeremy Goldberg
Collegian Correspondent

There is a saying that says: two Jews, three opinions. When it comes to politics and Israel, there is no scale ready to accommodate all the opinions. Living as a Jewish American (or American Jew, whichever you prefer) entitles you to an important duty: to always be aware of the news and issues that affect the culture of American society and, just as importantly, the culture of Israel.

Opinion; where we often find ourselves bumping heads when engaging in political discussion. Now an even finer line is drawn when it pertains to American Intervention into Israeli political affairs.

According to the Jerusalem Post Internet Edition of Sept. 29, 1999, President Clinton said that there is a real chance for negotiations between Israel and Syria and that we can't miss that chance.

The American government negotiates peace with people in countries that are enemies. However, some would find this to be due to the successes that have created the American ego. The USA is always to the rescue.

Is this statement by President Clinton accountable and realistic? It would seem so, but try again.

"I do not want to mislead anybody, for an agreement with Syria means very painful concessions on the Gulan Heights," Israeli Prime Minister Ehud Barak told the Jerusalem Post.

What does this mean to Israel and what does the Golan Heights mean to the United States? This is where a majority of Israeli citizens would not want the fine line to be stepped on.

So what can we say? What are we allowed to say? We Jewish Americans are supporting Israel from America with billions of dollars in attempts to help Israel's security forces, and ultimately its existence.

Jewish Americans definitely deserve to express their concerns and have an educated opinion. Indeed, we should educate others, both Jewish and non-Jewish in dialogue about the unfortunate middle-eastern relations.

So when should these opinions be put to rest allowing Israel its space?

After spending a good year living in Israel, I can say that my priorities evolved and my ideas changed. Israel needs support, needs our attention and needs Jews everywhere to be aware and opinionated. But this usually goes so far along the fine line of interaction. Israel does not need constant political intervention with its land reparations and negotiations. Israel may only be 51 years old, but it is not incompetent.

A Brand New World

By Hayyim Rothman
Collegian Staff

This week we began the Jewish month of Cheshvan. All the high holy days have concluded for the year, and we now begin our work, spiritual, emotional and physical again.

On that note, last week we began the yearly cycle of weekly Torah readings again, and this week we are in "parsha Noah." Most of us have heard the story: flood comes, world is destroyed, Noah and family start anew. But now, beyond the text's historical reading, let us find its lesson towards our personal growth.

We read that G-d "sees" the world and it is corrupt. Following this, "He" commands Noah to build an ark ("taivah" in Hebrew) to save himself. The Midrash (homiletical commentaries) states that this ark took many years to build, and in this time Noah never attempted to teach his contemporaries proper conduct.

Therefore, says the Baal Shem Tov, the word "taivah (ark)" also means "word." Other Jewish mystics teach that the soul has 3 garments: thought, speech, and action. Noah's relationship with G-d and the world existed in a state of solitude, as we learn from the Midrash.

This can be characterized as "thought" as thought is restricted within an individual. Subsequently, he enters the "taivah," the "word," the aspect of speech. The Baal Shem Tov also teaches that every letter in a word has "worlds, souls and Divinity." This means that each word is a vessel (world), with a "funnel" (soul), through which Divinity enters and rests in the vessel.

Once in a vessel, this Divine energy can have a practical application in our world because the vessel acts as an intermediary. Thus in the ark, Noah takes responsibility for his family and the animals, the divine energy in his thought is contained in the vessel of his words and is now able to interact with the outside.

Finally, the Divine influx contained in "taivah" (ark) is brought into action, is then complete and accessible to the world. Four after months in the ark, Noah disembarks on mount Ararat, the world as he knew it is gone, but on the other hand, there is a whole new world for him to begin.

How does this apply to us? Sometimes we are caught up in ourselves. We even believe we are serving G-d, simply and alone. The Torah tells us that Noah was righteous only in his generation, because he remained an island and did not make the world better.

Therefore Noah (and ourselves) enter a "taivah (ark)," that is we take our spiritual service to the level of speech, bringing it one step into the world; this is analogous to the concepts of teaching and of prayer, among other things.

Having so created a "vessel" filled with divinity, we are then able to use this vessel, bringing our initial spiritual state into the realm of action.

This is making every action, both the "sacred" and "secular" a part of our service of G-d, in this was the whole world is included in our being and in our journey. When we reach this state what do we find? We find first that our level is infinitely higher than in our initial solitude and secondly we find an entire world, completely new, begging to be explored from an organization's leadership conference. There was so much more, though.

We were addressed by many speakers from a variety of backgrounds and ideologies, such as Wendy Shalit, the author of A Return to Modesty.

Shalit spoke about looking at modesty not as prudery, but as a natural instinct which preserves our identities and the romance in our world. Whether or not I agree with her is not the issue, but she certainly forced me to think.

As a member of the college community I am continually bombarded by images and talk of sex. Not to say this is bad, but it is a factor of life which must have some type of effect on me. What does it mean when getting dressed up means putting on the skimpiest shirt we have in order to reveal as much as possible? Just something to think about.

"The Bible wants husbands and wives who lust after each other. The real reason that God commands us to dress modestly is so that the natural power of the human body to attract remains intact," is how Rabbi Shmuley Boteach, another speaker, discusses modesty in his book, Kosher Sex: A Recipe for Passion and Intimacy.

So how does all of this relate to me and to Hillel, which is the organization that put this all together? I have learned that my world, my life, is composed of religious and secular elements. So how do I find a happy medium? How do I dress to impress, but maintain my modesty? How do I attend classes, meetings, and social events all day and still find time to pray?

This is what I have been wondering since I left the conference. I have realized that part of being a leader is figuring out where I stand, not just on how to pray, but how to live.

Rebecca Russell is a UMass Student.

Cabinet Approves the Close of West Bank Outposts

JERUSALEM – An Israeli cabinet committee Sunday gave Prime Minister Ehud Barak a free hand to close Jewish outposts that have sprung up on the West Bank in defiance of the law in recent years.

It remained unclear how many of the 42 new Jewish settlements with their 540 structures would survive Barak's decision, which is expected in the coming days or weeks.

But the fact that the outposts may be forcibly evacuated, including some that are no more than a few mobile homes parked on a remote hilltop, represents a rare setback for the settler movement, according to the anti-settlement group Peace Now.

"The settlers for so many years were given free rein and really substantial economic subsidies," said Didi Remez, spokesman for Peace Now. "So any setback and any curbing of the settlement drive is something very important, and it's a first."

The Palestinians, who hope to establish a state on the West Bank in the next year, say that all 160 or so long-standing Jewish settlements in the West Bank are illegal and must be removed. They also have expressed sharp opposition to this Israeli government's policy, unchanged in Barak's three months in office – of expanding existing settlements.

Since Barak took power in early July, the construction of nearly 2,000 new housing units in the West Bank has been approved, a figure that represents an acceleration from the rate of approvals under the previous government of Benjamin Netanyahu.

In Sunday's meeting of the Israeli government's ministerial committee on settlements, the first since Barak took office, no action was taken to dampen the pace of expansion of long-standing settlements in the West Bank. But the committee did leave it to Barak to decide the fate of several dozen newer outposts – most of which have sprung up since the signing of the Wye River accord in Maryland a year ago.

After the signing, then foreign minister Ariel Sharon urged Jewish settlers to burn to "grab" hilltops and create "facts on the ground" before Palestinians claimed the land.

Courtesy Los Angeles Times

Finding Spirituality in Japan: A Jew in the Sakura

By Dan Kapner
Collegian Correspondent

KOBE, JAPAN – New aromas, found in hidden narrow streets; like tatami or pickled plums; unique sounds, like the cranking of a man-pulled rickshaw; architecture which captures the intellect, like Horyuji or Ginkakuji – living in a country far from home can offer exotic moments, those resembling nothing of home. And when one stumbles upon something reminiscent of home, he or she may truly appreciate his home life.

I was fortunate to experience both the exotic and the familiar at the High Holiday services last month in Kobe, Japan. It was an experience different than any I'd had before, and yet I was left with a feeling I thought only home could offer.

As I wanted to attend High Holiday services this year, after learning about the Kobe synagogue on the web, I called for information regarding services. I spoke with the Kobe synagogue's president, who informed me that for a minimal student donation I could attend, partake in Kosher meals, and even sleep on a futon in the shul.

Since I am interested in learning about the history of Jews in Japan, I inquired whether he could inform me of the history of Jews in the area, to which he told me to come early and while he cooks and I wash dishes, he will give me a lesson on the community.

Accordingly, I arrived at about 4:30 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 10. My impression of the building was positive. The synagogue, Ohel Shelomoh, was built in 1970, in a very nice section of Kobe.

Kobe has been known for a large international community throughout history, and the neighborhood happens to be in a part of town which was once the only area foreigners were permitted to reside in.

The synagogue's interior and exterior are pretty, with hard wood, plants, and pictures. A poster I particularly appreciated was of Japanese teenagers floating in the Dead Sea, a Japanese travel agency ad.

After entering, I soon learned that their way of running things is more laid back than expected.

Bruce Benson arrived wearing sweat pants and a raggedy shirt. Rather than acknowledging the previous arrangement concerning the history, he focused on fixing the beer machine, which he gleefully told me about over the phone. The synagogue happens to be the only synagogue in the world with a draft beer machine. Bruce soon changed his clothes, and transformed from a grass-roots barman to a clumsy professor type.

As people arrived, I noticed that almost everyone were either Israeli jewelry vendors from Osaka, English teachers, or business people attending a week-long medical conference in Kobe. I met people from America, Australia, Canada, Israel, and New Zealand. At least 3/4 of the attendants were Japanese. More than 60 people came for the first night.

Since the service was Sephardic, there were many beautiful melodies, most of which I did not know. The Israelis sang with passion, offering the service much energy I had not previously experienced (besides a Chassidic Ashkenazi service in Betar, Israel).

Dinner was good, but since more people came than expected, it went quickly. It was a mixture of Israeli and Japanese food, with fish, chopped pumpkin, Israeli salad, and other unique foods.

The Jewish community in Kobe is composed of a diverse group. I met people who have lived and taught English in Japan for more than twenty years, I met young people who just graduated from college and are now teaching English for the year. I met people in different sorts of business, people with different religious affiliations.

Although there remained a dichotomy between the Sephardic and the Ashkenazi practices, people happily adapted to the customs of the synagogue. And while the Sephardim almost exclusively spoke Hebrew and the Ashkenazi English, I realized that there was a merging power taking place. We were Jews in a place thought to be the last place one could find a Jewish experience.

Although this issue was not addressed, people were smiling, drinking, and enjoying the New Year together with the mixture of the West, Middle East, and Far East. It is under this same context that the synagogue offers a meal after every single service. While in a city one would think lived no Jews, it promotes one of the most important values of Judaism, community.

After dinner, I spent time talking over beer with Benson, who has been the synagogue's president of nearly 20 years. He told me that the first synagogue in Japan was in Nagasaki. I later read that it was named Beth Israel Synagogue and erected in 1894. I also learned that the Jewish community had about 100 families originally from Russia, many of whom escaped from pogroms.

Nevertheless, Jews arrived in Japan before this date. There was a Jewish community in Yokohama during the late 1860's. The foreigners' cemetery in Yokohama has tombstones with many languages, including Hebrew.

While these were the earliest active Jewish communities, some people believe Jews traveled to Japan much earlier. Benson made a statement implying that along with the Imperial family, the Japanese came from the Ten Lost Tribes of Israel. He said that Emperor Showa's brother, who visited the synagogue, told him that throughout history the imperial family has been circumcised on the 8th day after birth. His speculation has been made by many people, many of whom Japanese. Nevertheless, it is mostly just an interesting fantasy.

During the course of his entertainment, Benson offered to bring me to the Jewish cemetery in Kobe, where we took pictures of Jewish graves.

On the second day of Rush Hashana, I awoke at about 8 o'clock on my Japanese futon in the social hall. Other people continued to sleep through the loud noise of the early crowd shuffling in.

About 30 people came for the second day's services. These services also went well, with much liveliness. I was inspired by reciting "the Shema," the Jewish prayer proclaiming monotheism. In the middle of a Shinto/ Buddhist/ Secular country I was able to reach out to the one same God I have always embraced. I was moved by my mobile stability. I could appreciate interesting and somewhat foreign services, with prayers known to me but never phrased in the same way.

I guess this is what it means to be in a foreign country. To become a child again, laid bare before the new experience, re-learning everything in patterns never considered, and then finding oneself redefining the familiar, the home.

Daniel Ari Kapner is a UMass student.

The Kobe Synagogue is the only one in the world to have a draft beer machine.

DAN KAPNER / COLLEGIAN

Inside the Kobe Synagogue.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

Tuesday, October 12, 1999

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

NIN Still Far From Fragile

By Kevin Manahan
Collegian Staff

NINE INCH NAILS
The Fragile
Nothing/Interscope

To everyone who is complaining about the fact that Trent has gotten too mellow with this latest release: quit yer bitchin'!

Upon listening to the first few tracks of Nine Inch Nails' latest release, The Fragile, one would think that frontman (in every sense of the term) Trent Reznor hasn't matured one iota in the six years it's been since their last LP, The Downward Spiral. The first 30 minutes or so sound like more of the same stuff — complete with inventive, but repetitive lyrics and rage that seems to be directed at no one and nothing in particular. Even though the first single, "We're In This Together," sounds like vintage NIN, it's difficult to say that Reznor is taking the band in a new direction. If you want more material that sounds like The Downward Spiral most of The Fragile should satisfy you.

But summing up The Fragile as more of the same, and dismissing it as something that has been done before, not just by Nine Inch Nails but several other copycat bands (Gravity Kills, Filter, etc.) would not do the album justice. While on the surface this double disc outing may sound like a lot of noise and superficial screaming, there is more than there appears to be behind all the thickly layered guitars. This is an album that must be studied, scrutinized and dissected before a verdict can be reached.

Most of the exceptional material on The Fragile is contained at the end of the first disc and on the second disc — leaving the weaker material right up front. The opening track "Somewhat Damaged" is indicative of Reznor's stereotype of the angst-ridden/Goth boy that has plagued him since 1989's Pretty Hate Machine: "Oh, look at me. I'm sooo tortured. I am filled with hate and rage and pain. I think I'll go retire to my room and write dark poetry for the rest of the evening... Blah, blah, blah..." But what Reznor lacks in terms of lyrical originality, he makes up for musically. Playing almost all of the instruments by himself, Reznor appears to have vastly improved his skills as a musician. The glam-influenced guitars are the best things about "The Day the World Went Away," and the danceable drum and bass rhythm of "The Wretched" would be obvious if it weren't lost under all the thrash.

By the time you get to "We're in This Together" it's hard not to see how NIN made their way into the mainstream. Their (once) unique brand of industrial-pop was in many ways more accessible than other industrial acts such as Skinny Puppy and Front 242. With "We're in This Together" and the title track, "The Fragile" it appears that Reznor is achieving some lyrical focus. Slowly, though. So at first, you won't notice that he is screaming about something in particular, and not some random, abstract emotion.

On the instrumental track "Just Like You Imagined," Trent takes the opportunity to flex some of is musical muscle, along with the help of bandmate Danny Lohner, former King Crimson guitarist Adrian Belew, and Mike Garson (most recently famous for working with Billy Corgan on the Stigmata soundtrack). Trent gets into a violent groove with "Even Deeper," and evokes The Wall-era Pink Floyd with "Pilgrimage," which makes sense since The Wall's co-producer Bob Ezrin shares production credits with Reznor and Alan Moulder.

In what is arguably the best song on the album, "No You Don't," Trent takes a few stabs at former friend Marilyn Manson: "Teeth in the necks of everyone you know/you keep on sucking 'till the blood won't flow...and just for the record/just so you know/I did not believe/that you could sink so low." In the wake of all the jaded strings it's actually surprising to see a song as beautiful as "La Mer" come out of this album. With Denise Milfort's quiet vocals and Ministry's Bill Rieflin on drums, the song shines through the rest of the material before it chokes and drowns in guitar noise. Consistent with the concept of the album, beauty doesn't have a chance of survival.

When Reznor isn't screaming, he does have an impressive vocal range, as he proved while collaborating with Tori Amos on "Past the Mission." He displays it here in "The Great Below" which segues from "La Mer" smoothly. "The Great Below" closes the first disc in a "Goodbye Cruel World" kind of way, preparing us for Act II.

The second disc is amazing. That is, if you can make it that far. "The Way Out Is Through" is heavy on instrumentation and light on words. "Into the Void" has a killer hook, but is a turn toward narcissistic blandness lyrically. Thankfully, all is saved by Trent's scorn for the white/middle-class trendies of the record buying population with "Where is Everybody?"

It isn't good enough for Reznor to bash Mr. Manson just once. Manson is scum that must be kicked when he is down with "Starfuckers, Inc." Trent's contempt for the shock-rock rip-off artiste gets downright nasty with lyrics like: "My god sits in the back of a limousine/My god comes in a wrapper of cellophane/My god pouts on the cover of a magazine/My god's a shallow little bitch trying to make the scene." He even throws in a Carly Simon impression a la "You're so Vain."

"Complication" is another dissonant instrumental track. "I'm Looking Forward to Joining You, Finally" is one of the best pieces of lyric writing that Reznor has ever penned. With a quiet, impending doom ambiance it is one of the few tender moments the album possess-

Turn to NINE page 7

COURTESY OF NOTHING RECORDS, LIMITED

The more things change, the more they stay the same, as seen in Reznor's latest work The Fragile.

A Dimly Lit Evening of One-Acts

By: Julie Burrell
Collegian Correspondent

An Evening of One Acts
Curtain Theater
October 7, 8, 9

An Evening of One-Acts at the Curtain Theater, displayed some notably talented directors and actors, and offered an extraordinarily diverse repertoire, exhibiting the talent of the UMass theater department. There were some funny and touching moments, but this was the exception, and hardly consistent throughout the evening.

Our Man in Madras, a play by Gert Hoffman, and directed by Andrew C. Cappelli, started the evening off with a social commentary on the apathy of Americans, in particular, the American corporate world. Despite the serious undertones, the play was punctuated with funny moments, as a businessman chats with his man, Bob, in Madras, India, on the state of the company there. But, as we soon learn, a bomb has gone off in that area, and Bob is holed up in a basement, trying to bear the after affects of the nuclear explosion, and at the same time, apparently trying to appease his boss, who is concerned only with business. The indifference of the boss leads him to only chuckle when Bob's fingers and ears start to fall off, or when blood starts filling his mouth, making it difficult for a business conversation to be conducted.

Despite some humorous moments, Our Man in Madras was not, overall, very funny, or even attention getting. Only the vague desire to find out what body part was going to fall off of Bob next and the constant commotion caused by the secretary Jane loudly entering and exiting the set kept me from drifting away. This performance's monotony was one of the only reliable parts of the evening.

12:01, written and directed by student Nick Keenan examined the fears and strains placed on the relationship between a paranoid father and his daughter, and that daughter and her boyfriend, caused by the millennial problem, or the Y2K bug. The father, Richard, decides to pack up and move, along with his daughter, to another state so as to avoid the chaos and technology failure that he thinks will inevitably occur after the year 2000 begins. His daughter Sandy is forced to choose between moving and learning to survive in a technology-free world with her father, who has raised her alone since childhood, or staying with Eric, the boy she has recently met, and apparently fallen in love with.

All of the actors executed their roles with ease, despite some awkward moments that came with sudden and all too violent mood swings, especially on the part of Meghan Frank as Sandy, who seemed to change from happy to angry without any reason. Keenan's script started out promising, but it soon turned trite, and made a desperate fumbling towards poignancy at the breakup of father and daughter, which never quite produced the desired effect, but

Turn to ACT, page 8

Warehouse Selectors Needed!

If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S, the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion.

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS*

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 13th
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

Looking for the perfect PART-TIME job?

We take OCMP

BUFFALO Wings DOMINO'S PIZZA
AMHERST/HADLEY
256-8911
Hours: Sun-Weds. 11 am-3am
Thurs.-Sat. 11 am-4 am

$2 OFF ANY PIZZA VALID 11AM-12:30 PM
$3 OFF ANY LARGE OR EXTRA LARGE PIZZA VALID 11AM-12:30 PM
$4 OFF ANY EXTRA LARGE PIZZA VALID 11AM-12:30 PM

Medium Cheese Pizza $7.49
Large Cheese Pizza $9.49
Extra Cheese Pizza $11.49

HELP WANTED : Pays $60 to $120 Per Shift

BRUISED BODY?

Don't let the tow truck drag your wounded vehicle to their pet place. Demand Dana! We offer a lifetime warranty on all our body shop work.

DANA BODY SHOP
968 Bridge Road, Northampton, Mass.
586-7250

A Fair Warning For Pez Fans

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Internet Site of the Week: http://www.pez.com

Yes, I am referring you to the Pez site. Yes, Pez is that oddly addictive, poor quality sugar candy, dispensed through popular culture representations, including Star Wars: The Phantom Menace. Collect all 12 now!! However, that's not why I'm sending you there.

Apparently, Pez has decided to cause a minor uproar over people violating their copyrights on other Pez websites. Now, I'm not exactly sure how many Pez sites are out there, but seriously get a life. Here's a direct quote from the "legal" section of the website, "You may NOT use the PEZ® mark (or any other registered trademark belonging to Pez Candy, Inc. or its affiliates) on your website or your business in any way, shape or form. Usages such as THE PEZ STORE, THE PEZ MUSEUM, THE PEZ COLLECTOR, THE PEZ TRADER, THE PEZ FANATIC, THE PEZ CAR are specifically prohibited, though the above-list is not meant to be exclusive.

Well, then I'll be sure not to publish my Pez Fanatic site after all. In addition to these outlandish demands, Pez is also prohibiting people from putting the Pez name in Metatags. Metatags are essentially hidden text messages planted in web pages so that search engines like Yahoo! Or Lycos can recognize the site's content. If they're hidden, how the hell is Pez going to find out? If there were so much violation, then I would think that the company would be happy because they were so popular. Otherwise, this is ridiculous.

In news, which I find particularly exciting, the new Palm Pilot VII is set to launch on a national scale, and with it, the promise of wireless access to the Internet. Amazon.com recently bought Convergence Corp. in order to take advantage of the new technology. Amazon, the Web's leading e-commerce site, plans to set-up a wireless version of its current site, available exclusively through the new Palm Pilot model.

Yahoo has recently announced a move that seems a bit too convenient. The site has recently launched a new design and features to make online purchasing easier and quicker. In its Yahoo Shopping area, Shopping.Yahoo.com, they will offer "Wallet" technology, which helps consumers store their credit card, billing and shipping information for use at more than 6,000 online retailers. I don't know about you, but the only place I want to store my credit card is in my wallet.

In a slightly different credit card story on the Net, the proliferation of "affinity" credit cards, cards associated with a specific group or organization, is leading to a similar business in Internet access services. H2O Networks said its first customer for a customized ISP will be The Black World Today. This type of customized service includes front page content, support pages, e-mail and chat rooms using an organization's branding. An April survey found more than 47 percent of U.S. online households would be willing to switch to an Internet access service provided by an affinity group or company if they were given an economic incentive (such as subsidized prices, frequent-flier miles, or rebates on products). The Great migration has begun. Instead of sitting in front of their T.V. screen, people have moved ten feet to their computer and the Net.

A recent study shows the heaviest users of the World Wide Web are also avid consumers of traditional media. According to research from Arbitron NewMedia released recently, avid Web users frequently listen to radio and watch television, as surf the Web. The data also shows that Internet users watch less television than the overall population The most popular network television program among heavy Internet users polled was, "The Simpsons". Continuing the trend of traditional media's move on-line, The New York Daily News has posted 2 million photos from its archives for sale on the Web. The new site, located at Dailynewspix.com, is now the world's largest searchable photo database. The archive includes photos such as the 1928 picture of a person dying in the electric chair as well as a young Joe DiMaggio. Copies of the News' photos for personal use can be ordered at the rate of $50 for an 8-by-10 inch, and $75 for an 11-by 14-inch print. Commercial rights use can also be arranged.

Of course, the Net guys want a piece of the regular media action too. Microsoft's online magazine Slate has been given the green light to produce a pilot for a Seattle, Washington public TV station. KCTS also produced the Emmy award-winning "Bill Nye the Science Guy series." A spokesman for Microsoft said "SlateTV" will be a 30-minute weekly program focused on politics and culture, and will be hosted by Slate editor Michael Kinsley. The show will also incorporate interactive elements. The pilot is expected to be complete within eight weeks and it will be offered to PBS programmers at an upcoming tradeshow.

A recent study shows that more people are buying computers via the Net. According to the study, thirty percent of the PCs bought in the past six months were purchased through the Internet or directly from the manufacturer via a Web site, catalog, or 1-800 phone number. This is up from a finding six months ago that put the same number at 22 percent. While I'm not one to speculate, it seems as if the tax-free Internet domain is a good way to save a hundred bucks or so on a new PC.

In some more Internet consolidation, a.k.a. merger mania, Travelocity.com and Preview Travel announced that they will merge, thereby creating the third largest e-commerce site on the Internet. The two companies will reportedly generate nearly $500 million in travel-related sales, including plane tickets, hotel reservations, and cruises, for the first half of 1999. The resulting Travelocity.com announced two marketing deals to promote the merger. The first was with AOL – a multimillion dollar, five year advertising and marketing deal, including guaranteed payments plus revenue sharing in ticket sales and advertising revenues. The second was with Yahoo, who will also invest in the new company.

AOL has also made a move to solidify its "You've Got" trademark... great. With the release of AOL 5.0, the long awaited software incorporating online photo storage agreement with Eastman Kodak has arrived. The new features in the 5.0 release include "You've Got Pictures", giving consumers access to Kodak-processed photos uploaded to the Internet; a new Internet search feature, and an interactive calendar and scheduling program. A blitz krieg of promotion will be hitting the general populace real soon. Trust me.

Finally, Internet World convened again last week in New York. This is the seventh annual meeting of the Fall Internet World, which consists of more than 700 exhibitors and 350 speakers. It is estimated that 45,000 Internet professionals attended the event through Friday.

■ nine

(continued from page 6

es.

"The Big Come Down" is just that — yet another self-absorbed tirade that has little to offer, save for some funky experimenting with the stringed instruments. "All I Do" takes the sonic experimentation to an almost ridiculous level. Slightly easier on the ear than fax machine/modem tones, the song gets interesting toward the end through its creative use of vocal overdubs. The album appropriately closes with another instrumental track, "Ripe (With Decay)." The acoustic guitar, violin and piano build to a cacophonic crescendo, then find some resemblance of melody as they fade out over Trent's sighs. Some tape effects, an unplugged electric and feedback take over and abruptly end the album.

Trent received a good deal of help with this album — aside from all the guest musicians David Bowie, Curve's Toni Halliday and video director Mark Romanek ("Closer") take "thank you" credits among others. Bandmates Charlie Clousser and Danny Lohner share writing credits with Reznor on a few songs, and master mixer Alan Moulder (The Downward Spiral, The Smashing Pumpkins' Mellon Collie and the Infinite Sadness) is responsible for helping to craft The Fragile's intricate sound.

Trent Reznor has not strayed far at all from Nine Inch Nails' original formula. But if formula is all you see at first, you have not even scratched the surface of an album whose meaning must be gouged out forcefully using sharp objects. B+

Last Week's Top Movie Grosses

Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Hollywood executives must be sitting back laughing at the utter simplicity of this whole movie-making thing. One plot and three different lead roles have lead to over $30M million in box office revenues. The story: a person is falsely accused and convicted of a crime that they did not commit, then searches for the truth, only to be chased down by Tommy Lee Jones. Plug Harrison Ford in there and you get $18M million gross... outstanding. Plug Wesley Snipes in there and you get $5M million... significantly less, but not bad. Plug Ashley Judd in there and you have the top movie at the box office for the third consecutive week.

For the third time in as many weeks, Double Jeopardy reigned supremte at the box office. Double Jeopardy fell only 20 percent from its previous week (that's less than the 2e percent it fell from week 1 to week 2) and collected $13.6 million. This makes Jeopardy the first three-weak holdover since The Sixth Sense. Apparently, people find the idea of killing their spouses without being held legally responsible extremely appealing as the film is showing very strong legs and is well on it's way to $100 million.

Ironically, the film that Double Jeopardy edged was the Harrison Ford romantic thriller Random Hearts. The movie, which also stars Kristin Scott Thomas, collected $13.1 million on 2697 screens. That's a disappointing $4857 per-screen average, which continues to show Harrison Ford's weakness as a romantic lead. See: Sabrina, Six Days, Seven Nights.

The George Clooney, Mark Wahlberg vehicle, Three Kings, which has received the best reviews of any film in the top ten outside of American Beauty, was next. And while those reviews didn't help the movie open big, they are helping Three Kings now. The movie fell a small 2e percent from last week's $15.8 million to gross $11.7 million over the weekend. Come Oscar time, people will be comparing this to L.A. Confidential, which followed a similar box office pattern, and finished with $64.6 domestic million gross. Right now, Three Kings has grossed $32.4 million total.

American Beauty continues to dominate the per-screen average box office category. The movie averaged $7,304 on 122e screens for a weekend gross of $9.2 million. That's about 500 more screens than the Oscar shoe-in had last week, which translates into a 35 percent drop-off in per-screen averags. As of now, there is no word whether or not that will earn the film whose cumulative gross stands at $30.8 million, more screens next week.

The "Saturday Night Live" full length feature skit, Superstar finished fourth. On only 1945 screens the film managed to collect $9 million dollars for a per-screen averages of $3,652. That's about a half million less than A Night at the Roxbur made when it opened last year. Why? How? I don't know. I simply implore people to stop encouraging them this is not funny.

Our old friend Big (1,400 screens) appears next, $6.1 million for a third drop. $243 million there's not much more that can be said about this one, except, wow.

Sixth place saw Blair [illegible] month run at the box office, $5.5 million. It's $35 million gross so far, translates into a 2.86 multiple, which below the averags 2.9. Not as many interested. Rush Hour [illegible] pler (855.00 million gross so far, $58.4

Page MOVIES

GENTLEMEN WANTED – for a challenging journey. Wisdom, character, and leadership required. Academic excellence a must. Only those seeking truth, integrity, and brotherhood need apply.

Honor and Recognition Will Be Your Reward

Alpha Sigma Phi – America's premier men's fraternity – is looking for new members for its UMass chapter.

We need visionaries to continue the legacy of the "Gentlemen's Fraternity." To shape the goals and mission of the chapter. And impact the lives of future generations of Alpha Sigs.

Are you that man?

Step up and make it happen. Find out more about all that ΑΣΦ has to offer at an upcoming informational meeting:

Tuesday, October 12 at 8:00pm in room 903, in the Student Union.

Tuesday, October 19 at 9:00pm in room 811-15, in the Student Union

ΑΣΦ
Founded – Yale University 1845
For more information: www.alphasigmaphi.org

Leadership. Scholarship. Brotherhood.

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SCHEDULE
9:00 AM - 4:30 PM CURRY HICKS CAGE

Pick-up Date	Sport	Date of Game/Opponent
Tue., Oct. 12, 1999	Hockey	Oct. 23, 1999 vs. Boston College
Mon., Oct. 18, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 3, 1999 vs. California All-Stars
	Hockey	Nov. 5, 1999 vs. UMass-Lowell
Tue., Oct. 26, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 10, 1999 vs. Converse All-Stars
Mon., Nov. 8, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 19, 1999 vs. Connecticut
Mon., Nov. 15, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 23, 1999 vs. Vermont
	Men's Basketball	Nov. 29, 1999 vs. Marshall
Mon., Nov. 22, 1999	Men's Basketball	Dec. 2, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Hockey	Dec. 3, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Dec. 6, 1999 vs. Villanova
Mon., Dec. 13, 1999	Hockey	Jan. 2, 2000 vs. St. Lawrence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 6, 2000 vs. St. Bonaventure
	Hockey	Jan. 7, 2000 vs. Providence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 8, 2000 vs. Fordham
	Hockey	Jan. 11, 2000 vs. Maine
Mon., Jan. 10, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 15, 2000 vs. Northeastern
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 20, 2000 vs. Dayton
	Hockey	Jan. 21, 2000 vs. Merrimack
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 22, 2000 vs. Rhode Island
Mon., Jan. 17, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 26, 2000 vs. Providence
Mon., Jan. 24, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 1, 2000 vs. Temple
	Hockey	Feb. 4, 2000 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 5, 2000 vs. Texas
Mon., Jan. 31, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 6, 2000 vs. UMass-Lowell
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 9, 2000 vs. La Salle
Mon., Feb. 7, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 19, 2000 vs. St. Joseph's
Mon., Feb. 14, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 25, 2000 vs. Boston College
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 29, 2000 vs. George Washington
Mon., Feb. 21, 2000	Hockey	March 4, 2000 vs. New Hampshire

DATES SUBJECT TO CHANGE
ID NEEDED TO PICK-UP TICKETS
OULD HAVE ALREADY BEEN P

TOMORROW

Career Information Expo

Wednesday, October 13, 1999
Campus Center Auditorium
10 a.m. -

Wondering . . . what you can do with your major?
who will hire you?
what's out there for jobs?

Get the answers to your questions!
Come to the Career Information Expo!

Meet a variety of employers at Expo 99!
They're coming to meet you!

Everyone is invited - all majors, all class years!

Presented by the Campus Career Network
www-ccnacad.umass.edu - tel. 545-2224

CREED, OUR LADY PEACE, OLEANDER

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Staff

Tsongas Arena
Oct. 2

LOWELL — Oleander front man Tom Flowers describes touring as an "emotionally taxing place that creates a very large opportunity of writing and growing in general." Flowers adds "touring separates you from everyone that you love" and allows you to "appreciate and enjoy the benefits of them."

The Northern California-based Oleander must be appreciating a heck of a lot recently with the nonstop touring surrounding the release of their major label debut, Ultimary Sun, earlier this year. This past weekend, the band took their odd, poisonous form of pop, just like the flowering plants that they took their name from, to the sold-out Tsongas Arena alongside the diverse lineup of Florida's Creed and Our Lady Peace hailing from Canada.

"I Walk Alone" was prefaced with telling the crowd not to take things for granted while "Down When I'm Loaded," the song that the band was discovered with offered an exhilarating showcase for these in the venue.

While Flowers may still be asking himself "Why I'm Here," the chart-topping single that was taken off his band's 1997 independent debut, the act's fans at Tsongas did not question Oleander's rising status. As the lead singer feels that it is "more exciting not to know what the future holds" the rest of us are tempted to know how they will progress musically deeming the songwriter's lyrics spring from his heart.

Our Lady Peace entered the arena with Automatic Flowers, but it was "Superman's Dead," their hit off of the near-platinum album Clumsy, that got the full house singing along and some members on the floor moshing. "Waited" and "Lying Awake" came off their late September release, Happiness... Is Not A Fish That You Can Catch. Before they moved into "Clumsy" to the roar of the crowd and then the band's present single "One Man Army" that is about, according to vocalist Raine Maida "about finding the courage to strip naked and set fire to all your inhibitions."

A burst of bright white light and intense screaming gave way to the appearance of Creed on stage with lead singer Scott Stapp continually hitting the stage on bended knee or standing atop the monitors in Eddie Vedder-like fashion. The title track off My Own Prison provided an energized crowd more reason to revel, while Stapp's vocals on "What's This Life For" barely cut through the screaming throngs of fans to end the band's set. Saved for the encore was radio hit "One" and current single "Higher" off the act's latest release Human Clay.

JAMES BARR / COLLEGIAN

Creed lead singer Scott Stapp displays the power of his vocal chords at Tsongas Arena last Saturday.

■ act

continued from page 6

instead managed to get me to slightly roll my daughter with such a dull boyfriend and such a paranoid father. The characters were simply uninteresting and unrealistic. The cast, however, made a wonderfully tight ensemble and despite their valiant efforts, they could not save the script.

Terminating, Or Lass Meine Schmerz ein Viehl Verloren Sein, Or Turbulence, written by Tony Kushner and directed by Naomi P. Bennett was the pinnacle of the evening, examining the relationship between a psychiatrist and her patient, and their respective lovers. Esther, the psychiatrist, terminated the professional relationship with Hendryk, her patient, because she has her "own problems," namely, trying to conceive, which is driving her into a deep depression. In the play, he has come back, asking for help with his thought disorder. Also, he propositions her. All the while he questions the ambivalence in human relationships, which is seen in Esther and Hendryk's association as well as their affairs with their lovers.

This was the shining star of the evening, with an excellent script, direction and cast. Art Govette as Hendryk was especially noteworthy in melding the character's brilliant insights into his and his doctor's life with neurotic ramblings. The entire cast was excellent, pulling of the difficult themes of the play with ease and never shying away from truthful portrayals of often painful subjects. Govette and Anya Zilberstein had tangible chemistry as the doctor and patient and Matthew Brandon Lang and Melissa Tendall portrayed their lovers, respectively, with the confidence and ethereal feeling that suited both parts perfectly.

Tone Clusters, directed by Tanya Kane-Parry and written by Joyce Carol Oates, reveals the aftermath of a violent murder, seen by two parents whose son has been accused of sexually assaulting, strangling and suffocating a 14-year-old next door neighbor. The parents, Frank and Emily, interrogated by a voice-over that seems sometimes like a talk show host, and other times like an angered police detective, vehemently defend their son against the trauma of July's Woodstock 99, where greed seemed to outstrip common sense on the business side and where the lawlessness of a small number of fans left a stain on the whole rock festival concept.

Goldenvoice, the maverick Los Angeles concert firm that hopes to make Coachella an annual event, helped refocus Saturday and Sunday on the positive aspects of the festival experience, thanks to a number of key decisions mainly designed to enhance fan comfort.

Musically, the standards were equally high. The emphasis was generally on quality and even sophistication, rather than just having a warm spot in your heart for rock concert where you didn't see a single Korn, Sugar Ray, Blink-182 or Kid Rock T-shirt in the crowd either day.

Despite an ample supply of mainstream pop-rock attractions, including Tool and Morrissey, the emphasis was on the imagination-rich world of electronic dance music. Though this music was chiefly housed in tents around the grounds, some outstanding dance acts got chances both days to step onto the two main stages – the Chemical Brothers and Underworld on Saturday and Moby on Sunday.

The only unwelcome intruder was the punishing sun, which pushed the temperature into triple digits both days.

California festival bucks Woodstock

By Robert Hilburns
Los Angeles Times

INDIO, Calif. – The Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival is just too unwieldy a title, so let's think of the ambitious two-day affair at the Empire Polo Field here as simply the Anti-Woodstock 99.

Yes, the weekend event which was highlighted by superbly revealing performances by Rage Against the Machine and Beck was a civilized experience, a mixture of commerce and culture in which artists, promoters and fans all treated one another with respect. That may not sound like such an accomplishment, but the weekend experience was reassuring after the

Forging Our Future:
The Debate About Affirmative Action and College Admissions

Student Union Ballroom
University of Massachusetts- Amherst
at 7:00pm
Wednesday, October 13, 1999
FREE Admission

Julian Bond has played a significant role in the formation of the American sociopolitical landscape. One of the founders of the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) in the 1960's, he later assumed the position of communications director, a testament to his faith in viable progress. Julian Bond currently serves as Chairman of the Board of the NAACP and is active in other pursuits relating to social change.

W.E.B. DuBois Department of Afro- American Studies, Student Affairs, Campus Activities, CC Print Shop, Alumni Relations/ Alumni Assoc, University Advancement, Office of Human Relations, Office of Jewish Affairs, Auxiliary Services, Campus Center Commission/ Administration

BLACK STUDENT UNION UMASS

■ movies

continued from page 7

million four weeks ground.

The teen flick Drive Me Crazy fell a relatively normal 46 percent, as the age group found a new fad of the week to embrace. That's a $2.1 million weekend and $11.5 overall for the Melissa Joan Hart romp.

Lost Love of the Game limped to the finish line, likely making its final appearance in the top ten. It's $2.1 million was good enough for a tie with Elmo. The film grossed $51.5 million, for an embarrassing 2.42 multiplier. That's about as bad as Costner's Message in a Bottle, which opened to $18.9 million and finished with $65.4 million after four weeks (2.46 multiplier), earlier this year.

As I said above, Elmo in Grouchland made $2.1 million, good enough for a ninth place tie. That's a 56 percent week-week drop for the family flick.

Note: The box office numbers reflect intakes from Friday Oct. 8 to Sunday Oct. 10. Since this is a long weekend, expect Monday's box office to pad these numbers.

I really look for Fight Club and The Story of Us, both opening next week, to shake things up a bit.

COURTESY HAMPDEN GALLERY

Sculpture by Alex Sherker is now on display at the Hampden Gallery. His latest series Spirit Dwellings fuses Native American and contemporary imagery.

Munchie Madness 3-6PM MONDAY-FRIDAY
Nachos Especial 7.99 4.00
Potato Skins Supreme 7.99 4.00
Shrimp Cocktail 5.99 3.00
1/2 PRICE!
Judie's
OCMP Welcome Here
51 N. Pleasant Street
253-3491
http://virtual-valley.com/judies

■ hockey

continued from page 11

Maroon and White appeared to dismiss the Ram score as a fluke, returning fire with immediate offensive pressure via its revitalized forward attack. Rhody keeper Amanda Herlya was forced into an aggressive role early, as UM's Chrissy Millbauer and Sarah Bohonowicz traded passes across the mouth of the Ram goal at the 31:23 mark and nearly caught Herlya out of position.

The next five minutes of play spelled UM domination, as co-captain Lucy Koch flashed the dribbling skills that have made her a three-year starter in breaking three straight Ram traps around midfield. Fellow Minutewoman Lindsay Abbott sidestepped a URI defender and got a great look at the Ram net on the ensuing possession, but the Northampton native's shot skittered wide right. Rhode Island wouldn't challenge again until the 24:16 mark, when Ram back Angela Bashore caught up to a dump-and-chase play and found herself isolated against Tucker. But the Welsh goalie shocked her Ram opponent with pure audacity, rushing a full four strides out of the net and kicking the ball right off of Bashore's stick.

Coach Shea urged her team to capitalize on its early good fortune, imploring her forwards to get deeper up the field throughout much of the early goings. Hatfield native Tamra Geryk responded with fantastic positioning and a great look at the Rhody goal with 18:23 in the half, but Herlya charged out and leveled the UM forward to set up Mass's first penalty corner. The resulting play fell victim to a botched pass, but two more infractions over the next three minutes left the Ram backfield panting for relief. UMass midfielder Nicole Bardell finally made URI pay for its lack of clearing prowess, as she flipped home the equalizer with 10:20 remaining in the half.

The remaining 10 minutes were marked by the defensive fury of the Mass midfield. Ontario import Bardell snatched the ball from the stick of URI's Crystal Mohr and dished to teammate Kristen Schmidt, who rocketed down the left sideline and set up another Mass penalty corner. UM midfielder Kaitlyn Byron then made highlight-reel steals on back-to-back Ram possessions, to kill off any threat of URI reestablishing its early momentum before halftime.

The second frame saw the Minutewomen upping the ante on Rhodey, as Schmidt took UM's first possession single-handedly through a sea of Ram defenders and barely missed hooking the ball in around the hard-charging Herlya. UM back Anke Bruemmer picked Ram Ashley Siniscalco's pocket on the ensuing Rhody effort, but Bruemmer's butter-soft outlet pass just missed the stick of Bardell. After a turnover at midfield, UM's Abbott slashed boldly to goal only to be unceremoniously dumped to the turf by Herlya. That set up UM's fifth penalty corner, much to the delight of the home crowd. Herlya again came up with a big stop for Rhode Island, but the Rams' inability to clear spelled its doom on this particular play. Bohonowicz corralled the loose ball and smoked in the go-ahead goal at the 32:33 mark, the first score of the South Deerfield native's collegiate career.

There would be no lapse in intensity for the Minutewomen, as Schmidt took an Abbott feed less than four minutes later and beat the sprawling Herlya to make it 3-1. Bardell made the play of the game with 20:22 to play, using a stop-and-go move to deke out the lunging Herlya then flip-centering the ball in front of the wide-open Ram goal. Bruemmer would add an insurance goal later in the 4-2 final.

DAN SAVELLA / COLLEGIAN

High fives all around

Steve Ley watches as Marcel Shipp and Sean Higgins celebrate one the UMass' 10 offensive touchdowns. The Minutemen racked up a total of 545 yards of total offense against a tough Husky defense.

UM loses to Temple, beats LaSalle

By James Piehl
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts volleyball team split a pair of conference matches this weekend to stay afloat in the middle of the Atlantic 10.

The Minutewomen dug their heels in at home for the second weekend of conference matches at the Curry Hicks Cage, first dropping to A-10 giant Temple, 3-0, then keeping LaSalle in the conference basement with a 3-0 sweep of their own.

UM fought tooth and nail with the A-10's second ranked Owls in a disappointing loss on Friday going down in three straight, 15-13, 15-13, 15-9. The loss slid the Minutewomen to a 9-7 season record with 3-3 conference mark while the win boosted Temple to 9-4 season on the season and a powerful 4-1conference record.

One spark for the Minutewomen offense that has struggled at times was the continued outstanding development of junior middle blocker Rebecca Hasson and the steads workhorse numbers churned out by senior co-captains Jill Meyers and Kari Hogancamp. Hasson tallied an 11 kill 12 dig double-double in the UMass loss. Hogancamp did as she has so often this season, posted another double double for her squad with 14 kills and 20 digs. Meyers also chipped into offensive attack with a 14-kill, nine-dig night.

Sophomore setter Heather Holtsberg saw most of the action as the floor general of evening boasting some phenomenal numbers of her own in the loss with 43 assists and 13 digs.

"We didn't terminate the ball anywhere near what we are capable of doing. We let Temple's outside hitting control our entire match. Nothing we did was explosive and terminating. We just didn't play hard enough," said Head coach Bonnie Kenny of the loss in a press release.

Hogancamp and the Minutewomen remained at home and played well against the visiting LaSalle squad knocking the Explorer's to a sub par 9-10 record, 0-6 in conference play, while improving themselves to 4-3 in the A-10 and 10-7 overall, with a sweep 15-9, 18-16, 16-14

Hasson continued her streak of eight games straight with double-figure kills adding another double-double night to her career with 13 kills and 13 digs. Meyers continued to shine with a double-double of her own recording 12 kills 15 digs on top of three blocks, while sophomore Lymarie Llovet came up big off the bench whipping the Explorer's with a 10 kill, 14 dig double-double. However, Hogancamp was the offensive catalyst notching up a match-high 19 kills and 21 digs. This marked her 4th consecutive double-double totaling 13 double-doubles in just 17 games.

With the victory Hogancamp grabbed her second A-10 player of the week honors this season. The week started at Brown where she registered 15 kills and a team-high 19 digs. Along with this weekends totals she averaged a monstrous 5.33 kills and 6.67 digs this week with a 35.5 kill percentage and only seven errors in 116 attempts.

UMass takes to the road on the 15th and 16th to face conference foes George Washington and Virginia Tech.

Women's tennis wins big

Matt Seifert
Collegian Staff

They have the eye of the tiger. Since losing a heartbreaker to Columbia in their first match of the season, the Massachusetts women's tennis team has been "Rocky-esque", showing that they indeed have the heart that it takes to be a champion.

Are they a tiny team? Yes. Do they care? Not at all. After the season-opening loss the squad has done their best Rocky Balboa impression by bouncing back and winning their last three matches, going undefeated this past weekend as they took on the likes of Amherst College and UConn, on Friday and Saturday respectively.

Friday's matchup against Amherst College was "as good as it gets." The hometown rivals came in as the defending Division III national champs, as well as not having lost to Massachusetts in recent memory. But on Friday, it was UMass' turn to exercise some demons.

UM downed the crosstown foes by a count of 5-4. Needless to say, coach Judy Dixon was just a little impressed. "The kids were really prepared to play today's match, and when one kid started to win, the rest really started to pull it all together. We always have great matches against Amherst College, and it all came down to who wanted it more."

And who could have possibly wanted it more than the Minutewomen, who hadn't played a match in nearly two weeks. The squad came out with a vengeance, taking four of a possible six singles points – and they were certainly not wins. Sophomore Helena Horak came out and absolutely smoked her number two singles opponent Stephanie Fong (6-0, 6-2). Then it was Annie "Consistent as they get" Hamilton, coming up big in her number three singles roll winning in straight sets (7-5, 6-1) over Heather Cole. Then it was Robyn Lebovitz's turn to dominate, as she almost double bageled Paige Lawrence at No. 5 singles (6-1, 6-0). Freshman Beth Ebert came in and won big in her number six slot over Ashton Kienke (6-0, 6-3).

The clincher, however, came when the tandem of Olga Gerasimova and Annie Hamilton rocked the world of Jamie Cohen and Paige Lawrence by a score of 8-3.

But hey the Minutewomen were greedy, and like the lyrics to an old disco hit, "just didn't stop till they got enough." One win in a hot weekend was just not going to cut it. So the squad took the hardcourt on Saturday morning with the momentum of Friday's win. Unfortunately was never in this one, and were simply outplayed by the maroon and white. Losing by a score of 8-1. The win points the Minutewomen in the right direction for their showdown with Boston University on October 21st.

Calling All Undeclared and Pre-Major Students:
"Planning for Academic Success"
an important 45-minute workshop
sponsored by your advisors at Pre-Major Advising Services
(545-2191)
Where?: the 6th floor of Goodell
When?: (select one)

Mondays:	Oct. 18,25,	Nov.1	3pm or 4pm
Tuesdays:	Oct. 19,26,	Nov.2	2pm or 4pm
Wednesday	Oct. 20,27,	Nov.3	3pm or 4pm

Fly Wheels SKATE ACCESSORIES
Free UMass deliveries!
Inline, Speed, Roller Hockey
Outdoor Specialists

Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rt. Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 253-4756

Experience A Manicure	Experience A Pedicure	Refill	Full Set of Acrylics	Manicure & Pedicure
$9.00 (Reg. $10.00)	$16.00 (Reg. $18.00)	$ 13.00 (Reg. $15.00)	$23.00 (Reg. $25.00)	$23.00 (Reg. $25.00)

Carmelina's Student Specials
RT. 9 in Hadley
(413) 584-8000
Coming soon...

After studying courses like gross anatomy, biochemistry, and neurophysiology, as well as learning chiropractic philosophy and technique, they deserve to be. At Western States Chiropractic College, our clinically-based curriculum will prepare you to work as an equal with medical doctors, and to deal successfully with HMOs. It's the shape of health care to come, and if you have the ambition to be a part of it, call today for our informational brochure or visit our website. The future is in your hands.

Western States Chiropractic College
800 641 5641
Portland, Oregon
www.wschiro.edu

THERE'S A REASON OUR GRADUATES ARE CALLED DOCTORS.

FunWorks Unlimited
Owner: Konrad Kubaska
Used Video Games
Star Wars, Toys
Transformers, etc.
Store Hours:
Tue-Wed 2-7
Thur 2-8
Fri 2-9:30
Sat 12-8
Magic the Gathering
Mercadian Masques
ONLY: $7.3.00/box
until Oct. 30, 99
Tempest, Exodus, & Stronghold
$2.25/PK
Star Wars CCG
Endor $2.49/PK
Darth Maul: $2.89/PK
COMING SOON! --Jedi Council--
Star Trek CCG
Deep Space 9
$2.49/PK
Blaze of Glory, Q-Continuum each: $2.49/PK
Urza's Destiny Legacy, & Saga
$2.99/PK
POKEMON CCG'S
Base Set, Jungle and Fossil fearly Out!
Boosters, Decks, and Gift Boxes!!

GOLDMAN, SACHS & CO.

The plastic pizza thing.

It's structurally sound. It's supportive. And it's simply brilliant.

Want to learn more about a career that fosters this kind of thinking? Consider this an open invitation for open minds.

Thursday, October 14, 1999

Investment Research Divisional Information Session

7:00 - 8:30 p.m.
Lord Jeffrey Inn Ballroom

• Casual Attire

Goldman Sachs is a leading international investment banking and securities firm, providing a full range of investment and financing services to corporations, governments, institutions and individuals worldwide.

Financial analyst positions offer unparalleled depth for students interested in finance.

Develop world-class expertise in securities analysis and industry research.

Extensive interaction with investment banking, sales and trading, and virtually every other arm of Goldman Sachs.

Strong placement record at leading business and graduate schools, financial service firms, money management, and industry.

Goldman Sachs

Minds. Wide Open.℠
www.gs.com

Goldman Sachs, an equal opportunity employer, does not discriminate in employment on any basis that is prohibited by federal, state or local law.

Chipper's remark ignites a fire in Mets playoff drive

By Ross Newhan
Los Angeles Times

NEW YORK – Held triumphantly overhead by a young lady in the twilight at Shea Stadium Saturday, the sign read:

"Yo Chipper, Get Ready to Get Chopped."

She could easily have been speaking for her favorite team. Make no mistake, this is what the New York Mets wanted. They wanted another crack at the Team of the Decade.

They wanted the Atlanta Braves as much as they want the New York Yankees in a Subway World Series, although that may be an embellishment.

"This is special," relief pitcher Turk Wendell said amid the champagne showers in the Mets' clubhouse after they had eliminated the Arizona Diamondbacks in four games of the division series, "but it will be that much more special once we beat the Braves."

Fighting words?

Well, the Mets get a chance to make it happen starting Tuesday in the National League Championship Series at Turner Field.

And if the Braves are now saying they expected the Mets to be here all along, well, that's not what the Mets thought they heard from the Braves when they last played.

They thought they heard adrenaline-stoked John Rocker saying how much he hated the Mets. They thought they heard Rocker and others saying the Mets were dead.

Of course, at that point in the last week of the regular season, the Mets did appear dead – eliminated from the Eastern Division race and virtually out of wild-card hope.

They had been swept by the Braves in a three-game series in Atlanta as Chipper Jones all but sewed up the National League's award for most valuable player. They had lost seven in a row before winning the middle game of another three-game series with the Braves, who won two of those three games in the next-to-last series of the regular season.

Now?

Well, as Met Manager Bobby Valentine said Saturday after the riveting victory over the Arizona Diamondbacks: "The next team we play is going to be playing against ghosts because they said we were dead. I don't know if they ever played against people coming back from the grave."

The Mets came back by sweeping the Pittsburgh Pirates on the final weekend of the regular season, routing the Cincinnati Reds in the wild-card playoff and ousting Arizona by first beating Randy Johnson and then winning two in a row at Shea Stadium without an injured Mike Piazza.

"Our heart's still pumping," the catalytic Rickey Henderson said amid Saturday's celebration. "The Braves left the last time and felt we were no match for them. They felt we were dead and wouldn't get the opportunity to see them again. I'm real happy to see them again. We're coming back alive."

They are coming back with seven wins in their last eight games.

They are coming back with people named Todd Pratt and Melvin Mora and Benny Agbayani helping to sustain the momentum.

"You couldn't write a better script," said Piazza, whose swollen thumb prevented him from gripping a bat Saturday but didn't stop him from handling a bottle of champagne. "We're not about one person. We're getting contributions from everybody, and that's what it takes to win in the postseason."

"Everyone in the National League knows that to reach the World Series you have to go through Atlanta. It's the one hurdle people will be looking at us to get over and wondering if we can, but I think we can. We've become a different team than the one that last played Atlanta. Maybe the best thing that happened to us was that we got all of that negative energy out of here. We hit bottom and bounced back. Now we're relaxed and riding a wave."

Of course, dude, it's a long way between rhetoric and reality, and the Braves know all about riding a wave. They've won eight straight division titles. They won nine of 12 from the Mets during the regular season and three in a row from the Houston Astros after losing the opener of their division series. They have Greg Maddux, Kevin Millwood, Tom Glavine and John Smoltz set to throw their Cy Young awards at the Mets.

(OK, Millwood hasn't won one yet, but give him time.)

The smart thing might be for the Mets to temper their cockiness and leave the "Yo, Chipper" signs at home, but who wouldn't be a little giddy at having produced a second life? Valentine hugged dapper co-owner Fred Wilpon Saturday and said, "Ain't it great? And we're just getting started."

Perhaps. The Mets did get team-wide contributions against Arizona, and starters Al Leiter, Rick Reed, Kenny Rogers and Masato Yoshii, who is expected to start Tuesday, have probably never been in better form during a season that has now produced 100 wins.

Then there's Valentine, of whom a top Atlanta scout said Sunday, "You can say anything you want about his ego and his mouth, and it would probably be accurate, but he knows how to run a game. He has the right people in the right place at the right time, and he has the Mets at the top of their game despite everything they went through earlier. Sparky Anderson would say a lot of things, and you knew he was trying to take the pressure off his players and put it on himself. Maybe that's Bobby's motivation, although Sparky never went as far with the things he said as Bobby does."

The latest "ill-timed fire," as General Manager Steve Phillips put it, involved a Sports Illustrated profile that was released before Game 3 of the division series with the Diamondbacks. Valentine was quoted as saying that he had five losers in the clubhouse and not a lot of intelligent players. He held a clubhouse meeting before that game and said he was sorry if he offended anyone but "if the shoe fits, wear it."

"We're obviously going to keep hearing a lot about that in the next week," Met center fielder Darryl Hamilton said in the clubhouse Saturday, "but we've come too far to worry about it, talk about it, or lose sleep over what he says or what he thinks. We're still playing and the guys are still believing."

Men's Tennis defeats rival UConn

Farrah Alexander
Collegian Staff

The sweet taste of victory! They had to wait 364 days to exact revenge on their old nemesis, UConn, but on Saturday, the Massachusetts men's tennis team redeemed themselves after suffering a humiliating loss to the Huskies last year.

The Minutemen's determination got them over a myriad of hurdles and the final score of 6-1 proved that they could out run, out hit, and out-strategize the Huskies. The victory was a testament to their superior skills.

However, UMass almost lost their momentum in the third doubles match when they were up 6-2. Senior Marco Casesa lost his temper and was twice coded by the umpire for use of foul language. The result was a two- point penalty, one on the crucial game point. The Minutemen squandered the double point, thus temporarily inflating the Huskies' egos.

Refusing to be stymied by the loss of the doubles point, the Minutemen came back, convincingly to win all of their singles matches in straight sets.

In the number one singles slot, sophomore Steve Prisco defeated senior Drew Briderick 6-2, 7-6, 10-8, followed by senior Parsa Santii in the number 2 slot who defeated junior Luke Grimshaw 7-5, 6-4.

Freshman Will Shaw once again came through for his team, defeating freshman Mike Furman 7-5, 2-6, 6-2. And junior Fabien Rabanal defeated senior Po Phimvongs 7-5, 6-1.

Despite badly injuring his ankle during his match against junior Bryan Adinolfi, sophomore Todd Champeau refused to quit and won his match, capturing two out of three sets 6-4, 1-6, 6-1.

"The fact that he came back and won the match is really a testament to his unwillingness to let go," Dixon said.

"He's now a sophomore, he's seen this match and he hated that we lost last year. He was part of that doubles team that almost lost it for us and I think that he just needed to win this. So that was a huge match for him. He's the kind of kid that will never say he can't play but it's not a good ankle," she continued.

Field hockey rips A-10 rival Rhode Island 4-2

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Indian summer made a special guest appearance Saturday at Richard F. Garber field, bringing gorgeous rays of sunshine back for the Massachusetts field hockey team's showdown with the Rams of Rhode Island. And to the thrill of the home crowd, the UMass offense also made a welcomed return in a rousing 4-2 Maroon and White win. Four different Minutewomen notched goals in the victory, giving UM (4-7) a perfect start to the Atlantic 10 portion of its schedule.

Coach Patty Shea's team had endured a vicious early season schedule prior to its first conference action, causing some foolhardy followers to question the team's resilience when it lost six-of-seven over a three-week period. But the dominant display put on by the Minutewomen against URI was the truest testimony of the season as to the power and potential of Shea's '99 squad. UM shell-shocked the Rams with a 16-4 shot advantage over the course of the contest.

The Rams played the opening moments of Saturday's action as if their season depended on it, charging hard off the initial whistle to their first penalty corner 55 seconds in. UM goaltender Zowie Tucker appeared to have perfect positioning to thwart URI forward Kelly Barnowski's blast, but the ball skipped up and in off the keeper's glove to give URI an early 1-0 lead. The

Turn to HOCKEY, page 9

PAUL BLODGETT / COLLEGIAN

Kristen Schmidt employed her usual physical flair in the Minutewomen's 4-2 win over A-10 rival Rhode Island on Saturday.

SHOPPING FOR PRICE?

YANKEE
-DISCOUNT OIL-

NORTHAMPTON/HOLYOKE
584-4112 • 535-1888

• SAME DAY DELIVERY •

All the Digital Power in the Palm of Your Hands
www.omniplayer.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE

- Complete Bartending Course
- Near Campus
- For a Fraction of the Cost of other Schools
- National Certification Available
- Hands on Pouring Labs
- Tips to get a Fun, High Paying Job

Classes Start
Wednesday, October 13th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst

Act Now, Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
www.universitybartending.com

MASSACHUSETTS SCHOOL OF LAW

Although it also produces highly intellectual programs seen on over 500 television stations and a general intellectual magazine that is read across the country, MSL's main focus is on teaching you the practical skills you need for success in law, business and government. We teach you to analyze legal, business and human problems, uncover facts and organize them logically, write well, be persuasive both orally and in writing, negotiate, arbitrate and mediate, try cases, and write specialized legal documents. And at MSL, you will be taught by experts who regularly practice these skills.

The non-specialized skills that we teach you, such as the ability to analyze problems, amass and organize facts, and write and speak persuasively, are needed not only in law, but are greatly desired in business.

MSL teaches you all these crucial skills at a tuition that is by far the lowest of any law school in New England – about half of the median tuition elsewhere in New England. The following chart of full-time tuitions illustrates this:

School 1	$25,550	School 7	$21,750	School 13	$17,075
School 2	$24,448	School 8	$21,200	School 14	$15,950
School 3	$24,090	School 9	$20,200	School 15	$14,850
School 4	$23,520	School 10	$20,150	MSL	$10,800
School 5	$22,708	School 11	$19,084
School 6	$22,054	School 12	$17,996

• LSAT not required • Rolling Admissions
Classes enter in January 2000 and August 2000
500 Federal Street, Andover, MA 01810 • (978) 681-0800
WWW.MSLAW.EDU

CAMPUS AWARENESS

GOLDEN KEY NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

1999

Tuesday October 12
Wednesday October 13
Thursday October 14
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
Campus Center Concourse

1/2 PRICE Appetizers

- Buffalo Chicken Wings
- Mozzarella Sticks
- Chicken or Beef Nachos

Sunday - Thursday
9 p.m. - Midnight

Applebee's Neighborhood Grill & Bar

Applebee's
100 Westgate Center Drive • Rte 9 & Rte. 114, Hadley • (413) 253-5799

UMass Student Legal Services Office

FREE confidential professional legal services for UMass students!
545-1995
CALL TODAY!
922 CAMPUS CENTER

It's a jungle out there.

Giraffe by 9 & Co.

ZANNA
downtown Amherst

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

Management Internship Would you be interested in a merchandise management internship? If so visit JCPenney at the Career Expo on Wed. Oct. 13 from 10-3pm or email cdemelo1@hotmail.com for more information.

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS deploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413 774-2281 (ask for Mary) AA/EOE

Intern Needed - Toothless Productions, a Western Mass Music Booking and Produciotn Co. needs a part time intern, very flexable hours. Call 888-595-3122

EMPLOYMENT

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT For teenage bicycle-touring program. Partime until late spring; then full-time through August. Call 800-343-6132 Student Hosteline Program Conway, MA

Candy Company looking for full time apprentice. Artist/graphic designer must be familiar with Quark, Illustrator, Photoshop - benifit. Cartoon art skills a big plus. Contact Tom Martin 1-888-556-5599

Cashier Wanted self-service station weekends. Must be honest, reliable, good at math. Apply in person Northampton Citco 54 E. Hampton Rd. Rt 10

The UMass Athletic Development Office is looking for a graduate student to assist in bookkeeping, data entry, and filing 20-25 hrs/wk starting at $8/hr 1-413-545-4290

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

EMPLOYMENT

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 wwww.pc2work.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

ENTERTAINMENT

DJ FOR HIRE: DJ Fooz is booking for fall semester. Date parties, formals, + house parties. Check me out at the Monkey Bar on Wed. + Thurs. Call Tim 537-8527

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

American Skiing Company College season passes! Best deal anywhere! All east pass - seven mtns! Only $349 through 10/15. Call Ski 'N' Board Club at 5-3437

GREEK AFFAIRS

Alpha Chi Omega would like to welcome our new members: Alexis, Latoya, Becky M,. Becca, Jen, Shannon, Becky A., Orlee, Katelyn, Cara, Lesley, Stephanie, Melissa, Amy, and Andrea. Congratulations guys!

HAPPY BIRTHDAY

Happy Belated Birthday Laura Love Sue, Andrea, Fran, Mara, and Scott

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

INSTRUCTION

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

Found: Womens pair of glasses. Found outside of Tobin. To claim please call or come down to The Collegian in the Campus Center basement. 545-3500

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

Black Male Cat, yellow eyes. Responds to Casey. Missing since 9/23. Any information call ASAP. No questions asked 549-1373

MUSICIANS

Female Vocalist looking to join up with other musicians! Lead, backup, harmony vocals. Can also play limited guitar. Give me a call and we'll jam! 546-4442 - ask for Jen

ROOM FOR RENT

Room For Rent N. Amherst/available now, in private home. Quite, mature, student, only. $350-$375 549-7561

SERVICES

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to Commuter Services, RM 428 Student Union or call 545-0865

Feeling Ripped Off? Your new car is a lemon; the warranty on your stereo just expired and it needs major repairs; you loaned a friend money and can't get it back; or the dry cleander ruined your favorite suit! Are dept collectors knocking at you door? Contact the Student Legal Services Office today; 545-1995, 922 Campus Center.

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

TRAVEL

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

RUNNERS NEEDED! Competitive female distance runners needed for an important women's health study. Must be 18-25 and not on oral contraceptives. Free bone density and fat measurements. Free runners gifts. Call 1-877-RUN-BFIT. (1-877-786-2348)

What are you waiting for?

We can't come to you!

Call now and Place your Ad!!

OR

Come down to the 113 Campus Center Basement. 545-3500

You can Advertise to THOUSANDS! Don't miss this opportunity!

SEND US YOUR FYI ANNOUNCEMENTS!!!!!!

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

UStore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

HSCN 4 — Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board	18 The Learning Channel
3 CBS/3 Hartford	19 UVC-TV19
4 CBS/4 Boston	20 ABC/40 Springfield
5 ABC/5 Boston	21 Govet to Govet
6 PBS/57 Springfield	22 NBC/22 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.	23 Sundance
8 UPN/20 Hartford	24 Bloomberg Financial
9 Weather Channel	25 CTN
10 NBC/30 New Britain	26 TBS
11 Fox/61 Hartford	27 BET
12 PBS/24 Hartford	28 TV Land
13 WOCH & HSCN	29 Univision
14 International	30 Comedy Central
15 UMass Academic TV	31 Cartoon
16 WB/New Haven	32 Much Music
17 HSCN Programming

MONDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 11, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
WEDH	12	Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Going Places "Madrid"		Red Fries		Hostage (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3)	Six Billion and Beyond
WFSB	3	News	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Prisoners"	News		Late Show
WBZ	4	News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	King	Ladies Man	Raymond	Becker	Family Law "Prisoners"	News		Late Show
WCVB	5	News	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle	20/20		NFL Football: Jacksonville Jaguars at New York Jets. (In Stereo Live)
WLVI		Sister, Sister	Fresh Prince	Friends	Nanny	7th Heaven (In Stereo)		Safe Harbor (In Stereo)		News		Friends	Nanny
WHDH	7	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTXX	8	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV	Real TV (R)	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	News	Caroline	Change-Heart	Change-Heart
WVIT	10	News	NBC News	Extra	Ent. Tonight	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons	Frasier	Seinfeld	Friends	Major League Baseball Playoffs: Division		Divisional Round Game 5 -- Teams to Be Announced			News		Friends
WWLP	22	News	NBC News	Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy!	Sudden-Susan	Veronica's Cl.	Law & Order: Special Victims		Dateline (In Stereo)	News		Tonight Show
WGBY	9	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer		Antiques Roadshow (In Stereo)		Red Fries		Hostage (In Stereo) (Part 3 of 3)	Charlie Rose (In Stereo)
WGGB	28	News	ABC News	Seinfeld	Frasier	20/20		NFL Football: Jacksonville Jaguars at New York Jets. (In Stereo Live)
WSBK		Judge Judy	Judge Judy	Seinfeld	Frasier	Moesha (R)	Parkers (R)	Grown Ups	Malcolm-Eddie	Star Trek: Voyager "Caretaker"	Blind Date	Ricki Lake
WTBS		Roseanne	Roseanne	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	Sick, Sicker (1979, Musical) John Travolta, Olivia Newton-John,				It's "Footloose" (1984, Drama) Kevin Bacon,
A&E		Columbo	Columbo "Try and Catch Me			Biography of the Millennium: 100 People... 1,000 Years (R)				Biography of the Millennium: 100 People... 1,000 Years (R)
CNN	23	Worldview	Moneyline Newshour		Crossfire	World Today		Larry King Live		Newsstand	Sports	Moneyline
COM	26	It's "The Best of Times" (1998, Comedy) Robin Williams,				Absolutely Fabulous "The Last Shoot" (R)				Strangers	Upright	Daily Show	Stein's Money
DISC		Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery "Giant Otter"		On the Inside: Navy SEALs		Transplant		Ultimate Guide "T-Rex" (R)		On the Inside: Navy SEALs
ESPN		Major League Baseball		Monday Night Countdown				Gymnastics: Men's World Team Trials.				Dog Show	Baseball
LIFE		Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait: "Star Jones"		Beyond Chance		"My Little Assassin" (1999, Drama) Gabrielle Anwar, Premiere.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV		Global Groove	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules	Road Rules		Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK		All That	Catdog	Hey Arnold!	Rugrats	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch	Love Lucy	Jeffersons	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Maude
SCIFI		Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Outer Limits "Second Soul"		Outer Limits "Resurrection"		Outer Limits "Black Box"		Outer Limits "Vanishing Act"		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	28	Home Again	Home Again	Clintons -- A Marriage		Paramedics "House Calls"		World's Most Amazing		Animal ER (R)		Paramedics "House Calls" (R)
TNT		Due South (In Stereo)		ER "Getting to Know You"		Wrestling: WCW Monday Nitro. (In Stereo Live)						It's "The Big Brawl" (1960)
USA		Xena: Warrior Princess (R)		JAG "Vanished" (In Stereo)		Walker, Texas Ranger		Wrestling		Wrestling		GvaE "Sunday Night Evil" (R)
HBO		It's "SpaceCamp" (1986, Adventure) Kate Capshaw. PPV				It's "A Perfect Murder" (1998, Suspense) Michael Douglas. "R"				Autopsy 6: Secrets		"There's Something About Mary
MAX		It's "Blankman" (1994, Comedy) Damon Wayans. "PG-13"				It's "Daylight" (1996, Disaster) Sylvester Stallone. "PG-13"		It's "Impulse" (1995, Suspense) Theresa Russell. "R"				"Forbidden"
SHOW		"Hayley Wagon Star" (1996) Bethany Richards. Movie News				It's "44 Good Ol' Boys" (1997, Comedy-Drama) Jack Nicholson. "PG-13"		It's "Caged Heat" (1974)				Hoop Life

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Foxtrot By Bill Amend

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Dilbert Scott Adams

Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

Dilbert By Scott Adams

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) – Someone may surprise you today by declining an offer you guessed was a sure thing. It's time, once again, to go back to the drawing board.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) – Take care you don't bend the rules so far that they are actually broken inadvertently today. You may want to play it straight and safe!

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) – That which you do not notice may actually prove most significant to you by day's end. Let things develop organically, according to the rules.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) – You and a friend or coworker may suffer from more than a difference of opinion. Indeed, you may both be moving in different directions at this time.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) – You may be going through something of a rough patch today, particularly where your more basic emotional needs are concerned. Ask for help!

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) – You mustn't be overpowering in any way today. Let others make decisions on their own, without unsolicited suggestions from you.

Aries (March 21-April 19) – Your unique, inimitable brand of wisdom will serve you well in surprising situations all day long. Others will remark upon your sense of style.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) – Look for sales and bargains wherever you go today, but avoid buying anything you don't really need. Remember, spending is spending... period.

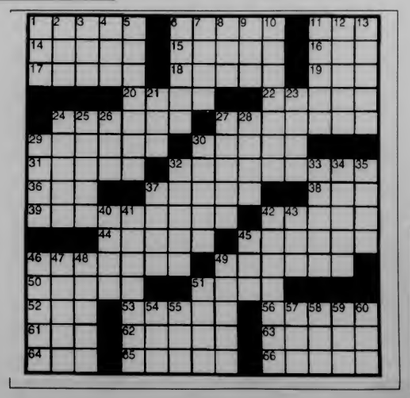
Gemini (May 21-June 20) – Now is not the time for teasing! Be sensitive to the feelings of others, and you can expect others to be sensitive when you most require it.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) – What seems a reality at one moment may prove a figment of your fertile imagination the next. It's your response, however, that really matters.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) – You can avoid major conflicts today simply by remaining true to your own expectations and desires. Don't let yourself get inappropriately "crazy."

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) – You're more interested in finding the answers from within yourself today. The search is likely to reveal a few surprisingly truths.

Quote of the Day



"Let's go to Hahvahd and 'mess' up some smaht kids."

–An altered quote from "Good Will Hunting"

Close to Home By John McPherson

With her 15-month-old still not walking, Brenda felt a subtle competition building between her son and the Wilsons' 9-month-old.

ACROSS

1 Trickles
6 Wing it
11 Dandy
14 Dark
15 Tropical vine
16 "Dealmap" author Levin
17 Cupcake maker
18 Musical instrument
19 Be a shrew
20 "He — heavy . . ."
22 "Divine Comedy" author
24 Singer Dion
27 Gathers
29 Prince's out
30 Ugly Duckling's parents
31 Farm babies
32 U.N. Secretary-General
36 Belloc, to a bard
37 "Late Show" feature
38 Important time
39 Acrobatic feat
42 Joyous
44 Film holders
45 Tenn material
46 Protozoans
49 Pullover
50 Basins
51 Adversities
52 SSA's e.g.
53 Linen-closet item
56 Type of being
61 Grow old
62 Turn inside out
63 Wax melodramatic
64 Hairdresser's item
65 Fees
66 Outpouring

DOWN

1 Record a sound track
2 Genetic substance
3 Son
4 Pumpkin —
5 Narrow channels
6 Solo
7 Saw
8 Dawdle
9 "— minute!"
10 Kerchief
11 Insistent ion
12 Give a speech
13 Summons over a loudspeaker
21 Indoor winners
23 Org.
24 Nurse Barton
25 — Fudd
26 Tennis hit
27 Very bad
28 Mate's partner
29 Actor Baldwin
30 Blisters, e.g.
32 Ship bottoms
33 Chutzpah
34 Assortment
35 Negative votes
37 Ostrichlike bird
40 Arduous journey
41 Dictionary expert
42 Swamps
43 Navy off.
45 Satisfactory grade
46 From China
47 Grail
48 Beginning
49 Jars
51 — Angeles
54 Eggs
55 Moist
57 Ref's kin
58 Frightless bird
59 Communications corp.
60 Formerly named

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

SORRY

NO SOUP FOR YOU!!!!

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Seth Koenig
Photo Technition	Don Santella
Copy Editor	Ken McDonald
Production Supervisor	Jeanette Santora
Production Staff	Janine Tangney, Lovee Garg

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Tuesday, October 12, 1999

Everything goes UMass' way in a 77-0 win over NU

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

At the very least, Northeastern coach Barry Gallup can look at the films heading into next weekend and hope that nothing worse could transpire on the playing field. At the very least, the Massachusetts football team took the Huskies and wrung out every bit of bad play. More than anything, though, Gallup is relieved that the torture he absorbed on Saturday is over with and the sun has risen since.

Very rarely is a game completely one-sided but when UMass and Northeastern took the field at Alumni Stadium, it was all Minutemen. Not just mostly Minutemen, but all Minutemen. Every bounce, every tip, every loose ball went to the Minutemen. Plays that worked in practice worked equally well on the playing field.

UMass had more points than Northeastern had yards. On top of that, the Minutemen had more yards returning interceptions than the Huskies had passing (110-85).

From the first play from scrimmage, a mishandled snap by quarterback Jason Quinlan, to the last, Bill Barry's first career interception, UMass dominated every facet of the game, rolling over the Huskies on Band Day, 77-0.

"They dropped the first ball on the first snap, and it just kind of went our way. Certainly we're not that good and Northeastern is not that bad," said coach MarkWhipple. "We came out with a lot more enthusiasm and certainly some plays helped us, but we played very well on both sides of the ball, without question."

The teams were supposed to be equally matched, but instead, Northeastern came into the game sluggish, perhaps due to a grueling 33-22 loss to Boston College last weekend. UMass, who had dropped three straight and were in danger of dashing its playoff hopes not even midway through the season, answered the call by dominating every snap.

"We just needed a win. You can pat guys on the back and do all those things, but we just needed a win," said Whipple

But who had the better day? The offense or the defense?

Mixed results would come if surveying the 15,747 fans on hand Saturday. After packing very little punch in the first four games, the offense exploded, racking up 545 total yards and setting Atlantic 10 records for touchdowns and points. After setting a school record for point by beating up on Wagner by the same score, the Minutemen equaled their predecessors on a cool Saturday afternoon 68 years later. It was forced to punt just once and all but five its drives concluded in the end zone.

The defense generated an argument by holding the Huskies to 72 total yards. The Huskies completed just two of 12 third downs and were forced into eight turnovers. After rushing for 142 yards against Boston College, Northeastern was held to -13 yards on the ground and crossed midfield just once.

Corey Potter was named Atlantic 10 Defensive Player of the Week after making his first career start at outside linebacker. The freshman stepped in for the injured Dan Healey and responded by picking off a pair of passes, running the second 37 yards down the left sideline for a score.

"I just tried to make the most of the opportunity. I'm just happy we won. We were in a little bit of a funk that we couldn't get out of. I'm just happy with the whole teams performance," said Potter.

Ironically, the last time that Northeastern had been shut out and UMass had pitched a scoreless game was on the same day. The Minuteman defense, who blanked Rhode Island four years ago at home, could not have possibly rivaled its stinginess Saturday, as Northeastern had just four drives that spanned more than three snaps and just two that went more than 8 yards.

After quarterback Todd Bankhead scored the team's second touchdown, he found Adrian Zullo for two scores to open up the second quarter. Zullo, who had not reached the end zone since his four-score effort in the season opener against New Hampshire, caught seven passes for 115 yards. His twosome in the second frame was part of a 35-point outburst that put the game well out of reach.

After Quinlan's fumble at his own 15-yard line, UMass scored six plays later on a Marvel Shipp 1-yard plunge that was just the beginning of the onslaught. It was the first of a quartet of scores for the junior tailback, who ran for 110 yards on 24 carries, his 17th consecutive game with 100 yards or more.

Kevin Quinlan relieved Shipp for good in the third quarter after Shipp rumbled 27 yards to build UMass' lead to 56-0. Quinlan rushed for 127 yards and two touchdowns, leading the team on a day where it would gain 320 yards on the ground.

Tre Brady completed the remarkable afternoon by scampering 18 yards to pavdirt with three minutes left in the game.

Next week the Minutemen travel north to Orono to take on the Black Bears of Maine. Last year, UMass scored a season-high 55 points when Maine came to town. This season, Maine stands at 2-3, but comes off a bye week after defeating McNeese State 55-7 at home.

"We just needed a win. You can pat guys on the back and do all those things, but we just needed a win," said Whipple.

"We came out with a lot more enthusiasm and certainly some plays helped us, but we played very well on both sides of the ball, without question," said Whipple.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

In Saturday's 77-0 rout of Northeastern, the Minuteman defense allowed a meager 72 yards of total offense. UMass forced six interceptions and two fumbles in the shutout.

Breakdown of a loss

Nine reasons NU was stymied

As your eyes roll down the box score for the Massachusetts football team's slaughter of Northeastern with a Band Day score of 77-0 (yes, you read that right), you can't help but wonder what exactly the difference was.

Where did UMass find a mismatch? What went wrong with the Huskies' conference-leading offense? With the strategic football knowledge of Vince Lombardi himself, I will attempt to break down the problems that Northeastern had when dealing with the Minutemen.

1.) Freshman UMass linebacker Corey Potter, who stepped in to start in place of the injured Dan Healey, intercepting two passes and taking one all the way into the end zone, was actually New England Patriot Lawyer Milloy in disguise.

2.) In a new defensive strategy, Northeastern coach Barry Gallup decided to cover Minuteman wideout Adrian Zullo, who regularly beats greased lightning in footraces, with 6-foot-5, 280-pound defensive tackle Eric Landry. Hey, he's got a height advantage.

3.) In a pre-game pep talk, Massachusetts skipper Mark Whipple reminded his players that, according to last year's statistics, they were supposed to be averaging in the neighborhood of 35 points a contest. To return to that number, they needed to score 75 or 80 against the Huskies. The team agreed to do that.

4.) Also, in commemoration of Band Day, the Minutemen decided to divide the number of people in the school marching band by 28.6363, and score that number of touchdowns, which, coincidentally was an Atlantic 10 record 11.

5.) Gallup wasn't clear on what Band Day entailed. He thought both teams were to put the marching bands in on offense...

6.) ...Whipple finally did in the fourth quarter, running out of substituites to play. Drum Major Robin Johnson's 25-yard touchdown run with 4:06 to go in the final frame was called back because of a holding penalty on flutist Emily Drees.

7.) The entire second half, Northeastern was constantly being flagged for having too many men on the field, as they tried to cut into the 49-point deficit by setting up 49-man formations.

8.) After doing 196 push-ups in the first half, one for each point the Minutemen had scored each time the squad reached the end zone, the UMass cheerleaders were plenty strong enough to deal with the Husky pass rush when they came in to relieve the band members in the fourth period of play.

9.) Thanks to the astute research of Massachusetts punter Dave Sanger, who was busy not punting, Whipple brought it to the referees attention early on that a 78-year old NCAA rule that had never been appealed states that any team who has a player with five syllables in his last name can not, officially, score a point. Unfortunately, Northeastern harbors freshman guard Greg Athanopoulos.

As you can see, there is plenty that goes on behind the scenes of a college football game. The Massachusetts walloping of the Huskies was much more than just one good team shellacking another.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

Men's soccer beats GW and VTech

By Matt Crocker
Collegian Staff

The University of Massachusetts showed their Atlantic 10 competitors what it is like to go one on one with the great ones this weekend as they laid the "smack down" on their opponents.

Squaring off against the Minutemen were George Washington University and Virginia Tech. Both teams made the journey to Totman Field only to get body slammed by an overwhelming UMass soccer team.

GW found themselves pinned to the mat first as the Minutemen defeated the Colonials 3-1 on Friday afternoon. Although GW struck first, the Minutemen quickly recoiled, scoring less than four minutes later.

Sophomore midfielder Fred Kinateder showed the Colonials the definition of Kinateder 3:16 as he drove a loose ball by the George Washington goalkeeper to score UMass' first goal on the day. Kinateder than returned in the second half after taking a pass from senior midfielder James Redmond to score his second goal and the game winner. Kinateder's goals marked the second straight game in which he has scored two goals in an UMass victory.

Also finding the back of the net against GW was senior forward and Minutemen leading scorer and point man Adam Black. Black tacked on an insurance goal in the last three minutes of the game to give the Maroon and White some breathing room as the last seconds ticked off the clock.

Unlike the University of Massachusetts, the Virginia Tech Hokies were breathing heavy as they trailed the Minutemen 4-2 at the close of their game on Sunday. UMass' victory marked their first win against the Hokies in five meetings.

Delivering the first blow, Virginia Tech clothes-lined UMass with a goal midway through the first half. Although knocked down, the Minutemen did not stay down as junior back Patrick Beattie scored on a header off fellow senior back Jonathan Bibb's corner kick. The game would remain 1-1 at the half, but less than six minutes back from the break, sophomore midfielder Mike Ianusz delivered a DDT to the Hokies, scoring a goal on a UMass rebound into an empty net.

However, Virginia Tech soon tied the game, as the Hokies sent a ball to the UMass netting from almost midfield.

Yet the game would not remain tied, as the tag team of Bibb and junior forward Seth Lilburn scored on a free kick, awarded on a Virginia Tech yellow card. Lilburn got his head on Bibb's kick, sending the ball into the net and scoring the game-winning goal for the Minutemen. Less than six minutes later, Black once again delivered some insurance to the Minutemen scoreboard as his chair-shot-like goal knocked the Hokies out of the game. The goal was Black's tenth goal on the season and his second of the weekend competition.

Keeping the Minutemen in their games this weekend was senior captain and goalkeeper Todd Fowler. Fowler recorded five saves over the course of both games, as he tallied his second and third win in as many appearances.

At the conclusion of this weekend, the University of Massachusetts, in their quest for the Atlantic 10 championship, has now improved their record to 9-5 and 4-1 in the A-10. The Minutemen are currently on a four game win streak and delivered an authoritative elbow to nine out of their last eleven opponents. The team offense that has been lavishing waste to opposing goalkeepers has also compiled fourteen goals in their last three games. A feat that has no equal, as no team in UMass history has ever been able to duplicate.

Along with the team's victors this weekend, University of Massachusetts men's soccer coach, Sam Koch, recorded his 150th career win. Since 1991, when Koch took over as the skipper of the Minutemen he has accumulated 92 wins in his nine seasons for the University.

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

Jonathan Bibb and the UMass men's soccer team took a pair from George Washington and Virginia Tech this weekend.

Red Sox tomahawk Tribe 12-8

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

Twelve of the last thirteen winner-take-all playoff games had been won by the home team. The host club had secured the last six decisive final contests, in fact. And with staff ace Pedro Martinez still a 12-million-dollar question mark at game time, odds makers and the "baseball sane" still had the Bosox bowing in game five of their playoff with Cleveland.

So much for the odds. Bring on the Yankees.

Boston locked up its first playoff series win since 1986 with an emotionally-draining 12-8 win over the host Indians last night before a sellout crowd at Jacobs Field. Pedro Martinez did indeed return to the mound for the Sox, turning a fourth inning cameo into six frames of hitless Tribe mastery.

The beginning of game five bore an eerie resemblance to the very forgettable game one, also played at the lake. Cleveland starter Charles Nagy had his infamous sinkerball sharpened early, enticing Boston's leadoff tandem of Jose Offerman and John Valentin to tap into weak groundouts before rookie Brian Daubach poked a single into right field.

Which, of course, brought up notorious Tribe-trouncer Nomar Garciaparra. But Cleveland manager Mike Hargrove surely wouldn't get burnt by Nomar again, would he?

Unfortunately for Indian fans, he would. Nomar's blast to right-center landed in almost exactly the same spot as his game one smash, pushing the Sox out to an early 2-0 lead.

Nagy would settle back down quickly, whiffing Troy O'Leary to stop the first inning bleeding. And though first blood had been drawn by Boston, the Tribe had its own murderers' row waiting to hack away at Sox starter Bret Saberhagen.

Kenny Lofton earned a free trip to open the home half of the first, reminding weary Sox fans of Saberhagen's uncharacteristic wildness in game two. After a gimme steal of second on the suddenly swipe-vulnerable Boston backstop Jason Varitek, Saberhagen left a high fastball out over the plate for Omar Vizquel to punish for an RBI double that halved the Red Sox' lead.

After a lineout by Roberto Alomar, AL RBI king-turned-playoff goat Manny Ramirez helped Saberhagen out with a half-hearted fly-out to Trot Nixon in right, bringing up the white-hot Jim Thome with two gone.

You really don't have to ask, do you?Thome didn't just drive Saberhagen's 3-2 high changeup, he demolished it. With an unusual amount of vigorous fanfare as he rounded first, the throwback one-sacker represented everything that can go wrong when a gassed arm (Saberhagen's) meets a pair of juiced ones (Thome's.)

A Harold Baines groundout allowed Saberhagen and the Sox to escape the first, their precious early lead quickly changed to a 5-2 deficit.

After Nagy nailed down a 1-2-3 Sox second, the oft-booed Wilfredo Cordero opened the bottom half of the inning with a drive off the wall in left that would've surely spelled extra bases if not for a spectacular carom-play and throw-in from O'Leary. That seemed important at the time, with the knee-brace impaired Travis Fryman stepping in for the tribe.

But instead of a twin-killing, Saberhagen served up a breaking ball that just didn't break, allowing Fryman to lift a majestic fly that just topped the wall in left for a two-run bomb. Less than six outs into the game, Saberhagen had to give up the ball after spotting Cleveland five big runs.

Even as the Jacobs faithful clamored for Martinez, Bosox skipper Jimy Williams followed his year-long trend of bucking "popular thinking" by bringing in his prized Indian hunter, Derek Lowe. The 26 year-old sinkerball specialist continued his mastery of the Tribe by sitting down Sandy Alomar on strikes and retiring Lofton and Vizquel to finish the frame.

The Red Sox would get right back into scoring mode in the third, when a leadoff walk to Trot Nixon and single by Offerman set up game four hero Valentin for another shot at hardball greatness. But this time, an RBI fielder's choice would have to suffice for the Boston third baseman.

After Daubach played wall ball for a double (his second hit in as many trips), Hargrove showed that he had learned something over the course of the series and ordered an intentional walk of Garciaparra. A no-brainer, right?

Not according to the Sox five-hitter, O'Leary. The free-swinging lefty made the Tribe rue their tippy-toe tactics by depositing Nagy's very first pitch into the right field seats for a grand slam and a 7-5 Sox lead.

O'Leary's swat marked the first postseason granny in history for the Red Sox, and one that will undoubtedly haunt Hargrove almost as long as...well, you'll see.

The fanatics of Red Sox nation had little time to celebrate O'Leary's home-run heroics, as the Indians greeted Lowe with back-to-back doubles in their half of the third before Thome stepped in. This time, as in game one, Lowe couldn't sneak his sly high change past the burly lefty without paying the price.

Thome's second round-tripper of the night didn't go quite as far as his first inning rip, but it was equally as damaging to the Boston lead. Suddenly, the Tribe was back on the warpath, 8-7.

The Sox would score the equalizer with some "small ball" in the top of the fourth, when a double by Darren Lewis chased Nagy and a sacrifice fly by Valentin spelled an 8-8 tie. The play was preceded by an otherworldly sequence in which Offerman walked, and Lewis began casually shuffeling down from second to third. Tribe catcher Sandy Alomar excitedly launched the ball into centerfield on the rundown attempt, putting Lewis on third for Valentin's sac fly.

Unfortunately for Cleveland, the tie was all Williams was looking for, as he used the fourth inning for the dramatic entrance of his Cy Young ace. Pedro trotted out to various jibes and chants from the lake faithful, but the Dominican dominator wasn't about to pull a Jaret Wright imitation.

Instead, Pedro settled into a groove that belied his mysterious injury and subsequent rule as head Bosox cheerleader. With his fastball somewhat sluggish (at least by his standards), Martinez used an assortment of off-speed pitches to baffle the Indians over the remaining six innings.

The Tribe whiffed eight times against the ace, with Thome lunging crazily at a Martinez fastball for his second K in his final harmless at-bat in the eighth.

The Red Sox offense, meanwhile, needed one last powerful outburst to propel the club further into the '99 postseason. Hargrove was determined not to play the fool with the entire season on the line, after a Valentin infield single and Daubach sacrifice put the potential winning run into scoring position with the formidable Garciaparra again digging in. A four pitch walk later, Cleveland pitcher Paul Shuey stared in at the suddenly fear-inducing pinwheel of Troy O'Leary's bat.

And once again, the Sox outfielder showed that a free pass to one superstar can become very expensive against another.

O'Leary's second game-breaking homer of the night rode a frozen rope into a suddenly dead-calm right field section, just as the Sox dugout erupted over the top step. It was 11-8 Red Sox, and with Martinez cruising, it may as well have been a 10-run lead.

Boston would add an insurance run in the top of the ninth, when Daubach again cranked a double and was this time replaced with pinch-runner Donnie Sadler. Hargrove finally threw up his hands at the idea of strategy, allowing closer Mike Jackson to pitch to Garciaparra, who showed his appreciation for the gesture by doubling in the Sox' twelfth run.

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Wednesday, October 13, 1999

Safety walk held last night

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

Once again University of Massachusetts students, faculty and administrators joined forces in a safety walk to make suggestions on how to create a more secure campus for everyone.

Last night the safety walk divided into five separate routes in order to inspect the entire campus.

The main purpose of the walk, which is held each semester, is to identify areas on campus where lighting is poor, where there is a need for call boxes and where landscaping needs improvement, such as cleaning up of shrubbery and re-pavement of walkways.

In the past many non-working lights that would otherwise have been left unnoted were reported and changed accordingly. Throughout campus, many improvements were cited that were changed from the suggestions made at last semester's walk. One change in particular was the addition of a new fence along side of the Morrill Science Center.

On the route that evaluated the general campus, including the campus pond and classroom buildings, many of the concerns noted were in regards to shrubbery. The group felt that some bushes, especially in the area in front of Bartlett Hall and by Curry Hicks Cage, needed to be cut back in order to minimize potential hiding places for would-be attackers. Several lights were also noted as being out.

Repairs such as these should be able to be fixed within the next few weeks, a staff member from Public Safety said, although it would depend on the funding available.

Harry Holmes, deputy chief of public safety, pointed out that safety has improved greatly on campus and such walks will continue to point out the weaknesses. Only five call boxes were installed on campus in 1980, compared to the present 80 that can be found, with intentions of increasing to 140 call boxes in the future. He said there is a strong commitment with Office for Information Technology for additional call boxes. Some places where suggestions were made to add a call box included near the campus pond and by the bus stop at the Haigis Mall. The largest problem with adding new call boxes is the exceptionally high costs: therefore the University attempts to add five or six per year.

"I think the safety walks are critical; they are outstanding. The walk gives us an opportunity to see the problems from a different viewpoint. The physical plant knows from the walk what is important to put on the agenda," said Holmes.

He added, "The walk helps build relations between the students, faculty and administration for one goal - the safety on campus."

This is a concept widely felt, said Mikale Billard, speaker of the Student Government Association.

"I think the safety walk is one of the best ways in which the students and administration work together for the common good of the campus. The student turnout was decent, but we could always use more involvement from them," Billard noted.

The group left the walk feeling positive that efforts would be made to continue to make the campus a safer place. "I think some of the recommendations made tonight will be seen soon," Billard said.

NICOLE GUTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Hackin' it

Students outside the Student Union participate in a fierce round of hacky sack.

Julian Bond to speak tonight

By Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

The chairman for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Julian Bond, will speak on affirmative action and college admissions tonight at the University of Massachusetts.

Bond has been an advocate for civil rights and economic justice for more than three decades. In 1960, Bond founded the Atlanta student sit-in and anti-segregation organization and the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee (SNCC) while he was a student at Morehouse College.

Bond was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives five years later, but was prevented from taking the seat by those opposed to his anti-war status regarding the U.S. involvement in Vietnam. He was re-elected to his vacant seat and once again un-seated. Bond was finally seated after winning a third election by a unanimous Supreme Court decision.

In 1968, Bond was co-chair of a challenge delegation from Georgia in the Democratic Convention; during this time he was nominated for vice-president but declined because of his age.

In addition, Bond was the first black chair of the Fulton County Delegation in the Georgia State Senate, and the chair of the Consumer Affairs Committee. He was also active in other ways within the government, either the sponsor or co-sponsor of over 60 bills that were later passed into law.

Bond is the author of A Time to Speak, A Time To Act: The Movement in Politics, as well as a number of works of poetry. He also writes a nationally distributed newspaper column.

Bond is a Distinguished Professor at American University, and a professor of history at the University of Virginia.

In his lecture, entitled "Forging Our Future: The Debate About Affirmative Action and College Admissions," Bond will discuss social injustices and how they relate to education, the availability and access of education to minorities, and the necessity for affirmative action within the public school system. Bond is scheduled to speak at the UMass Student Union Ballroom at 7 p.m. The event is free and open to the public.

Red Sox revelry leads to campus vandalism

By Sam Wilkinson
Collegian Staff

University of Massachusetts police officers Monday night and yesterday morning received 10 calls concerned with student's celebration of the Boston Red Sox' 12-8 victory over the Cleveland Indians. Two students were arrested in the celebrations.

Justin DeMarco, 18, was charged with disorderly conduct and wanton destruction of property valued at more than $250.

According to University of Massachusetts Chief of Police John Luippold, DeMarco was standing on top of a vehicle when he was arrested.

"He was observed jumping on a parked vehicle near the Worcester Dining Commons," Luippold said. "He was pursued and arrested near Herter Hall."

A second student, Glen Horton Jr., 19, was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct. According to Luippold, he had been observed throwing a trash can near the Hampden Dining Commons.

"I turned, after being spotted, and tried to enter the crowd, but officers pursued him and made the arrest," Luippold said.

Other damage from the celebrating students included a green Honda Civic parked near the Northeast Residential Area that was left with a broken front passenger window. Luippold said that there had been no leads in the broken window, but it was suspected to be a result of the celebrations.

There were reports of a fire at Sylvan Residential Area during the student celebrations, but officers found nothing. UMass Depuy Chief of Police Barbara O'Connor also said that police had no information about reports of a housing truck being tipped over.

"That's not to say that it didn't happen, but we don't have any information about it," O'Connor said.

In preparation for future events as a result of Red Sox games, Luippold said that there was staff on duty Monday night and would be staff on duty at future occasions ready for such celebrations.

"We'll have uniformed and non-uniformed officers available," Luippold said, declining to comment further on the issue.

He said his officers have seen such celebrations before, such as when UMass reached the NCAA Men's Basketball Final Four in 1996.

Luippold was not on campus during the celebrations but was alerted. He said that reports of students videotaping

Turn to VANDALISM page 2

Career Expo today at CC Auditorium

By Mary Grein
Collegian Staff

The Campus Career Network is looking to help students and employers come together today in its first-ever fall career fair, the Career Information Expo.

The Career Expo, which will be held today from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. in the Campus Center Auditorium, is designed to give students a head start in the job market. The event follows the Network's Engineering Career Fair, created four years ago in order to build connections between employers and students.

"Now students from a wider variety of academic backgrounds are being courted just as heavily as their technical counterparts," said Tina Acker, who oversees campus recruiting and job referral for the Career Network.

According to Acker, employers who participated in last February's spring career fair were excited to have the opportunity to meet and recruit students earlier in the year. They are looking to find candidates for a growing number of entry-level professional jobs and want them to be aware of what is being offered as early as possible.

At the fair there will be many employers who are visiting the campus for the first time. Others, who have been here in the past, will have information about permanent jobs, internships, or co-ops with the firms.

The fair is aimed at graduating seniors looking for what to do next year, as well as for undergraduates who are interested in getting ahead through such programs as internships. Some of the firms being represented will be from human resources, financial services, retail firms and property management. Friendly's, Yankee Candle Teach for America and Bell Atlantic are some of the firms that have pre-registered for the event.

It doesn't matter whether students are wearing baseball caps and backpacks or business suits, the employers will be much more interested in what they know than what they wear, Acker said.

Acker said the Career Network hopes that holding the fair in the fall as well as the spring will create a more relaxed atmosphere. The two fairs will allow the students to get an idea of what is being offered without the added pressure of not having enough time to make a decision, according to Acker.

"If the fair is at all successful, meaning that there is a good turnout of students, then we will continue to hold the Expo in the fall because we realize that February is a little late to make plans for the upcoming summer and following year," Acker said.

NICOLE GUTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Play time

Young children infest the campus in a game of tag.

Army coup in Pakistan

By Pamela Constable
Washington Post

NEW DELHI, India – The military takeover in Pakistan yesterday is a serious setback for both secular democracy and for stability in the volatile subcontinent, where both Pakistan and its longtime rival India have tested nuclear weapons and missiles in the past 18 months.

Although prompted largely by a personal power struggle between Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and Gen. Pervez Musharraf, the armed forces chief, the takeover could have far-reaching implications. It could increase Pakistani aggression in the disputed Kashmir region, where Pakistan and India fought a 10-week border war earlier this year. It could leave Pakistan's nuclear arsenal in military hands, unfettered by even the pretense of civilian political control. And it could potentially strengthen Islamic fundamentalism in Pakistan, where religious sentiment has been rising within the military.

Indian officials last night said the coup is a "matter of grave concern," and Indian troops were reportedly placed on high alert along the 450-mile border, known as the Line of Control, that divides Kashmir between the two nations. The new government of Indian Prime Minister Atal Bihari Vajpayee, which is to be sworn in today, will hold an emergency meeting of top security officials immediately afterward.

India, which is largely Hindu, and Pakistan, which is an Islamic state, have fought three full-scale wars in the past five decades. This summer they engaged in a smaller conflict in mountainous Kashmir.

Vajpayee and Sharif held talks last winter in the Pakistani city of Lahore and pledged to settle their differences peacefully. But the dialogue was undermined by the outbreak of fighting along the border, and yesterday's military takeover seems likely to deal a further blow to the prospects of resuming negotiations.

In recent weeks, the Pakistani army has been widely reported to be upset with Sharif's decision, at U.S. urging, to pull back Pakistan-based fighters from the border. The army has long viewed Indian Kashmir as rightfully a part of Pakistan, and guerrilla groups backed by the Pakistani military have recently stepped up a terrorist campaign there.

The coup, the fourth in Pakistan's turbulent half-century of independence, could badly damage Pakistan's standing in the West. Pakistan is deeply impoverished and in debt, and depends heavily for economic survival on loans and aid from the United States. Three weeks ago, as tensions were mounting between Sharif and Musharraf, officials in Washington warned that the Clinton administration would "strongly oppose any attempt to change the government through extra-constitutional means."

The United States has been pressing both Pakistan and India to sign a comprehensive nuclear test ban treaty, but both Sharif and Indian officials have been resisting. With the U.S. Senate balking at ratifying the treaty, the Pakistani coup could be a further setback for nuclear disarmament in the region.

"This is a dreadful development," said Praful Bidwai, India's leading anti-nuclear activist. "It should worry everyone that the situation is so volatile. All assumptions about stability, about reasonable forms of military balance, about nuclear deterrence working, are liable to break down."

Arts & Living 6
Comics 14
Crossword 14
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 16
ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Forecast for Amherst

Today	Thursday	Friday
HIGH: 68 LOW: 38	HIGH: 62 LOW: 54	HIGH: 64 LOW: 38

SOURCE WWLP.COM

"Say Goodbye to Hollywood"

Bruce Willis, Sylvester Stallone, Demi Moore and Arnold Schwarzenegger, financial partners for Planet Hollywood International, saw nine of the restaurant's locations close Monday.

PAGE 3

PMB & Samples know how to please

Check out our review of the astonishing Pat McGee and Samples show in Boston last Thursday, along with our weekly Hip-hop, Jazz & Blues, and Media Bytes columns, all today and only in Arts.

PAGE 6

Hell on Wheels

Tyson Kaman and the UMass cycling team tore through the mud this weekend as they hosted an intercollegiate cross-country race. See story, page 16

PAGE 16

Police Log

Arrests
Oct. 12
Glen Horton was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct.
Oct. 12
Paul DeMarco was arrested and charged with disorderly conduct and wanton destruction of property valued at more than $250.
Oct. 11
Mark Sandle was charged with operation of a motor vehicle under the influence, speeding and with having a defective taillight.
Oct. 9
Damon Robinson was arrested on a warranted charge.
Oct. 8
Nolan Godfrey was arrested on a warranted charge.

Bomb Threat
Oct. 8
University of Massachusetts Police Department responded to a bomb threat at Thompson Hall, but found nothing after a check of the building.

Follow-up Investigation
Oct. 8
University of Massachusetts Police followed up on an investigation at Federle Research Lownie.

Larceny
Oct. 9
A video game was stolen in Brooks Residential Hall.
Oct. 8
A duffel bag was stolen from a men's bathroom in the Student Union.

Medical Emergency
Oct. 12
A medical emergency was reported at the Campus Pond.
Oct. 12
A medical emergency was reported at Hicks Way.
Oct. 11
A medical emergency was reported at Thoreau Residential Hall.
Oct. 10
A medical emergency was reported at John Adams Residential Hall.
Oct. 9
A medical emergency was reported at the University Health Service.
Oct. 9
Two medical emergencies were reported at Alumni Stadium.

Noise Complaint
Oct. 12
Noise was reported in the bowl area of Orchard Hill Residential Area.
Oct. 12
Noise was reported at Dwight Residential Hall.

Suspicious Vehicle
Oct. 11
A suspicious vehicle was reported in Lot 49.
Oct. 10
A suspicious vehicle was reported in the Parking Services Trailer Complex.
Oct. 10
A suspicious vehicle was reported in the Campus Center Garage.
Oct. 8
A suspicious vehicle was reported at the Coal Handling Facility.
Oct. 8
A suspicious vehicle was reported on Mather Drive.

Vandalism
Oct. 11
A window was smashed on a vehicle in Lot 63.
Oct. 11
Newspaper machines were tipped over at Haigis Mall.
Oct. 11
Vulgarities were written on a wall in chalk at Crampton Residential Hall.
Oct. 11
A vehicle was damaged on a vehicle in Southwest Circle.
Oct. 11
Liquid was poured under a resident's door at Mackimmie Residential Drive.
Oct. 9
A vehicle was spray painted at the Army ROTC Building.
Oct. 8
A new granite bench was damaged at the Fine Arts Center.

Corrections

In the article "First SGA climbs mountains of issues" that appeared in the Oct. 7 issue of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian, Student Trustee Seth Avakian was misquoted. His statement should have read: "We are really against this idea and will fight to the bone to have this issue have as little effect as possible on UMass students."

The last paragraphs of the article "Tibet awareness celebrated in festival in center of Amherst" that appeared in the Oct. 12 issue were accidentally left off. The paragraphs should have read, "Her only hope is that the people in Tibet will someday achieve freedom and will live a life of happiness and content, one that she herself has discovered. 'It is my dream to want people in Tibet to have the freedom like me and be able to talk from their hearts and not feel pressured by the government,' Tsheodolma said. 'I hope one day the situation in Tibet is resolved and will make this dream come true.'"

The Collegian regrets the errors

DAN SANTELLA/ COLLEGIAN

A water "fall"
A calm waterfall amongst this season's foliage.

Air Force takes new approach to "don't ask" policy

By Paul Richter
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON – The Air Force has adopted a new approach to handling declarations of homosexuality that appears to be reversing a five-year surge in discharges of gay recruits.

Alarmed about a high rate of forced departures at the service's basic training center at Lackland Air Force Base, Texas, Air Force officials have begun permitting recruits to recant statements that they are homosexual.

Under the "don't ask, don't tell" policy adopted five years ago, recruits who publicly declare themselves to be gay must leave the service, while homosexuals who keep their orientation concealed may continue their careers.

Now, under a procedure put into effect in March, Air Force recruits may take back statements that they are gay as long as they do so within a few days of declaring their homosexuality.

They are also given an opportunity to explore the details of the "don't ask" policy with Air Force lawyers in confidential discussions that cannot legally be used against them. Air Force officials are then giving them a few more days to reconsider their statements, before beginning formal discharge procedures.

The change grows out of concern that some recruits might be declaring they are homosexual because of misunderstandings about the "don't ask" policy and in response to the

Turn to POLICY, page 3

■ vandalism

continued from page 1

celebrations didn't interest him unless the videotapes were of specific criminal acts.

"If someone has tape of the window in Northeast being broken, we'd be interested in having that, but if it is only tape of student celebration, that isn't anything that we want," Luippold said.

Police also reported that more sexual graffiti was discovered in the Field Residence Hall in the Orchard Hill Residential Area.

"As it has been, I'm very concerned with the repeated pattern of graffiti discovered in Field," Luippold said. It is the seventh report of sexual graffiti this semester. Luippold indicated that the graffiti discovered over the weekend involved drawings of body parts. Luippold recommended that individuals with information contact the UMPD.

There have been no further leads in the accident that injured visiting UMass assistant professor Ruth A. Abrams last Thursday. According to Luippold, Abrams' condition has improved to serious but fair since the weekend.

"No citations have been issued in the accident," Luippold said. "But we are looking for a sport utility vehicle that was reported to be in the area. It might be green. If we can find the driver of that vehicle, we'd like to speak to them."

ATTENTION
All Night Graphics supervisors!!
There will be a MANDATORY meeting on Tuesday, Oct. 19 at 9:00 pm.
Everyone must attend!!!!!!

Washington news briefs

WASHINGTON (Baltimore Sun) – The fading Whitewater investigation gained at least a few months of life yesterday as the Supreme Court agreed to rule on a fresh constitutional issue raised by independent counsel Kenneth W. Starr.

The court, in a brief order, said it would rule on a question stirred up by the years-long courthouse feuding between Starr and Webster L. Hubbell, a former top-ranking Justice Department official in the Clinton administration.

The court's willingness to hear the case was somewhat of a surprise, because there will be little or no practical effect on Starr or Hubbell, no matter what the final decision is. Hubbell and Starr have made a deal, under which Hubbell pleaded guilty and was sentenced to one year on probation.

If the court ultimately rules in Starr's favor, the only result will be that the Hubbell plea of guilty to tax evasion will remain intact. If Starr loses, that conviction is wiped out, but the probation sentence would not change. A separate guilty plea for concealing facts from the government will remain intact.

The Hubbell case is the last criminal case Starr is known to be pursuing. There have been indications that Starr planned to resign as early as this month, leaving any final details of shutting down his five-year inves-

Turn to BRIEFS, page 3

TELEVISION
51" BIG SCREEN TV
$989
NHL FACEOFF 2000
MATT VASGERSIAN BILL DWYER
989 SPORTS
PlayStation
NHL FACEOFF 2000

CAMPUS AWARENESS DAYS
1999
Tuesday October 12
Wednesday October 13
Thursday October 14
10:00 AM - 3:00 PM
Campus Center Concourse

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE®
✔ Complete Bartending Course
✔ Near Campus
✔ For a Fraction of the Cost of other Schools
✔ National Certification Available
✔ Hands on Pouring Labs
✔ Tips to get a Fun, High Paying Job
Classes Start
Wednesday, October 13th
7:00 pm
Lord Jeffrey Inn, Amherst
Act Now, Space is Limited!!
1-800-U-CAN-MIX
(www.universitybartending.com)

NICOLE GOTTWALD/ COLLEGIAN

Speak out
Students share stories at a rally to celebrate National Coming Out day.

■ policy

continued from page 2

stresses of basic training.

In the first seven months since the new approach was adopted, discharges of recruits at Lackland for this reason dropped 84 percent from the previous year, to 31 from 195.

The change is "dramatic," Jim Wolffe, special assistant to Air Force Secretary Whitten Peters, said in an interview. Now, "almost no one is being discharged for being gay at Lackland."

The Air Force has had a higher rate of such discharges than the other services because of the relatively large number of cases at Lackland. The number of discharges for homosexuality from other Air Force bases has been flat or declining since the "don't ask" policy was instituted in November, 1994, officials said.

Wolffe insisted that the changes at Lackland are procedural in nature and are consistent with the restrictions contained in the "don't ask" policy.

He said recruits are allowed to recant only in circumstances where they have made statements in private settings to individual training instructors or officers. The policy is not meant to apply to cases where recruits have made their declarations in a more public way – by holding hands with a member of the same sex, for example.

Officials of Service Members Legal Defense Fund, a gay-rights advocacy group in Washington, praised the initiative.

"This process appears to be a genuine effort to reduce the number of gay discharges," the group said in a letter sent Monday to Peters.

At the same time, the group said that it had found in a study of Lackland several shortcomings that could explain the training base's high numbers of discharges.

It faulted the base, which handles 30,000 recruits a year, for failing to explain the "don't ask" policy fully, allowing harassment of recruits for supposed homosexuality, neglecting to provide safe ways to resolve problems arising from the policy and for fashioning a system that had resulted in "virtually automatic discharges."

The new changes may come under critical scrutiny on Capitol Hill.

■ briefs

continued from page 2

tigation to his staff.

When the justices reach a final decision in the Hubbell case, probably in seven or eight months, they will be deciding the important issue of how much protection the constitution gives to documents prosecutors obtain by promising the owner legal immunity.

Hubbell resisted handing over his personal financial records to Starr, claiming his Fifth Amendment right against incriminating himself.

But after being given a grant of immunity, he supplied 13,120 pages of papers. Starr then used some of the contents to help secure a grand jury indictment of Hubbell for the tax-evasion charge.

A federal appeals court ruled in January that Starr could go forward with the tax-evasion case only if he could prove that he knew of Hubbell's financial records before forcing him to produce them under immunity. By producing them, the court said, Hubbell may have incriminated himself by admitting that he had the papers.

– Lyle Denniston

WASHINGTON (Baltimore Sun) – The Supreme Court yesterday rebuffed three new attempts to gain government support for religious activity – possibly an interruption of the justices' trend toward allowing closer links between government and religion.

In separate orders with no explanation, the justices refused to rule on these issues:

–The constitutionality of a school tuition voucher program in Maine that excludes parochial students.

– The latest effort to create a tax-supported school district for a Hasidic Jewish village in New York.

–A plea to revive a Pennsylvania sales-tax exemption for the purchase of the Bible, the Koran, the Book of Mormon and other sacred texts.

The justices' decision to bypass such widely varying issues indicated at least caution about delving more deeply into the question of church-state dealings – despite a series of recent rulings allowing government to do more to accommodate religious practices and beliefs.

The court had the option, but did not take it, of holding the cases until it decides a major case on government aid to parochial schools. On Dec. 1, the court is to hold a hearing on a Louisiana case involving the constitutionality of lending taxpayer-financed computers and other learning aids to parochial schools.

The justices may wish to decide that one case, lay down some new constitutional principles, then let lower courts apply it to other church-state disputes.

Bank executive resigns in N.Y.

By Robert O'Harrow Jr.
Washington Post

NEW YORK – A senior Bank of New York executive resigned yesterday saying she was unfairly suspended two months ago and "subjected to painful baseless rumor" amid allegations that several bank accounts were used to launder billions of dollars from Russia.

Natasha Gurfinkel Kagalovsky, a senior vice president who headed the bank's East European division, is the third employee to suffer fallout from the year-long federal probe of suspicious transfers of $7.5 billion or more through a series of related accounts.

Although Kagalovsky was not accused by authorities or bank officials of any wrongdoing in recent weeks, she said in a statement she decided to resign because she felt bank officials had let her "swing in the wind."

"I find this intolerable, personally very hurtful and extremely unfair," Kagalovsky said in a statement released by her attorney, Stanley Arkin.

Kagalovsky's resignation came less than a week after a subordinate, former vice president Lucy Edwards, and two others were indicted in connection with the investigation. The federal indictment charges that the London-based Edwards, her husband Peter Berlin and a Berlin business associate conspired to illegally transmit funds and receive deposits through accounts they maintained for two companies.

Another lower-level employee, Svetlana Kudryavtsev, who was based in New York, was fired in August by bank officials who said she refused to answer questions relating to the case.

Kagalovsky has voluntarily answered questions from prosecutors, Arkin said.

Yesterday, bank officials said little about Kagalovsky's announcement. "We acknowledge the resignation and wish her well," a Bank of New York spokesman said.

But sources have previously downplayed the chances that Kagalovsky had any involvement in the alleged scheme. One source familiar with Kagalovsky's career at the bank said she was highly regarded and said that bank officials had not found any sign that she had done anything wrong.

In an interview with a Russian newspaper in August, Konstantin Kagalovsky said he learned about the case by reading about it from a newspaper on the Internet.

Arkin described Kagalovsky, 44, who was on paid leave, as "an incredibly, fiercely loyal" employee who received no public support from the bank at her most difficult hour. "They basically turned their backs on her," Arkin said. "She fell victim or prey to circumstances not of her own doing."

Kagalovsky, who is Jewish, left Russia two decades ago after being treated poorly because of her religion. She received an undergraduate degree in computer programming and graduated from Princeton in 1995 with a masters degree in mass eastern studies, said a person familiar with her background.

In 1986, she became a management trainee at Irving Trust Co. After the Irving merger with the Bank of New York, she rapidly rose through the ranks. In 1992, she was promoted to senior vice president and division head.

"Most of my adult life, I have worked for this Bank. In that time, I believe, I have made major contributions and I have been an entirely loyal, devoted and effective employee," she said in her statement.

Bankrupt Planet Hollywood closes nine restaurants

By Paul Lieberman and E. Scott Reckard
Los Angeles Times

Hoping to end its bankruptcy drama as a smaller but profitable company, Planet Hollywood International closed nine of its company-owned restaurants Monday.

The co-founder and chief executive of the movie-themed chain, Robert Earl, said the chain would like to open a restaurant in Anaheim, Calif., an apparent reference to Downtown Disney, the entertainment mall that Walt Disney Co. will open in 2001 next to Disneyland.

Planet Hollywood had owned 32 U.S. restaurants before the closures, which are part of a prepackaged reorganization worked out with its creditors. The chain, which announced in August that it would pare unprofitable sites, said it would make its formal Chapter 11 bankruptcy filing yesterday in bankruptcy court in Delaware.

Planet Hollywood closed restaurants in Chicago; Fort Lauderdale, Fla.; Gurnee, Ill.; Houston; Indianapolis; Maui, Hawaii; Miami; Phoenix, Ariz.; and Santa Ana, Calif.

One or two more sites could be closed depending on negotiations to win more favorable terms from landlords, Earl said. He would not say if one is Beverly Hills, where the company has complained it is hampered by a city prohibition on late-night liquor sales.

Despite backing from celebrities such as Bruce Willis, Arnold Schwarzenegger and Sylvester Stallone – who received stock in return for promotional work – the chain has suffered from declining year-to-year sales at many locations. Sales of Planet Hollywood T-shirts and other merchandise, which account for a quarter of revenues, also have fallen.

The Orlando, Fla.-based chain, known for the movie memorabilia hanging from the walls and ceilings, also is selling peripheral businesses such as its sports-themed All Star Cafes.

Free Tibet
TIBET AWARENESS DAY
The Tibet Awareness Day was a Great Success. The Tibetan Association of Western Massachusettes and the Five College Students For a Free Tibet would like to thank our sponsors who made this day possible.
Special Thanks to:
Bread and Circus, Coca Cola, Lesser, Newman, Souweine and Nasser Law Firm, SFT Hampshire College, Lord Jeffery Inn, Econo Lodge, Collective Copies and Glimpse of Tibet

ESPN The Magazine
Like SportsCenter With Staples.
ESPN The Magazine– A convenient, portable version of the excitement and attitude of ESPN.
Special $13 Discount Student Rate!
Use attached coupon or call
1-888-335-ESPN
STUDENT SAVINGS Certificate
Please send me ESPN The Magazine at the special student rate of 26 issues for $13. (Wow, that's only 50 cents an issue!)
Payment Enclosed
Bill Me
Name
Address
City State Zip
Mail to: ESPN The Magazine P.O. Box 37326 Boone, IA 50037-0326
SBJBMB

TODAY
Career Information Expo
Wednesday, October 13, 1999
Campus Center Auditorium
10 a.m. – 3 p.m.
Wondering... what you can do with your major?
who will hire you?
what's out there for jobs?
Get the answers to your questions!
Come to the Career Information Expo!
Meet a variety of employers at Expo '99
They're coming to meet you!
Everyone is invited – all majors, all class years!
Presented by the Campus Career Network
www-ccnaccd.umass.edu - tel 545-2274

A country mouse's tale

I am a country mouse.

In case you haven't heard the children's tale that was common back in the days of children's tales, the "country mouse" I am referring to is a character in the story titled The City Mouse and the Country Mouse.

Very briefly, for those of you with deprived childhoods, the premise is simple: there are two mice – a city mouse and a country mouse (if I needed to clear that up for you, you are officially a moron). The mice then switched environments, the city mouse going to the country and vice versa. The city mouse was disgusted by the fact there was no form of mass transit in the country, while the country mouse was disgusted by the fact that the mass transit that the city did have smelled like urine. The mice then went back to their respective homes and promised themselves that they would never consider the needs of other settings when voting on the next referendum question. The moral of this children's tale is, quite simply, never try to expand your horizons. I'er.

Seth Koenig

Now, you are probably outraged because this children's tale in no way represents other, diverse groups of rodents, such as suburban mice or beavers or something, but don't worry about it for the time being. There are very likely more kinds of mice than just two, but nobody ever wrote a story about them, so deal.

I was raised in the very rural setting of Maine, in a town called Durham, which, along with "Springfield," is found in each and every state in the nation. I was comfortable there. My closest friends were trees and cows, and that was cool. Therefore, I am a country mouse (which in no way describes my views on music – I'd just as soon never hear Garth Brooks or Shania Twain ever again). Get it, now?

So, coming full circle, this inner hunger to do a country mouse sort-of-thing drove me to go hiking a weekend ago at Norwottuck Mountain, on the way to Mt. Holyoke College. Complete with my very natural and instinctual props, such as my cellular phone and my Oakley sunglasses, I took to the wilderness. Following the ancient white paint marks left on the trees to guide the early people to places where even earlier people used their ancient nail guns to post signs that said insightful and spiritual things like "Mt. Norwottuck." I went to a wonderful ledge overlooking the entire Pioneer Valley, which is something quite beautiful this time of year, when the foliage is changing.

Unsatisfied with this incredible beauty, I continued down a trail that was marked by ancient blue paint until I found a sign that signified a place called the "Horse Caves." The huge rock wall, full of nooks and crannies, was just what I was looking for. This was quite clearly where the ancient Cave Horses lived sometime in the Revolutionary War era. I had to be very careful while inspecting this region, worried sick that descendants of the ancient Cave Horses, such as the modern-day Cave Horse, would emerge from the mysterious crevices and bludgeon me to death with their medieval tools, like the Clovis Point, the Folsom Point and the Extra Point.

Moving along, I continued to follow the path for what seemed to be six trillion miles before I came to a road, which was obviously somewhere in Nevada. After passing several establishments selling fresh apples and produce and whatnot, each insisting that I only had two or three more miles to go before I reached the entrance to Norwottuck Mountain, where I had parked my car, I reached the entrance to Norwottuck Mountain, where I had parked my car.

The vehicle was sitting there peacefully, silently questioning why I had abandoned it in favor of traveling great distances via shoe. I couldn't come up with a definite answer for it at that time, except, of course, that I was very sorry and I promised to buy it flowers and take it out to dinner just like I used to.

Anyway, I had eaten a bushel of apples or two on the way down the road, and I came up with a wonderful referendum question that is pertinent only to country mice: there must be sidewalks inserted on winding back roads because people who are looking for the entrance to Norwottuck Mountain are on the way to Mt. Holyoke by foot are dangerously close to being hit by oncoming traffic way too often. There's just not enough room between the white line (probably left by early people to be a guide) and the thick forest. I am lucky to be alive!

Vote yes on question whatever-the-hell: there should be sidewalks on winding back roads.

That's it.

Seth Koenig is a Collegian columnist.

President Springer

Last April, while working as a journalist in London (actually I had just quit, truth be told), I was accosted one night by a pair of drunken South Africans.

I have always been wary of South Africans. Something about the way they cling to racist models of government has always unnerved me. And in my opinion, they talk funny. When dealing with drunken South Africans, I am careful not to bring up either of these points, as they may be taken as offensive.

Bring up Jerry Springer instead. Jerry Springer is invaluable as a means of breaking the conversational ice in foreign countries. Good or bad, everybody has an opinion on Jerry Springer, even the usually neutral Swiss.

And the South Africans, they love Jerry Springer. They seem to believe, in fact, that the guests on his show offer an accurate representation of the American public in general – as though we're all lining up outside the television studio for a chance to unload in public whatever Oedipal baggage we've been lugging around.

Boomer Pinches

"Tell me, Broomstick," one of them said, putting his arm around my shoulders. "Your mother – does she ever try to have sex with your friends?"

"Of course not," I said. "She's too busy seducing my sister's boyfriend."

They thought this was very funny. They also didn't seem to realize that it was a joke, that not everyone in the United States is a "Too Hot For TV" segment waiting to happen. I considered explaining to them the uniquely American cultural phenomenon known as "white trash." But in my experience there's no reasoning with a drunken South African.

I couldn't even persuade them that my name was Boomer and not Broomstick. Every time I pointed out their error, it only seemed to confuse them. They responded with what I think was meant to be compassion, patting me on the shoulder and saying, "There's nothing wrong with being called Broomstick."

Clearly there was a communication barrier. All they wanted to hear about was how, in America, 15-year-old girls in skimpy black dresses engage in all manner of hair-pulling and eye-gouging behaviors over any number of lurid and bizarre disputes.

It occurred to me that Jerry Springer was, for all intents and purposes, America's ambassador to the world, a sort of mall-culture Jesus spreading trailer park gospel in 32 languages in over 70 countries, one hour a day with commercials, through the universal medium of television.

At first I was alarmed. Springer was, after all, a man of dubious morals, pandering to the masses. He had once been a politician of great promise, brought low by a sex scandal. Hmmm.

Suddenly I had a vision of Springer's destiny, fused with our nation's own.

Jerry Springer should be president of the United States.

Face it: he already is president of the only America that matters anymore, the one that we see on television. His show is democratic in format – does he not let every guest and audience member speak his or her mind? The Jerry Springer Nation would be one in which the most intimate and trivial details of private life become public domain. We're already headed that way, thanks to the media, the Internet, and our own post-Cold War anxieties. Jerry Springer is just ahead of his time.

His cabinet could be recruited entirely from television's immortal pantheon. He'd have Michael Richards as vice president, his bumbling brand of physical comedy recalling the clumsy, incompetent, but oh-so-likable Gerald Ford. Spuds Ghost could be the secretary of defense – sure he's a big star now on the Cartoon Network with his groundbreaking "Space Ghost Coast-To-Coast" talk show, but back in the halcyon days of Hanna-Barbera, Space Ghost defeated such interplanetary threats as the Lava Men.

Puck, from MTV's "The Real World III," would make a fine secretary of state (Though he would probably be dismissed fairly quickly after Senator David Hyde Pierce, notoriously anal, discovers him sticking his finger into the communal jar of Jiffy peanut butter. That Puck. What a rascal!).

Let's not forget the comedic skills of head speechwriter Chris Rock, whose inaugural address would go like this: "My fellow Americans," followed by 40 minutes of bleeped-out cuss words. Throw in Katie Holmes or Jennifer Aniston as the first lady, whose duties would naturally include the State of the Union Striptease, and you have yourself another Camelot.

These are not the inefficient and self-absorbed politicians we're used to. These are people we love and trust. These are TV stars.

The multi-faceted genius of watershed shows like "Three's Company" and "Sanford and Son" would finally be appreciated. Important issues long ignored would finally be confronted, like "How is 'Suddenly Susan' still on the air?" and "What the hell was ALF?" and most importantly "Why hasn't anybody killed Fran Drescher?" New holidays – Hasslehoff Day, for example – could be added to the calendar.

Ha, you say. What a frivolous flight of fancy. But I ask you, gentle reader, with the likes of Jesse "The Ego" Ventura, Donald "What, me broke?" Trump, and Pat "What's a Holocaust?" Buchanan all flirting with candidacy next year, wouldn't you rather see a sensitive, compassionate, and ruthlessly media-savvy gentleman like Jerry Springer on the ballot?

But what does Springer stand for, you ask. Bah. Nobody pays attention to such drivel. America has become the punch line to its own bad joke, overheard at this most decadent of cocktail parties that we call the 20th century. Politics, like every other aspect of our lives, has become entertainment. We may as well have fun with it.

I shared my epiphany with my new South African friends. They responded with much enthusiasm. But they had never heard of Space Ghost, I tried to explain that he was a well-loved cartoon character from the late sixties or early seventies (I don't know which), who for years kept the galaxy safe from a host of malevolent forces, before he sold out to The Man and did what everybody else does: he got his own talk show.

"...he already is President of the only America that matters anymore, the one that we see on TV."

"Are there lots of girls fighting on his show?" one of the South Africans asked.

"Well, no. Not exactly. But he does have a giant space mantis for a sidekick. He's called Brakk. He used to be Space Ghost's archenemy but now he plays keyboards."

They had no idea what I was talking about.

Boomer Pinches is a Collegian Columnist.

Fixin' the South

Of all the places in America, it's got to be the South that is the worst. It is disgusting; it is embarrassing; and it is downright awful. The people are ignorant. The land is ugly. There is no obvious reason to ever go anywhere south of the Mason-Dixon Line.

Massachusetts, on the other hand, is the best place. Massachusetts is a Camelot on the hill for the rest of the heathen United States. The people here are brilliant, smart and beautiful. They take the right things seriously and don't sweat the small stuff. If our country ever decided to admit a 51st state, that state should have to emulate Massachusetts.

Sam Wilkinson

In the South, people speak an ignorant language. Those types use words like "fixin" as in "I'm fixin' to do this or that."

Can you imagine being forced to listen to something so ignorant? Obviously, fixin' doesn't mean about, which is what would make sense in that sentence.

"I'm about to do this or that."

That makes sense. But fixin'? Please.

If Southerners would take the time to emulate elegant and refined Massachusetts speak, they would all be much better off. Wicked, for example. It isn't like we use words that don't have anything to do with their actual meaning. I'm wicked serious.

It's wicked obvious that Southerners can't speak, and at the same time wicked obvious that Northerners can. It isn't just the speech down there that is such an obvious shortcoming. They also remember the Confederacy! Can you imagine a sin so great? Celebrating a cause that is so obviously wrong. Hell, they lost the war, didn't they? Can't they just let it go?

What gives people the right to remember their family members who fought for their homes? Not everybody in the South owned slaves, but the North invaded everywhere, and those people had the audacity to defend themselves. Please. Obviously, Southerners are ignorant to remember their own families, the farmers who didn't own slaves, the farmers who owned small farms that Northern troops marched over and through, the farmers who stood to protect themselves in much the same way that revolutionaries from Massachusetts did.

The obvious difference being that we were right, and they were wrong.

Furthermore, it's not like we remember horrible people in Massachusetts. It's not like we have a town named Amherst or a college whose nickname is the Jeffs, both named after someone that killed more than his fair share of Native Americans.

But they have other traditions. They remember how life once was. They remember the history of their land, which is ridiculous, because their history isn't important. Not like Massachusetts history is. Maybe Dixie should look into a real history before they remember their own.

And even when it comes to history, Massachusetts doesn't revel in its past. We don't name teams the Patriots or the Minutemen. We don't remember battles at Lexington or Concord. We are the moral superiors of this nation. We celebrate our future.

But the South just refuses to stop. Can you believe that people in the South have traditions? Apparently, football is a big deal to them, if you can imagine anything like that. It's just disgusting really. Football.

It's huge down there and people care for some reason. They pack football stadiums to watch their teams, regardless of whether they win or lose. They are dedicated to their teams, be it college or professional.

Not like up here. Here we stand on the high moral ground with our fair weather fandom. It's always better to only support a team when they're winning, rather than wasting our time on losers. That is what a truly moral and right-seeing person would do. Massachusetts breeds moral and right-seeing people.

But the absolute worst thing that those damn Southerners do is have stereotypes. Stereotypes, if you can believe that! We don't stereotype in Massachusetts. We embrace anyone, as opposed to those Southerners down there. They are all the same, speaking their ignorant language, remembering their forefathers for engaging in something they shouldn't have been, and watching their football.

It's just disgusting that people so obviously flawed and backwards aren't forced to emulate such a forward thinking state as Massachusetts, where we refuse our past, speak in perfect King's English, and wouldn't enjoy a sport if we had to.

It gets ridiculous after a while, being forced to tolerate such backwardness so close to our great state.

Why the rest of this nation isn't forced to emulate our amazing, wonderful, educated state is just unbelievable. Maybe one day, Massachusetts will be recognized for its inherent greatness, but for the time being, we can only tolerate such the ignorance in the rest of the United States.

Sam Wilkinson is a Collegian Columnist.

In defense of tradition

Every high school student knows anxiety. Whether it is grades, sports, or extracurricular activities, high school boys and girls are faced with challenges on a daily basis. They scurry about like rats in a maze, scampering back and forth in a chaotic attempt to balance their hectic adolescent life, to prepare for that adulthood they have only read and dreamt about.

At every turn a new question is posed, a new dilemma presents itself. What is my class rank? Will the football team win on Saturday? Do you think that Jimmy likes me? But in the great scheme, these musings are not as burdensome as they appear to be. For there is one more hideous beast, nor a more fearsome phantasm in the forest of youth than the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT), the gauntlet every high school student must run should they hope to drink from the chalice of college. And they must be fleet of foot, for those who scorn Mercury's Scion fall behind and are caught in the vice's grip.

There is a vast horde of naysayers who would slander our national standard for academic talent. Their attacks take on many guises, yet are tied together by a mutual disdain for the test, the most crucial of formalities. Some claim that the tests are racially and socially biased. Others believe that it is unfair to place such an awesome weight on a timed test, claiming that the speed of response is completely unrelated to the intelligence of the person taking it. Still others propose that grade point average is a more stalwart hallmark to judge college applicants by, and that SAT scores are an inappropriate evaluation criterion.

William F. Larkin

But all these heretics are wrong. They have been deceived by the wailings of those who feel that their inadequacy is a result of the system and not of their own shortcomings. I feel that we, as college students, whose walls have withstood the battering ram, must not let the moans of the damned stray our course. The SATs are a noble institution, having served college review boards for some time now. We must not let the cries of some deafen the harmony of the established.

If I am not mistaken, intelligence is the most desirable and noteworthy characteristic of the college applicant. While I am not denouncing the importance of other qualities, such as leadership, athletics, zeal, and so forth, I believe that colleges are hotbeds of academia and therefore only those whose arrowheads can cut the skin are worthy of its honor. That being said, I feel that the SATs are the most accurate indicator of this intelligence, this worldly knowledge, and this potential for learning. The tests place focus upon the traditional tenets of academia – reading, writing, and arithmetic.

Because the test is timed, the student's wits are put to the test in a high-intensity, high-pressure situation. Contrary to some claims, the tests are quite fair. They are constructed on a plane of knowledge that all college-bound students are expected to have access to, having completed most of high school by the time they take the test. Now, there are some who claim that the test is biased, that my claim is false and not all adolescents have had exposure to the same information. And while I admit there is a ring of truth to that statement, it is a weak, poorly formed ring. For even if that statement bears the light of truth, the problem then lies within the nation's schooling system and not the national test.

To change the test would be foolish, for it would only lower our country's academic standard. We are not a nation of fools; we are a First World country. Our people should thus represent this elitist categorization in the world with pride and confidence. Not everyone is a scholar. There are those whom the scythe of the SAT severs from the pack. But is that not its purpose? We are not a uniform society; everyone has his/her own shortcomings.

There is not always an excuse for inadequacy; sometimes self-acceptance must displace a burgeoning pride. There are those who must fail every test, or else it would not be a test. If we were to let everyone who filled out an application be accepted into college, then academia would be sacrificed to the sluggish pace of mediocrity, so that the American college system meanders away from its goal of excellence. The focus in this country is on the result, on the grade, on getting the job done without concern for quality or craftsmanship. Instant gratification is important, causing the modern American to shift blame, make excuses, and take the easy way out. We have become a country where no one is wrong and everyone is worthy of receiving respect for achievements, whether or not the achievements have been truly earned.

Instant gratification illustrates our county's lack of respect for reading, the greatest asset of mankind. We would do well to cherish it. The search for educational diversity has distracted the focus of learning, moving it from classics and fundamentals and spreading it across a spectrum. A curriculum should be diverse, I agree, but only after the tenets of learning have been instilled in the student. We want to achieve the glorious before struggling through the quagmire, though it should be the other way around.

There was a time in this country when going to college was unheard of, a great honor. Now, everyone thinks that they should go. And well they should bear this unbridled optimism, for to exist in this capitalistic society without a college degree is akin to fighting a lion with the jawbone of a monkey. But this is not to say that everyone is worthy of college. The purpose of this artificial selection is to weed out those who cannot rise to the challenge of higher learning. College is an honor; it is not a logical progression of life. Keep this in mind the next time you question the efficacy of the SAT.

William F. Larkin is a Collegian Columnist.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager

Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martigenti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pashkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menechel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Jacob Buckley-Fortin Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Mondays through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1936. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 3:30 p.m.

Hey you out there, voted recently?

Thanks to some founding females, all americans can vote since the passing of the 19th amendment

By now we are all probably a little sick of politics. The Monica and Bill scandal or Bob Dole selling Viagra is enough to turn most people away from it. Yet, beneath all this mess there is an important issue, a privilege we seem to forget. As nasty as politics in our country can get, we as citizens can vote for our officials. More importantly, women can vote. So let's take a moment to examine the obstacles women had to overcome to attain the right to vote.

A most important one is the 19th Amendment, which guarantees women the right to vote. Although the amendment was not ratified until 1920, efforts to introduce the amendment had started decades earlier. The amendment was first introduced to Congress in 1878. Even prior to this women evaluated their position and rights in society.

On July 19th and 20th, 1848, in Seneca Falls, N.Y., women from across the country joined together to discuss the social, civil and religious condition of women. Lucretia Mott and Elizabeth Cady Stanton organized the first women's right convention in the country. Mott was born in 1793 in Nantucket, Mass. She became a Quaker minister in 1821. Mott took a strong stance against slavery and in 1840, attended the World Anti-Slavery Convention in London, England. In addition, Mott fought for women's rights. She published the book, Discourse on Women, in 1850. In this book she discussed the social restrictions placed upon women in America and Western Europe.

Another leader was Elizabeth Cady Stanton, who was born in Johnstown, N.Y. in 1815. Stanton fought for women's rights. Aside from organizing the Seneca Falls convention, Stanton worked closely with Susan B. Anthony. In 1863, the two founded the National Women Suffrage Association, which Stanton served as president of until 1892. Stanton devoted a great deal of time and effort to the 1878 introduction of a constitutional amendment for women's suffrage.

By the end of the convention, the women had come to several conclusions. The following is an example of a resolution that the women made: "That woman is man's equal — was intended so by the Creator, and the highest good of the race demands that she should be recognized as such."

Interestingly enough, it would be several decades later that women would be viewed as a political equal to men, and granted the right to vote.

Women won the right to vote when Tennessee voted for the amendment, providing the crucial 36th ratification necessary for final adoption. Tennessee legislator Harry Burn voted for the amendment after his elderly mother had encouraged him to do so. Some states were still hesitant to grant the right to vote to women. Maryland did not ratify the amendment until 1941, and did not deliver the ratification document to the State Department until 1958.

Christine Connare is a Collegian Correspondent

Pressing the flesh in the day

Edith Nourse Rogers, a Massachusetts republican representative, was the longest-serving woman in the history of Congress. Rogers was born in Saco, Maine in 1881 and attained an impressive education, both in America and France. In 1907, she married Representative John Jacob Rogers.

During the First World War, Edith Rogers traveled to Europe to inspect field hospitals and then returned to the United States to work as a Red Cross volunteer in Washington. After the war Edith Rogers became involved with Veterans Affairs. She was appointed by Presidents Harding and Coolidge to the position of assistant for programs dealing with disabled veterans.

In 1925, she replaced her husband in the House of Representatives, following his death. In Congress, she applied her previous work experience with veterans, working with the Committee on World War Veterans Legislation. In addition, she worked on the bill that established the Women's Army Corps, sponsored the G.I. Bill and the Korean Veteran's Benefits bill, and assisted in the establishment of a Nurses Corps in the Veterans' Administration.

Rogers remained politically active throughout her life and went on to win another 17 elections before her death in office in 1960.

Jeanette Rankin was the first woman in the House of Representatives. Rankin was born in 1880, in Missoula, Mont. In 1902, she graduated from the University of Montana. Her political career in Congress started in 1917. Rankin served from 1917-1919 and 1941-1943. She was the first woman to represent Montana in Washington, D.C. As a member of the House of Representatives, she voted against America's involvement in both World Wars. In fact, she was the only member in Congress to vote against our country's entry into the wars.

Rankin fought endlessly for women's rights. She introduced legislation that provided citizenship for women, independent from their husbands', which expanded the role of the government in providing health instruction for women. She also submitted the suffrage amendment for ratification by the states. In 1911, she spoke to the Montana Legislature to fight for the passage of the 19th Amendment. Rankin was a member of the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom and of the National Council for Prevention of War.

Rankin stayed devoted to politics throughout her life. In 1971, she encouraged Nixon to end the Vietnam War. In 1973, at the age of 92, she was considering another run for Congress. Later that year she died in Carmel, California.

-Compiled by Christine Connare

Tibetan nuns perform rituals at AC in first Western tour

By Christine Connare
Collegian Correspondent

The exotic sights and sounds of Tibetan rituals filtered through the Buckley Recital Hall at Amherst College last Wednesday evening as the Tibetan Buddhist nuns of Khachoe Ghakyil Nunnery in Kathmandu, Nepal, delivered "Women's Freedom and Spiritual Liberation: An Evening of Sacred Performance."

The nuns are currently on a North American tour, performing sacred rituals, music, dance and meditations. This tour marks the first time a troupe of Tibetan nuns have embarked on a journey to the West to perform such practices. The tour illustrates the essential role women have played in Tibetan Buddhist religion. One goal of this North American tour is to raise funds for the expansion and improvement of the nuns' religious facilities in Nepal.

Tibetan Buddhist nun Tsenla describes the tour as "quite successful."

Tsenla narrated the program, which consisted of 10 separate performances. Each performance holds a special meaning to the nuns, which was explained by Tsenla. Ten nuns, selected for their impressive dance abilities, carried out the performances.

One dance, which holds special meaning to the nuns, is the Dakini Dance. In this dance the nuns pay tribute to a divine feminine principle. In Tibetan Buddhism the female saint Maching Lapdron was considered to be a dakini, or "Sky-Dancer," a dynamic, dancing, female emanation of enlightened mind.

"Yet, in recent years nuns have gained increasing power and access to a wide variety of spiritual expressions, vividly".

The nuns are part of a new generation of women practicing Tibetan Buddhism. The nuns belong to the Khachoe Ghakyil Nunnery, which was founded in 1986 under the guidance of Lama Thubten Zopa Rinpoche. The nunnery consists of nearly 220 Tibetan Buddhist nuns.

In the past, women did not have access to a variety of Buddhist teachings or practices. In comparison to the nunneries, the monasteries possessed many material resources, as well as a rich curriculum, and held a higher social status. Yet, in recent years nuns have gained increasing power and access to a wide variety of spiritual expressions, vividly illustrated in the performance at Amherst College.

The nuns seemed to have impressed the audience at AC. Following the first dance the audience was quiet, not sure whether to clap or remain silent. The narrator took the stage and then encouraged the audience to clap.

Tsenla said she hopes the performance will impact the audience.

Their intention is to "develop [in the audience] an open mind towards new cultures, an openness to a new culture and to new ideas," said Tsenla.

It seems the nuns are indeed working hard to promote a new acceptance of foreign cultures and beliefs.

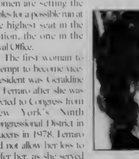
Upcoming Five-College happenings

SATURDAY, OCT. 16, 2:30 p.m. – Food For Thought Books at 106 N. Pleasant St. and the Queer Reading Series presents Peggy Gillespie, editor of Love Makes a Family: Portraits of Lesbian, Gay, Bisexual & Transgender Parents & Their Families.

MONDAY, OCT. 18, 4:30 p.m. – Amherst psychologist Patricia Everett will present A History of Having A Great Many Times Not Continued To Be Friends, a staged reading of a play based on the correspondence between Mabel Dodge and Gertrude Stein, 1911-1934.

THURSDAY, OCT. 21, 7:30 p.m. – At the Odyssey Bookshop in S. Hadley, Yaffa Eliach, a pioneering scholar in Holocaust studies, founder of the first Center for Holocaust Documentation and Research in the United States, professor of history and literature at Brooklyn College, and author of Hasidic Tales of the Holocaust, will read from her new book, There Once Was a World: A 900-Year Chronicle of the Shtetl of Eishyshok. A book signing will follow.

TUESDAY, OCT. 26, 7:30 p.m. – Mary King Austin, a Five-College women's studies research associate, will give a colloquium entitled, "A Meditation upon Education, Imagination and Desire: Writing a Biography of Elaine Goodale Eastman (1865-1953)," at the Dickinson House Living Room at Mt. Holyoke College. Elaine Goodale Eastman was a 19th century New England girl who grew to maturity via The Freedmen's Bureau in Virginia and the newly formed Indian reservations in the Dakotas, and lived and worked in two cultures.



FRIDAY, OCT. 29-31 – Inn at the Shaker Mill, Cuanan, N.Y., WOCLN Retreat: "Retreating for Renewal: Check Yourself, Before You Wreck Yourself." "Session No. 2: Checking In & Managing Health."

Politics has not always been an "ol' boys club"

A woman leading D.C.? The path is clearing out

By Christine Connare & Kathleen Ralls
Collegian Staff

So what women are making strides in politics today? Will we have a female president in the near future? Some influential women are setting the tables for a possible run at the highest seat in the nation, the one in the Oval Office.

Former British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher

The first woman to attempt to become vice president was Geraldine A. Ferraro after she was elected to Congress from New York's Ninth Congressional District in Queens in 1978. Ferraro did not allow her loss to defer her, as she served three terms in the House of Representatives and is an advocate for the elderly and women. She is currently a co-host of CNN's "Crossfire."

Here's a closer look at some women politicians making headlines now: Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson.

One woman to keep your eye on is republican Sen. Kay Bailey Hutchinson from Texas. Hutchinson was the first woman to represent Texas in the Senate. She has been asked about the representation of women on the GOP ticket.

"I think that it would be terrific to have a woman on our ticket and I certainly think that we have a qualified stable of women who are credible as a potential vice president or President of the United States. And I do think that's exciting," said Hutchinson.

On her own future goals for presidency Hutchinson says, "I would never seek the vice presidency. If I ever decide to run, I'll run for president."

While Hutchinson considers a run for the presidency, with dozens of celebrities. What does Hutchinson think about movie stars turned politicians?

"I'm not persuaded when someone who is a movie star or a sports figure comes to lobby for some issue or decides to run for public office," says Hutchinson.

Republican Gov. Christine Todd Whitman is also capturing some attention lately. Whitman is the first female governor of New Jersey after being elected in 1995. In her first year as governor she cut taxes for New Jersey residents by 15 percent, proving she could get the job done.

"I think that it would be terrific to have a woman on our ticket and I certainly think that we have a qualified stable of women who are credible as a potential vice president or President of the United States."

Whitman is in favor of late term abortion, going against the view held by most republicans. She is also opposed to the republican welfare plan which limits assistance after two years and provides no aid to immigrants.

Whitman, mother of two children, certainly does have a bright future in politics. Perhaps a nomination for the presidency is in her near future? Only time will tell.

EMILY'S LIST

Introduced in 1985 by founder and president Ellen R. Malcolm as a means of recruiting female democratic political candidates, training campaign staff, planning strategic research and providing technical assistance from in-house teams of political, fundraising and communications professionals, EMILY's List is the U.S.'s most expansive financial resource for federal candidates.

EMILY's List, which stands for "Early Money is Like Yeast" (it makes dough rise), looks to support pro-choice democratic women candidates in major state and national elections. It raised $7.5 million from its 50,000 members during its most recent two-year election cycle.

How successful is EMILY's List? Since 1986 it has assisted seven women into the U.S. Senate, 49 women into the U.S. House of Representatives, and three to become U.S. governors. The seven senators are the only Democratic females to have been elected on their own.

EMILY's List President Malcolm served at Common Cause in the early 1970s and later for the National Women's Political Caucus and as a special assistant for consumer affairs for President Jimmy Carter.

One of EMILY's List's campaign 2000 recommendations is Ruth Ann Minner for governor of Delaware. Minner was hired as the governor's receptionist nearly 30 years ago, before she even had a high school diploma. Serving in the State House and Senate and for a pair of terms as lieutenant governor, Minner supports working mothers and small businesses.

Presidential hopeful George W. Bush

Attention all UMass and Five College Students!

Come down to the Collegian and let us know what is on your mind. Join us and write about Women's Issues!

Write for Women's Issues

Keeping your identity, keeping what is yours

Admit it. You practiced writing the last name of a boy you liked when you were younger. Sitting at your desk during indoor recess, as your classmates chased each other with erasers, you doodled your first name followed by his last name, secretly hoping the act would someday seal your fate together.

If you are a male still reading, you probably didn't do this. You were quietly eating a snack, or were one of the hooligans racing around the classroom. Why would you write her last name after yours? How many males do you know who have taken the surname of their wives? I know of none.

"My goal is not to be a maid to anyone, nor openly partake in such a one-sided ritual."

This habit never really struck me as odd until five years ago when my mother inserted her maiden name in place of her original middle name. She said she wanted people to know who she really was. I thought about some divorced women I knew who had reverted back to their maiden, or shall I say, original name.

That got me thinking about my own reservations in relation to taking another person's last name. I don't really want to acquire a maiden name. Maiden name? How Middle Age of us! Will I be moving into his parent's home after the wedding? I don't think so. My goal is not to be a maid to anyone, nor openly partake in such a one-sided ritual.

It was then that I decided I would be Kathleen Ralls forever. Or maybe marry Johnny Forever and become Kathleen Ralls Forever. That would be kind of cool.

Secretly harboring this idea, I brought it up last spring while talking with my friends Deb and Steve. Steve proclaimed that he loved his last name and would never want to change it. I seconded the idea for myself to more reactive comments. I said if I got married, my husband would have to take my name or I would keep my own name. Deb said that she planned on hyphenating her last name, as many women today have been doing.

"Then I certainly would not want to marry you," Steve told me. He also said that I would have a difficult time finding a man to comply with my request. I told him that I didn't care, and furthermore, I would dutifully take his name off my fictitious list of possible mates.

Keeping one's full name is a relatively new concept for American women. More and more women are going the hyphenated route in an effort to hang on to their own identity.

The scene that struck me as funny in the movie The Wedding Singer was when Drew Barrymore's character was practicing her new name in front of the mirror. First it was Julia Gulia, and then it was Julia Hart. Julia Gulia? How awful is that? Obviously, when you are born your parents put some effort into giving you a melodic-sounding name.

Why take the chance and wind up with something Barrymore could have? I think the ridiculous rhyming, more than anything, was the turning point for her character. Think about it, the name you were born with is you. Imagine how much easier it would be to find a long-lost girl friend if she didn't take on her husband's name. Do you really want to say that you used to be somebody else with a completely different last name? Do you think your father or brother or boyfriend even has to think about this?

With more and more women entering a sometimes-impersonal professional world, why not make it a little easier on yourself and keep it simple. Keep your name. Hilary Rodham Clinton only superimposed her husband's last name when he ran for governor of Arkansas.

The question arises about what to name your children. I think in the future last names will not matter so much due to population increases. Be creative. You could hyphenate their name, give them your husband's last name as a middle name and yours as a last name. Make it Ralls Forever if you like!

The point is that a lot of options are open for women and keeping their name should be a no-brainer.

-Kathleen Ralls is a Collegian Columnist.

Arts & Living

Your Guide to all that's going on in the Pioneer Valley

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Wednesday, October 13, 1999

Samples pass torch onto PMB

McGee is quickly becoming a legend

By Tom Sadlowski
Collegian Staff

PAT MCGEE BAND & THE SAMPLES
Avalon
Oct. 7

BOSTON – A day after an incredible two-set performance at Pearl Street Nightclub in Northampton, the Pat McGee Band rolled into Boston's newly renovated and expanded Avalon. Awaiting them in the crammed 2,000 capacity ballroom was a strong gathering of their fans along with The Samples.

The Pat McGee Band, currently on a brief tour to refine new material before heading back into the recording studio, was quick to transform the mostly college-aged crowd. Working the crowd with "Haven't Seen for a While" off of songwriter Pat McGee's solo songwriting debut release, From the Hand, and furnishing tracks off of the band's 1997 debut Rerel like "Straight Curve," the act was able to stimulate the audience to dance and sing. One young woman even continually raised a pair of crutches in the air.

The infectious "Passion" transformed the entire venue to reproduce lead singer Pat McGee's words and further advance the festive atmosphere. Concluding with the band's signature song "Rebecca" that pulled into a series of extended improvisations, the Pat McGee Band once again provided a spectacle of entertainment that is difficult to resist.

Legendary touring out fit The Samples, recently reincarnated after gaining three new members and then releasing the band's eighth full-length album, Here and Somewhere Else, entered the stage to the warm welcome of Boston admirers. Launching their set with "The Streets in the Rain" to the fitting opening track from the band's most recent album "We All Move On," The Samples enjoyed performing a moving show.

Bassist Andy Sheldon had the opportunity to perform a song about Scituate with his cousin on his acoustic guitar, while the band's other co-founder, guitarist Sean Kelly, belted out a solo of "When It Raining."

With the full band reappearing on stage they played a cover of a Bob Marley classic and then their own "Taking Us Home" before departing from the stage. Returning, the band charged into the title track of their 1994 independent release Underwater People.

Despite having [illegible] independent releases [illegible] the Six Figures and possessing a grassroots following, the band has never seen any major label success – a complete tarity in the music industry. In 1996 they were signed to MCA but a major label shit-up stunned any promotion or distribution efforts. The band is presently embarking on an internet-only album that is available on the band's webpage at www.thesamples.com.

Richmond's Pat McGee Band, recently signed to Giant Records, a subsidi of Warner Brothers, should have their highly anticipated major label debut hit store shelves in mid-spring next year. However if you can't wait until then, the band's independent releases are presently stocked on most store shelves and they should be returning to perform in the area again in November.

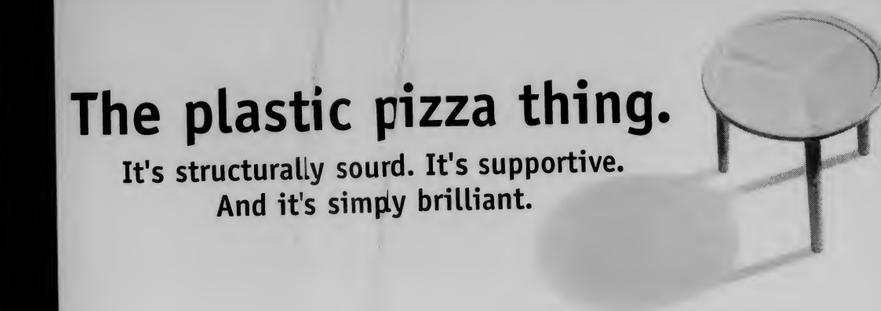
The Pat McGee Band has seen a rapidly growing fanbase in the Boston area as last November they sold out the city's famed rock club, the Paradise, in only the second time playing the city.

Three of the five members of the Pat McGee Band Dazzled Avalon.

American Football is 'heads up,' well worthy of requests

By Brooke Werley
Collegian Correspondent

AMERICAN FOOTBALL
Polyvinyl Records



A revelation came to me while I was listening to American Football's new self-titled album. I have never been sung to. Sure, there were those cradle-side lullabies, but I've dated enough guys who have done vocals for small-time bands to have warranted some sort of serenade while we danced at the senior prom at least. Well, those hopes are obsolete now; I never needed them. I'm content with the conclusion that I was just in waiting for American Football to come out with songs like "The Summer Ends" and "For Sure," and probably anything else that rolls off Mike Kinsella's lips.

The group first came out with an EP The One With the Tambourine with current members, Steve Holmes (guitar), and Steve Lamos (drums, trumpet) along with Kinsella (guitar, bass, vocals) to lead up to this release. The album has a continuous soft tone to go along with the ongoing lyrical theme of sad, yet not spiteful, brokenheartedness. I can't honestly praise the likability of Mike Kinsella's voice, typical of the indie-pop/rock genre, but it works well to enhance the band's forlorn lyrics. In "Never Meant" these lyrics make the listener pity the heart with lines like "you can't miss what you forget" and strike a familiar, but nonetheless touching chord with "maybe my intentions are irrelevant" in "The Summer Ends."

On the musical side of the coin American Football is heads up. Though I may regret making this comparison... I'm going to take my chances. On the second track of the album, "The Summer Ends," the guitar picking leads me to notice that the song is reminiscent of some slower Dave Matthews Band songs. There is much less of a timbre variety given the three-piece restriction, but it definitely has the same greatness in composition. The band uses the studio to their advantage, which gives the music a deeper sound. Though I am generally not a fan of softer jazz, Steve Lamos' trumpet spots, placed generously throughout the full-length, adds such depth to the album's texture where it is need of that something extra.

This is the first I've heard of American Football, but I am sure if they progress forward from this effort we'll all be hearing a lot more from them in the future. I'm not going to tell you to run out and buy this one, but American Football is definitely worth requesting once or twice a day when you need someone to sing to you. If you like what you hear, and you don't have too strong of an aversion to the word goodbye, you'll dig the rest of the album.

Racial ping-pong & mental racquetball

By Dave Katzoff
Collegian Staff

Straying from the bass-beaten path of journalistic hip-hop, it seems pertinent to address the racial ping-pong that has recently been waged amongst select constituents of our student body.

The concept of race and its "distinctions" is a notion first adapted by an early, prejudicing, Western majority. Still, these distinguishing elements (e.g., genetics, culture and ideology) have held optimal significance in the upbringing and maturation of American society. While politics and technology have helped sculpt the epidermis of our countries physical layout, the population of its internal anatomy has been essentially segregated and raised to fraternize similarity. And unlike people of an ethnic-specific land, Americans mentally purchase theories like separatism and cultural exclusivity because it is embedded in our history and ingrained in our consciousness.

Over the years, minorities have slowly become synthesized ingredients in the interracial medley of America's melting-pot, integrating the spectrum of domestic labor while simultaneously combating political prejudice. Policies such as affirmative action, which are primarily intended to "stir the stew" and balance centuries of economic inequities, are being abandoned by law-making puppeteers who underhandedly stabilize majority influence. But consider this: Since the early eighties, division has, in effect, morphed into the new bureaucratic caucasian, feudally impoverishing and socially segregating the "lower" class. When white, middle-American workers experienced "downsizing," blue collar minorities were left to recess rapidly unemployed; and as the middle class shrunk, poverty began attracting people of all demographics. Thus, a racially integrated social class began slowly forming at the depths of America's pay scale. Conversely, to a disproportional extent,

> "Regardless of our individual class status and race difference, we, as participants in a system of higher learning, are each striving to better ourselves in fields of knowledge, culture and finance."

affirmative action allowed blacks, in particular, to elevate themselves up the social ladder giving African American beneficiaries a small slice of a society that was once exclusively white. The counter-effects are what sociologists refer to as "flight," wherein after the beneficiaries moved "upwards," the remaining ghetto-inhabitants experienced horrid environmental depression and a perpetuated cycle of "free society" incarceration. (For an adequate discussion on the frustrating statistics concerning contemporary minority oppression, consult Mos Def's brilliantly conceived lyrics on "Mathematics," in which he numerically dissects the social system of America.)

Overwhelmingly, the youthful citizens enrolled as college students have escaped the scenarios above. Thus, my blue-blooded brothers and sisters, the invisible oppression of modern times relates to social economics above individual race. Realistically, however, the white majority still tightly grips the reins of our political economy, making small elements such as affirmative action and Diversity pages imperative to our education.

Ignorance is a fire and anger is its first flame. Regardless of our individual class status and race difference, we, as participants in a system of higher learning, are each striving to better ourselves in fields of knowledge, culture and finance. With this in mind, it is necessary to internalize the opposing perspective absent from the confining context of race. Rather than defending, deflecting and projecting, extinguish the initial flames of ignorance and counter-ignorance by thoroughly contemplating frustration. Mental racquetball: ultimately, our arms are far too short to spar with the semiotics of God-given genetics, for race, which minimally links heritage to physiognomy, only distinguishes human-beings (with vision) from one another. We must strive to operate on the same page, vitalizing understanding our distinct perspectives as an accompanying process of unification. Stay tuned.

COURTESY OF MARINA CHAVEZ

Australian rocker Ben Lee at the IronHorse tonight. At just 20, Lee has been performing for seven years, has seen action on Sonic Youth guitarist Thurston Moore's label, now resides on Beastie Boy Mike D's label and is presently the boyfriend of actress and ale undergraduate Claire Danes.

No mystery about Alaska's hockey

By Scott Robbins
Collegian Correspondent

MYSTERY ALASKA
Directed by: Jay Roach with Russel Crowe, Hank Azaria
Playing at Showcase Cinemas- Springfield

Hockey is a way of life for the folks in Mystery Alaska, a new film directed by Jay Roach and produced by David E. Kelley. The players of Team Mystery were born on hockey skates, their lives being shaped by their teammates and their community of 635 people. A weekly Saturday game brings the community together, giving them a sense of pride and enjoyment when admiring their beloved team. The team consists of a collection of local players including the town sheriff, a grocery store clerk and a high school senior who has waited years for his chance to play in the Saturday game.

When a former town's person, played by Hank Azaria, publishes an article in Sports Illustrated about Mystery, it prompts the National Hockey League to send the New York Rangers to Mystery for an exhibition game. The situation causes concern within the town for the sanctity of their sport, as well as for their reputation.

This is the turning point in the movie, which the believability of the situation begins to diminish. The idea of a professional hockey team traveling over 4,000 miles to play in an exhibition game is inconceivable. The town begins a transformation to accommodate television crews and advertising. It is as though the Rangers have brought along the flash and fights of New York City. Everything that the town believed in has changed. All of their Saturday games were played on an open ice pond. Now with the Rangers coming to Mystery, they build an arena complete with boards and advertisements. Walter Burns (played by Burt Reynolds), the town judge, has been chosen to coach the team, and convinces the team that with enough practice and dedication they can beat the Rangers. There is personal tension complicating his coaching: his son, (played by Scott Cohen, best known as Bailey's best friend Will on Parts of Love), feels as though his father is the root of all his problems. Judge Burns teaches them everything there is to know about the professional sport, since many of them have never even played on an arena with boards.

What Varsity Blues did for football, Mystery Alaska does for hockey. Hockey is the town's life. The film has its key moments. There are numerous comedic performances throughout the film, and like any other sport movie, there is an exciting, climactic ending. Burt Reynolds gives a great performance as the head coach. If you are a fan of hockey or sports in general, then it is a good movie. If not, I'd wait until it comes out on video.

grade: C+

Write for...
Arts

ERIC SCOT

ES

A NEW CONCEPT IN BEAUTY, STYLE AND SERVICE.

AMHERST

413.256.3440

ERICSCOT@JUNO.COM

Mario is at his best in Nintendo classic

By Nicholas Pizzolato
Collegian Correspondent

I remember when life was so much simpler: training wheels on bikes, graham crackers in milk, simple cartoons without marketing schemes on the television. It was the time when Mario could only go up and down, left and right. The flagship game of the Nintendo Entertainment System (or NES for you die hard fans) was a stocky, Italian American plumber – no stereo-type used by the Japanese programmers here – who jumped on walking mushrooms and mutated turtles, while the 9-year old pounding the controls spasms as he makes Mario do a running jump across a pit filled with venus fly-traps on steroids.

It was the year of 8-bit games, when the youth of America said good-bye to Pac-Man, Missile Command, Pitfall and other Atari games and said hello to the next generation of youth entertainment. Nintendo was state of the art. No one had ever seen games like Metroid, Kung Fu, and Donkey Kong. It was the first system to make games based on T.V. heroes and movies (Airwolf, Conan, Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles, and Dirty Harry). Nintendo also built a laser gun so that kids could shoot ducks and bad guys, as well as a little robot who took off children's fingers. So how did a small, mustached, pasta-loving character who was shown in just four colors (red, blue, flesh and brown) and who was only able to jump on Goombas turn into the same mustached, pasta-loving character wearing the same recognizable colors, but now able to talk, full attack, jump kick, and spin attack?

It was because Nintendo was losing the video game battle with other systems, so it took on the rule of creating 3-D games, where every angle gives the player a unique perspective of the landscape, making the possibilities for the player endless and (in theory) making game play more riveting. And while they made the game more advanced graphics-wise, they also decided to have Mario collect all the golden stars in one level in order to advance in the game. Collect! That means find. I have to go out of my way and search for a gold star so I can jump on Bowzer's head. Thus the problem with 3-D games: the difficulty level increases. Not to mention that "unique perspective" is just a pain. I don't care if there are birds flying in the sky, when has Mario ever needed to look up at the sky to kick a little koopa-troopa butt.

Don't get me wrong, as I faithful Nintendo user I counted the days until Nintendo would catch up to Playstation. But I had no idea such a sacrilege would be brought on upon Mario. The beauty of the preceding four Mario Brothers games was in their simplicity.

Role-playing games should stay difficult and confusing for those who want to explore and spend hours looking for a secret that will get them the "secret" ending to a game; linear action games should stay simple, especially for us who hate to think while playing video games. Video games are supposed to be relaxing, another retreat from reality for the public. But who wants to think at the end of the day? Mario was the last retreat for those of us who just wanted to relax and stare at the television, leaning after each fall, rebuilding our self-confidence with the endless mantra of, "I almost made it, just one more game." Mario taught us to look for patterns and learn exactly what the flying turtle would do. It is because of Mario I now know that the box turtle I see across the street is secretly plotting against me.

So, Mario players around the world, I urge you to push your Nes4 power button off and take out Mario 64. Put it aside and forget about it because it's impossible, there is no way that you, a faithful Mario Bros. Player, will understand this "technology." Go back to the fantasys world of 8-bit games, where Mario is at his best. Where Mario just jumps, walks fast and throws the occasional fireball.

Stryker goes all the way

Guitarist develops unique sound & technique

By Charlie Apicella
Collegian Staff

Dave Stryker is an instrumentalist of many hats. He is currently the guitarist for a number of projects including those of vocalist Kevin Mahogany, saxophonist Javon Jackson, and Brazilian pianist/vocalist Eliane Elias. This work, however, is only a small portion of his professional output, and when it is viewed along with his resume over the past 15 years, the picture of a very successful guitarist is revealed. Stryker's past has seen him in the service of legends such as Stanley Turrentine and funk pioneer and organist Brother Jack McDuff. He also completed brief stints with both Dizzy Gillespie and Freddy Hubbard. His gigs have placed his playing in many different contexts, in each of which he is able to master and maintain his originality. Stryker's playing sounds different and fresh from style to style, as he is able to vary his sound to fit the needs of just about any genre, under just about any leader. This freshness of interpretation is realized in his most recent appearance, Javon Jackson's Blue Note release entitled Pleasant Valley.

Of his vast recording credits, his own projects are among his most impressive work. One of his greatest successes has been his big band recording, Nomad; a unique project which sets his guitar at the front of a number of his own big band arrangements. All the Way, his latest Steeple Chase recording, is a very impressive and satisfying trio comprised of bassist Scott Colley and drummer Bill Stewart. It is surprising that this is Stryker's first attempt at a trio, and the material he chose for this recording engagement sounds fully developed and adapted to his concept of a guitar trio. The tunes are a list of standards, and the choice of a number of them shows Stryker's approach not only to his instrument, but also to the commonly accepted repertoire for guitar.

"I Got Rhythm," for one, shows the guitarist's affinity for ensemble-based arrangements, as the dialog among the group allows for an open, unique piece to evolve. Bill Stewart stays straight ahead on the ride cymbal and uses the rest of his kit to complement, which encourages Stryker to build his ideas on a mostly rhythmic rather than harmonic pallet. His phrases stay exciting and lyrical throughout, as he is able to fully develop a number of ideas in his improvisation. An intimate interpretation of Van Heusen's "All the Way" follows, based on a beautiful solo head arrangement by Stryker who stays soft and deeply bluesy throughout. His lines invoke a great deal of emotion in what is possibly one of the most beautiful pieces one could hear – truly a gem gleaming with many different hues of human experience.

"God Bless the Child," too, maintains a bluesy softness as the guitarist pays homage to Billy Holliday. Juxtaposed with this ballad is a burning "Dearly Beloved." Here, the harmonic freedom achieved in the rapport between Stewart and Colley sparks Stryker's rhythmic imagination to stretch into long, fluid phrases in which he uses the instrument's tonal range to its fullest effect.

Dave Stryker is a guitarist who utilizes virtuosity as a means to his emotions through his instrument. This record is a fine example of the expression accessible through the guitar, by a guitarist who has developed a sound and a technique unique to his expression. All the Way is highly, highly recommended.

nike.com

Have you turned your prison-like dorm room into a shrine to sports? Has anyone ever eaten it attempting a skateboard trick named after you? Is your school mascot or your favorite player's number one of your 18 tattoos? Whatever it is, if it combines your personality and style with sports, we want to know about it. And you'll want to tell us about it if you're into free stuff. All you have to do to get in the game is e-mail us a photograph that shows off your individual sports style. Every day four people have a shot at winning a Nike bike messenger bag. If you've got one of the top five images of the week you'll win a Nike Triax 300 watch. And if you really kick ass, you could win a custom sports trip for two, to any event, any place. For more details and official contest rules, log on to nike.com/fame15.

They're Novel Tapestries, by George

Mary McNamara
Los Angeles Times

Elizabeth George does not look like a serial killer. With a halo of cupcurls, a bright, direct gaze and a qualified but sincere smile, she looks like your cousin from Chicago, or the woman who lives down the street, the one with the beautiful garden. She lives in a gated community in Huntington Beach, Calif., for heaven's sake, in a house spacious and bland box neat no stacks of yellowing newspapers cluttering the halls, no walls covered with the photos and maps so often revelatory of obsession. no 25 cats.

And yet by her hand some 30 souls, men and women and even a few children, have been strangled, stabbed, shot, decapitated, drowned, often for the most frightfully twisted psychological reasons. Reasons that make perfect sense, if not to the victims or their families then to Elizabeth George.

And by at least the second to the last chapter, to her team of Anglo sleuths, Pathologist Simon St. James; his wife, Deborah; Lady Helen Clyde and, of course, Sgt. Barbara Havers and Inspector Thomas Lynley, New Scotland Yard. Since 1988, these five and a few other recurring characters, have, in one investigative configuration or another, solved murder mysteries all over England. Ten books in all has George written; the first, entitled "A Great Deliverance" (Bantam, 1988), won the Agatha and the Anthony awards for best first novel. Since then she has won France's Grand Prix de Litterature Policiere and Germany's MIMI, consistently terrific reviews and a permanent place of honor in the hearts of mystery readers around the world as well as on best-seller lists. She has been compared to all the greats — P.D. James, Ruth Rendell, Dorothy L. Sayers, Agatha Christie and her newest addition, "In Pursuit of the Proper Sinner" (Bantam), already has reviewers trotting out laudatory superlatives.

Which makes George a study of the unexpected, a longtime California resident who has taken her place among the great dames of the British mystery, and a mystery writer whose books are as much modern novels as they are detective yarns.

And even the detecting part is very different from the standard whodunit. George's characters — the good guys and the bad — ones are all complex, reacting to a variety of emotional and external influences. Her detectives make mistakes, spend pages ... chapters even pursuing the wrong leads, the wrong people, revealing more of themselves, including their flaws, than of the criminal.

The relationships among the five main characters are not easily quantifiable either. Lynley, Lady Helen and the St. Iameses are all longtime friends, albeit with ever-changing and complicated relationships. Barbara Havers, however, is thrust upon Lynley at the beginning of the first book. And Lynley and Havers are possibly the most mismatched police partners in the annals of mysterydom — he is carl of Asherton, dapper, sophisticated, a by-the-book investigator often hampered by the presence of a quick temper and the assumptions of his class. Havers is his working-class counterpart often sullen and defensive; angered rather than impressed by any display of privilege or wealth. Havers lives on a diet of salt and vinegar crisps, watermelon Pop-Tarts and trashy novels.

The subsequent clashes and collisions between the two personalities make very clear where the cracks are, where the emotional walls will sustain and where they will not.

Add to that St. James, who often seems a bit more on the ball than either Lynley or Havers, along with the fallout from the two less-than-traditional female romantic leads, and you have a thoroughly modern mystery.

Random hearts fails to live up to past harrison ford successes.

Zeppelin bassist Jones starts solo tour in New England

By Roger Catlin
The Hartford Courant

Since Led Zeppelin called it quits in 1980, bassist John Paul Jones has kept busy on a number of musical fronts: composing, arranging, producing.

He did the strings on R.E.M.'s Automatic for the People and produced a number of albums.

"But of all the things I have done in the last 20 years, playing live wasn't one of them," Jones says over the phone from London.

That changed five years ago, when he went out on the road with performance artist Diamanda Galas, whose 1994 album he had produced.

Touring for the first time since the death of Led Zeppelin drummer John Bonham had ended that band, Jones says he "buskally got the bug again."

"And always in the back of my mind was to do a solo album, like every musician, I suppose," Jones says. "I thought I could put the two together and record a bunch of stuff I could take on the road."

He does so on the instrumental Zooma, recently issued on Robert Fripp's Discipline Global Mobile record label. Jones begins his first solo tour next week in New England.

(Have the tints happened yet?" the Englishman inquires, referring to the fall foliage.)

To have new music to play on tour, Jones says, the album "needed to be a rock-based album and a blues-based album as well."

The resulting Zooma, distributed by Rycodisc, features Jones on a variety of instruments, including a lap steel guitar, which he adapted to use more bass strings.

"I always liked playing lap steel guitar," he says. "When Led Zeppelin was touring, I used to take a little one with me and play it in hotel rooms, not to the sound of breaking furniture, I hasten to insert."

Jones and his band, guitarist/bassist Nick Beggs and drummer Terl Bryant, will play a couple of Zeppelin songs on the tour besides the bulk of the Zooma album, but "not too many," he adds.

"We have no singer, of course," he says. But that won't stop fans from singing along to any songs by the huge, influential band, whose work can still be heard daily on U.S. classic rock stations.

"We always knew we had a good band," Jones says. "But obviously nobody could know that 30 years after it started; people would still have whole days of it on the radio. I heard of Led Zeppelin Month recently on the West Coast." Jones was an experienced musician through studio session work before another studio hand, Jimmy Page, chose him to join his new band in 1969.

Jones played on Donovan's Sunshine Superman, Cat Stevens' hits and with Lulu, Dusty Springfield, the Rolling Stones, "pretty much most of Herman's Hermits, all the Tom Jones stuff, 'Delilah,' 'Green Grass of Home,' all of it."

It was lucrative work for a young musician but also limited. "People thought I was mad to leave all that and join some unknown rock 'n' roll band," he says. "But I had to get out of the studio."

The unknown rock band was started by Page after the 1968 breakup of the Yardbirds.

"I knew he was a good musician, and I knew if he was forming a band, it would be interesting, at the very least," Jones says. "Then he said he was going up to Birmingham to see a singer, Robert Plant, who knew a drummer. Then he came back raving and said, 'That's it. Let's get a room and put it all together.'"

The drummer Plant brought along, Bonham, and Jones created Zeppelin's mighty rhythm section.

"We clicked immediately," says Jones. "Absolutely from the first note. We drove the band along in a way that perhaps a lot of other rhythm sections didn't."

But, Jones adds, "I don't like looking backward. The past is past, and it was great. And I'm very proud of it, but it's of no further interest, to be honest."

Ford's new heart no thriller

By Emily Vacanti
Collegion Correspondent

RANDOM HEARTS
directed by Sydney Pollack with Harrison Ford and Kristin Scott Thomas playing at Mountain Farms Theaters, Hadley

Going into this movie, I thought it would be action-packed, as many of Harrison Ford's movies have a tendency to be, regardless of the title Random Hearts. At times there were short scenes of action, but the majority of the movie was about as exciting as Regarding Henry (another Harrison Ford movie, only Regarding Henry was meant to be slow) or Forest Gump. It was a relatively decent movie, but the previews put the wrong ideas into your mind. It would have been a much better rental. There were many scenes that d-r-a-g-g-e-d. You never thought that some of these scenes would end. Approximately one hour could have been cut out of the movie by taking out scenery shots and anything else that dragged. Scenery is nice, but half of it was shots that were of different houses covered in leaves or snow. These were completed with little or no sound. In other words, the movie seemed even slower with these unneeded shots.

The love scene was not bad, but don't go to this movie for it. This is not a movie based on sex. The whole love scene lasted about one minute. No heavy panting, just two people around 45-years-old, slowly peeling each other's clothes off in the dark, exposing nothing on either body. No rolling around on the bed. Straight from peeling to everything being finished. The kissing scene was more exciting.

The main story is about two people who get killed in a plane crash and the investigation that their loved ones go through to find out the truth about their relationship. Harrison Ford discovers that his wife was on a plane to Florida for a photo shoot and tries to find out what plane she was on. He soon discovers that his wife was indeed not going to Florida for a magazine shooting, but in fact to be with another man. The investigation begins. Kristin Scott Thomas has no idea what is going on until Harrison Ford butts in and pretty much tells her that his wife was screwing her husband. They both reach out and end up finding each other. There are a few twists and turns, like a spark of romance between the survivors. Harrison Ford being a cop (he took the liberty of investigating this personally), and Kristin Scott Thomas running her public office. So the media has to get involved with this and find out what a senator hopeful is doing running around with a cop, regardless of her tragic loss.

The main action of the movie was in the sub-plot. Harrison Ford was a cop in the Internal Affairs department that was trying to catch a crooked cop in action. While investigating his own wife's death (B-O-R-I-N-G), he investigates exactly what is going down with this other cop who seems to be able to make witnesses disappear and anyone else who knows any kind of information keep quiet. This was where the real action was.

This movie could have been made a non-stop, action-packed, edge-of-your-seat thrill ride, but the directors decided to slow things down for a change and virtually ruin it. I would recommend that before you shell out $4.00 per person to see this, you re-evaluate what type of movie you are in the mood for, and wait until this one comes out on video. At least then you can fast forward through the slow parts.

grade: C-

Arts is for Lovers

...Fall in love again

XOXOXOXOXOXOX-
OXOXOXOXOXOX-
OXOXOXOXOXOX-
OXOXOXOXOXOX-
OXOX

University Health Services
Mental Health Groups 1999-2000

MONDAY

Come Out, Come Out Wherever You Are! A GLBT Support Group
Our goal is to create a setting for self-exploration and for making new connections with others. We plan to have fun in the process.
Monday, 3:35 - 5:00 p.m.

Stress/ Anxiety Management Group
Stress impacts all of us physically and psychologically creating various medical and emotional symptoms. This structured, 3-session group is designed to demonstrate effective ways to deal with stressful circumstances. We will use educational and behavioral methods to help members lessen their stress.
Session 1: 3:30-5:00 p.m. Monday: 10/18, 10/25, 11/1
Session 2: 3:30-5:00 p.m. Monday: 11/15, 11/22, 11/29

Women's Eating Issues Group
This is a group for women who are interested in changing negative eating patterns, decreasing food and weight obsessions and enhancing self acceptance. Members will have an opportunity to learn about the underlying dynamics contributing to eating issues, and to develop coping strategies.
Tuesday, 4:45 - 6:00 p.m.

Coed Self - Exploration Group for Undergraduates
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Tuesday, 2:30 - 4:00 p.m.
Other groups may be added throughout the year. Let us know of your interest.

Women's Self Exploration Group
(For older undergraduates, graduate students, student dependents and Kaiser members)
This group provides an opportunity for women to explore personal relationships, work, studies, family of origin, health, acculturation, and other relevant concerns. This group is ongoing with members added as space permits.
Thursday, 9:00 - 10:30 a.m.

Coed Self Exploration Group for Undergraduates
For college men and women who experience difficulties in interpersonal connections or who have concerns about their relationships.
Friday, 1:30 - 3:00 p.m.

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE

Wednesday Night is Promo Night with DJ Fooz

This Week Features Miller Light
Come in and Win Free Prizes

The Only Place to dance on Wednesday night with a DJ Guaranteed to make you move!

The Monkey Bar Features Mediterrainean Cuisine, an Outdoor Patio, and Upscale Microbrews.

63 N. Pleasant St. 259-1600

WORK IN BRITAIN
Friday, October 15
INFO TABLE
9 am - 1 pm, Campus Center Concourse
BROADEN YOUR HORIZONS work TRAVEL and have fun make new FRIENDS
internationalise YOUR RESUME
Call 1.800.GO.BUNAC
BUNAC

War of words sets stage for Mets-Braves battle

By Ross Newhan
Los Angeles Times

ATLANTA— The way Chipper Jones sees it, the objective in the National League Championship Series is to "go out, keep our mouth shut and play the game." Nice idea, but with Bobby Valentine involved, who's going to keep his mouth shut?

Not Valentine, of course – and probably not Jones, try as he might.

The first pitch in the battle between the Eastern Division rival Atlanta Braves and New York Mets won't be thrown until tonight, but it's already dissolved into a tabloid-titillating verbal skirmish, largely involving Valentine, the Mets' manager, and Jones, Atlanta's third baseman.

At question is who respects whom, which is enough to make Atlanta Manager Bobby Cox gag.

"That lack-of-respect angle is a joke," Cox said as his team worked out Monday. "I don't know where that came from. The Mets have a great team and have our respect. You better respect anybody in the playoffs."

Where it came from is Valentine's stated interpretation that Jones and other Braves proclaimed the Mets dead after New York had lost seven in a row during the last two weeks of the season, five of six to Atlanta: that there were flippant remarks by Jones and closer John Rocker regarding their hatred of all things New York, and that Jones, reacting to the taunting of Shea Stadium fans as the Braves won two of three there during the last week of the season, insulted the Met partisans when he suggested that "they go home and put on their Yankee T-shirts."

"A pretty mature statement," a sarcastic Valentine said in the aftermath of the Mets' division series victory over the Arizona Diamondbacks and just one of several digs.

Such as wondering if the Braves had ever played ghosts back from the grave before.

Such as noting of Jones, "I think he was very confident that he wouldn't have to deal with the (Shea) fans again this year. Guess what, he's going to have to deal with them again this year."

Responding to all of that on Monday, Jones said he didn't take it personally.

"If you've got to motivate your club, you've got to motivate your club," he said of Valentine's probable intent. "He's doing his job as manager. You always say things in the heat of battle that maybe you don't mean. I have the utmost respect for their ballclub. At that particular time (during the last week of the season), what I said was more a shut at their fans than their ballclub. Bobby can turn it around any way he wants. The last thing I want to do is get in a newspaper war with Bobby Valentine."

The war has started, though, and isn't likely to end easily.

There was Rocker on Monday, lobbing another grenade, citing the Mets' talent and saying he "was really shocked to see how they had to squeak into the playoffs," and there was a sarcastic Valentine responding by saying, "Well, I guess he's a pretty good talent evaluator and feels we underachieved."

There was Valentine, asked why there's such animosity between the teams, saying, "Our guys are loving, caring, good fellas who just love to play the game. I don't think there's any animosity on our side, nor have we shown them anything but respect. We think they have a great club and we love to compete against them.

"We've taken exception to a few of the little things they've said and done, but that happens, and I don't think any of those little things have taken the forefront in the minds of our guys. The competition is what's at hand. They've been the champs and are the champs, and we're trying to take it away."

To do that, of course, the Mets have to do a better job on Jones than they did in that three-game Atlanta sweep during the second-to-last week of the season. Jones hit four home runs to wrap up the National League's MVP award and virtually eliminated the Mets from a division race that the Braves won for an eighth consecutive year.

That was then and this is now. The Houston Astros pitched around Jones in their series, and Brian Jordan made them pay.

Said Valentine: "I always feel that when you have a super talent, and Chipper is a super talent, that one of the great things you want to do is get the guys out in front of him and behind him because it's almost impossible to shut down a player of his talent.

"I guess what I'm saying is that we're not just playing against Chipper Jones. I saw the (Houston) series and the series at the end of the year (against the Mets) and I didn't see Chipper doing all the damage. I saw people pitching to him and getting him out. I don't think he's going to be as magical ever again as he was in that one series, but then I don't think anybody could be."

The Braves won nine of 12 regular-season games from the Mets, but the Mets believe they are a different team now: looser, more relaxed, having won seven of their last eight under the toughest of pressures.

BRIAN MCDERMOTT COLLEGIAN

What's all that racket?
The UM men's tennis team showed no "love" for Boston University this weekend, sending the Terriers packing with a 7-0 rout.

■ football

continued from page 16

head coach has compiled a paltry 9-19 record in trying to build a football program that is long overdue. Vandy has yet to challenge for the SEC and haven't been to a Bowl in 17 years.

At 4-2, the Commies need victories in three of their final five games to lock up a Bowl appearance. You can feed the games at Florida and at Tennessee to the dogs because it's almost a given that that's not going to happen. This week, Vandy hosts a Georgia team that avoided serious upsets in consecutive weeks before the ice finally caved in. The Bulldogs fell in a deep hole, trailing 30-7, before making a last gasp effort at gaining respectability. The final score of 37-20 hardly indicates how one-sided the affair was for three quarters.

Getting 9.5 at home, I'll go with Vandy, but don't rule out a victory without the points.

With the rest of the nation, I'll go with Penn State giving a rock solid 11.5 against Ohio State, Virginia Tech giving the same to Syracuse and Clemson giving 15 on the road against upstart Maryland.

I just wanna' fly
UMass cyclist Tyson Kaman shows off the style that helped propel him to victory in the men's A race at this weekend's cross-country race.

■ basketball

continued from page 16

on offense, something he hasn't had since taking over for John Calipari three years ago.

"I think we have people who can get the ball to the rim. Last year I don't think we had that," Flint said. "(Last season), when the shot clock ran down, we really didn't have any answers because we didn't have anyone that could break you down. I think we have players who can do that this year."

Chris Kirkland came on midway through last season, helping the Minutemen in its late season surge for the playoffs. He and fellow senior Mike Babul feel that Flint's switch to a more fast-paced offense will cater to their abilities.

"I've been waiting for it ever since I got here," Babul said. "We talked about doing it last year and we tried it at the beginning, but we just didn't have the personnel. Hopefully this will be the year because we definitely have guys who can run and we've got a lot of bodies who can play."

Ketner is relieved by Kitwana Rhyniver and Anthony Oates in the middle, who should make Flint's move towards a transition-style offense smoother. Freshman Micah Brand is also expected to play solid minutes in the paint.

Before the men took the floor, Joanie O'Brien and the women's basketball team fielded questions from reporters curious about how the team would respond to the loss of three key seniors from last year's 16-14 squad. O'Brien, in her ninth season at the helm of the Minutewomen, hopes her team can regain the form of her '97-'98 squad that took home the Atlantic 10 [illegible] Fast and reached the NCAA Tournament.

"We're young at some spots. But we've had success with other spots," O'Brien said. "I think [illegible] the youthful enthusiasm and the [illegible] can together. I think we're a good [illegible]

The team voted seniors Alyssa Mancini and Tawana Bradley and junior Kristy Conroy [illegible] captains for this year's squad which, like the team [illegible] use the transition game on the [illegible] offense, as well as pressure [illegible] from Bradley to baseline.

"I think overall we're exactly where we should [illegible] to be," O'Brien said. "When I look at the [illegible] you've got 12 people that all can play [illegible] tribute in a different way. We should [illegible] back to the point of being able to play [illegible] the time."

O'Brien welcomes back guard Kelly Von Hemert who missed her second consecutive season to [illegible] anterior cruciate ligament. Two years ago, Von Hemert led the team in scoring through [illegible] went down with the vicious knee injury in a [illegible] Connecticut. Last season, after [illegible] recovered, her right knee gave out [illegible] the season's third game.

Despite graduating her three leading [illegible] O'Brien reeled in a quintet of players who [illegible] ed to see time right away. With four starters [illegible] taller and the emergence of sophomore Nicole [illegible] late last season, the Ohio native feels that the [illegible] faces will provide a pillow for the team's loss.

Calling All Undeclared and Pre-Major Students:
"Planning for Academic Success"
an important 45-minute workshop
sponsored by your advisors at Pre-Major Advising Services
(545-2191)
Where?: the 6th floor of Goodell
When?: (select one)

Mondays:	Oct. 18,25,	Nov.1	3pm or 4pm
Tuesdays:	Oct. 19,26,	Nov.2	2pm or 4pm
Wednesday	Oct. 13,20,27	Nov.3	3pm or 4pm

I like sports!

UMASS STUDENT TICKET PICK-UP SCHEDULE
Monday - 4:30 PM Varsity Hours Only

Pick-up Date	Sport	Date of Game/Opponent
Tue., Oct. 12, 1999	Hockey	Oct. 23, 1999 vs. Boston College
Mon., Oct. 18, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 3, 1999 vs. California All-Stars
	Hockey	Nov. 5, 1999 vs. UMass-Lowell
Tue., Oct. 26, 1999	Men's Basketball	Nov. 10, 1999 vs. Converse All-Stars
Mon., Nov. 8, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 19, 1999 vs. Connecticut
Mon., Nov. 15, 1999	Hockey	Nov. 23, 1999 vs. Vermont
	Men's Basketball	Nov. 29, 1999 vs. Marshall
Mon., Nov. 22, 1999	Men's Basketball	Dec. 2, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Hockey	Dec. 3, 1999 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Dec. 6, 1999 vs. Villanova
Mon., Dec. 13, 1999	Hockey	Jan. 2, 2000 vs. St. Lawrence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 6, 2000 vs. St. Bonaventure
	Hockey	Jan. 7, 2000 vs. Providence
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 8, 2000 vs. Fordham
	Hockey	Jan. 11, 2000 vs. Maine
Mon., Jan. 10, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 15, 2000 vs. Northeastern
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 20, 2000 vs. Dayton
	Hockey	Jan. 21, 2000 vs. Merrimack
	Men's Basketball	Jan. 22, 2000 vs. Rhode Island
Mon., Jan. 17, 2000	Hockey	Jan. 26, 2000 vs. Providence
Mon., Jan. 24, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 1, 2000 vs. Temple
	Hockey	Feb. 4, 2000 vs. Boston University
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 5, 2000 vs. Texas
Mon., Jan. 31, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 6, 2000 vs. UMass-Lowell
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 9, 2000 vs. La Salle
Mon., Feb. 7, 2000	Men's Basketball	Feb. 19, 2000 vs. St. Joseph's
Mon., Feb. 14, 2000	Hockey	Feb. 25, 2000 vs. Boston College
	Men's Basketball	Feb. 29, 2000 vs. George Washington
Mon., Feb. 21, 2000	Hockey	March 4, 2000 vs. New Hampshire

SAME DATES SUBJECT TO CHANGE. VALID ID CARD NEEDED TO PICK-UP TICKETS. FEE SHOULD HAVE ALREADY BEEN PAID

Warehouse Selectors Needed!

If you need a job that fits into your busy school schedule, then look into the outstanding opportunities available at C&S the nation's fastest growing wholesale food distributor. We have immediate openings for enthusiastic, team-oriented students to play an integral role in our expansion

JOIN US NOW AND RECEIVE A $500 SIGN-ON BONUS*
* LIMITED TIME OFFER

BRING YOUR FRIENDS!
- Flexible Schedules
- Great Pay
- FREE Transportation on weekends from Mullins Center on Campus

We'll train you, give you $12.50 per hour working part-time, extend your hours to full time during breaks, and offer you a dynamic work environment. For more information about these exciting Part Time opportunities visit us at our Job Fair, call 1-800-621-5953, or apply in person Monday-Friday, 8am-4pm (Tuesday & Wednesday till 7pm), or Saturdays from 9am-1pm, at: Employment Center, C&S Wholesale Grocers, Inc., 142 Elm Street, just off Route 91, Exit 21, Hatfield, MA

VISIT US ON-CAMPUS
Wednesday, October 13th
From 9:30am - 4pm
in the Student Campus Center

C&S WHOLESALE GROCERS, INC.

C&S is an Equal Opportunity Employer and does not discriminate on the basis of age, gender or any other protected category in accordance with applicable law.

Looking for the perfect PART-TIME job?

Ducks avoid "fowl" play vs. San Jose

By Elliott Teaford
Los Angeles Times

ANAHEIM, Calif. — The Anaheim Mighty Ducks teetered on the brink of disaster heading into the third period Monday afternoon at the hall empty Arrowhead Pond. Their momentum was historic and their lead would have been too, if not for a kind judgment by the video goal judge.

Instead of caving in to the feisty San Jose Sharks, the Ducks regrouped at the second intermission, dominated the final period and took a 3-2 victory in front of an announced crowd of 15,371.

Next step: playing a full 60 minutes at peak efficiency.

The Ducks don't have long to get their act together. They begin a five-game, trip today against the New Jersey Devils. Tat Hour an easy opponent under any circumstances.

Certainly, the Ducks showed resilience Monday. They scored twice late in the first period while on two-man advantages and had a 3-1 lead after 20 minutes. After a sluggish second period they rebounded in the third.

Right wing Teemu Selanne assisted on three Duck goals. Defenseman Oleg Tverdovsky, left wing Matty McInnis and center Steve Rucchin each had a goal and an assist. Goaltender Guy Hebert made 22 saves.

But it took a nullified goal in the second period to get the Ducks on the right track after it appeared their 4-1 lead would be erased.

Ron Sutter's apparent game-tying goal was disallowed when it was ruled the Shark center kicked the puck into the net at the 16:50 mark. The Ducks took their second chance and skated with it all the way to their second consecutive victory after getting shut out in their first two games.

"We stopped skating and we stopped working," Selanne said. "Then came back and if they got that fourth goal, it could have been a lot different. Guys woke up on that play."

The third period was no contest. The Ducks muzzled the Sharks and still managed to create numerous scoring chances. If not for the standout goaltending of Steve Shields, the Ducks might have won in a rout.

In the third period, we played smart," Selanne said. "We played the way we have to play. We're still in the learning process. We have to keep playing hard. These are the kinds of games we have to win, especially when we're winning, 3-1 or 4-1.

We had a 4-1 lead and they should have had no life. We are not a good enough team to take a period off like that. But the third period = how we should play."

Hebert, under pressure in the second period, hardly broke a sweat in the third. He faced only four shots.

Running the show

Point guard Kathy Cuyner was one of several UM athletes to meet the press at Tuesday's media day.

Irish eyes aren't exactly smiling after 3-3 start

By Chris Dufresne
Los Angeles Times

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame has won two consecutive games to square its record at 3-3, which is fine if you're the University of Podunk but the last thing a school with 11 national titles and its own network television deal is going to celebrate.

Three and three? In 110 years, Notre Dame has posted seasons of one defeat or fewer 48 times.

Clawing back to 3-3 at Notre Dame is good news only because it means you didn't fall to 2-4. It is a reprieve, a commercial break during "Jerry Springer"; for the coach, a wave of nausea that passes.

Three and three at Notre Dame puts you closer to 4-3 but not far enough from the grisly reminder of what almost was.

You should have been here Oct. 2, when Notre Dame was 1-3 and trailed Oklahoma in the third quarter, 30-14.

"People were smelling blood," Jim Gibson, a Notre Dame student, recalled. "Bob Davie's neck was on the line. It could have gotten real, real ugly."

Davie, the third-year coach, slipped that noose, as Notre Dame rallied to victory and bottled enough emotional runoff to whip Arizona State last weekend, 48-17.

But 3-3 is not why players play here, not why coaches coach here, not why the faithful flock to South Bend in recreational vehicles, not why they count the days until USC games.

It is not why some students go to school here.

"Three losses is not what I signed up for," Gibson, a 21-year-old American Studies major, said.

Yet, in the perhaps most turbulent stretch in Notre Dame history, 3-3 is, absurdly, a starting point.

Yes, the team is up against it, Gipp, and the breaks are beating the boys.

"We want to be remembered as the team that had our backs against the corner and came out swinging," receiver Bobby Brown said after Saturday's win.

Notre Dame is down, Gipp, and half the country is hoisting banana daiquiris.

"We're like the Yankees," Athletic Director Mike Wadsworth says of the love-hate relationship.

Yesterday huge in equine lore

By Earl Gustkey
Los Angeles Times

In the Fourth race at the Kenilworth Jockey Club track in Windsor, Ontario, 74 years ago yesterday, there were only two horses entered.

Sir Barton, a 4-year old owned by H.J. Ross.

Man o' War, a 3-year-old, owned by Samuel Ruddr.

Only two horses, but what a huge race.

It was the first great match race of the century, staged to settle the question: Which was the greatest horse in North America?

Sir Barton had been bought for $10,000 by Ross, a retired Canadian Navy Commander. In 1919, the horse had been the first to win what would later be called racing's Triple Crown. Man o' War was 11-0 as a 3-year-old and had won the Preakness and Belmont. Riddle had not entered him in the Kentucky Derby.

The race at a mile and a quarter, was called the Kenilworth Gold Cup, with a purse of $75,000. Clarence Kummer rode Man o' War, Frank Keough was aboard Sir Barton.

The two horses lined up behind a ribbon, since the starting gate had yet to be invented.

Sir Barton, on the rail, broke away first. But Man o' War steadily ate up the distance between them and not only passed Sir Barton, leaving him far behind entering the stretch, but kicking dirt in his face in the process. Man o' War won by eight lengths, in 2:15.

Both horses had equipment failures. Man o' War won with a broken stirrup and Sir Barton lost all four shoes.

Also on this date: In 1986, Dave Henderson of the Boston Red Sox, one strike away from being the final out in what would have been a pennant-clinching win by the California Angels in Game 5 of the American League Championship Series, homered to give the Red Sox the lead in the top of the ninth and Boston went on to win, 7-6. In the 11th on Henderson's sacrifice fly, Boston went on to win the series.

Sports are Fun!!!

We take OCMP

BUFFALO Wings

DOMINO'S PIZZA

AMHERST/HADLEY
256-8911
Hours: Sun.-Weds. 11 am-3am
Thurs.-Sat. 11 am-4 am

$2 OFF ANY PIZZA
VALID 11AM-11:30 PM

$3 OFF ANY LARGE OR EXTRA LARGE PIZZA
VALID 11AM-11:30 PM

$4 OFF ANY EXTRA LARGE PIZZA
VALID 11AM-11:30 PM

Medium Cheese Pizza $7.49
Large Cheese Pizza $9.49
Extra Cheese Pizza $11.49

HELP WANTED :
Pays $60 to $120 Per Shift

Bucci
HAIRCUTS $10.

MIFA
Ten Plays by PINTER
Performed by Britain's Two's Company

Nine quick sketches, from hilarious to hair raising, plus full length A Kind of Alaska, based on a case documented by Oliver Sacks of a woman awakening from a 29 year coma and facing the bizarre disorientations of an adolescent mind in a middle aged body. Splendid, top-notch theatre! Oct. 12-17, CityStage
Tickets: 413.788.7033

DANCE FROM FRANCE
A Fuego Lento
Full length sensual dance drama combining tango and contemporary dance by one of France's most exciting new troupes. Oct. 13
Academy of Music, Northampton
Ticketmaster 413.733.2500

INFO: 413.584.4425 or mifa-inet.org

Learn to Meditate!
Meditation Workshops
UMASS Campus Center

FREE

Bring it.

Where it matters most.

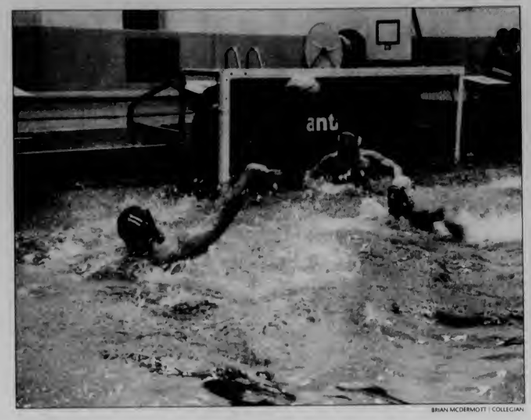
At one of the world's leading diversified technology companies, we're breaking new ground in everything from defense and commercial electronics, to aviation, to engineering and construction. As a Raytheon employee, you'll contribute to the development of exciting, revolutionary technology designed to make life better, easier, and safer throughout the world. Such as our STARS air traffic control system. And our award-winning NightSight™ technology.

But it all starts with you. Your creativity. Your knowledge. And enthusiasm about the future. In return, we offer exceptional training and professional development opportunities. A supportive, down-to-earth work environment. And incredible benefits, including flexible schedules designed to respect your quality of life.

Now you can still show off all those great qualities of yours outside of work, too.

We'll be visiting your campus soon. Contact your career placement office to schedule an interview. If you are unable to meet with us, please e-mail your resume to resume@rayjobs.com (ASCII text only, no attachments), or mail to: Raytheon Company, Attn: National Staffing Data Center, P.O. Box 660246, MS-201, Dallas, TX 75266. U.S. citizenship may be required. We are an equal opportunity employer.

Opportunities are available for exceptional students with the following majors:



- Aeronautical Engineering
- Chemical Engineering
- Civil Engineering and Construction Management
- Computer Engineering
- Computer Science
- Electrical Engineering
- Finance/Accounting
- Human Resources
- Industrial and Labor Relations
- Management
- Marketing/Communications
- Math
- Mechanical Engineering
- Physics

Check out our Website at www.rayjobs.com/campus for further information including a calendar of recruiting events. At Raytheon, we strive to be the employer of choice for a diverse workforce by attracting, retaining, and recognizing the most talented, resourceful and creative people.

Bringing technology to the edge

Raytheon

BRIAN MCDERMOTT / COLLEGIAN

The men's water polo team locked up two wins in this weekend's action in the Bronx.

Water polo rock-n-rolls rough tournament

By Shana Orczyk
Collegian Correspondent

The Holiday weekend proved to be a success for the No. 11 ranked University of Massachusetts Men's Water Polo team. The Minutemen finished the weekend with two wins and a loss in the Collegiate Water Polo Association League Tournament held in the Bronx, NY.

The weekend started rough, when on Saturday the Minutemen fell to No. 13 St. Francis 13-11. The offense was led by sophomore Greg Trayer, whose team-leading three goals went in vain as the Maroon and White narrowly missed a victory.

Also scoring were seniors Rich Slingluff and Cory Koenemann with two goals apiece, while seniors Pat Kain and Timmy Troupis, and sophomores Carlos Ramos and Mike Foley each added one more.

The defense was led by senior goalie Richard Huntley with 11 saves in net.

Sunday proved to be a better day for UMass. The Minutemen defeated both of their opponents: Queens by a score of 8-3, and Iona 17-10.

Leading the defense against a strung Queens squad was Cory Koenemann who held Queens only to score five times, but Koenemann also added a goal to the minutemen's offensive onslaught.

Richard Huntley again started in goal and ended with twelve saves in the game.

Leading the UMass squad offensively were sophomores Greg Trayer and Carlos Ramos with two goals apiece. Also scoring for the Minutemen were Kain, Slingluff, and sophomore Adam Moore with a single goal addition to the UMass offense.

The final game on Sunday was the Minutemen's 17-10 romp of Iona. Sophomore Adam Moore gave the strongest game of the tournament with an amazing seven goals to lead the team. Moore received some help from his friends, though, with Kain, Troupis and junior Brook O'Neill each adding two goals. Ramos, Trayer, Slingluff, Koenemann, and freshman Justin Houck reached the back of the net once.

Huntley left the net with seven saves, while freshman back up goalie Rafael Santana finished the game posting 3 saves.

The UMass squad improved their overall record to 18-3, and their CWPA record to 9-1.

The Massachusetts team returns to the pool for the New England Invitational Tournament to be held in nearby Norton, Massachusetts. The Minutemen hope to continue to improve their record and capture a seventh Eastern Championship. ey seem to be on the right track, following the leadership offered by senior Pat Kain and coach Russ Yarworth.

■ Cycle

continued from page 16

class B, her first cross-country race ever. This was the first time the Minutemen had won as a team in the overall home cross-country race. What a terrific victory for all. And that was just the morning event.

The action was non-stop all day when the dual slalom race started. The slalom course was a tight, fearful, off-camber run, besieged by slick turns and intimidating double jumps. Though it only took about 25 seconds to go down, the narrow course promoted full contact racing and the combat was fierce due to the head-to-head format of the contest. Only the top 16 riders qualified to go on to face eight elimination rounds until only two were left for the final. A courageous Jen Conlon-Kardian won the women's class A race, beating rival BC after 2 trips to the EMT during practice and riding with a torn ACL. Equally as hardcore were the other UMass riders, Marty Walsh and Danny Quinby. Ken Avery overtook all but one of the UVM rivals and rode away with 2nd in the men's class A race. Cycling members Sean Boland and Bill Hamson both qualified and had successful runs, impressing fans in their first-ever slalom races.

Saturday, Oct. 9, 1999: The fans showed their support for the ever-amazing cycling team. The Minutemen and Minutewomen radiated their talent and winning spirit through the crowds of parents and visiting schools. After the race, they celebrated with some lemonade and a resounding version of the Spice Girls by the man himself, Tyson Kaman. This weekend the cross-country team will be racing at UNH, and then the weekend of the 23rd the complete cycling team will be competing at Easterns, hosted by Penn State.

UMass sailing rocks regatta Daly and Koman 'sail away'

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Correspondent

The Charles: A dark, dirty river running down the spine of Boston. This river serves many purposes; rowing, boating, fishing – basically all kinds of aquatic activities, including regattas in which the Massachusetts sailing team participates.

UMass sailing team, you ask? Ahh yes, the UMass sailing team. This dedicated group of boating experts lives, eats, and breathes sailing, and they do it all for the team. Yesterday through Friday the eight members travel to Lake Arcadia with the Amherst College team and practice for their weekend regattas, and tomorrow the coach comes up from Harvard to work with them.

The Minuteman team owns one school boat at the moment, a Vanguard C-420, while Amherst owns 6 of these a general collegiate boats. These boats are 13 feet long and have two sails, a main sail and a little baby jib in front. In the boat are the skipper, who drives and navigates, and the crew that adjusts the sails and calls protests when they catch other teams cheating.

A typical race lasts anywhere from 10 minutes to an hour and involves a Windward-Leeward Triangle which is a course marked in the water by bright red buoys that requires the boats to travel into the wind and then away from the wind, demanding superior boat-handling skills. There is a 20 foot starting line and the boats tack and jib as they wait for the 3 minute dinghie whistle. There are usually 3-9 races with two divisions of boats: A and B.

The two captains, Kris Daly and Greg Koman, lead a promising team of sailors including two freshmen, Frances Shiman-Hackett and Wayne Pacileo who have helped the team sail into 3rd place at the Mass State Meritime race and 5th at URI.

While you may think of yachting as a preppy, easy sport, these aquatic masters surpass any stereotype. They sail from mid-March to mid-November, and condition all winter during the off-season, studying up on techniques and wind manipulation.

Daly described the regattas as, "not just getting into a boat and seeing who goes the fastest. It's 90 percent the start, you have to plan your course perfectly according to the headers and lifts (wind shifts) and you have to know all the rules perfectly or you'll get killed."

The water was flat, dark and deep this past weekend as the Minutemen sailed on the Charles. The rain was pouring and the cold wind was slower than half a knot during the two races, which lasted 45 minutes and an hour and a half. The regatta was hosted by Brandeis and held at MIT. It was the team's 4th race of the season and there are three or four left to go, including a home race in two weeks at Lake Arcadia.

Among the 11 schools in Boston this weekend were Harvard, URI, UNH and Williams. UMass came in 7th behind MIT and Dartmouth. While they aren't yet ranked in the top ten, the sailors are working hard to make a name for the Amherst/UMass team.

You can find more information about this growing sport on their website: www.umass.edu/rso/sailing.

Move it or lose it

Tailback Kevin Quinlan ran all over Northeastern on Saturday to the tune of 127 yards.

La Cazuela
SINCE 1984
RESTAURANT
The Cuisines of MEXICO and the AMERICAN SOUTHWEST

Hand Crafted Food
Seasonal Specials
Extraordinary Tequila List
Superb Margaritas
Warm Hospitality

Please join us!

Dinner Every Night
Downtown Northampton
Across From The Parking Garage

413-586-0400
On the Web at www.lacaz.com

Beauty Nails
Professional Nail Service • Highest Quality Products • Lowest Price
31 Campus Plaza Rd., Hadley (Behind Pizza Hut- Across From Stop & Shop)
Open Mon-Sat 9:30-8:00 WALK-INS WELCOME 253-4798

It's time for you to make the calls.
To create your own future.
To have a real impact.
After all, it's your world.

And we'd be a perfect fit. Because only at Ford Motor Company will you find a spectrum of opportunities this broad and a level of impact this impressive. The fact is, we're experiencing a major transformation – to a consumer company that provides automotive products and services. And to be successful, we need professionals with the hunger to learn. The knowledge to teach. And the ability to lead.

We're entering a period full of big challenges – and even bigger decisions.

Is your world ready for it?

We will be interviewing on campus soon. For more information please contact your career center or visit www.ford.com/careercenter.

Ford Motor Company

Ford is a Golden Key National Honor Society partner

By choice, we are an Equal Opportunity Employer committed to a culturally diverse workforce.

Collegian Classifieds

113 Campus Center — University of Massachusetts • Phone: (413)545-3500 Fax: (413)545-1592

AUTO FOR SALE

For Sale 1995 Mitsubishi Galant. Must sell 587-9224 Great Car.

1990 Honda Civic DX 5 Speed, AM/FM, Hatchback, runs good, and high miles. $1400 or BO 549-6490

EMPLOYMENT

WEBMASTER Part-Time Position. QA Computer Consulting (Springfield) has opening for student with excellent graphics and web design skills. Work around your class schedule. $35 per hour to start. First-rate knowledge of development application like NetObjects Fusion, Visual Page or DreamWeaver. Ability to code in HTML. Knowledge of PhotoShop, CorelDraw, CGI, JavaScript. Call Larry at 800-945-4747 or e-mail Admin@QAComputer.com

Baker/Cook/Customer Service Prepare foods,batters, doughs, recipes. In Village Market. FT/PT PM/Weekends 1 mile from campus. Cushman Village 413-549-1953

DP Dough is hiring drivers and kitchen help. Must be able to work nights. Approxiametly $20/hour. Apply at DP Dough.

Management Internship Would you be interested in a merchandise management internship? If so visit JCPenney at the Career Expo on Wed. Oct. 13 from 10-3pm or email cdemelo1@hotmail.com for more information.

EMPLOYMENT

allstudents.com

Earn $400 per class- each semester by simply Taking Notes! Apply online at www.allstudents.com for all sections of the following undergraduate courses

Accounting 221 .222
Animal Science 101
Anthropology 100, 102 103
Astronomy 100
Biology 100 ,103, 105, 106
Chemistry 102 ,110, 111, 112
Classics 100, 102 ,224
Communication 150 ,180 ,218 ,222
Communication 226, 267
Communication Disorders 210
Community Health 129 ,160
Computer Science 102 ,105
Computer Science 120, 121
Consumer Studies 105
Economics 103, 104 ,203
Economics 204, 330, 331
Education 115, 210
English 115, 131
Entomology 126
Environmental Sciences 101
Exercise Science 130, 210
Finance and Operations Management 250, 300
Finance and Operations Management 310, 320, 330
Food Science 101, 125
Geosciences 101 ,102, 103
Geosciences 109, 250
History 100, 101 ,112
Hotel, Restaurant, Travel Administration 100, 130
Linguistics 101
Management 260, 301 ,314
Management 315, 330
Marketing 301 ,340
Nursing 100
Nutrition 101 ,130
Philosophy 100, 110
Physics 100, 131, 132
Plant and soil sciences 100
Political science 101
Psychology 100, 105, 315
Resource economics 211
School og Management 210
Sociology 103, 107, 210, 222, 242
Sport Studies 210
Statistics 111 ,140
Theater 100
Women Studies 187

If you're interested in becoming a Note Taker for a course that doesn't appear on this list, please submit an application online for review

Attention Marketing Majors

Currently we are hiring for a Marketing Specialist as well as Note Takers please apply online at

www.allstudents.com

Get in Get Through Get Out

Volunteers Needed for Graduate Research Study. Phsically active men + women excercising at least 3 times/wk, non-smoking, not taking zinc supplements. Please call Christy 532-2733

EMPLOYMENT

FLEXIBLE PART-TIME Childrens Health Research Abt Associates in nearby Hadley, MA has openings for Telephone Research Interviewers for evening and weekend shifts. We require a minimum of 20 hours/week with flexible scheduling. Applicants must have excellent reading/communication skills, some computer knowledge and a solid work ethic. We offer $6.75/hr to start, regular merit increases to $8.00, health and dental benefits, holiday pay and free shuttle service from the Hampshire Mall. PVTA stop. For more information or to arrange a personal interview, please contact: Paul R. Bebo Recruiting Coordinator 1-800-792-4514

Human Services - Relief support needed to work with developmentally disabled adults, may lead to permanent hours. Hours include evenings, weekends and/or overnights. Required: HS deploma and driver's license. Starting pay is $7.47 p/h (for relief), $8.35 (for permanent). Locates in South Hadley, Hadley and Belchertown. Call 413 774-2281 (ask for Mary) AA/EOE

The UMass Athletic Development Office is looking for a graduate student to assist in bookkeeping, data entry, and filing 20-25 hrs/wk starting at $8/hr 1-413-545-4290

EMPLOYMENT

Teachers Aides

Wanted for small, innovative learning programs in Amherst. Tutor and supervise small groups of students in elementary, middle, or high school classrooms. Training provided. Great opportunity to prepare for a career in education for for interested individuals. Mass. Dept of Ed Approved Site Based Certification Program H.S. or equivalency required, college training reccommended. Full employment benifits available

Submit a resume and cover letter to Jone Meissmer #116
30 Industrial Drive East
Northampton, MA 01060

AA/EOE/ADA

ADMINISTRATIVE ASSISTANT For teenage bicycle-touring program. Partime until late spring; then full-time through August. Call 800-343-6132 Student Hosteline Program Conway, MA

Candy Company looking for full time apprentice. Artist/graphic designer must be familiar with Quark, Illustrator, Photoshop - benifit. Cartoon art skills a big plus. Contact Tom Martin 1-888-556-5599

Cashier Wanted self-service station weekends. Must be honest, reliable, good at math. Apply in person Northampton Citco 54 E. Hampton Rd. Rt 10

Movers: Local moving company is hiring individuals for moving positions. Flexibility and good attitudes are a must. Start at $8.00 per hour. Raises commensurate with performance. Call 584-4746

EMPLOYMENT

$ IMMEDIATE $ JOB OPENINGS Commercials Magazines Videos & More!!! We are the largest recruiting network in the USA! We recruit all types: Males & Females. No experience required $$$GREAT PAY $$$ Global Productions 617-328-6621 www.agcproductions.com

Own a PC? Put it to Work! $25-$75/hr. PT/FT 1-888-799-0915 www.pc2work.com

UNIVERSITY BARTENDING COURSE 50% student discount. Campus. Free info session Oct. 6th. Classes start Oct. 13th. Space is limited. 1-800-U-CAN-MIX www.universitybartending.com

FOR RENT

Lockers For Rent: Cheap! Come to Commuter Services, 428 Student Union

Fridge Rentals - Free delivery 253-9742

FOR SALE

27-inch sony TV Perfect condition trinitron. Picture-in-picture. Original box, paperwork and remote $475 or BO 527-7991

INSTRUCTION

Casco Bay Bartending Classes start soon student discounts call for information 1-800-467-2028 Space is Limited

Saxophone Lessons with working musician; Berklee, UMass grad. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

INSTRUCTION

Afro-Latin Percussion Lessons: Congas, Bongos etc. Have studied and played with some of the best in Cuba, U.S. and Europe. Hilary (413) 967-0466 (413) 237-5069

LOST & FOUND

Found: Womens pair of glasses. Found outside of Tobin. To claim please call or come down to The Collegian in the Campus Center basement. 545-3500

Lost Black Covered pocket planner near the pay phones in the lobby of Lederle GRC Low Rise around 3pm Oct 6. Please call Charles Salinetti at (1-800) 225-5979

Black Male Cat, yellow eyes. Responds to Casey. Missing since 9/23. Any information call ASAP. No questions asked 549-1373

MUSICIANS

Female Vocalist looking to join up with other musicians! Lead, backup, harmony vocals. Can also play limited guitar. Give me a call and we'll jam! 546-4442 - ask for Jen

SERVICES

Cheap Heating Oil: Join the Pioneer Valley Oil Coop. Come to Commuter Services, RM 428 Student Union or call 545-0865

PREGNANT? Need Help? Call Birthright of Amherst area for free testing and assistance 549-1906

TRAVEL

FREE TRIPS AND CASH!!! SPRING BREAK 2000 StudentCity.com is looking for Highly Motivated Students to promote Spring Break 2000! Organize a small group and travel FREE!! Top Campus reps can earn Free Trips & over $10,000! Choose Cancun, Jamaica or Nassau! Book Trips On-Line Log In and win FREE Stuff. Sign Up Now On Line ! www.StudentCity.com or 800/293-1443

Browse icpt.com for ALL Springbreak "2000" hotspots. Need Student Orgs & Sales Reps. Fabulous parties, hotels, prices. Call Inter-Campus 800-327-6013

Most Spring Break Destinations including cruises! Foam Parties, free drinks and club admissions rep positions avail. Epicurean Tours 1-800-231-4-Fun

SPRING BREAK 2000 The Millennium A new decade...nce in Travel Free trips, Free Drinks, Free Meals Jamaica, Cancun, Florida, Barbados, Bahamas Book before Nov.5 for Free Meals & 2 Free Trips! 1-800-426-7710/www.sunsplashtours.com

WANTED

RUNNERS NEEDED! Competitive female distance runners needed for an important women's health study. Must be 18-25 and not on oral contraceptives. Free bone density and fat measurements. Free runners gifts. Call 1-877-RUN-BFIT. (1-877-786-2348)

Running out of Cash Fast?

Need A Job??

You found the right resource!!

Check out The Classifieds TODAY!!

Want to place an ad for employment you can provide?

Call 545-3500

Five College Community Calendar

WEDNESDAY, OCT. 13

Baking — There will be a Jewish Women's Collaborative challah baking at 7 p.m. in the Hillel House. All Jewish women are invited.

Campus — The Golden Key National Honor Society will have tables set up in the Campus Center Concourse. Stop by to receive information about the society.

Meeting — There will be a meeting to discuss the Holocaust Memorial Museum Trip to Washington D.C from 7-7:30 p.m. at the Hillel House.

THURSDAY, OCT 14

Open House — The Interdepartmental Program in Film Studies will present an open house at 3 p.m. at the Top of the Campus restaurant. Call 545-3659 for more information.

NOTICES

Art — The Wheeler Gallery will present "Cellblock Visions: Cell Division-Prison Art in America," on display until Nov. 7. The Gallery is located in Central Residential Area.

Art — The Student Union Visual and Performing Art Space will present "Three Connecticut Women Fiber Artists," on display until Oct. 15.

Crafts — The Student Union Craft Center is now open for the fall semester. The Center offers instruction and materials for many different crafts. Membership is free for UMass students and faculty. For more information about private instruction and workshops call 545-2096, or stop by the Craft Center.

FYIs are public service announcements printed daily. To submit an FYI, please send a press release containing all pertinent information, including the name and phone number of the contact person to the Collegian, c/o the Managing Editor by noon the previous day.

SEND US YOUR FYI ANNOUNCEMENTS

BOOKBUCKS From Bookworks

Every time you buy $15 worth of books from Bookworks, you get a stamp on your card.* When you get ten stamps, cash in your card for a free $20 UStore gift certificate!

*See Store for Terms and Conditions

University Store UMass Campus Center 413 - 545 - 2619

Ustore CAMPUS CENTER — Just another way that WE GIVE 100%

We give all of our profits to support University Programs

WEDNESDAY EVENING — C - Campus — OCTOBER 13, 1999

	C	6:00	6:30	7:00	7:30	8:00	8:30	9:00	9:30	10:00	10:30	11:00	11:30
												Independent Lens ®
WEDH	2	12 Zoboomafoo	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ®		American Photography: A Century of Images ®						News ®	Late Show ®
WFSB	3	3 News ®	CBS News	Inside Edition	Hollywood Sq.	Cosby ®	Work With Me	"Lethal Vows" (1999, Mystery) John Ritter, Premiere. (In Stereo) ®				News ®	Late Show ®
WBZ	4	4 News	CBS News	Hollywood Sq.	Ent. Tonight	Cosby ®	Work With Me	"Lethal Vows" (1999, Mystery) John Ritter. Premiere. (In Stereo) ®				News ®	Nightline ®
WCVB	5	5 News ®	ABC News	Inside Edition	Chronicle ®	Two Guys-Girl	Norm ®	Drew Carey ®	Oh Grow Up	20/20 ®		News ®	Nightline ®
WLVI	56	Sister, Sister	French Prince	Friends ®	Nanny ®	Dawson's Creek (In Stereo) ®		Roswell "The Morning After" ®		News ®		News	Tonight Show
WHDH	7	Baseball Playoffs		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ®	Dateline (In Stereo) ®		West Wing "Five Votes Down"		Law & Order "Merger" ®		News	Tonight Show
WTXX	15	Divorce Court	Divorce Court	Real TV ®	Real TV (R) ®	7 Days "Parker.com" (In Stereo)		Star Trek: Voyager (In Stereo)		News	Caroline	Charge-Heart	Charge-Heart
WVIT	30	Baseball Playoffs		Extra ®	Ent. Tonight	Dateline (In Stereo) ®		West Wing "Five Votes Down"		Law & Order "Merger" ®		News	Tonight Show
WTIC	11	Simpsons ®	Frasier ®	Seinfeld ®	Friends ®	Major League Baseball Playoffs: American League Championship Series Game 1 — Teams TBA						News ®	Tonight Show
WWLP	22	Baseball Playoffs		Wheel-Fortune	Jeopardy! ®	Dateline (In Stereo) ®		West Wing "Five Votes Down"		Law & Order "Merger" ®		Charlie Rose (In Stereo) ®
WGBY	57	World News	Business Rpt.	Newshour With Jim Lehrer ®		American Photography: A Century of Images ®						News ®	Nightline ®
WGGB	40	News ®	ABC News	Seinfeld ®	Frasier ®	Two Guys-Girl (Norm ®		Drew Carey ®	Oh Grow Up	20/20 ®
WSBK	38	Judge Judy ®	Judge Judy ®	Seinfeld ®	Frasier ®	7 Days "Parker.com" (In Stereo)		NHL Hockey: Boston Bruins at Colorado Avalanche. (Live)
WTBS	43	Roseanne ®	Roseanne ®	Fresh Prince	Fresh Prince	★½ "Stone Cold" (1991, Drama) Brian Bosworth.						★ "Invasion U.S.A." (1985, Adventure) Chuck Norris.
A&E	51	Simon & Simon		Law & Order ®		Biography: Jimmy Stewart		Biography: Audrey Hepburn				American Justice (R)	Law & Order "Jurisdiction" ®
CNN	20	21 Worldview ®	Moneyline Newshour ®		Crossfire ®	World Today ®		Larry King Live ®				Newsstand	Sports Moneyline ®
COM	53	20 Saturday Night Live		Daily Show (R)	Stein's Money	★½ "Love Potion No. 9" (1992, Comedy) Tate Donovan.						South Park ®	Man Show ® Daily Show Stein's Money
DISC	52	Your New House (R)		Wild Discovery: Kalahari		On the Inside: Coast Guard		U.S.S. Forrestal-Critical				Battle of Midway	On the Inside: Coast Guard
ESPN	31	Sportscenter		NHL Hockey: St. Louis Blues at Detroit Red Wings. (Live) ®								Bikes, Blades and Boards (R)	Sportscenter ®
LIFE	50	Golden Girls	Golden Girls	Intimate Portrait: "Debbie Allen"		Chicago Hope	Tennis: Turkey	★½ "The Last Boy Scout" (1994, Drama) Kirk Douglas.				New Attitudes	Golden Girls
MTV	39	Global Groove	MTV Jams	Beat Suite	Making-Video	TRL (R) (In Stereo)					Say What Kirk	True Life	Biorhythm Loveline (In Stereo)
NICK	46	Ali That	Catdog	Hey Arnold! ®	Rugrats ®	Thornberrys	Rocket Power	Brady Bunch ®	I Love Lucy	Jeffersons ®	Sanford & Son	All in Family	Maude ®
SCIFI	45	Hercules: Legendary Jrnys.		Sliders "Fever" (In Stereo) ®		Sliders "Last Days" (In Stereo)		Sliders "The Weaver Sex" ®		Sliders "Eyeballs" (In Stereo)		Crypt Tales	Crypt Tales
TLC	49	28 Home Again	Home Again	Clintons – A Marriage		Extreme Machines (R)		FBI Profiles: Criminal Minds		Stories Bones Tell		Extreme Machines (R)
TNT	54	Due South (In Stereo) ®		ER "Going Home" (In Stereo) ®		★½ "Rumble in the Bronx" (1995, Adventure) Jackie Chan.						★★ "Animal Farm" (1999, Satire) Voices of Kelsey Grammer. ®
USA	55	Xena: Warrior Princess (R) ®		JAG "Above and Beyond" ®		Walker, Texas Ranger ®		★½ "Cannon" (1995, Drama) Robert De Niro, Sharon Stone ®				Baywatch "Shattered" ®
HBO	59	(5:00)	★★½ "Robin Hood: Prince of Thieves" (1991, Adventure) Kevin Costner. "PG-13" ®					★½ "Hope Floats" (1998, Romance) Sandra Bullock. "PG-13" ®				Chris Rock ®	Oz (In Stereo)
MAX	60	(5:30)	★★★ "The Negotiator" (1998, Action) Samuel L. Jackson. "R" ®			★★½ "Downdraft" (1990) Anthony Edwards. "R"		★★ "Nine 1/2 Weeks" (1986, Drama) Kim Basinger. (In Stereo) "R"				Pleasure Zone
SHOW	61	★★ "Hot Pursuit" (1987, Comedy) John Cusack. "PG-13"				★★★ "Blue Steel" (1990) Jamie Lee Curtis. "R"		Movie News		★★ "Halloween H20: Twenty Years Later" (1998)		Beggars

HSCN 4 Housing Services Cable Network

2 HSCN Bulletin Board
3 CBS/3 Hartford
4 CBS/4 Boston
5 ABC/5 Boston
6 PBS/57 Springfield
7 HSCN Movie Ch.
8 UPN/20 Hartford
9 Weather Channel
10 NBC/30 New Britain
11 Fox/61 Hartford
12 PBS/24 Hartford
13 WCCH & HSCN International
14 UMass Academic TV
15 WB/New Haven
17 HSCN Programming
18 The Learning Channel
19 UVC-TV19
20 ABC/40 Springfield
21 Cornell to Govet
22 NBC/22 Springfield
23 Sundance
24 Bloomberg Financial
25 CTN
27 TBS
28 BET
29 TV Land
30 Univision
31 Comedy Central
32 Cartoon
33 Much Music

Kampus Kids By Adam Souliere

Drabble By Kevin Fagan

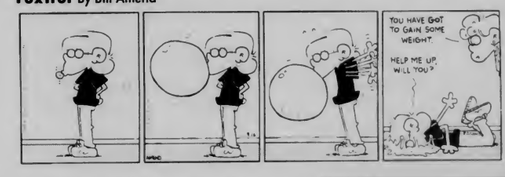
Welcome to the World By Ryan O'Donnell

Penthouse Blues By Mike Braidman

University² By Frank Cho

Robotman By Jim Meddick

Joe Banani By JD Schneider



Rose is Rose By Pat Brady

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

FoxTrot By Bill Amend

Horoscopes

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) - You're not in a sociable mood today, but you may be required to mix and mingle nonetheless. This may only be for the sake of appearances.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) - If it's the perfect partnership you're after today, you are likely to be disappointed. Try to maintain your competitive edge.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) - Plan each step with care as you chart a course into the future today. Dangers may seem attractive to you now, but just wait!

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 10) - Service to others will be more valuable to you than self-service, and you mustn't resent being the one to give of yourself today.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) - Though others may consider your endeavors a waste of time, you can surely prove them wrong. By day's end, you'll have much to brag about.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) - Try not to be late today! It is essential that you catch as much of the available information as you possibly can, for future reference.

Aries (March 20-April 19) - You should be able to work with others quite well today, once you adapt to changing circumstances in and around the workplace.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) - You're in no mood to be bested at anything you think you do well today, but the risk is always there. Perhaps you can learn something new!

Gemini (May 21-June 20) - Your mood may be changeable and unpredictable throughout the day, and you will want to avoid making any lasting decisions at this time.

Cancer (June 21-July 22) - A question of freedom is likely to arise before the day is out, and you'll realize that there's something to be said for responsibility.

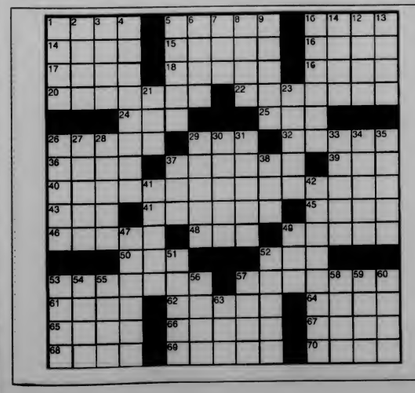
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) - Be sure you remain accessible and open to those who come to you for all manner of advice, assistance, and guidance. Your efforts will be appreciated.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) - That letter or phone call is likely to keep you waiting all day long. Fortunately, the information it contains is not really indispensable.

Quote of the Day

"But in my defense, I'd do it again. I don't need to know who you are." –Guster

Close to Home By John McPherson



As the couple departed, head waiter Alfonse Ludner activated the Lousy Tipper Ejection System.

Sorry.....

.....no menu today

ACROSS
1 Envelope part
5 "Beat it!"
10 Lab-culture medium
14 A Chaplin
15 Andes beast
16 Anger
17 Oodles
18 Gung-ho
19 Zone
20 Messaged
22 Snacked
24 Party staple
25 Yes, Henri
26 Fix the clock
29 Harem chamber
32 Western
36 Actor Thicke
37 Badly
39 Gold: Sp.
40 Paul Anka hit song
43 Choose
44 Orchard fruits
45 Director Kazan
46 Lacks
48 Female bird
49 Atelier item
50 FedEx rival
52 Dedicated to 53 Deny
57 Related
61 Out of control
62 Radium discoverer
64 Wander
65 Go out with
66 Whale's diet
67 Ajar
68 Herring's cousin
69 Got up
70 Coops

DOWN
1 Type of dance
2 Symbol of craziness
3 Poker stake
4 Rose Bowl site
5 Resting state
6 Attired
7 Type of doll
8 Preacher's word
9 Lanza of opera
10 Saudi —
11 Female
12 Out of the wind
13 Use the library
21 Morse-code signal
23 Channel markers
26 Synthetic fabric
27 Marry in haste
28 Fry lightly
29 Attractiveness
30 Holmes creator
31 "Our Miss Brooks" star
33 Works hard
34 "Sesame Street" regular
35 Shade of blue
37 Energy
38 Guitarist Paul
41 Coarse files
42 Pendant shape
47 Immersed
49 A very long time
51 Bags
52 Meadow
53 Flits about
54 Asian nurse
55 Jot
56 Nomad's tent
57 2.2 pounds
58 Hemp product
59 Ted
60 Lairs
63 Carnival city

PREVIOUS PUZZLE SOLVED

A	S	K	E	D	L	O	D	E	J	I	B	E
S	W	I	N	E	O	P	A	L	E	R	I	K
H	A	S	T	E	M	I	N	K	W	O	K	E
E	N	S	E	M	B	L	E	G	E	N	E	S
R	E	L	Y	W	O	O	L
S	E	C	E	D	E	V	A	L	O	R	O	U	S
P	L	O	D	U	S	A	G	E	Y	A	L	E
A	G	A		A	P	E		R	I	T	E
R	I	T	A	O	D	O	R	S	G	E	R	M
K	N	I	T	W	E	A	R	P	A	N	D	A	S
	T	A	R	T		L	I	M	A
P	A	W	E	D		M	O	N	O	R	A	I	L
T	H	E	M		G	R	A	D		E	L	U	D	E
P	E	E	P		H	E	R	B		B	E	L	L	A
S	E	P	T		I	N	K	Y		A	D	D	E	D

10-20-99 © 1999 United Feature Syndicate

Today's Staff

Night Editor	Ken McDonald
Photo Technition	Nicole Goltwald
Copy Editor	Tamar Caroll
Production Supervisor	Jaylynn Lombard
Production Staff	Melanie Thomas, Roberto Delgado

Sports

Keep up to date with the world of sports.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Wednesday, October 13, 1999

MSU flying high after win

It was supposed to be ugly, but instead it got pretty... for Michigan State, at least.

Nobody foresaw an aerial assault in East Lansing last week. As great as Tom Brady and Bill Burke are, Michigan-Michigan State traditionally calls for great interior run blocking and four quarters of all-out hustle on the offensive line.

Well, Burke tossed for a school-record 400 yards and two touchdowns. Plaxico Burress broke Andre Rison's 10-year old record for receiving yards, catching 10 passes for 255 yards in the Spartans' 54-51 victory. His 6'6" frame gave him a Randy Moss-like edge over the Michigan defensive backfield, having at least four inches on the tallest member of the

Brett Mauser on College Football

Wolverine secondary, strong safety Tommy Hendricks.

Meanwhile, Brady and Drew Henson paired up for 346, also a record, and three scores. Even more shocking, Michigan managed just six yards rushing against a Spartan defense that always seems to step up when coming home to the land of the green. A steady hour drive apart, the Spartans won the battle for bragging rights in the state with the victory.

It didn't come easy, or at least not without a sigh of relief. The Spartans built a 27-10 lead going into the fourth quarter before Brady and the Michigan offense came alive. After trading touchdowns early, Brady hooked up with David Terrell and Aaron Shea on successive possessions to close within a field goal with just under three minutes to play. Luckily for the Spartans, time ran out on the surging Wolverines.

The win has vaulted Michigan State to No. 5 in the country and has critics rescinded their words that wrote the Spartans off before the season even started. Barely considered for Top 25, MSU has slowly climbed the charts with victories at home against Oregon and on the road against Notre Dame in addition to topping the Wolverines.

The Michigan triumph cannot be enough at this point. Head coach Nick Saban has to convince the Spartans that its passing game, its team defense and, at the very least, its schedule, could have the boys of the BCS punching numbers late in the season verifying MSU's heroic jump to the forefront of college football.

Ann Arbor was comparing this year's team with its 1997 championship squad, despite dodging bullets in three of its opening four weeks. Forced to rely strictly on Brady, the MSU defense sat back on defense in nickel and dime packages waiting for the ball to arrive. With a 17-point lead late, Saban gave a big cushion at the line of scrimmage, ruling out the idea of a big play and points in bunches. In the end, it was just enough.

State visits West Lafayette this weekend hoping it can add to Purdue's recent misery. For head coach Joe Tiller, Drew Brees simply can't carry the team himself. Montrell Lowe showed he is making an effort, rushing for 153 yards against Ohio State, the Spartans' opponent in three weeks. Brees showed signs of brilliance after an embarrassing showing at the Big House, a 20-for-49 collapse in front of 111,000 strong.

Purdue was a Brent Johnson fingertip away from tying the Buckeyes in Columbus last week and are relieved to return home. Its defense held Steve Bellisari to just 10 of 26 accuracy and 174 yards passing. The Buckeyes rambled for 188 yards, 68 of which came on Bellisari's scamper on the team's final drive that closed out the Boilermakers.

Burke's career has been marked by inconsistency, although his back problems seem to be behind him. His 13 touchdowns against only five interceptions have him in position to finish his career and toy with the idea of going pro.

Purdue has relied almost solely on Brees and will have to on Saturday. If the Boilermakers can find an answer for Burress, they should have success against the Spartans. Like Florida State's Peter Warrick or USC's R. Jay Soward, Burress can single-handedly take over a game. His height alone can dictate the opponents' defensive formations and what plays MSU runs on offense.

Purdue will break out of its funk and will further prove a pair of this czar's theories.

1.) Never go against Michigan State at home.

2.) Never rule out an upset when the Spartans travel.

Getting a deuce, I'll take the Boilermakers in a cinch.

Last week: 3-1
Overall: 14-9-1

Two weeks ago, Mississippi State traveled to Nashville and demoralized the host Commodores of Vanderbilt, 42-14. For head coach Woody Widenhofer, it was nothing new, as the third-year

UMass women's soccer wins two games over weekend

Minutewomen still perfect in the A-10

By Michael Kobylanski
Collegian Staff

The Massachusetts women's soccer team went toe-to-toe with Atlantic 10 rivals George Washington and Virginia Tech last weekend, and like a true heavyweight prizefighter, the Minutewomen came out as the last one standing.

UMass defeated both the Colonials and Hokies to move to 7-2-1, 3-0 in the A-10. With the two victories, the Maroon and White remained a game ahead of Dayton and Xavier for first place in the conference.

"It was probably the most physical weekend we've had so far, but we were pleased to get two wins," UMass women's soccer coach Jim Rudy said. "But what I'm most pleased about is that we've won four games in a row on the road [UMass defeated Temple and St. Joseph's the week before in Philadelphia]."

The Minutewomen opened the weekend on Friday against George Washington. The game was tied with just over 10 minutes to play when senior Cindy Garceau let loose a diving header off a free kick from Katelyn Jones which found the back of the net and sealed a 2-1 win.

"GW played us tooth, nail and tattoo. That game was very physical, even close to being brutal," Rudy said. "They got the flukiest of fluke goals to tie the game up, but then we got the free kick goal on a flying header by Garceau."

UMass opened the scoring early in the second half when junior forward Kara Green netted her fourth goal of the season to put the Minutewomen in front. Sophomore midfielder Sarah Cook had an assist on the goal by Green.

Later in the half George Washington countered with a goal by Malynda Nichol. But the visitors were too much, and Garceau scored four minutes later to close the books on the Colonials.

Angie Napoli made two saves in goal to earn the victory for UMass. She now sports a 4-1 record on the season.

On Sunday afternoon the Maroon and White were in rural Virginia to take on the Hokies. The game was scoreless with less than five minutes to go before senior forward Emma Kurowski notched her eleventh goal of the season, the decisive tally in a 1-0 UMass victory.

"We won in some difficult conditions. On Saturday we trained on the field and it was bone hard. Then on Sunday it was as soft as soup," Rudy said. "They were athletic and are a very improved team, probably the most improved in the conference besides us."

The goal was the tenth game-winning goal in Kurowski's career, which places her in fifth place on the UMass charts in that category. Green also assisted on the goal, allowing her to move into a tie for first-place on the UMass career chart in assists.

The story of this game, though, was the UMass defense and the play of sophomore Cori Stevens. While the Minutewomen defense did a superb job of eliminating the three Hokies front-runners, Stevens posted nine saves in net to earn her first collegiate shutout.

"They had a three front-runner system and it was dangerous. But defensively our marking trio of Kate Webb, Alexi Rudd and Sarah Cook, and Holly Wildenhaus as sweeper, all did a nice job," Rudy said. "Cori saved one in tight in the second half that was one of the most spectacular saves that I've seen here. She really didn't even have any time to react, but she made the save."

UMass will now seemingly control its own destiny. The two teams right behind UMass, Dayton and Xavier, will visit Totman Field this weekend in a crucial pair of A-10 matches. Last season on its swing through Ohio, the Minutewomen dropped a 3-2 overtime decision to Xavier, but rallied back to close their trip with a 2-1 come-from-behind win over Dayton.

COURTESY MEDIA RELATIONS

Cindy Garceau and the women's soccer team cranked out a pair of wins over George Washington and Virginia Tech this weekend.

Men's tennis collars Terriers

By Jen Cormier
Collegian Staff

Go ahead, take your pick of adjectives. Dominant. Focused. Talented. Determined. They all describe the fall edition of the Massachusetts men's tennis team.

On Monday, the Minutemen improved their dual match record to a flawless 4-0 with a 7-0 trouncing of Boston University at Upper Boyden Courts. This triumph capped a victorious homestand that included wins over rivals Boston College and UConn.

The Maroon and White didn't drop a set to the Terriers in singles action. The toughest match of the day for UMass came at first singles, which pitted sophomore Steve Prisco against BU's Ramy Irem. Irem, who was defeated handily by UMass senior Parsa Samii last weekend, turned out to be a much worthier foe for Prisco. Each broke the other's serve twice in the first set, forcing a tie-break.

It was then that Prisco broke through and began to dictate play. Following the advice of teammate Samii, Prisco began to avoid Irem's whip-like forehand and hit to his weaker backhand, stripping BU's standout of his number one weapon. Prisco nabbed the tie-break and didn't look back, cruising to a straight-set victory, 7-6 (7-5), 6-3. He improved his individual singles record to 4-1.

"I just got lucky there in the tie-breaker," Prisco offered after the match. "After I got the first set in the bag, I think I loosened up [and] played a little better in the second set."

In second singles, senior captain Samii defeated Bryant Christanto, 7-5, 6-3. Freshman phenom Will Shaw bettered BU's Matt Wolf, 6-1, 7-6, in the No. 3 spot. Shaw is a perfect 4-0 in dual match play this fall, further proving that he has on-court maturity well beyond his years.

At fourth singles, junior Fabien Rabanal overpowered Noel Moosa, 6-1, 6-2. Senior Josh Bainton trounced John Koetzle, 6-2, 6-0, and junior Bill Greener delivered a 6-2, 6-0, drubbing to Jason Vindes to round our singles action.

In doubles action, the Minutemen again dominated. Prisco and Shaw bageled Koetzle and Vindes at the No. 1 spot, 8-0. In second doubles, Samii and freshman Justin Simpson paired to defeat Christanto and Elan Alexander by a score of 8-2. Senior Marco Casesa and sophomore Todd Champeau, who remained out of the singles line-up after twisting his ankle on Saturday, crushed Wolf and Moosa, 8-3.

Coach Judy Dixon was beaming after the match. "We're playing at such a high level right now, both emotionally and really in terms of physical talent," she commented. "This is probably the best team effort I've seen in a very long time."

Prisco echoed his coach's sentiments about the unity of the team. "It's always been [cohesive], especially this year," he said. "We hang out outside of tennis too, and we're a pretty close-knit team."

COURTESY CATHERINE TURNER

Jen Conlon-Kardian was one of several UMass cyclists who competed in this weekend's mud-encrusted cross country race.

UMass cycling tears up home course

By Catherine Turner
Collegian Correspondent

Saturday, Oct. 9, 1999: The rain fell in the morning, saturating the ground and filling puddles, muddying up trails in the woods behind the observatory where the UMass cycling team rode this year's home cross-country race.

The race entailed 7 laps of 2.8 miles per lap, with 13 schools racing almost 20 miles as fast as they could through one of the most technical cross-country bike courses in our conference. Comprised almost entirely of single tracks, with tight turns and not many places to rest, this trail demanded hard riding and constant acceleration out of the corners. These men and women wound their way through the woods, their legs turning to jello as each lap went by and the cheers of the crowd echoed inside their helmets.

Saturday, Oct. 9, 1999: Tyson Kaman pulled out ahead of his competitors, winning the men's A race by 2.5 minutes, smoking all the other riders including notable rider Tyler Savage of Plymouth State. Tyson was at his peak this weekend, making the course look easy while many riders struggled to finish. He pedaled steadily for his first 6 laps, a minute ahead of everyone else, and then kicked it into high gear for his last lap, in which he shaved yet another minute off of his already incredible time. This man was an all-muscle, fast, streamlined and experienced rider whose finesse at the finish line solidifies his talent as an athlete.

Not only did Tyson kick butt in this weekend's race, he was accompanied by other phenomenal riders who also took top prizes in their events. Kellie Foster took 3rd in the women's class A race, with Linda Smith behind her in 6th. Maryann Shirley came in 4th and Nicci LeDoux took 6th in women's class B behind Alaine Knipes who won

UMass gets loose, but can't stop 'Cuse

By Adam White
Collegian Staff

In Saturday's monumental conference win over Rhode Island, the Massachusetts field hockey team showed a dramatic return to offensive splendor. Monday's showdown with the Orangewomen of Syracuse proved that the Maroon and White attack is back to stay.

UMass (4-8) hammered out a 13-7 shot advantage and an 8-2 penalty corner edge in a tough 2-1 loss at Syracuse. The Orangewomen (8-5) overcame an early one-goal deficit with two unanswered scores to beat UM.

Originally slated for a 3:30 start, the contest's start time was delayed a full 90 minutes by the late arrival of the game's officials. And once the game did start, it appeared as though the SU defense may have been late getting there as well.

The Minutewomen used aggressive ball movement from the get-go to pressure the Syracuse backfield and force mistakes from which SU simply couldn't recover. UM senior Chrissy Millbauer (Easton, CT) drew first blood for the Maroon and White when she snatched away an errant SU pass in Orange territory and smoked Syracuse keeper Audrey Latsko for the score.

It was Millbauer's third goal of the year, giving the Joel Barlow graduate seven points in UM's first twelve games.

Syracuse would roar back to lock the contest just under 10 minutes later, when SU midfielder Kristin Aronowicz redirected a shot from teammate Tracy Larkin past UM keeper Zowie Tucker off of a penalty corner. It was only the fourth goal allowed in 90 penalty corner situations by UM thus far in '99.

The first half ended in a 1-1 deadlock, with Syracuse holding a 4-3 shot edge over the first 35 minutes of play.

UMass seemed reborn in the second half, racking up a 9-4 shot advantage and a whopping 5-0 penalty corner monopoly over the final frame. But a single Syracuse goal with 19:42 remaining would prove to be the difference in the contest in spite of the Maroon and White's dominance.

SU forward Kelly Hambleton notched the decisive score by drilling home a crossing pass that eluded Tucker. The Welsh goalie added three saves to her already impressive '99 resume in the defeat.

Syracuse rookie keeper Latsko racked up a career-high 10 saves for the Orangewomen.

UMass will now focus its attention on Providence, which invades Richard F. Garber field at 3:30 this afternoon. The Friars (5-8) have been relegated to cellar-dwellers in the Big East conference after dropping three-of-four conference matchups in the last five weeks.

Providence coach Bill Davidson does have an arsenal of hockey talent at his disposal this year, despite the team's mixed success on the field. The talented tandem of forwards Maggie Hoffman and Amy DePietro, who both hail from Southbury, CT and were teammates at Pomperaug High, have given the Friars a 1-2 punch of precision passing and slashing penetration.

Senior forward Erica Hebert has proven herself as Providence's best option on offense this year, racking up 24 points on 10 goals and four assists in 12 starts for the Friars.

PC goalkeeping has been somewhat of a gray area for Davidson, after his early season choice, Andrea Weyl, allowed a 2.86 goals-against average over the team's first 11 games. Newcomer Heather Tattersall has made the most of her limited time between the pipes, turning away seven shots in one quarter of play without allowing a single goal.

UMass basketball looks to improve

By Brett Mauser
Collegian Staff

Although Friday night marks the official beginning of the 1999-2000 basketball season, the Massachusetts men's and women's basketball teams shared a few words about what to expect this season at yesterday's annual UMass media day at the Mullins Center.

After a tumultuous 14-16 season, the Minutemen are determined to return to the form of the early 90's which saw them reach seven consecutive NCAA Tournaments. The losses of Lari Ketner and Charlton Clarke forces Flint into a more up-tempo scheme on offense while hoping to maintain its defensive prowess that much of the UMass tradition has been built upon.

"The emphasis will be a little bit different," Flint said. "We're probably going to be a little more perimeter-oriented than last year where we just came down and tried to throw it inside. I think that will be the biggest difference and we'll probably score a lot more."

The Minutemen return three seniors, all of which started last season. Leading scorer Monty Mack will have to overcome a stress fracture of the fifth metatarsal in his left foot. Having undergone surgery last week, Mack expects to return on or around the team's opening exhibition against the California All-Stars.

"I don't want to be the leader. I want everyone to be leading," Mack said. "Everybody on the team should be able to talk. That was the problem we had last year. People were scared to talk because they weren't the leader of the team. We're doing things a lot different this year."

Mack's high school teammate Jonathan DePina joins St. John's transfer Shannon Crooks and juco transfer Jovann Johnson in the backcourt, giving Flint a trio of creators

Turn to BASKETBALL, page 11

Daily Collegian

New England's largest college daily

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian — Thursday, October 14, 1999

NAACP president speaks out

KARA STRUMES COLLEGIAN

Forging Our Future: The Debate About Affirmative Action and College Admissions was addressed by Julian Bond, Chairman of the NAACP.

Melissa Hammel
Collegian Staff

Yesterday, the president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Julian Bond, lectured about the issue of affirmative action on the University of Massachusetts campus.

Bond's lecture, entitled "Forging our Future: The Debate About Affirmative Action," covered many issues in the fight for affirmative action both in education and in society.

He began his speech by advocating that the painful memories surrounding the history of the treatment of blacks need to be confronted. He explained that many people refused to believe that problems exist in race equality within society. He asked the audience the question, "How do you tell the truth about our present race relations?"

Mainly responsible for many of the issues regarding inequality within the United States are the United States government itself, Bond explained. To illustrate his point he made an analogy between affirmative action and a football game. He explained that the black and white teams had been engaged in a game for sometime, yet the white team was continually cheating. He related this to the current status of race relations, by explaining that in either case that the, "blacks will never catch up."

He explained that the government keeps trying to unfairly take away opportunities for minorities. "We want justice and fair play, they tell us that we are playing the race card," Bond said.

Also discussed was the bias within [illegible] at large against black people. [illegible] explained that over nine million blacks are currently segregated into all black areas, making it difficult for them to get out of poverty. He made it clear to the audience that these people, "face a life of poverty and isolation."

Addressed during the lecture was the role of affirmative action in education and in the workplace. According to Bond, when a black student continues onto the work force after he graduates, he will not earn as much as a white student in the same position. As for hiring in the work place, "it is the black skin not the yellow parchment paper that sets the rules," Bond said.

Bond advocated that, "without affirmative action both white and blue collars around black necks would begin to shrink."

Dr. Martin Luther King, Bond's former teacher, was also quoted within the lecture on his feelings regarding affirmative action. King's feelings on affirmative action were that it is necessary to do "something special" for those of African American heritage in order to give them equal opportunities. Bond indicated to the audience that this should continue to be in practice to this day. He explained to the crowd that affirmative action was an excellent tool to fight bias. According to him, "affirmative action has never been about preferential treatment for blacks," but instead about equalization.

Finishing up his lecture, Bond explained that the only time that affirmative action could be disbanded was when all races are truly equal. He advocated that we continue to keep the promise to eliminate racial biases today alive, by "greater efforts and grander victories."

Author of Dead Man Walking to speak at AC

By Andrea Peers
Collegian Staff

Nobel Prize Nominee, Sister Helen Prejean will be visiting Amherst this Friday to speak about her book, Dead Man Walking. The book deals with her involvement in the death penalty, and her journey as a spiritual advisor for a convicted killer.

Prejean grew up in a household where values and religion were important. Her father was a lawyer and her mother a devoted Catholic. Prejean was born into privilege, but as a young girl she was unaware of it. Her parents wanted her to see all parts of the world. Every summer, the family would travel to Canada, Europe, and the United States to visit new territory.

Her first experience with religion started when she was a child. Her parents would pray every night, and a well-run Catholic household was her father's policy. Her calling came for her in 1957, when she became a Sister. She later began her teaching career in white suburban parishes. However, Prejean felt she had not yet been involved in the lives of the poor and needy. Her prayers were the only connection she had to these groups, so she left the parish to move along in her teachings. In the same year, Prejean moved into the St. Thomas Housing Projects in New Orleans where she was faced with poverty, drugs and murders.

During her time in New Orleans, Prejean had come to understand the ways of this new community, and began advising individuals in what she saw as the right path- the path of God. But it wasn't until she was asked to be a pen pal with an inmate that she fully found her calling. Prejean received a letter from the Louisiana State Penitentiary at Angola, asking if she would like to help inmate Patrick Sonnier, who was a poor man held on death row for the killing of two teenagers.

Prejean's relationship with Sonnier lasted until his execution on Apr. 5, 1984. Her anger came with the execution, and her lack of understanding of a death sentence inspired her to write Dead Man Walking in 1993. Her book deals extensively with America's system of capital punishment and her first-hand account.

"I believe our society allows the death penalty only because we believe that those on death row are not human like us," Prejean has said.

She also currently serves as the National Chairperson for the Committee to Abolish the Death Penalty.

Prejean's book brought her into the media spotlight. She has discussed her views of capital punishment on news shows including "ABC World News Tonight". BBC

Turn to Speaker page 2

Health officials seek to eliminate syphilis infection in U.S.

By Susan Okie
Washington Post

Syphilis, an infection that has plagued kings and paupers around the globe for centuries, may soon be eliminated from the United States.

Reported new cases, already at a historic low, declined further in 1998, and health officials last week announced the kickoff of a campaign to eliminate syphilis in this country.

"We have an unprecedented opportunity to eliminate syphilis ... because disease rates are at an all-time low and because the disease is so concentrated geographically," said Judith Wasserheit, director of the division of sexually transmitted disease prevention at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC).

Syphilis is a sexually transmitted infection that, if untreated, can damage the brain and other organs and can be passed from a mother to her unborn infant, causing stillbirth or birth defects. It also can produce a genital sore called a chancre that increases an infected person's susceptibility to the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which causes AIDS. Transmission of syphilis has been controlled in most other industrialized countries, but in the United States the disease has continued to rise and fall in approximately 10-year cycles.

In recent years, new U.S. cases have been increasingly concentrated in a few counties and urban areas, especially in the South. Twenty-eight counties or independent cities, representing less than 1 percent of all U.S. counties, accounted for half of last year's 6,993 reported cases of primary and secondary syphilis, according to data released last week by the CDC. Such cases represent recently acquired infections.

Baltimore City reported the largest number of cases of any jurisdiction -- 456 -- but that figure represented a 31 percent decrease from the 1997 total of 665.

Health officials emphasize that cases reported to health departments represent a fraction of all new cases, but provide an indication of the frequency of syphilis in a community. Reported cases also reflect the quality of local health services, so a city's or county's total may be deceptively low if there are barriers to treatment or if public health workers are not doing an adequate job of interviewing people with new infections and contacting their sexual partners for testing.

"Syphilis is really sort of a barometer of community health," Wasserheit said.

Nationally, the number of new syphilis cases reported last year was 19 percent lower than in 1997 and 86 percent lower than the number reported in 1990. In that year, the peak of the most recent syphilis epidemic, there were 50,578 new cases of the disease.

Syphilis is a sexually transmitted infection caused by a bacterium, Treponema pallidum, that can damage tissues in many organs of the body. The initial symptoms- a painless

Turn to Syphilis page 2

Philip Morris admits dirty cigarette secrets

By Guy Gugliotta
Washington Post

Philip Morris Cos., the holding company that includes the nation's largest tobacco firm, is launching a new television advertising campaign aimed at broadening its image to ensure the public thinks of it as producing something besides cigarettes.

At the same time, the company has created a web site, www.philipmorris.com, on which the company concedes that "there is no 'safe' cigarette." The site goes on to say "Cigarette smoking is addictive, as that term is mostly commonly used today." Those statements mark a departure for the company, which had long disputed research that linked smoking and diseases including cancer, heart problems and emphysema.

The new ads come on the heels of another print and television campaign by Lorillard Tobacco Co., the nation's fifth-largest cigarette maker, designed to encourage parents to tell their children it's "uncool" to smoke.

The ad campaigns mark some of the first forays by the big tobacco companies to get back on the airwaves since they agreed to abandon television advertising in the early 1970s.

Both Philip Morris and Lorillard emphasized that the new campaigns are not part of the 1998 tobacco settlement requiring the companies to contribute about $1.5 billion to a nationwide anti-smoking education campaign.

Instead Philip Morris intends to spend $100 million per year independently on the program, an industry spokesman said, while Lorillard will spend a smaller but still significant amount of money.

"It's part of a much bigger effort that we're undertaking to be more accessible to the public and media, and to talk about issues, like tobacco, and drinking and driving," said Steve Parrish, Philip Morris Cos. senior vice president for corporate affairs.

At the same time, Parrish added, the corporation wants "to tell people about our 40-year commitment" to fight social ills such as hunger and domestic violence, both featured in the television ads, along with Philip Morris' disaster relief efforts and support for a program that tries to discourage shopkeepers from selling cigarettes to underage smokers.

Anti-smoking advocates greeted the new campaigns with skepticism. "It's clearly an effort to gain innocence by association," said attorney Cliff Douglas, of Tobacco Control Law and Policy Consulting in Ann Arbor, Mich. "And indeed, Philip Morris has a long pattern of success in buying the support and acquiescence of good people and organizations by contributing to worthy causes."

Douglas also suggested there seems to be "a coordinated effort" by the companies to fill a void until a new round of settlement-funded advertising appears.

Douglas dismissed the Philip Morris ads as "a diversionary tactic to redirect the public's attention away from the addictive and lethal nature of the company's products," but he also criticized the Lorillard campaign more directly aimed at discouraging tobacco use as "ambiguous."

Nixon tapes may prove costly again

By Robert L. Jackson
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Is the American public being asked to pay twice for what some historians regard as the priceless legacy of President Nixon's Watergate tapes?

That question, which a federal judge must decide, arises as yearlong litigation over the value of Nixon's recordings and other presidential materials nears a conclusion.

As custodian of these tapes and records for 25 years, the government is arguing that Nixon's heirs are not owed a penny, considering that taxpayers already have spent about $21 million to keep and index these materials.

But in a protracted civil trial that began last December, senior U.S. District Judge John Garrett Penn is trying to fulfill an appellate court order to determine how the Nixon family should be compensated for the government's seizure of all his White House papers, tapes and photographs after his resignation in 1974.

After hearing five months of testimony in a nearly empty

Turn to Nixon, page 2

PAM TOTH-BLACK COLLEGIAN

Looking Up

Laura DuPont, Harjeet Rehal, and Rachelle Karlin take a break diagonally on their way back from class.

EXTENDED FORECAST

Today	Friday	Saturday
HIGH: 58 LOW: 29	HIGH: 62 LOW: 45	HIGH: 64 LOW: 44

NEWS

Not Professing Feminism

Daphne Patai, a professor of Portuguese and comparative literature at UMass, likes to place herself right in the middle of controversy. Read about her inside.

PAGE 2

Pull out the Mittens

Winter's coming, but it's not here yet. So take a moment to enjoy Autumn with our Arts Cover. Plus, we've got the review of David Bowie's latest, 'hours...' all in today's Arts.

ARTS PAGE 5

A Battle with the Friars

Anke Bruemmer and the UMass field hockey team took on Providence College yesterday at Garber Field. To see how they did, check out page 18.

SPORTS PAGE 18

Arts & Living 5
Comics 17
Crossword 17
Editorial 4
News 2
Sports 18

ON THE INTERNET
www.dailycollegian.com

Faculty Profile

Professor still stirring up controversy over issues

Ex-prof unleashes opinions

Daphne Patai, professor of Portuguese and comparative literature.

Daphne Patai, a professor in the Department Spanish and Portuguese at the University of Massachusetts, has never been one to shy away from controversy. She has been vocal regarding both national and campus issues, and for her positions she has received praise from some, and scorn from others.

She authored Heterophobia (1998) and co-authored Professing Feminism: Cautionary Tales From the Strange World of Women's Studies (1994) with Noretta Koertge, two books which attacked ideological extremism within women's studies programs, and the feminist movement as a whole. As a result, some have hailed her as a beacon of truth, while others have condemned her as a traitor to women's rights. She taught courses in Women's Studies at UMass for almost a decade, but left the department in 1995, stating that she had become disgusted with "the way many professors use their classrooms as a political tool."

She has been an active opponent not only of what she calls the feminist movement's "Sexual Harassment Industry" and the political agendas of her fellow professors, but also of many of the administration's recent proposals.

"I love being a professor," she says, "and I think it's an extraordinary privilege to have this position. I hate to see the eagerness with which some people want to transform the University into something it isn't. I sometimes think it's a shame that I have to expend a considerable amount of energy combating what I see as dangerous, or extremely ill-advised."

Among the "ill-advised" ideas she has encountered at UMass was a harassment policy proposed by Chancellor David K. Scott, which she refers to derisively as a "speech code." The policy, which has never been adopted, would have barred any verbal conduct that could be construed by a minority group as offensive. In Heterophobia, she charged that Scott "meant to carve out an exception to the First Amendment."

"That's not something you can turn your back on," she says, "because one has to protest how contradictory a speech code is to a university.

"I have the feeling that Chancellor Scott has lost his way," says Patai. "I think that his projects and concerns for some time have reflected a lack of confidence in the importance of education and intellectual exploration as the main mission [of UMass]. He has for several years been talking about 'social justice.' Social justice is not the mission of the University. People disagree vehemently on the meaning of social justice. It's an appropriate topic for discussion, but not as an actual plan that he hopes to implement."

She is also adamantly opposed to Chancellor Scott's statements in a recent Boston Globe article, in which he stated that he hopes to incorporate spirituality into all aspects of UMass' curriculum.

"That strikes me as a another dangerous idea," she says. "The spiritual needs of the community are not his concern. The function of a university is not to create a new man or woman in the image that the chancellor has at any given time.

"Chancellor Scott has said that he considers a great deal of the scholarly work that academics do to be of no particular value. He's said that about his own work as a physicist, too. I believe that attitude reveals his discouragement in scholarly and intellectual work, and that he's reaching out in a rather strange manner to replace something he seems to think he's missing- and so we get his projects. One year it's social justice, one year it's spirituality."

"I take from all this that Chancellor Scott has lost hope in education as an intellectual endeavor," she says, "and I haven't. My guess is most of my colleagues haven't either, and I'd love to have them speak out and express their reactions to these so-called 'missions'

Turn to Patai, page 3

■ Syphilis

continued from page 1

sore, followed by a rash- often go unnoticed and disappear without treatment. However, the bacteria remain in the body, producing a "latent" infection that may injure the brain, spinal cord, major blood vessels, bones or other tissues.

Syphilis rates within the population vary among ethnic groups. The rate has historically been highest among African Americans, and in 1998 it was still much higher (17.1 cases per 100,000 population) than the national average (2.6 cases per 100,000) or the rates among other racial or ethnic groups. The data indicated that African Americans were 34 times more likely to be reported with syphilis than whites.

"Syphilis is a completely preventable disease that can be cured with one dose of penicillin, yet it takes a staggering toll on the African-American community," said Helene Gayle, director of the CDC's National Center for HIV, STD and TB Prevention, in a statement. "Syphilis remains one of the most glaring examples of racial inequities in health status facing this nation."

U.S. Surgeon General David Satcher and CDC director Jeffrey P. Koplan joined state and local health officials in Nashville last week to launch a national campaign to eliminate syphilis. Wasserheit said the campaign will focus on reducing transmission of the infection, with the goal of having fewer than 1,000 new cases reported annually and at least 90 percent of U.S. counties syphilis-free by 2005. Last year, about 80 percent of U.S. counties reported no new cases of syphilis.

As part of the elimination plan, the CDC is providing additional funds for syphilis control to 33 states and cities with a heavy burden of disease or a high potential for an outbreak.

■ Nixon

continued from page 1

courtroom, Penn ordered both sides to file briefs outlining their conclusions and legal arguments. The judge will hear final oral arguments next month.

Neil H. Koslowe, a Justice Department attorney, has submitted an impassioned plea that Nixon's family be awarded nothing.

While Nixon lawyers Herbert J. Miller and R. Stan Mortenson summoned experts to assess the commercial value of the 3,700 hours of recordings and other materials, Koslowe argued that all evidence suggests Nixon intended his tapes and papers to be "an integral, historical archive for research purposes," not a commercial windfall.

■ Speaker

continued from page 1

World Service Radio, "60 Minutes" and an NBC special series on the death penalty. Prejean's book also brought rise to the movie Dead Man Walking in 1995, which starred Susan Sarandon, and was directed by Tim Robbins.

Prejean was recently nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize. In 1994, she received the Christopher Award for Artistic Excellence, and during the same year was also awarded the American Library Association Award for Notable Book of the Year.

Prejean will speak at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Johnson Chapel at Amherst College. The speech, sponsored by the Amherst College Center for Religious Life, is free and open to the public.

FOR PEOPLE WHO WOULD GLADLY RIP OFF THEIR OWN EARS THAN HAVE TO LISTEN TO RICKY MARTIN OVER AND OVER AGAIN.

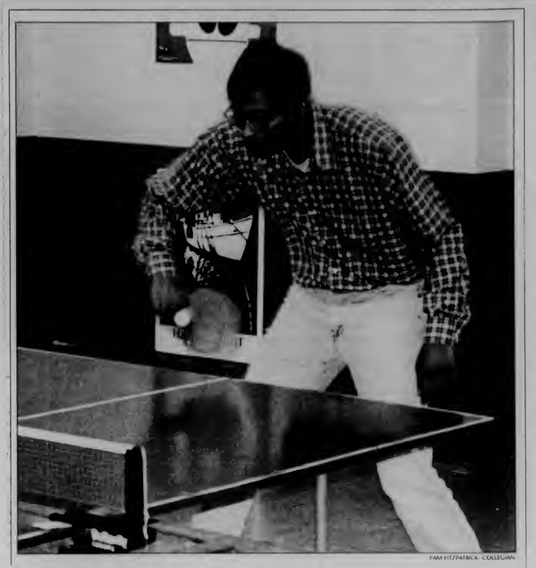
RIFFAGE.com

Get YOUR Music Online.

Discrimination case heard in Supreme Court

By Joan Biskupic
Washington Post

WASHINGTON – The Supreme Court heard arguments yesterday in an age discrimination case that ultimately could have wide ramifications for how civil rights laws are enforced in the states.



The case, brought by a group of professors at Florida state universities who claim they were unfairly denied raises, will determine whether public workers can sue the states that employ them for violations of the federal Age Discrimination in Employment Act, which protects workers who are 40 or older. The dispute, along with two related cases in Florida and Alabama, gives the court an opportunity to continue its pattern of bolstering state rights at the expense of congressional power. As one element of that trend, the court has limited individuals' ability to sue when states violate their rights under federal law.

But yesterday's case drives the court deeper into civil rights terrain than past disputes. A federal appeals court had ruled against the professors, relying on the general immunity from lawsuits accorded the states by the 11th Amendment, and rejecting arguments that Congress intended to lift that immunity through its Fourteenth Amendment power to enforce equal protection of the laws.

From their questions Wednesday, the justices seemed prepared to agree that states cannot be sued for age discrimination. But it was unclear how far the majority's reasoning might go toward barring claims brought against states based on other civil rights laws. Some justices observed that age bias is in a different category from discrimination based on race, national origin or sex, which are prohibited by the Constitution and more suitable areas for congressional action.

During yesterday's hour of vigorous arguments, Jeremiah A. Collins, representing the university faculty and other public workers, contended that when Congress amended the ADEA in 1974 to cover state employers, it clearly canceled the states' sovereign immunity from lawsuit in order to attack the "pervasive problem" of "unfounded prejudice" against older workers.

But Justice Sandra Day O'Connor observed that federal legislators failed even to mention the 11th Amendment, which generally shields states from lawsuits by individuals. Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, who, like O'Connor, is a critical vote in disputes over federal-state relations, added, "Congress didn't have the debate we're having here" about state's liability for age discrimination. "It didn't come close to it."

PAM HEFFERNAN / COLLEGIAN

Ping Pong
Graduate student Vamsi Vakulabharanam takes on an opponent in the Student Union Game Room.

Pakistan to form new government

By Pamela Constable and Kamran Khan
Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan – Pakistan's military leaders searched yesterday for a way to form a new government that would not be seen to violate the constitution, a day after they overthrew Prime Minister Nawaz Sharif and placed him and his top aides under house arrest.

Throughout the crisis, the country has remained calm, and there were no reports of bloodshed. Service was restored to normal at the nation's airports and telephone network. Troops guarded key buildings but were not visible in the streets. Most businesses were open, although banks and the stock exchange in Karachi, the Country's financial center, remained closed on military orders.

Top military officials met with senior civilian politicians and legal experts throughout the day, including the nation's president, whose post is largely ceremonial, and the head of the Supreme Court. But by Wednesday night they had made no new announcements and given no hint of their plans.

Gen. Pervai Musharraf, the army chief of staff, announced early yesterday morning that the military had seized power "as a last resort," to save Pakistan from economic and political collapse, and because Sharif had tried to "politicize and destabilize" the army. The army moved Tuesday just hours after Sharif attempted to dismiss Musharraf, with whom the prime minister has clashed for several months.

Although Pakistan was quiet Wednesday, foreign governments and international organizations sharply criticized the military takeover, the fourth since Pakistan gained independence from Britain in 1947.

The International Monetary Fund said it would suspend a $1.5 billion loan fund for Pakistan and would provide no new aid until democracy is restored. The European Union announced it would not sign a cooperation accord with the country and threatened to sever ties if a civilian government is not re-established. Pakistan is deeply in debt and heavily dependent on Western loans for economic survival.

Secretary of State Madeleine K. Albright said the coup made "it difficult to carry on business as usual" with the longtime U.S. ally. "We expect them to return to democratic rule and want to hear what their plans are," Albright said at the University of Maine

■ Patai

continued from page 2

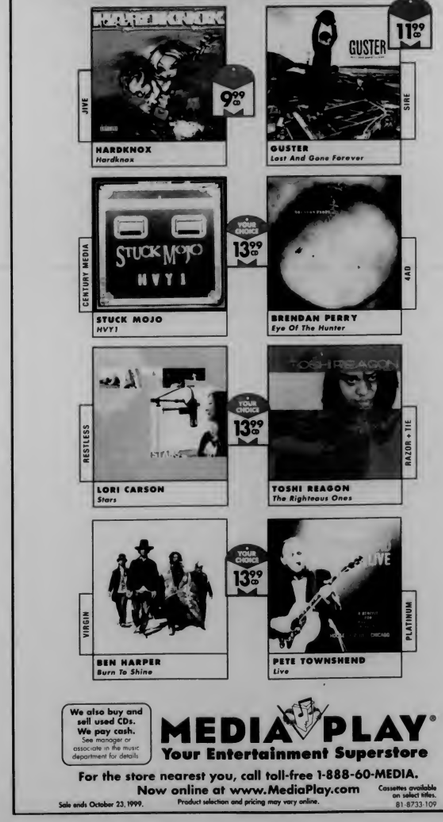
that he has come up with."

Patai would prefer that Scott devote his time toward other problems on campus.

"Everybody knows we're not sufficiently funded," she says. "The faculty is decreasing. We have a physical plant that is very often embarrassing to visitors. I swim in the pool in Boyden Gym, and half of the time there's no toilet paper in the stalls. Why should the chancellor be focusing on making students feel good instead of [focusing on these issues]?"

One of the greatest problems that Patai sees on campus is what she calls "identity politics," an issue explored deeply in her books on feminism.

"It's one minority group against the other," she says. "I've always objected to that. I've always seen that as a dead end. It identify politics the same thing as diversity, or is it the opposite? Is it everybody in their own little group defending their own little group?"



She cites an incident in which a University administrator announced the names of newly tenured professors at a Faculty Senate meeting, and instead of listing their accomplishments, described them in terms of their race and gender.

"That deeply shocked me," she says. "That's a prime example of what's wrong with this University."

Patai feels that she is often forced to decide between devoting her time to academic scholarship and to fighting oppressive proposals. Yet despite her ongoing social and political battles, she has produced a formidable body of scholarly work. She is the author of the books Myth and Ideology in Contemporary Brazilian Fiction, Brazilian Women Speak: Contemporary Life Stories and The Orwell Mystique: A Study in Male Ideology. She has also written many articles for the Chronicle of Higher Education and scholarly journals.

The academic world seems to me a fragile place," she says. "It's not appropriate to attempt to produce the perfectly integrated life. I think that we should protect that opportunity that it provides us to attempt to explore ideas dispassionately. The precious four years at a university should be spent on intellectual development."

We also buy and sell used CDs. We pay cash. See manager or associate in the music department for details

MEDIA PLAY
Your Entertainment Superstore

For the store nearest you, call toll-free 1-888-60-MEDIA.
Now online at www.MediaPlay.com
Product selection and pricing may vary online.
Cassettes available on select titles.
Sale ends October 23, 1999.
81-8733-109

There will be a
PHOTO STAFF MEETING
Monday at 7 PM.
New Photographers Welcome!

NOW IS THE TIME TO PUT YOUR BEST FOOT FORWARD AS JOB INTERVIEWS APPROACH.

STARTS TOMORROW
33-40% OFF ALL MEN'S SUITS*
JONES NEW YORK • EVAN-PICONE • CHAPS
CLAIBORNE • MORE • 2-, 3- & 4-BUTTON
REGULAR OR ATHLETIC FIT
Reg. $175-$525. SALE $99.99-$349.99

3 DAYS ONLY!
STUDENT SAVINGS COUPON
EXTRA 10% OFF
ANY ONE MEN'S SALE OR CLEARANCE-PRICED SUIT
COUPON VALID FRIDAY-SUNDAY, OCTOBER 15-17
NO EXTRA DISCOUNT special orders, gift certificates, gift cards, Rack or prior-to orders. Prior sales excluded. Coupons cannot be combined. Limit one set of coupons per customer. Limit one item per coupon.

Sale ends Sunday, October 17, 1999. *Excludes Hart, Schaffner & Marx and all by Calvin Klein. Men's Suits: all or stores except Hyannis, Barnstable and Belmont, MA; Kingston, NY; Bangor, ME. Regular and Original prices are offering prices only and may or may not have resulted in sales. Advertised merchandise may be available at later prices or upcoming sale events.

CHARGE IT WITH FILENE'S
WE ALSO WELCOME VISA MASTERCARD AND DISCOVER

FILENE'S
THIS IS WHERE IT GETS GOOD

CHARGE IT WITH FILENE'S
WE ALSO WELCOME VISA MASTERCARD AND DISCOVER

Amherst 5-0

Do you remember that wonderful song by NWA about the police? Oh come on... even you English majors have to get out of the house sometime. Sure, everyone remembers "Fuck the Police," and while I don't entirely agree with that song, I have a couple of issues with the boys in blue that I'd like to enlighten you with. Just a few incidents that seem to bring out the best in corruption and misuse of the law... I mean, law enforcement.

Gary Mendese

Last semester, a friend of mine named "Superfly" brought his car up to school one week and being the American-made wonder that it was, it died. Yup, his alternator died and he was stuck. So he and a few friends decided to push the car into the yellow lot, so that it would be safe and wouldn't get towed. But low and behold, a cop (corruptor of people) decided to take time away from his doughnut-eating schedule and harass my friends. In fact, the officer ran everyone's information and the person steering the motionless dead weight didn't have her license. Hark! How could she?! She didn't know that she needed her license to steer a broken down car while other people pushed? Have you ever?!

Because she didn't have her license, he was forced to trust her word, and he had to run the information she told him. Well, the buffoon couldn't find her name or social security number in the entire state of New York! He accused her of lying and threatened to arrest her!

Well, he eventually let the whole "car pushing" incident slide, after my friends were virtually frostbitten, having stood outside in the freezing weather for a some time, waiting for some moron to "allow" them to go about their business.

Now, why would the police bother with something like this? It seems to me that some officers have nothing else better to do than pick on we "little" college folk. So, to help our beloved law enforcements, I have a suggestion. I know of two places where there is guaranteed to be some kind of illegal activity going on. I know this is really earth shattering, but bear with me...

The first place I have in mind is the Cannabis Reform Coalition. Now, here you have a group of people that openly admit to breaking the law, but no one bothers to check into this. Now I know that not everyone in this group smokes up (whatever), but the majority of them must. So come on boys, let's go catch us some circle dancers... dude!

The next place that could help our boys in blue reach their quotas each month would be that strip of houses called Fraternity Row. Yeah, I know they do other, legal things, but drive by Frat. Row on a Friday or Saturday night and you'll see hundreds of underage students with cups or cans of beer in their hands, others puking on the lawns of fraternity houses and about 5 police cruisers just sitting there. Now, am I saying that students should be arrested for drinking if they're underage? No. But I'm not the one that created the whole "you must be 21 to drink" thing, either. I'm just trying to figure out why the police pay close attention to frivolous, petty things like my friends moving a stalled car, while virtually ignoring the fact that hundreds, if not thousands, of underage students are getting sloshed right before their very eyes. It just seems odd to me. But then again, so do most things.

Now, I have yet another story to tell you involving the bizarre methods of the UMass Police Department. This is a true story that happened to a friend of mine who we will call "Debo" for now.

Last semester, while walking through his dorm, Debo waved "hello" to a female friend of his – you know, being a nice guy. Well, apparently the girl's inebriated, jack-off boyfriend was in the room with her and got a little jealous. The lush sprang out of the room and got right up to Debo's face, looking to start a fight. Apparently spraying all over the wall like a territorial lion wasn't enough for him, and he wanted to take Debo on.

Debo really wanted nothing to do with this and initially tried to blow it off. But soon, like any other normal person, he got pissed off and began arguing back. Eventually, the two got into a small fistfight (in the stairway mind you) before they left the building and the ordeal was over. But there is a catch to this story. You see, the drunk bunghole had a friend with him, who served as mostly an audience to the whole fight. Or so Debo thought.

The next day, while Debo was in the shower, more than 20 members of a "fraternal organization" came into the bathroom looking for him. These guys came from a "group" that may or may not have been closed down earlier this year; it may or may not have only two letters in its name; and it may or may not be located near Southwest. And mind you, this is not a theory: I know that this happened.

Now, these pansies blocked off the exits to the bathroom, and one kid looked over the shower (which is another issue) and told Debo that he had 20 seconds to get out of there. Not knowing exactly what awaited him, Debo got out of the shower and these ball-less losers attacked him with rolls of quarters in their fists, leaving him with cuts, bruises, a lot of pain and a trip to the hospital.

You're probably wondering why these guys (if you can call them that... wusses is more like it) would bother Debo in the first place. Well, the friend of the moron who fought Debo the night before had a cousin in this "noble organization" and they decided to teach my friend a lesson. Of course, they didn't have the aggies to go one-on-one with him so they sent their whole posse. Now that's cool!

The police "investigated" this, but since they couldn't get accurate information on everyone involved, they eased off the case. In fact, at the end of last semester, they told Debo that since no one was going to be up here the entire summer, it would probably make sense to close the case. Oh, but he could reopen it any time if he wanted to. What a crock! They know he probably won't reopen it because he has other things to do... they just didn't want the hassle. Plain and simple.

So to the cowards that attacked my friend: @$*# you! I can guarantee that he could kick any of your asses one-on-one. Apparently your "orchids" haven't dropped from your stomach yet and you're totally pathetic. So from the bottom of my heart, you can go to hell!

Anyway, as you can see, there are a number of instances where the police do nothing but shuffle paper and steer clear of issues that are too big to handle, and that's sad. It's sad because I know that not all police are like this; some of them are kind and noble, and they truly want to help society. But all it takes is a few bad seeds to ruin the whole crop, you know? This also pertains to the "fraternal organization" mentioned, as I know that not all of its members participated in this act and would never condone such behavior.

But still, if the police paid more attention to serious matters like the beating of a student or 17-year-olds binge drinking and then destroying stuff, the system would work a lot better. But who has time for rational ideas? Adam Prentice and Debo are two isolated incidents, right? Besides, we're halfway through the month and there are quotas to be met. We can reform the system next month.

Gary Mendese is a Collegian columnist.

The fashion police

The French city of Paris is known for many things. It is the premier honeymoon spot in the world because of the air of romance that surrounds it as in no other city. It's famous for people who don't like Americans, the Eiffel Tower, a great chase scene from the James Bond film, A View To A Kill, and its toast. Most importantly it is one of the centers of the fashion world right along with Milan, New York and Worcester. Every time you turn around there is another fashion show with new hot models, the designer of the moment with his seasonal line and a bunch of crazy ass clothes coming from Paris. The clothes at these fashion shows are absolutely ridiculous and un-wearable. The only people who can wear them are Madonna, Cher and you, if you're on your way to a costume ball. Let me be the first to tell you that all of this is about to change.

Dan Viens

This summer, the city of Paris experienced a severe water shortage. As a result of this, the government was forced to abolish what they deemed to be unnecessary use of water. These unnecessary uses of water include car washing, lawn watering, plant watering, pet hydration and last but not least clothes washing. Anyone caught doing any of these things is subject to a $5,000 fine and up to six months in a maximum-security prison.

At first these new developments didn't seem as though they would have any major effect on the fashion world. I mean, all that needs to be done for a fashion exhibition is for the clothes to be made and worn. Usually, the clothes are worn once or twice, and then who knows what the hell happens to them. All of this changed on September 29.

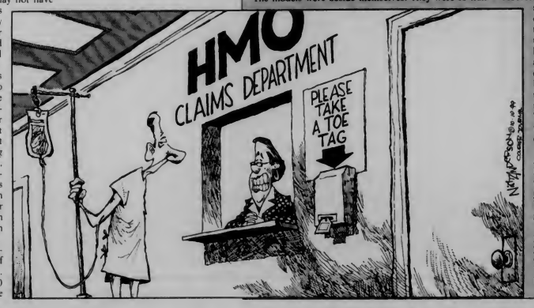
On this day, Tyra Banks and Linda Evangelista were taking part in a Calvin Klein fashion show in Paris. However, they knew that they were going to be late, because they both had commitments in Sydney, Australia the night before. They thought that it would be wise to give each of them the first outfit that they would be wearing in the CK show. Once they got on the plane from Sydney to Paris, each put on their outfits. If all went well, they would land with about thirty minutes to spare. After a fifteen-minute limo ride, they would be able to ease into the auditorium and onto the runway. Let me tell you none of this happened.

The flight from Sydney was a breeze. The models actually landed about an hour and a half early. With this time to spare, they decided to get something to eat. Tyra got a hot dog with everything on it and Linda got a huge hot fudge sundae. They entered the limo with their food and began chowing. With three blocks to go, they were in a car accident. Thank goodness nobody was hurt. However, their clothes were covered in ketchup, mustard, sauerkraut, ice cream, hot fudge and cheese. The models were beside themselves. They were so hungry and now their food was everywhere. They weren't worried about the clothes because they knew that Calvin had designed these outfits out of a material that was stain proof, as long as they went into the washer for fifteen minutes within one hour of the staining. Therefore, they figured that they had nothing to worry about with the clothes. Apparently, they had not heard about the draught.

When they got to the auditorium where the fashion show was to be held, Calvin Klein nearly tore his knickers when he saw the catastrophe. He is up on current events and he knew that it would be taking a great legal risk to wash the clothes. One of CK's interns went to work to try to wash the clothes. What he didn't know was that every faucet and washing machine in all of Paris was attached to a siren in the Paris P.D. As soon as the washer went on, the police were en route. The intern was arrested for washing clothes and Calvin Klein was given a citation for being accessory to washing clothes.

Calvin had to make the decision whether to scrap the outfits or to let them go on as some sort of avant-garde fashion statement. He decided that he truly needed these outfits to complete his fall line. After a severe scolding and fifteen lashings each, Tyra and Linda were ready to go. The show started and they marched out onto the runway. At first there was silence. Then there were gasps. The awkward moment ended when the entire auditorium came to their feet with resounding applause. The show as a whole was not a success. People loved the stained clothes, but didn't care much for the clean ones.

This historic Calvin Klein show has set the fashion world on its ear. All of a sudden the tables have turned. No longer are the wealthy the fashion elite. By accident CK discovered a trend that had been seen hundreds of years earlier by poor bums. Slobs, hippies and other people who just can't afford to do laundry had followed this trend of tattered stained clothes. College students rank high on the list of people who cannot find the time or the money to do laundry. CK's discovery has been a blessing to these students who no longer have to be ashamed of the spaghetti sauce or vomit stain they got on their new seventy-dollar jeans.



Actually, these stains can be looked at as an investment. Wealthy people who are too feeble minded to come up with anything original would pay top dollar for anything with a rare and completely authentic stain. For a little while the not so "well to do" were doing extremely well. They were selling painters pants from the late seventies for $200. The people for whom the fashion police had warrants out six months earlier were now the ones making money and setting trends.

Then the good ole' fashion juggernaut we call Abercrombie and Fitch stepped into play. The genius store that once gave us new clothes that looked old had been trying to think up some genius plan to once again be number one in the overpriced unoriginal clothing market. Their market analysts had one more trick up their sleeve. The answer to all of their worries was pre-stained clothing. No longer would their clothes be sorted by color or size; they would simply be on racks that had the same stains as the clothes around them, whether it was fake Kool Aid or fake Vomit. People were willing to pay top dollar for this new trend that the Abercrombie Gods had discovered.

After this it was only a matter of time before American Eagle, The Gap, Eddie Bauer, Banana Republic and Aeropostaie caught on. However, they didn't even make their own clothes; they just bought Abercrombie stuff, stained over the labels and then printed their logos. Gosh they are geniuses.

If you haven't caught onto this latest trend and you don't look like everyone on your floor, then you best run out the mall and grab some new clothes. I heard that A&F is having a clearance. You can by four shirts for only $118. Good Luck.

Dan Viens is a Collegian columnist.

The real truth behind Columbus Day

Jason Czernich

We have a day off for Columbus Day. Why? Columbus accidentally discovered America, that's why. Okay, so what are we supposed to do with this day off? How does one exactly go about celebrating Columbus Day?

The answer does not seem obvious. On Thanksgiving people get together with their relatives, and they feast on turkey while watching giant balloons deflate on television. On Christmas people exchange gifts and decorate trees. On New Year's Eve, St. Patrick's Day, and Independence Day some people like to drink. People who celebrate Easter color eggs, hide them, find them, consume them and then find the ones they never found three months later. All of those holidays can be celebrated in those ways and in other ways, but how do you even begin to celebrate Columbus Day?

During the holidays some people like to recreate historical events pertaining to the day that they are celebrating. Examples of this are Christmas pageants that are held in schools and churches during the Yuletide season, people who think it's fun to dress up as pilgrims and recreate the first Thanksgiving meal and drunks who recreate Lucky Charms commercials on St. Patrick's Day. Maybe recreation is the key to celebrating Columbus Day. Following that idea, if I truly wanted to recreate Columbus Day, I would have to go to a place I've never been, explore it and enslave all the people there.

If I choose to celebrate Columbus Day in this fashion, the place I would pick to explore would be a Hardee's restaurant because I've never, ever been to one. I'd walk in with my crew and declare, "I claim this land and all the property on it mine!" My crew would be friends of mine that would volunteer to help me on this groundbreaking expedition. We'd be decked out in pirate hats made out of newspaper with cardboard swords to match. They would help me enforce my law over this strange new land, but their main purpose would really be to constantly "shhhh" the people laughing at us.

Now declaring that Hardee's is mine and enforcing my claim are two very different things. I would not carry any real weapons of course so I would rely on the art of intimidation instead. I would do what my older brother did to me when I angered him by eating the last Twinkie when we were younger: I'd make myself look bigger and quote Robert DeNiro. I would shout, "You want a piece of me?!" It works for my brother, blowfish and Mickey Rooney so I see no reason why it would not work for me.

After the fry cooks and other natives move out of my way I would move on to pillaging the natural resources of Hardee's just as Columbus and his men used to do to the natives he encountered all those centuries ago. Instead of sacks, my crew and I would carry tupperware to move our precious booty away in. Hamburgers, cheeseburgers, French fries, hot dogs and more would fill our flexible containers.

After we have drained Hardeeland of all its natural resources, my valiant men and I would depart in our three cars: the Nina, the Pinto, and the Santa Maria packed to the brim with our purloined goods. We would try to outrace the authorities, who were called the minute we set foot on the shores of Hardee's and declared our mission.

Kids listening to the news the next day would have the fantastic opportunity to learn about the discovery of America and how it really took place. The greed. The manipulation. The paper hats. It would all be there. They would also find out about the true spirit of Columbus Day. It's not the receiving or giving. It's the taking! That and evil white guys back then wanted to conquer everything they possibly could and would go to extreme lengths to accomplish their goals.

Of course what actually happened on Columbus Day was no laughing matter at all. It was a far graver affair. There are plenty of details I've left out, such as how Columbus was far more quiet and manipulative when first dealing with the natives, how he incorrectly gave the natives the name Indians when something like Native Americans would have been more accurate. Also, Columbus never found the westward route to the Indies that he sought, and he technically never actually set foot on the mainland of America. He gave the natives smallpox and in turn got... uh, nevermind I'll leave that one out.

Next time you celebrate Columbus Day remember it wasn't an event in our national heritage that should give us a great deal of pride. In fact some see it as a scar on our history. One man and his crew thought they were so right when they were causing so much wrong. True, Columbus did discover The New World, but it marked the beginning of a long cycle of terrible violence that was carried on by other explorers and eventually the white settlers. Have you seriously ever stopped to think that we are celebrating this? We don't mean to but sadly there it is. When you celebrate Columbus Day next year think of how the discovery of America by the Europeans came at a severe price to the original peoples of this land.

Also don't forget how lucky we are not to have a Hardee's within the immediate area. I hear their food is terrible.

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

113 Campus Center • University of Massachusetts Amherst, MA 01003 • (413) 545-3500 • Fax (413) 545-1592 • http://www.dailycollegian.com

Seth Koenig Editor-in-Chief Ken Mc Donald Managing Editor Marielly Troncoso Business Manager Lisa Metcalf Production Manager
Debra Sheehan Advertising Manager Bridget Dolezsar Co-Advertising Production Manager Robin Johnson Co-Advertising Production Manager Lenny Holston Senior Diversity Editor

Adam Martignetti Arts & Living Editor
Hugh Reid Black Affairs Editor
Alexis Pushkar Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Gary Mendese Co-Editorial/Opinion Editor
Position Vacant Gay, Lesbian, Bisexual Issues Editor
Natty Yagudin Jewish Affairs Editor
Lenny Holston Multicultural Affairs Editor
Elana Premack News Editor
Kara Stokes Photography Editor
Bryan Smith Co-Sports Editor
Brett Mauser Co-Sports Editor
Kathleen Ralls Women's Issues Editor
Joylyn Lombard Editorial Production Manager
Marc Menschel Finance Manager
Position Vacant Distribution Manager
Joylyn Lombard Promotions Manager
Position Vacant Classifieds Manager
Position Vacant Developing Nations Editor
Samantha Poulten Assistant to the Managing Editor
Maureen Majerowski Assistant Operations Manager
Marty Pappas Classified Advertising
Position Vacant Graphics Advisor/Instructor
Position Vacant Systems Manager
Benjamin T. Alamed Webmaster

The Massachusetts Daily Collegian is published Monday through Friday during the University of Massachusetts calendar semester. The Collegian is financially independent from the University of Massachusetts, operating solely on revenues generated by advertising sales. The paper was founded in 1890 as Aggie Life, became the College Signal in 1901, the Weekly Collegian in 1914 and then the Tri-Weekly Collegian in 1956. The Collegian has been published daily since 1967, and has been a broadsheet publication since January 1994. For advertising rates and information, call (413) 545-3500 weekdays between 8:30 a.m. and 5:30 p.m.

"Leaving" Summer Behind

Fall Literature

By David Troupes
Collegian Staff

O hushed October morning mild,
Thy leaves have ripened to the fall;
To-morrow's wind, if it be wild,
Should waste them all.
(from Robert Frost's October)

Our summers may be unbearably muggy; our winters may be bitter cold; but man, New England's the place to be for autumn. If the brilliant maple trees and brisk, windy weather don't get your spirits soaring, check your pulse, because something's gone wrong. Unfortunately, we're all college students drowning in term papers and midterms, and we can't always take a weekend off to drive to Vermont and ooh and ahh at the foliage. So what do we do? Well, if you feel up to cracking the spine of a book of poems, take a study break and sit down with two of New England's finest lyricists, Robert Frost and Emily Dickinson.

Frost moved to Massachusetts when he was 11, and attended school in Lawrence. His career didn't start in earnest until he moved his family to England, but three years later he returned with two books of verse successfully published, A Boy's Will and North of Boston. He moved to New Hampshire and continued to write, lecture, and teach, while finding his way into an impressive array of literary and academic honors.

Whose woods these are I think I know.
His house is in the village though;
(from Robert Frost's Stopping by Woods on a Snowy Evening)

When the mood does strike you to rush outside and soak up the season's beauty, why not take a stroll on the Robert Frost Trail? The trail project was begun in 1982 as a means of joining many of the region's parks and conservation areas. The trail has grown steadily, and currently runs for more than 40 miles from the

Turn to Verse, page 9

Pioneer Valley, Autumn Style

By Adam Martignetti
Collegian Staff

Let's play a word game.

I'll say a word and you say the first thing that comes to your mind.

Ready? Autumn... leaves. It's natural, right? And certainly the assortment of brilliant colors that foliage can provide is one of the biggest reason's to love the Fall season.

Foliage connoisseurs like myself though realize that this past weekend was the week for leaf viewing. Columbus Day weekend is the weekend, when thousands of people flock to the Kankamangus Highway in the rustic state of New Hampshire, and proceed to sit there for hours, suffering through the pains of interminable traffic, rather than enjoying the majestic vistas around them. Sounds like fun, doesn't it?

Right now, you may be questioning our choice for the Arts cover. However, we're only three weeks into my favorite season and it seemed appropriate to relish in the moment while we can.

For all you sports fans out there, it doesn't get much better than this. The baseball playoffs have started and every possible match-up is intriguing. Braves vs Yankees is a rematch of 1996, not to mention a renewal of their long history going back to Milwaukee. Braves vs Red Sox is a battle of the former Boston teams. Yankees vs Mets is the long heralded "subway" series. And Mets vs Red Sox is...well, we won't mention that for Sox fans' sake.

In addition to that, the NFL is in full swing. The NHL season has started. And best of all college hoop is right around the corner. Ok, so Dick Vitale isn't much to look forward to, but ESPN triple-headers are. To get into the spirit come down to Midnight Madness tomorrow at the Mullins Center. You can meet the UMass basketball team and stay up all night with some serious hoop.

Another Fall tradition is apple picking. Somehow the cool crisp air and beautiful surroundings make those MacIntosh apples taste that much sweeter. The closest apple farm is The Red Apple Farm is Phillipston, MA off of Route 2. They offer pick your own berries, apples, gourds and pumpkins. In addition to that, they have a petting farm for kids, an outdoor grill and a farm stand to pick up some of your favorite goodies. "The Black Forest Maze" and hiking trail, which leads to the 1000 Acre Swamp and Beaver Dam, promises some outdoor fun. Plus, they host another honored Autumn tradition- the hayride- every weekend.

From October 21st through October 24th, there will be a Haunted Train in Look Memorial Park, Northhampton. In addition to the train ride, there will be hand crafted light displays and silhouettes.

If you're looking for more spooky fun, then head over to Turn to Fall, page 10

Design and Layout by Jeanette Santoro
Photo by Carl J. Santoro

The Five College Area's Source for Discovering the Weekly Happenings of New England and Beyond

THE SOURCE

Every Thursday!

Another Fine Product of the Massachusetts Daily Collegian

Fire & Water Cafe in Northampton continues to pull in quality entertainment whether it is before or after an artist's engagement at an area venue, or an off-tour intimate acoustic performance. Tonight is one of those times as Mighty Purple frontman Steve Rodgers, who's band two weekends ago gigged at the Pearl Street Ballroom and the Meadows Music Theatre as part of Radio 104's Big Day Off, performs in a 10 p.m. show.

On Friday Midnight Madness is the official start of the basketball season but if you get a chance beforehand check out Fountains of Wayne guitarist Brian Young's side project, Astrojet, which performs at the Baystate. Look for Northampton resident and FOH vocalist Chris Collingwood to stop on by. Another UMass act plays the Iron Horse this weekend when The Maggies headline a late night show. Mighty Purple sees time at Toad's Place in New Haven with Ranc, who recently played with DMB guitarist Tim Reynolds.

The Indigo Girls and Ph Balance make a return to the valley on Saturday when they play the Mullins Center. Boston's Cheerleader comes to the Baystate, while Macy Gray is at Pearl Street, and Jimmy Page and the Black Crowes come to Worcester. Don't miss Seattle's avant-garde jazz / jam band, the Living Daylights, who hit the Horse's stage late on Saturday. They put on an impressive showing at Fill the Hill last May at UMass. Surprisingly Vertical Horizon plays the Paradise Rock Club this weekend and not Avalon after leaving hundreds of ticketless individuals out in the cold last time they toured the area.

Not to be missed is when Boston's Shelia Divine team up with Supcrdrag at Pearl Street on Sunday. Possessing an indie rock core sound supplemented with arena rock guitar riffs and a smart pop flare, the Shelia Divine's latest release is making critics heads turn. Tickets are priced cheap so don't miss last spring's WRCN Rumble winner stimulate the club room crowd.

On Wednesday singer-songwriter Mark Erelli is at Club Passim in Boston while the Goo Goo Dolls and Tonic hit the Mullins Center in the MP3 Music and Technology Tour.

- Tom Sadlowski

Thursday, Oct. 14

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Two and Five, 10 p.m., 21+
AVALON
Tricky, DJ Genaside 2, Smoke
BAYSTATE
Bamboo Streamers, Landlord of Love, 21+
FIRE & WATER CAFE
Steve Rodgers (Mighty Purple frontman), 10 p.m.
IRON HORSE
Hal Ketchum, 7&10 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Viperhouse plus Gordon Stone Band

Dance Clubs
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Top 40, Hip-Hop, R&B with DJ's KLS and M.I.C.

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Sports
BLUE WALL
WAL X- Sport-line, 5:30 p.m.

Friday, Oct. 15

Notices
Final Nomination Schedule will be available beginning today at Whitmore.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Tweed Sneakers, 10 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
Artrocit, 21+
IRON HORSE
Jesse Winchester plus Cindy Bullen, 7 p.m.
The Maggies, 10 p.m.
MIDDLE EAST
Agents of Good Roots, Dispatch, Uncle Sammy
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB
Dark Star Orchestra, 8:30 p.m.
TOAD'S PLACE
Mighty Purple plus Rane

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
House with DJ Ranpage, 9 p.m.-2 a.m.
MARS NIGHTCLUB
Disco
PEARL STREET
Chemistry Friday, 10 p.m.
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Otis, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Karaoke
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN.
9:30 p.m., 21+

Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs Xavier, 3 p.m.
MULLINS CENTER
Midnight Madness, 10:30 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
BLUEWALL
Something Every Friday with caricature artists and movie Tarzan, 5 p.m.

Saturday, Oct. 16

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Crocodile Tears, 10 p.m., 21+
BAYSTATE
Playtopia, Cheerleadr, 21+
IRON HORSE
Jimmie Dale Gilmore plus Paul Kahn, 7 p.m.
Living Daylights, 10 p.m.
MULLINS CENTER
Indigo Girls plus Ph Balance, 8 p.m.
PARADISE ROCK CLUB
Vertical Horizon plus Angry Salad
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB
Macs Gray, 8:30 p.m.
WORCESTER CENTRUM
Jimmy Page plus Black Crowes

Dance Clubs
CLUB METRO
All ages dance, 8 p.m.-1 a.m.
MARS NIGHTCLUB
House and Techno with DJ Hush
PEARL STREET
Merengue and salsa with DJ Oliveras, 10 p.m.-2 1+
THE GROTTO
Dance with DJ Steve, 10 p.m.-2 a.m., 21+

Comedy & Improv
CAMPUS CENTER
Mission Improvable, 8 p.m.

Sports
ON RADIO
Football at Maine on WMUA 91.1 FM, 1 p.m.

Sunday, Oct. 17

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Sara Manning, 9 p.m., 21+
IRON HORSE
Acoustic Junction, Stewart Lewis and Spooky Daly, 7 p.m.
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB
The Shelia Divine plus Superdrag, 8:30 p.m.

Sports
TOTMAN FIELD
Women's Soccer vs Dayton, 1 p.m.

Additional On-Campus Events
STUDENT UNION BALLROOM
Movie Tarzan, 8 p.m.

Monday, Oct. 18

Notices
Ticket pickup from 9 a.m.-4:30 p.m. at Curry Hicks Cage.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Amherst Jazz Orchestra, 8:30 p.m., 21+
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB
Zap Mama, 7 p.m.

Tuesday, Oct. 19

Music
IRON HORSE
The Bevis Frond, Olive Grain and Chaz, 8:30 p.m.

Performing Arts
TOTMAN 101 - UM
Ballroom Dance Club, 6:45 p.m.

Wednesday, Oct. 20

Notices
Monday class schedule will be followed.

Music
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY
Michael Gregory & Friends, 10 p.m., 21+
CLUB PASSIM
Mark Erelli
IRON HORSE
Tuck & Patti, 7 p.m.
MULLINS CENTER
MP3 Festival, noon
Goo Goo Dolls plus Tonic, 8 p.m.

Dance Clubs
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS
Swing and salsa with DJ litterbug, lessons from 7-8:30 p.m., Open Dance 8:30-11:30 p.m.
THE GROTTO
DJ Dance Party, 10:30 p.m.-2 a.m., 18+

Film
Call for latest movie times or go to excite.com and click on movie listings for zip code 01003 for desired date.

Academy of Music Theatre
274 Main Street, Northampton (584-8455)
Trick

AMC Mountain Farms 4
Mountain Farms Mall - Route 9, Hadley (584-9153)
Blue Streak, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings, Fight Club

Amherst Theatre
30 Amity Street, Amherst (253-3426)
200 Cigarettes

Greenfield Cinemas
Route 2, The Mohawk Trail, Greenfield (772-0298)
Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, For Love of the Game, Mystery, Alaska, Random Hearts, The Sixth Sense, Three Kings

Pleasant Street Theatre
27 Pleasant Street, Northampton (586-0935)
American Beauty, The 24 Hour Woman, The King of Masks, Wrestling with Alligators

Showcase Cinemas
864 Riverdale Street, West Springfield (737-5131)
The Adventures of Elmo in Grouchland, American Beauty, Blues Streak, Double Jeopardy, Drive Me Crazy, For the Love of the Game, Random Hearts, Mystery, Alaska, The Sixth Sense, Stigmata, Superstar, Three Kings

Tower Theatres
19 College Street, South Hadley (533-3456)
Double Jeopardy, Random Hearts

Outdoors & Trips
UMass Ski-n' Board Club
458 Student Union (545-3457)
No events scheduled at this time.

Outing Club
428 Student Union (545-3151)
Rock Climbing every Wednesday meeting at 2:20 P.M. at the Student Union steps

Other Activities
If the previous events fail to catch your attention then consider disco bowling at Northampton Bowl; biking, rollerblading, or running the Rail Trail from Northampton to Sunderland; hiking, mountain-biking or rock-climbing one of the area mountains; visiting Puffer's Pond; shopping at the Hampshire or Holyoke Mall; hayride at the Bison Farm in Hadley; mini-golf on route 9; billiards in the UMass campus center, Mike's Billiards in Amherst, or Packard's in Northampton.

Art Galleries
Bridges and Boudaries: African Americans and American Jews
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670). An exploration of relationships between African Americans and American Jews that combines scholarship, historical documentation, and fine arts. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22.

Primary Source
University Gallery, UMass (545-3670). Participating artists Roger Ackling, Doug Bradshow, and Sandy Gellis collaborate with light, rainfall, and mineral compounds. Tue-Fri 11 a.m.-4:30 p.m., Sat-Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 22.

Altered Space
Augusta Savage Gallery, 101 New Africa House, UMass (545-5177). Mixed-media works by New York-based African American artist Grace Williams. Mon-Tue 1-7 p.m., Wed-Fri 1-5 p.m. through October 19.

I Want to Feel the Way You Do, All the Time
Hampden Gallery, Southwest Residential Area, UMass (545-0880)

Turn to SOURCE page 7

The Source

continued from page 6

An installation contrasting nature and culture by Hirokazu Fukawa. Mon-Fri 3-7 p.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 30.

Think Again
Hampden Film / Photo Gallery, Hampshire College (559-5447). An exhibit of print works by a collaborative team of two artists, S.A. Bachman and David Attyah, who create agit-prop art with a political twist. Mon-Thurs 9-12 a.m., Fri-Sun 1-6 p.m. through October 29.

Documents
Hampshire College Main Gallery (559-5544). Paintings and drawings by Cynthia Gaash, Susan Nelson Rogers, and Danica Phelps (three Hampshire alumni) dealing with time, evidence, and the self. Mon-Fri 10:30-4:30 a.m., Sun 2-5 p.m. through October 25.

Libraries
Only regular hours listed, call for holidays.

Biological Sciences
274 Morrill Science Center, UMass (545-2674)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Forbes Library
20 West Street, Northampton (587-1011)
Monday 1-9 p.m.
Tuesday 9 a.m.-6 p.m.
Wednesday 9 a.m.-9 p.m.
Thursday 1-5 p.m.
Fri-Sat 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Coolidge Room: Mon-Wed 12-3 p.m.

Johnson Library Center
Hampshire College (559-5418)
Mon-Fri 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Sat-Sun 10 a.m.-midnight

Keefe Science
Amherst College (542-2076)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday noon-1 a.m.

Mount Holyoke College
MHC Main Library, 50 College Street, South Hadley (538-2225)
Mon-Fri 8 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9 a.m.- midnight
Sunday 10 a.m.- midnight

Neilson
Smith College (585-2910)
Mon-Thurs 7:45 a.m.-midnight
Friday 7:45 a.m.-11 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-1 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Physical Sciences & Engineering
Lederle Towrise, 2nd floor, UMass (545-1370)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-9 p.m.
Friday 8 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday 10 a.m.-5 p.m.
Sunday 1 p.m.-9 p.m.

Robert Frost
Amherst College (542-2519)
Mon-Thurs 8:30 a.m.-1 a.m.
Friday 8:30 a.m.-midnight
Saturday 9:30 a.m.-11 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-1 a.m.

Vincent Morgan Music
Amherst College (542-2587)
Mon-Thurs 9 a.m.-11 p.m.
Friday 9 a.m.-5 p.m.
Saturday noon-5 p.m.
Sunday 2 p.m.-11 p.m.

W.E.B. DuBois
UMass Main Library (545-0150)
Mon-Thurs 8 a.m.-midnight
Friday 8 a.m.-10 p.m.
Saturday 9 a.m.-10 p.m.
Sunday 10 a.m.-midnight

Upcoming Concerts
ELVIS COSTELLO, STEVE NIEVE
Oct. 21, Orpheum Theatre
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Oct. 23, Worcester Palladium
KID ROCK, POWERMAN 5000, DDT
Oct. 27, Tsongas Arena
FUEL
Oct. 27, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
JONATHA BROOKE & ANNE WEISS
Oct. 27, Amherst College Frontroom
BELA FLECK & THE FLECKTONES
Oct. 28, Calvin Theater
FUEL
Oct. 29, Avalon
THE PIETASTERS, SPRING HEELED JACK & THE PILFERS
Oct. 29, Amherst College Frontroom
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Oct. 29, Toad's Place
TYPE O NEGATIVE, PUYA
Oct. 30, Avalon
GUSTER, THE PUSH STARS, JUMP LITTLE CHILDREN
Oct. 30, Orpheum Theatre
COUNTING CROWS, GIGOLO AUNTS
Oct. 31, Orpheum Theatre
DROPKICK MURPHY'S, ANTI-FLAG, BLOOD FOR BLOOD, BOMBSHELL ROCKS
Oct. 31, Lupo's Heartbreak Hotel
"WEIRD AL" YANKOVIC
Oct. 31, Maine State Theater
IGGY POP
Nov. 1, Avalon
BEN HARPER & THE INNOCENT CRIMINALS, RAHZEL
Nov. 2, Avalon
MEATLOAF
Nov. 2, Orpheum Theatre
MXPX, TOO BAD EUGENE
Nov. 3, Avalon
MIGHTY PURPLE
Nov. 6, Iron Horse
RAT DOG
Nov. 10, Worcester Palladium
PRIMUS
Nov. 10, Avalon
MARK ERELLI
Nov. 11, Iron Horse
LOSER KIDS TOUR W/ BLINK 182, SILVERCHAIR, FENIX TX
Nov. 12, Worcester Palladium
FOUNTAINS OF WAYNE
Nov. 12, Amherst College Frontroom
LETTERS TO CLEO
Nov. 12, Paradise Rock Club
MICHAEL GLABICKI (of Rusted Root)
Nov. 13, Pearl Street
THEY MIGHT BE GIANTS
Nov. 13, Amherst College Frontroom
CHRIS CORNELL
Nov. 15, Orpheum Theatre
INSANE CLOWN POSSE
Nov. 15, The Webster
311
Nov. 15, Worcester Palladium
BOB DYLAN & PHIL LESH
Nov. 14, Worcester Centrum
GET UP KIDS, AT THE DRIVE-IN, ULTIMATE FAKEBOOK
Nov. 14, Amherst College Frontroom
LIVE
Nov. 18, Orpheum Theatre
VOICES ON THE VERGE: ROSE POLENZANI, ERIN MCKEOWN, JESS KLEIN AND BETH AMSLE
Nov. 18, Iron Horse
FILTER, STAIND
Nov. 20, Avalon
MEDESKI, MARTIN & WOOD
Nov. 22, Calvin Theater
BUCKCHERRY
Nov. 24, The Webster
STING
Nov. 27, Orpheum Theatre
MOXY FRUVOUS
Dec. 3, Amherst College Frontroom
GODSMACK, REVEILLE, JIM ROSE CIRCUS
Dec. 4, The Webster
B.B. KING
Dec. 5, Worcester Palladium
EDDIE FROM OHIO
Dec. 5, Iron Horse

Venues
AMHERST BREWING COMPANY 36 North Pleasant Street, Amherst (253-4400)
AVALON 15 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-262-2424)
BAY STATE 41 Strong Avenue, Northampton (584-8513)
BILL'S BAR 5 5 Landsdowne Street, Boston (617-421-9078)
BUTTERFIELD RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
CALVIN THEATER 17 King Street, Northampton (584-0610)
CHAPIN AUDITORIUM Mount Holyoke College, South Hadley
CLUB 21 62 Turkey Hill Road, Belchertown (323-4117)
CLUB KAOS 1592 Main Street, Springfield (739-7900)
CLUB METRO 492 Pleasant Street, Northampton (582-8898)
FIRE & WATER CAFE 5 Old South Street, Northampton (586-8536)
FLEETCENTER 1 Fleet Center, Boston (617-624-1000)
HOT CLUB 30-32 Stearns Square, Springfield (781-4509)
IRON HORSE MUSIC HALL 20 Center Street, Northampton (584-0610)
JOHN M. GREENE HALL Smith College Main Street, Northampton
LUPO'S HEARTBREAK HOTEL 239 Westminster Street, Providence (401-272-5870)
MARS NIGHTCLUB 350 Worthington Street, Springfield (746-8282)
MIDDLE EAST 472/480 Mass. Ave., Central Square, Cambridge (617-864-3278)
MULLINS CENTER UMass, Amherst (545-5001)
NORTHAMPTON CENTER FOR THE ARTS 17 New Smith Street, Northampton (584-7327)
ORPHEUM THEATRE Hamilton Place Boston (617-679-0810)
PARADISE ROCK CLUB 967 Commonwealth Ave., Boston (617-562-8804)
PEARL STREET NIGHTCLUB 10 Pearl Street, Northampton (584-0610)
SOMERVILLE THEATRE 89 Davis Square, Somerville (617-625-4088)
THE GROTTO 25 West Street, Northampton (586-6900)
THE SOLUTION 84-90 Worthington Street, Springfield (253-4400)
THE WEBSTER 51 Webster Street, Hartford (860-525-5555)
TSONGAS ARENA 300 Arcand Drive Lowell (978-458-9900)
TT THE BEARS 10 Brookline Street, Cambridge (617-492-BEAR)
VAN METER RESIDENCE HALL Central Residence Area, UMass, Amherst
WORCESTER PALLADIUM 261 Main Street, Worcester (508-797-9696)
WORCESTER CENTRUM 50 Foster Street Worcester (508-755-6800)
WORLD WAR II VETERANS ASSN. 50 Gunz Street, Northampton (586-5375)

General Information
All events all ages unless otherwise noted. What do you think? Would you like to read one-line event previews, desire a format change, or post an event? Please call (413) 545-3561, fax (413) 545-1592 or email eventcalendar@excite.com.

Press aims At Hillary Biography

Linton Weeks
The Washington Post

In the coming months, a hard rain of new books about the first lady will fall on bookstore shelves. Some are by ideologues, others by big-name authors. But taken together, the books paint Hillary Rodham Clinton in the fullness of her contradictory glory, commanding, congenial, cutthroat, compassionate, complicated, concerned, conceited, convincing.

First out, early next month, will be Hell to Pay: The Unfolding Story of Hillary Rodham Clinton by Barbara Olson, a former federal prosecutor and on-camera Clinton critic. The book is being produced by Washington-based Regnery Publishing, the right-leaning publisher of recent works by presidential hopefuls Patrick J. Buchanan and Steve Forbes. According to the dust jacket blurb on Hell to Pay, "Olson reveals the real Hillary Clinton- a woman whose lust for power surpasses even that of her husband."

The ad copy continues: "Far from being unstained by the Clinton scandals, Olson shows how in scandal after scandal all roads lead to Hillary' and how, with supreme irony, the most powerful woman in the world has won sympathy, after the Monica Lewinsky scandal, as the globe's premier 'victim.'"

"But perhaps more important than the scandals, and even Hillary's relentless drive for power, is the vision Hillary wants to impose on the country. It is a vision shaped by some of the most radical thinkers of our time; a vision that harkens back to social engineering on a grand scale, and that gives freedom a distant second place to government control."

Gail Sheehy's Hillary's Choice is now slated to be in bookstores in early December. Sheehy is the chronicler of the baby boomers various "Passages." Her biographer says Sally Marvin of Random House, will be an expansion of Sheehy's much-buzz-creating pro-cho-exploration of Hillary Clinton in Vanity Fair magazine during the 1992 campaign. Among other things, the then-candidate's wife said that folks shouldn't pick on

Turn to Hillary page 10

Get the 411 with The Source
Every Thursday in The Massachusetts Daily Collegian

MIDNIGHT MADNESS!
10:30 pm Friday, October 15th
at The Mullins Center
There will be fireworks, contests, giveaways and much more!
Get the 1999-2000 UMASS Basketball Poster FREE!
FREE TO PUBLIC
For Tickets: Call the Athletic Ticket Office at 545-0810
(Tickets Needed for Contest Purposes Only- Not for Admission)

fun•food•spirits
THE PUB
amherst
Drink Specials
- Pitcher of Icehouse $4.50
- Large Rum & Coke $1.50
THURSDAY
COLLEGE NIGHT
HIP HOP AND R&B
FRIDAY
DANCE NIGHT
18 + Welcomed
SATURDAY
HIP HOP and R&B with DJ Evil D
18 +

brain earn money
for taking notes in your class also seeking marketing reps
apply online:
www.versity.com
versity.com
Study Smarter

THE MONKEY BAR & GRILLE
New York Style scene in Downtown Amherst.
New and exciting place to eat, featuring Mediterranean Cuisine, outdoor patio, and upscale microbrews.
AFTER 10 ITS TIME TO DANCE
Wednesday - Promo with DJ Fooz. Free Prizes!!
Thursday - House music with DJ Fooz
Friday - House, Hip-Hop, + top 40 with DJ Fooz
Saturday - House, Hip-Hop, +top 40 with DJ Creme
Sunday - Latin Night with DJ Creme featuring Free Dance lessons from THE THERESA CASTANG CENTER FOR LATIN DANCE
63 N. Pleasant St 256-1600

RUSSELL'S LIQUORS
Discount Discount
18 Main St. Downtown Amherst 253-5441
Featuring "Coors Light" $15.99 30/PK
Woodchuck Ciders $4.99 6/PK
'Brewery Hill' Pale Ale, Blk & Tan, Pilsner, Lager, Amber, Raspberry $3.99 4/PK
MILWAUKEE'S BEST $9.99 30 PK
BUD 16oz CANS $4.99 6/PK
Vodka 80 EVERYDAY PRICE! $8.99 1.75 lt
Bacardi Silver $10.49 liter
"Guinness" Pub Cans $4.99 4/PK
Foxhorn White Zinfandel $4.99 1.5 liter
Concha y Toro all flavors..... $6.99 1.5 liter
Ceder Creek "australian" Cabernet, Chardonnay, Shiraz Cab. $7.99 1.5 liter
Check Out Russell's Indoor Wine Specials!
• Delivery Available • OPEN 9:00AM to 11:00PM • Visa/Mastercard • All Beers Plus Deposit •

Fall Sweeps end; TV moves forward with "Survival"

Tube Notes
Ryan Benharris

There is not too much new to discuss in the world of television this week. It seems that the fall sweeps month has winded down, and all of the stations are scrambling to get ready for the big November events. The truth is that there has been more news about things that are going to take place on TV than things actually happening. Now, the logical thing to do would be to get all of my information from my new favorite show "National Inquirer TV." If you haven't seen this, I strongly suggest you watch it. There's some very important stuff that you need to know, such as "What Tom Arnold had for dinner last night," and "Calista Flockhart: Her battle with horrible, horrible gas pains." However, the people at National Inquirer TV refused to supply me with all of the info that I need, so I guess I'll give you real news. Here are just a few of the mentioned happenings around the world of TV.

The biggest story so far, is ABC's announcement of a new show called "Survival." The premise of the show is that sixteen people will be placed on an island, and every week the cast members vote on who they want to kick off. The show will be shot in a "Real World" style, and the way that the game is won, is to be the last remaining person on the island. Every person gets a certain amount of items, such as blankets, food and shelter with the amount of work that they do, and in order to make bonds and friendships, they can share their goods with other people. The idea is that certain bonds will be made so that when voting comes along, friends won't vote each other out. When there are only two people left on the island, the other fourteen that had been previously voted away get the chance to vote on who the ultimate survivor is. This show seems both interesting and skeptical. It's difficult for me to comprehend that it's being done surely for a game and entertainment purposes, and that the show isn't going to be very corporate sponsored, as well as staged in some way. In case you didn't know, "The Real World" ain't real! That's why I have some assumption that this won't be either.

The biggest challenge to "Survival" in the ratings department, will definitely be the return of "Who Wants to be a Millionaire?" The game show that starred Regis Philbman last summer will make a two week long return during November sweeps, and probably get about twice as many viewers as the last time it was on. Last summer, "Who Wants to be a Millionaire" was by far the most talked about show on the air, and even though "Survival" will turn some heads, the king of November will definitely be Regis! (and let me tell you, I don't want to be living in any kingdom run by Regis Philbman, or Kathy Lee for that matter)

Tim Allen got quite a scare this week, as he had to be rushed to the hospital for an emergency appendectomy. The popular actor has not yet commented on how he feels, but doctors say that he is expected to make a full recovery. Allen has not done anything since ending "Home Improvement" last May, but he will soon become a household name again this Thanksgiving, when "Toy Story 2" is released.

Trey Parker and Matt Stone have come up with the ultimate way to scare people. On the season premier of "South Park," which will be another Halloween special, the "Freak on a Leash" stars themselves, Korn, will make a guest appearance. It'll be interesting to see how they use Korn, since the last few musical guest appearances have been in the form of Ozzy Osbourne biting Kenny's head off, and Robert Smith turning in to some sort of Power Ranger and saving the world.

Also coming up around the beginning of November, is the long awaited season premier of "The X Files." The show has a yearly tradition of being the last show to air their first episode. This year, "The X Files" brings its long tenure to an end, and will probably do it in some sort of unique fashion.

Coming up in the next few weeks on "Friends," Elle MacPherson will join the cast. The plot on "Friends" has gotten crazy, when Chandler (Matthew Perry) decided to move in with Monica (Courtney Cox) setting everyone into a frenzy of wondering who will live with whom. It seems that MacPherson will sign on to live with Joey, (Matt LeBlanc) and if the situation works out, MacPherson will probably become a regular on the show. This announcement comes right after more controversy has stemmed that Matthew Perry is showing interest in leaving the show. His new film, Three To Tango with Neve Campbell, is slated to release in the upcoming weeks, and Perry is also reportedly working on a new show called "The Shrink" for ABC in

Turn to TV, page 10

America.
Open For Travel.

SOUTHWEST AIRLINES
A SYMBOL OF FREEDOM

Service starts October 31.

Fly Coast-To-Coast

FOR $99 OR LESS
Each Way With Roundtrip Purchase

Offer Applies To Published, Scheduled Service Only.

En Español
1-800-VAMONOS™
(1-800-826-6667)

1-800-I-FLY-SWA®
(1-800-435-9792)

www.southwest.com

Beginning October 31, you have the freedom to fly anywhere Southwest Airlines does, coast-to-coast, for only $99 or less each way with roundtrip purchase. Just purchase your roundtrip ticket at least seven days in advance, within one day of making reservations, and by November 3, 1999. Remember, seats are limited and won't be available on some flights during busy travel times and holiday periods like Thanksgiving, Christmas, and spring break. Call your travel agent or Southwest Airlines for reservations. Or plan and purchase Ticketless Travel Online at www.southwest.com.

EARN A FREE TICKET

Earn two Rapid Rewards flight credits each time you fly to or from Bradley International Airport. Earn a third credit as a Freedom Reward Member when you purchase Ticketless Travel on our web site. Now you can earn your free ticket faster than ever before.

Check out Click n Save specials on our web site for exclusive Internet low fares.

EACH WAY WITH ROUNDTRIP PURCHASE FROM BRADLEY INTERNATIONAL TO:

Baltimore/Washington (BWI) (29 miles to downtown Washington, D.C.)	$39
Birmingham	$99
Chicago (Midway)	$89
Cleveland	$87
Detroit	$99
Ft. Lauderdale (22 miles to downtown Miami)	$99
Houston (Hobby)	$99
Indianapolis	$99
Jackson	$99
Jacksonville	$99
Kansas City	$99
Las Vegas	$99
Louisville	$99
Nashville	$89
New Orleans	$99
Omaha	$99
Orlando	$99
Raleigh-Durham	$69
St. Louis	$99
Tampa Bay	$99

INCLUDES SCHEDULED NONSTOP DIRECT (SAME PLANE), AND CONNECTING SERVICE.

FARES DO NOT INCLUDE FEDERAL EXCISE TAXES OF UP TO $2.50 THAT WILL BE IMPOSED ON EACH FLIGHT SEGMENT OF YOUR ITINERARY. A FLIGHT SEGMENT IS DEFINED AS A TAKEOFF AND A LANDING.

Southwest Airlines Vacations packages — airfare, hotel, and more! Call 1-800-588-7775 for details.

Fares do not include airport taxes of up to $12 roundtrip. Your plans must include a stayover of at least one night. Tickets are nonrefundable but (except for tickets purchased through our Group Tickets program) may be applied toward future travel on Southwest Airlines. Travel through March 31, 2000. Fares are subject to change until ticketed. Any change in itinerary may result in an increase in fare. FREE TICKET OFFER: Hartford/Springfield double credit offer is valid for travel through January 31, 2000, and is not combinable with any other offer except the Internet offer, which must be booked and travel completed by May 31, 2000, and is available only to Rapid Rewards Freedom Reward Members with a valid plastic membership card. If you are not a Freedom Reward Member, sign up after purchasing on the Internet to receive double credit. Your plastic membership card will be mailed within 14 – 21 days and you must present it at the gate upon check-in each time you fly to receive credit toward a free ticket. Changes to your itinerary may eliminate the double credit offer. All Rapid Rewards rules apply. ©1999 Southwest Airlines Co.

